On Nov. 2 a remarkable ceremony will be held throughout the length and breadth of France. One million five hundred thousand certificates will be presented to the families of the fallen. Already, in every commune of France, a collective certificate containing the names of the inhabitants who have been killed in the war has been received, but a number of associations have joined hands to render individual homage to each bereaved family. Nov. 2 figures in the calendar as the Day of the Dead, and has always a particularly solemn character in France. It is felt that no more suitable date could be chosen for indicating the sympathy and gratitude of France in the great host of families who have lost son or father.

TRIAL OF BELA KUN.

According to a Buda Pest telegram the Public Prosecutor announces that proceedings have been begun against all individuals charged with crimes committed during the Proletariat Dictatorship and the necessary measures have been taken for their arrest as well as for the extradition of those who have fled abroad.

It appears from another announcement that is is intended to prosecute Bela Kun and his associates for incitement to murder, robbery, forgery, and other crimes.

BOLSHEVIST FIENDS.

The Bolshevists have invented another method of torturing their victims, which they call "stocking macking." The skin and toe-nails are stripped from the legs and feet of living prisoners, the lacerated limbs being frequently plunged in boiling water to soften the skin.

In many cases the noses and ears of prisoners were cut off and nails hammered into all parts of the body, including the face. In addition to these fiendish varieties of torture, unprintable tortures by electricity have been devised by the Bolshevists. On one occasion a prisoner was dragged out of a crowded room, and a quarter of an hour later his head was thrown into the room. The other prisoners were told that they would suffer the same fate, one by one, unless they disclosed the whereabouts of all their money and valuables.

After the occupation by General Denikin, corpses were exhumed from the racecourse, the public park, private gardens, and elsewhere in the city. In many cases the victims' hands and arms were tightly bound with telegraph wire, which had bitten into the flesh.

SOLDIER BIGAMIST.

The marriage of a soldier and a girl of the W. A. A. C. had its sequel at a West London Court yesterday when Henry George Murch was charged with bigamously marrying Ada Clements at Alnwick.

The evidence showed that in February 1918 Murch, who was soldiering in the North of England, met Miss Clements, who had given up a place as schoolmistress to join the W. A. A. C.'s. Murch had been in the army since 1914 as a single man. He had married his first wife, a Belgian, in 1913, while abroad as a jockey, and when arrested he said he heard that his first wife was living with a German in Brussels. He understood that the circumstances made it lawful for him to marry again.

A remand was granted in order that an effort might be made to find the man's first wife.

LENIN QUAKING.

It is reported that under the influence of events at Buda-Pesth, Lenin at Moscow and Rakovsky at Kieff have convoked a party conference to decide concerning the new situation. The Soviet at Kieff is now in a similar position to that in which Bela Kun's Government was, because Bolshevism is confined to the capital and is existing in the provinces only by terrorism.

The military situation is such that the end of Bolshevism in Ukrainia is approaching. In Ukrainia the Soviet Government is hard pressed by Denikin's troops, supported by the Allies.

LONDON HOOLIGANISM.

Ernest Gibson, a Private in the Canadian Forces, was ordered a month's imprisonment, with hard labour, at Marlborough-street for an attack on Captain Herbert Chaplin, R.A.F. The story told was that the Captain, leaving the Palladium, was met by a gang of men. Gibson snatched the officer's hat and threw it under a passing omnibus shouting to the gang "He's a split." The gang then set on the Captain, knocking him down. The prisoner was kicking him when the police approached and he ran away. The Captain said the accused seemed mad drunk.

The Commission charged with investigating Italian and Greek claims regarding Smyrna and Asia Minor generally, held its first meeting at Constantinople on Tuesday.

THE BALKAN PRUSSIA.

The advance of the Roumanian army into Buda-Pesth serves to remind us that there are many intricate problems awaiting solution in the near East, and that the Paris conference, so far from having completed its labours, has yet a delicate task to undertake in the settlement of the Bulgarian peace terms.

British people take but a fitful interest in the Balkans and it is feared that the importance of these deliberations may be entirely overlooked. Suggestions have been seriously advanced which would give to Bulgaria in defeat most of the absurd claims which she endeavoured to gain as the price of her friendship with Germany.

After the Treaty of London, the western powers offered several concessions to Bulgaria in an endeavour to establish a permanent peace in the Balkans, but the offer of the Dobrudja, part of Thrace, and the territory on the left bank of the Vardar did not satisfy the mean and grasping mind of the Bulgar.

The present attempt to establish the justice of these claims at the expense of our Balkan allies whose countries have been devastated by the Bulgars has met with a certain amount of support in Britain on the grounds that our allies have acquired territory at the expense of Austria-Hungary and can afford to be generous in the interests of a permanent peace.

But it is inconceivable that an enlarged Bulgaria would stabilise the Balkans. It is an acknowledged fact that the Balkans have been kept in a state of turmoil until Germany was in a position to open her corridor to the East and that Bulgaria lent herself to the pursuit of this policy. Why, therefore, it may be asked, should Bulgaria be strengthened when she has proved herself to be a treacherous ally and neighbour?

The stability of the Balkans can be equally assured by surrounding Bulgaria with more powerful neighbours who will be able by their own efforts to restrain the country which tried to become the Prussia of the Balkans. By her entry into the war Bulgaria has forfeited her rights to the claims which at one time would have been conceded to her.

The prevailing ignorance in our country concerning the Balkans and the lack of a definite foreign policy makes it possible that some support on sentimental grounds may be expressed for Bulgaria, but sentiment has no right to dictate a policy which will not stand the strain of experience.

It has only to be recalled that the war just ended has its origin in a Balkan affair only remotely associated with the nations who had eventually to take up arms, to impress upon the least skilful diplomat the danger of any possible recurrence of such a catastrophe.

The present opportunity for settling many delicate and intricate questions may not be likely to occur again, so that it is to be hoped that no effort will be spared to establish the Balkan situation upon a secure foundation which will ensure the permanency of the peace and that no reasons other than those of practical commonsense will direct the discussions to a happy conclusion.

THE MEN'S BILLET.

In peace time it is a technical school, and must have cost a huge sum to build. The architecture is all that can be desired and it is fitted up in a marvellous way.

The entrance hall, with its archways and marble tiled floors, strikes one with awe. To the left is the guard room and to the right the orderly room. The R.S.M. loves to stand on the top of the steps and smile upon the boys as they depart for their evening's visit to the city, but woe betide the man who is not properly dressed. Many a man has stood in this hall facing the orderly room with a palpitating heart, and gazing with a strange fascination at the door through which he must enter to give an account of his misdeeds. Perhaps a voice urges him to flee from the wrath to come, but he cannot and so with uncovered head he must await his doom.

There are all kinds of marvellous rooms, from the cellar, where the prisoners meditate upon their unhappy lot, to the sergeants' mess, adorned with the works of art of former German students. The library with its well-filled shelves is sacred to the educational staff, whilst in the gymnasium the boys dine richly, the tables groaning with the good things provided by the ever bountiful quartermaster. Here they relish the incomparable stew, and like, Oliver Twist, ask for more. Here also in the evening you can follow the fortunes of Charlie Chaplin on the cinema screem, and in close proximity is our canteen which is always well stocked with cigarettes.

The great concert hall on the third floor is a sleeping apartment. The floor is of wood blocks and the walls are richly adorned with shields. There is also a pipe organ which receives generous treatment from all and sundry.

Another sleeping chamber is the museum, and here surrounded with glass cases containing stuffed monkeys, birds, and reptiles, also a collection of skeletons and other weird objects, our boys dream of their far off island home, and alas! frequently have the nightmare.

There are also classrooms where our educational classes are held and lectures given. Here our men renew their youthful studies and ponder long and earnestly over the problems of history and kindred subjects.

The clock tower and a little turret are reached by a ladder. They are fine observation posts. Here certain men who were anxious to study the city from above used to gather. No! They were not hiding there; lofty motions prompted them to seek the highest place. The R.S.M., however, thought otherwise, for he made ascent one day, and alas! the O. P. is closed, much to the sorrow of these zealous high souled men. The huge school-yard is sacred to guard mounting, pack drill and skittles, it is therefore a place of mixed memories.

G.K.

THE OTHER NIGHT.

Nearly everyone had gone to bed and the Babe sat with me near the open Mess window. It had been a hot day, but now an evening breeze was rustling through the trees on the Ring.

The Babe has grown up in most ways since he was christened about Loos time; he still, however, looks a babe and can, I believe, still take his mother's kiss on the lips without being ashamed.

Galloway behind us was playing Rubenstein's Melody in F pianissimo. I moved my chair to where I could see the sky lit by the rising moon. It was one of those moments all too rare in a human life.

"Do you know," said the Babe, "I have thought a lot lately that the war was not worth while for us or anybody else. I think that one is inwardly as dead as the others who are physically.

"One cannot screw one's self up time after time to face extinction without something being different.

"I think a little of me died every time I did it. Nothing has seemed quite worth while since that raid, you remember at the Tambour, when poor Smithson was killed on the wire and lay out so long.

Something in me went out that night; some power of receiving sensations ceased to function. The things one used to be so enthusiastic about now seem so small and I feel as you would if Galloway suddenly broke into 'Alabam' or 'Dixie something.'

"And what is the result of it all? Cologne has protection which is denied to Liverpool. It all seems so stupid and difficult to explain."

"I think I understand what you mean Baby" I said, "and you are right to a certain extent. Nothing can ever come up to it. It has changed everything for us but we must not retire and hug ourselves over Byron, Fitzgerald or Dowson.

"You have packed into your youth the sensations of a whole lifetime and perhaps nothing seems as much worth while as it was. What's the use of making a hundred at Lords' or finishing that book you started, after the things we remember.

"But don't forget that one of the greatest pleasures of life is retrospection In twenty years time, one quiet evening like this, you will pull out the old stained Hazebruck and Lens maps and revel in the memories they will conjure up.

"That is something real to look forward to, when the longings and regrets left by the war are softened by time. We have laid up a precious store of memories which will make all the rest of our life worth while."

Galloway struck the last chord, and outside a bullet-headed, well dressed German spat on the pavement.

CAMERITIS.

We've all got it—everybody, from the Colonel downwards. Flu was a pleasant ten days' leave and rabies a perfect gentleman of a disease compared with this vile plague. Rabies kill you in a couple of days or thereabouts. This is everlasting, a life sentence with hard labour. Flu was infectious (or was it contagious? I forget): this is both of them, pressed down and running over.

One of the very few people who haven't got it, comes up to you, "I say old man, show me some of your snaps." That is the first sympton. All hope is lost; the others will follow as a matter of course.

Talk in the mess turns on exposures, stops, focusses. Frenzied impromptu debates take place on the various types of lenses,—all agree that "Double Anastigmat" is better than merely "Anastigmat" although no one has the foggiest idea what "Anastigmat" means—it sounds all right.

Our newly smitten one, up till now strictly neutral, having shown the first symptom, takes active part in all discussions, says loftily (although he has never seen one) that an exposure meter is quite unnecessary to a man of common sense; resents any advice except from the Adjutant, gets a pass to Cologne and returns triumphant with a camera.

For the next few days, he is completely in the grip of the plague. He keeps his platoon standing still for ten minutes while he snaps them; seizes on everybody in the mess both separately and together, makes them assume impossible attitudes and climb to perilous places.

Timidity is not one of the symptons,—he approaches the Colonel "May I trouble you Sir?" In the mess, "Would everybody keep perfectly still for five minutes please?"

Anyone going to Cologne is loaded with films. "If you don't mind old man—the shop near the Earwig Lamp." This entails a wait in a tiny shop under the Cathedral, in a queue of other plague-smitten ones who give endless instructions, leave numberless films, and carry away even more.

When he receives the first prints, then only does the fever abate. He smiles weakly. "One always makes mistakes you know, besides I don't know my camera yet." It is generally rather a shock, but not enough to cure him, only modifies the disease into a somewhat less rampant form.

Is there no cure, nothing to relieve the poor afflicted? Cannot we have film coupons, or print-less days,—or cannot some genius invent camera muzzles? PURRILL.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

OPEN AIR ENJOYMENT.

Sir,—"Al Fresco" is very enthusiastic over the open-air cafés and beer gardens, but personally I prefer the privacy of a saloon bar.

I don't want to take my refreshment surrounded by all sorts and conditions of people in whom I'm not a bit interested.

I like to go to a nice little snuggery where I can drink, and that with a few chums without all the clatter and chatter of a big public resort.

I don't want my ears tickled with music that is not of my own choice.

If I need music I get it in my own home. And that, I take it, is the view of most Britishers. I am not one of those who will speak in favour of these foreign habits when I am demobbed.

PRIVATE BAR.

Sir,—Some one has suggested cafés in England like we have here in Rhineland, as "open air enjoyment."

Where the enjoyment is in taking a young lady to a café and with a glass of wine remaining there the whole evening is hard to see.

I think the English way is far healthier, some chocolate, and a country walk; and am sure a lot of the boys think the same.

C.R.

THE PRICE OF CLOTHES.

Sir,—The charge made by English tailors are a source of wonder and indignation to the ordinary "demobbed," be he officer or O.R. I am assured by an expert that the best blue serge produced is sold by Leeds manufacturers to West End tailors at 35s. the suit length.

Also, I am told by a Scotch manufacturer that tweeds of the best quality are sold to the wholesale merchant at from 13s. to 15s. per yard and that three and a half yards are enough to make a suit.

In view of these facts, the charge of eight to twelve guineas for a lounge suit seems extortionate. Even considering the increased cost of labour and minor materials, many of the prices at which clothing is sold in London shops leads one to the conclusion that a great deal of unlawful profiteering is going on somewhere.

HARD UP.

A CRY FROM OPLADEN.

Sir,—May I draw attention to the facilities at Opladen? During the evening there are now only three trains leaving Cologne for Opladen viz: 19.30, 20.40 and 22.48, the train which used to leave Cologne at 21.40 being withdrawn.

Is it not possible to alter the 20.40 train to something like 21.15?

Then with reference to amusements. The only amusement here is the Cinema augmented by an occasional performance of the "Prongs," or a Y.M.C.A. Party.

It is noticed that at Wiesdorf the cinema is cancelled on suitable occasions and arrangements made by those responsible, for performances by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company and various other Concert Parties.

Could not this be done at Opladen so that the Large Hall occupied by the Cinema might be similarly used. If not, why not? SAMSON STRAIGHT.

INTERESTING BOOKS.

Sir,—I read with interest a reader's list of the dozen novels he has found most interesting. Here is my selection:—Scott's "Ivanhoe"; Lytton Bulwer's "Night and Morning," "Last Days of Pompeii"; Hawthorne's "Seven Gables"; Dickens' "Pickwick Papers"; Thackeray's "Book of Snobs," and "Vanity Fair"; Ouida's "Under Two Flags"; Conan Doyle's "White Company"; George Eliot's "Adam Bede"; Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables"; Wilkie Collin's "Woman in White." S.F.G.

GLOW-WORM DIALS.

Sir,—I was interested in the item under the above heading in your "Echoes." I noticed myself that the luminous paint did not show up in a tunnel.

I think the explanation is:—Having been transmitted suddenly from daylight to the inky blackness of a tunnel the eyes need time to adapt themselves to new conditions. The brighter the daylight the longer is the time required.

It is not the "glow" failing to do duty, it in the eyes which are thrown out of focus. J.M.R.

IMITATIONS.

Sir,—The letter which you published regarding the sale of spurious amber reminds me of an attempt made by an art dealer in Cologne to pawn off as the work of a well-known English etcher some manufactured imitations.

They were very cleverly executed, but just lacked the touch of individuality for which the eye of the expert always looks.

ART.

[A number of interesting letters from our readers are unavoidably crowded out. Correspondence is invited on all subjects of interest to the Rhine Army, but letters must be brief and to the point. — Editor.]

TOMMY.

QUEER about Tommy; we can't get along with him;
Always in wrong with him; can't seem to fix it;
Ought to be chums, but whenever we chat with him
We hit the mat with him. Gee, how we mix it!
He's our blood-brother, but, somehow or other,
When we meet Tommy it's "call for the cop!"
Yet when we're waiting in trenches that hide us,
We like to know that Tommy's beside us,
Ready to climb with us over the top.

Tommy, oh, Tommy, here's lookin' at you!
We fight you whenever you heave into view,
But when the guns boom an' there's trouble to share,
Tommy, oh, Tommy, we're glad you are there!

Strange about Tommy; we like the plain style of him,
Love the warm smile of him, never down-hearted;
Yet when we meet him we need the M.P.'s around,
Swarming like bees around, getting us parted.
Blood they say's thicker than water or licker,
Still, it runs fast when we gather, I've found;
But when barrages our ear-drums are floggin',
When a drive starts that is dogged an' sloggin',
Tommy's a bird we like stickin' around!

Tommy, oh, Tommy, here's to you, old dear!
We can't agree, though the reason ain't clear;
Yet when the game is to shatter the Hun,
Tommy, oh, Tommy, we fight him as one.

Truth about Tommy is, he stands all right with us,
Though he will fight with us when we're together;
Down in our hearts we admire the brave wit he has,
Love the grim grit he has, built for rough weather.
What if we batter, each other, no matter—
When the gas thickens and shells crash an' whine,
When it's close work in a battle that's bloody
Tommy's our pal an' our chum an' our Buddy;
We like to know he is next to our line!

Tommy, oh, Tommy, here's to you, old horse!
You're the style soldier we're proud to endorse.
Though we may scrap with you when you are nigh,
Tommy, oh, Tommy, you're some little guy!

ELIMINATION COMPETITIONS.

3rd. Bn. M.G.C's Successful Day at Riehl.

On Thursday the 3rd. Battalion Machine Gun Corps held their preliminary sports on the ground south of the Pontoon Bridge at Mulheim. The pukka Sports meeting will be held on the same ground on Thursday August 21st, when a promising programme has been arranged. Quite a pleasant day was passed, enlivened by the band of the 52nd. D.L.I., (by kind permission of the Commanding Officer), and some 24 events were got through.

Lt. Roach put up a splendid show at the high jump and the long jump, both events falling to him. It was perhaps appropriate that the R.S.M. should carry off the "Weight Putting" event, as from time immemorial it has been part of the duties of S.M's to "throw their weight about." During the afternoon events, Mrs. W.J. Cranston the wife of the officer commanding the 3rd. Battalion Machine Gun Corps, was an interested spectator.

ARMY ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The Army Athletic Championships, as has already been announced, are to be held at Aldershot on August 28 and 29. It is believed that 15 teams will compete, one from each of the eight Commands at home, and one from each of the following:—Army of the Rhine, Army of France and Flanders, Army of the Black Sea, Army of Egypt, Army in Italy, Australians, and New Zealanders.

The Army of the Black Sea has already arrived at Aldershot and is hard at work training. In this team is Sergeant W. Applegarth, the 100 Yards Champion. The team also includes several Indians, mostly Sikhs, the Unit Relay Team being furnished by the 25th Punjabis. The team from Italy is due to arrive. Among the Aldershot entries, Sergeant-major Prince, of the R.A.M.C., the present holder of the Army Half Mile Championship, is down to defend his title. C.S.M. Usher, Army Gymnastic Staff, the former 100 Yards and 440 Yards Champion, is also running, and judging by his recent performances stands a very good chance of reclaiming his title. He will, however, have to be at the very top of his form if Lindsay, of the New Zealanders, is a competitor.

Hat Trick.

The 153rd Labour Coy. (70) played the 5th Labour Coy. (38) at Volksgarten on Tuesday. A great bowling performance was made by Pte. Coleman of the 153rd who took 7 wickets for 19 runs. This included the "hat trick." Pte. Blake showed great staying power and was finally bowled for 39 runs.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Saturday, August 16, 1919.

The draw will take place in public at 18.00 hours on Wednesday 20th at Bickendorf Schools, and representatives from units concerned will have seats reserved.

All the proceeds will be given in 13 prizes. The first prize, 50 per cent of the takings will amount, it is anticipated, to 15,000 marks. The last day of entry is Tuesday.

FINE SPRINTING.

Sergt. G. Murphy, of the Irish Guards, proved himself one of those irresistible sprinters and jumpers, of which his native land has produced such a splendid succession, at the first annual sports of the London Command of the Army at Stamford Bridge. With fine performances, and with a debonnair cheriness that suggested he could have done even better if pressed, Murphy took first in the hundred, 220 yards, and long jump. His performance at Aldershot on Aug. 28 and 29 in the Army finals, where the athletes who got first, second, or third in the events on Thursday will have the privilege of competing, will be watched with interest. Lt. A.C. Wilkinson, of the Coldstream Guards, the Oxford Blue, cloped with the 120 hurdles final without being threatened. He should easily carve "fifths" off his time, which was 16 3.5.

Wolves' Prospects.

Black Country football enthusiasts are hoping that the coming football season will witness the Wanderer's return to the League Division I. Many of the old gold and blacks will again be seen doing service at the Molineux Ground, and enterprise has been shown by the Wolves' directorate in signing on some promising players who have done well in the Army.

Golf in Belgium.

Knocke-sur-Mer, Belgium, which before the war was often visited by golfers who wished to combine a change abroad, bathing and country excursions with their own favourite pastime, is fast recovering from the effects of the German occupation.

THE RAPID RIM.

Successful Official Trial By Royal Automobile Club.

An interesting new rim will shortly be placed on the market. It will be known as the Rapid rim and, judging from the Press demonstration just given, it lives up to its name.

For a newcomer it has the advantage of a good testimonial in the shape of a successful official trial by the Royal Automobile Club. The report of this trial shows that four rims were tested over a distance of 1,000 miles. There were three punctures and the time taken in changing the tyres averaged no more than one minute twenty-five seconds. After the trial, five different types of new tyres were fitted to one of the rims. In this case the average time was only fifty seconds.

Tom Ball Theory.

"If you hit the ball with the toe of your putter it will travel further, without any extra power being applied, than if you strike it in the centre of the face of the club." That is a theory of the late Tom Ball.

AN A.1. RACE.

Ambitious New Scheme Of Physical Culture.

MAMMOTH PROJECT.

The Council of the Y.M.C.A. are now engaged on a scheme of physical education, which promises to be of mammoth proportions. Mr. George E. Goss has been appointed National Physical Director for the United Kingdom. The first important project is to establish a college of physical training at Mildmay Park, N.

The first course will begin in the middle of September, and will be of an intensive character for one year, about twenty-five pupils being specially selected. Subsequent courses will last three to four years. Diplomas will be given on the same principle as those at the great physical culture college, Springfield, U.S.A.

It is proposed in due course to split the United Kingdom up into divisions. Major S. Day, late superintendent of the Army Gymnastic Staff, has been appointed director for London. The Y.M.C.A.'s gymnasia, swimming baths, rifle ranges, boat clubs and playing fields will be at the disposal, at stated times, of professional men, railway clerks, bank clerks, insurance clerks, and all those in sedentary occupations in great trading establishments, and these, on the same principle as the scheme employed by the Army authorities, will be formed into rival units for competition.

The Y.M.C.A. scheme will not enter into competition with any existing body.

Over the Eden Course at St. Andrews the Amateur Tournament was renewed on Thursday morning, when the sixteen players with the lowest scratch scores in Wednesday's competition entered upon play for the Challenge Cup presented by the Town Council for annual competition. Eight couples engaged in the morning round. Rain fell in refreshing showers during the night, and the greens were in fine order, but the wind was pretty strong from the west. Play was under tournament conditions by holes. The following were the results of the first round:

ALDERSHOT HORSE SHOW.

Thursday's Results.

The closing day's programme of the Aldershot Command Show yesterday was an unqualified success. The weather was again superb, and there was a large attendance.

A very extensive programme of events, spread over morning and afternoon, was again decided. The Duke of Connaught's Championship Cup for the best riding horse in the show was won by Mrs. Putnam's Farringdon, the reserve being Capt. V.D.S. Williams's Monte Carlo. The winning horse was a champion at the Richmond Horse Show.

Lt.-Col. Winwood's B 30 was the first horse to cross the Hindenburg line, and, was then ridden by Col. Winwood. It went to France in the early days of the war as a troop horse, and eventually became the property of Col. Winwood. It was placed second in the riding horses (open).

One of the most interesting events of the day, the Handy Horse Competition, was won by Capt. P. E. Blackmore's Dick Briskie, the horse ridden by Mrs. F. A. Adams, in the riding horses (open to horses that have seen military service overseas during the war), was the property of her son, Lt. Adams, who was killed in Palestine. Her son rode the horse into Baghdad and through Palestine.

Sweet Angelene.

Mr. R. Croker's yearling filly by Orby—Hot Stuff has been named Sweet Angelene.

LANCASHIRE BEATEN.

9 Wicket Win For Middlesex At Manchester.

HENDREN IN FORM.

Forcing home the advantage gained on Wednesday in fine style, Middlesex beat Lancashire at Manchester on Thursday by nine wickets. When play was resumed in the morning, Middlesex were 136 runs ahead with two wickets in hand and 18 runs were quickly added before the innings came to an end. Hendren played splendid cricket for just over two hours.

When Lancashire went in a second time 153 behind, Hallows and Norbury were soon got rid of, but a splendid stand was then made by Makepeace and E. Tyldesley, who put on 101 in seventy-five minutes. Fifth out at 153 Makepeace batted in faultless style for two hours and a quarter. James Tyldesley and Parkin batted well, the latter hitting fearlessly, but in the end Middlesex were left with only 89 to get to win. This task they readily accomplished for the loss of Lee's wicket.

Scores:—

Hampshire (278 and 267 for 4, declared) beat Essex (192 and 159).

Leicester (250 and 145 for 6) beat Derbyshire (195 and 198).

CRICKET FRIENDLIES.

223 Siege Bty. R.G.A. Officers Mess (87) v. 131 Heavy Bty. Officers Mess (47) at Opladen on Tuesday. For the winners Gnr. Newstead took 5 wickets for 9 runs. The principal scorers for 223 were Gnr. Saxon 18; Gnr. Kemp A. E. 16; and Gnr. Connor 14. For the losers Gnr. Halter was top scorer with 20 to his credit.

JAZZ BAND AT MATCH.

A/245 Battery (45) v. D/245 Battery R.F.A. (17). At Höhscheid on Sunday, before an exceptionally large crowd, who were amused at intervals by "A" Battery's Jazz Band under the conductorship of Dvr. Baldwin. "D" Battery made a poor stand against the bowling of Bdr. Hill and Cpl. Thompson who took 4 wickets for 5 runs and 4 for 10 respectively.

RHINE SWIMMING TRIO.

The men of the Western Division Signal School witnessed an excellent and very plucky swimming display on Tuesday, when Gnr. W. Bere, "B" Bty, 104 Bde. R.F.A., Pte. W. Manock H. Q. Coy., 53rd Welsh and Gnr. W. Brown "D" Bty., 104 Bde. R.F.A., all of the above School, swam across the Rhine from Widding to Rhaight in exactly twelve minutes.

Taking into consideration the strong and swift currents and under-currents in this part of the Rhine that achievement was noteworthy. They were unaccompanied by any boat or usual river craft.

TRANSPORTATION v. 2nd WING R.A.F.

An interesting and rather exciting cricket game was witnessed at Lindenthal on Thursday. Transportation batted first and knocked up 175 for 4 wickets, Major Livesey being top scorer with 60 (not out) to his credit. Corporal Fish also scored a priceless 55 (not out) in remarkably quick time. The innings was declared closed at 4.30 when the tea interval was taken.

The Air Force commenced their innings at 5 o'clock, having 2 hours in which to obtain the required runs. This they almost succeeded in doing, scoring 171 for the loss of only 3 wickets. The principal scorers were Lieut. Mooney (66) and Corporal Wingroves (44) who both gave an excellent display. Stumps were drawn at 7 o'clock, the match thus ending in a draw with the Air Force only requiring another 5 runs to win.

A feature of the game which caused considerable amusement was the slow leb bowling of Captain Hume Wright for Transportation. He was given a trial after the failure of the other Transportation bowlers to take any wickets, and although some of his balls were somewhat wide of the mark he nevertheless succeeded in taking all 3 wickets, the first two being caught and the third being stumped in real county style by Major Sorsey.

Auteuil Features.

The Steeplechase Society of France has published the Auteuil autumn programme. The added money is over £35,000. There will be an event of £1,600, one of £1,200, two of £1 000, two of £800, and about twenty varying between £400 and £600, so there is some money for the 'chasers.

Seaplane Race.

The International Seaplane Race for the Jacques Schneider Trophy and Prize of £1,000 will be held at Bournemouth on Wednesday, September 10.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

Lena Ashwell Concert.

Great expectations raised in the breasts of the Gunners and Drivers stationed at Ichendorf, when it was announced that a concert party was to visit them, were fully realised on Wednesday evening. The concert, which was by the courtesy of Miss Lena Ashwell was a capital entertainment and was fully appreciated by the men. It is to be hoped that a few good concert parties will include Ichendorf in their tour where they are sure of an appreciative audience.

Whist Drive.

The men of the 51st Sherwoods passed a most enjoyable evening on Monday last. The Drive was held in the Church Army hut and about 130 members of the battalion were in attendance. The Rev Edwards, M. C. officiated as M. C., assisted by the Adjutant, Lieut. Hornby, Lieut. McIntosh and Lieut. Hare. After the presentation of the prizes a vote of thanks was accorded to the M.C.; and the evening was concluded by the singing of "For He's a jolly good fellow," in which everyone joined with great gusto.

"The Light Fantastic."

What will probably be the last social evening in connection with the 6th Battalion, The Welsh Regt., in Germany, took place in the Recreational Room, Sechtem, on Monday evening. This took the form of a fancy dress dance for N.C.O.'s and men of the Battalion only. To allow for everyone to share the enjoyment, the programme was arranged in the proportion of two dances to men in costume to one for men in uniform. The commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. Thomas, D.S.O., assisted by Capt. Heath, Cheshires, and Sergt. Morgan, M.M.P., judged the costumes. Pte. Petti er (English lady of early Victorian period) was awarded first prize. The other six prizes were awarded to Ptes. Brand, Parvin, Cowan, Yoxall, Ingham, and Birchall respectively. Col. Thomas awarded a consolation prize to the next two, who ran very closely for a place. Capt. Heath, M.C., gave a special prize to the best pair of waltzers. This competition resulted in two couples tying for place and the prize was doubled. The winners were Ptes. Yoxall and Brown, and Ptes. Birchall and Barnes.

Leave Club Whist Drive.

The whist drive which was held on Thursday in the garden was not such a crowded one as usual. It was very windy which made playing rather difficult but in spite of this, the evening was most successful. 1st Gent's prize was won by Pte. A. E. Tomkin with a score of 149; 2nd Pte. Clayton 146; and 3rd Cpl. H. Taylor 144. The first Ladies prize went to Gnr. Elliston with 155, 2nd Pte. J. Dodd 153; and 3rd Gnr. T. Frost 152. Lieut. Vernon again very kindly presided while Ptes. Beale and Duffy officiated most ably as M.C.'s.

In Few Words.

"The Merry Micks" are, I hear, due in Cologne next week.

A member of "The Starlights," an officer, is said to be the oldest Lieutenant in the British Army.

JACQUES.

FAMOUS GERMAN STUD.

Well Looked After During The War.

Paris "Sport" gives an interview with a French officer who was a prisoner of war in Germany when the armistice was announced. He was interned at Jorgan, about three miles away from the famous Graditz Stud. He was allowed to inspect the Government stud where he saw that things were in a prosperous condition. There were five stallions, among them Ard Patrick and two French horses, Nuage and Biniou. The latter has since died.

The produce of Nuage are doing well in Germany. There are about twenty-five brood mares (mostly English), about forty two and three year olds, and twenty yearlings. All the stock is in fine condition, and it is evident that they were well looked after during the war, and lacked nothing. The Germans believe in buying their stallions in France and the mares in England. However, they will have some difficulty in future in securing good blood from either country.

DEMOBILIZED SOLDIERS' SPORTS.

In connection with the forthcoming sports festival for the National Federation of Discharged and Demobilized Sailors and Soldiers, to be held at Stamford Bridge in September, champion cups have already been presented by the proprietors of The Daily Telegraph, Sir Edward Hulton of the Daily Sketch; the proprietor of the Sporting Life, the proprietors of the News of the World, the proprietors of the Daily Express, the proprietor of the Globe, the proprietors of Reynolds's Newspaper, Mr. H. Batty-Smith, of the Sportsman, and Captain Thomas (solicitor of the N.F.D. and D.S. and S.). An Artistes Challenge Cup has been presented by Miss Lena Ashwell, and a challenge trophy by Mr. Hogge, M.P. (ex-president of the N.F.D. and D.S. and S.), and a great many valuable prizes for the handicap events. Final entries close on Sept. 6, instead of Sept. 3.

51st SHERWOODS SPORTS.

Probably most of the battalions in the Midland Division have forgotten that the 51st Sherwood Foresters are still in existence in the sports line at all events writes a correspondent.

Although little has been heard of the Sherwoods, owing perhaps to their being in a quiet backwater of life at Schmidtheim, they, nevertheless, did exceptionally well in their Brigade Sports, exhibiting a great coup de grâce, by defeating their old rivals the 52nd in the Final Tug-of-War.

Yes, methinks, concludes our correspondent, other battalions will have to look to their laurels in future, but as our comrades, the French, say, "nous verrons que nous verrons."

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Chess Congress.
The number of chess players attending the Hastings chess congress both as competitors and spectators exceeds all previous records.

Only 55 Guineas.
Mr. Court had only to bid 55 guineas to buy in Saintly Maude at Folkestone, but H. Leader had to go to 200 guineas before obtaining Maroon, who won the second race.

A Big Task.
The veteran all-round athlete, Prof. Walter Brickett, has set himself a big task. He has undertaken to walk 1 mile, run a mile, 1 mile over hurdles, cycle 3 miles, row 1 mile, and swim a mile, all within the hour.

Osborn Re-signed.
The P.N.E. directors have re-signed Fred Osborn, who joined the side from Leicester Fosse in 1913, and whose brilliant form as leader of the attack contributed materially to the successful efforts to regain promotion to the First Division of the League at the end of 1914-15.

Royalty and St. Leger.
It is not yet known whether their Majesties will visit Doncaster for the St. Leger, but preparations for a royal visit are proceeding.

An Easy Victory.
Herne Hill Harriers had an easy victory in the mile team race at the Cinema Sports at Stamford Bridge, beating the R. A. S. C. (Grove Park) in 4 min. 27 3-5 sec.

Achtung!
A race was once run by an engaged couple. The young woman won (which, by the way, was very diplomatic on the part of the man), whereupon she broke off her engagement, vowing she would never wed an inferior.

Cadets' Bouts.
An interesting feature of the Public Secondary Schools Cadet Camp at Marlborough has been the boxing competitions. This is the first year that boxing competitions have been held at the camp, and the innovation proved successful.

Bowling Tourney.
The Bournemouth open bowling tournament began this week, play taking place on four greens of the borough. E. E. Moore, the English singlehanded champion, won his tie, as did D. Irvine Watson, the 1914 English champion.

G. Hirst And Co.
George Hirst and his merry band field as well as ever. That, in a nutshell, is why Yorkshire can win three matches in one week.

New Zealanders Beaten.
The New Zealand Service Rugby team recently played Griqualand West, and were beaten by one goal and one try (8 points) to one penalty goal (3 points).

Selling Their Horses.
Major Phipps Hornby and Capt. Mather Jackson, who are returning to England with their regiment, are selling their horses. Brank and Night Warbler, who have been running at Ostend.

Luxurious Game.
The price of grouse has been fixed by the Food Ministry at 4s. 3d. per lb. wholesale, and 5s. 6d. retail. It may be noted that the average weight of young Scotch birds is about 20oz., so that the game will be something of a luxury.

Bermondsey Billy Wells.
Bermondsey Billy Wells, who won the Theatre of War Middle-weight Championship at Aldershot a short time back, offers to box the present welter-weight champion, Johnny Basham, 20 rounds for a side stake of £100. Both men to weigh 10st. 7lb. Failing Basham, Wells says he will meet anyone in the world at the weight.

Ground Too Hard.
Several of Mr. A. C. Barton's horses were in attendance at Folkestone, but all were sent back to Newmarket owing to the hard state of the ground.

Looking Well.
The playing pitch of the Fulham Football Club never looked more inviting than at the present moment, and the Chelsea groundsman will most assuredly have to look to his laurels.

Mr. Sandy Blair.
During the war, Mr. Sandy Blair did a lot of flying in France. Since coming out of the Army he has returned to Wroughton, where he has been in regular riding practice for the Hon. A. Hastings' and R. Gordon's stables.

Shrubb v Trotting Mare.
Alfred Shrubb has been matched to run five miles on the Horsham Cricket Ground against Mr. Jos. Burton's trotting mare Kitty M. The latter will be harnessed to a four-wheel vehicle containing two passengers.

Jumped The Rails.
Before the start for the Breeders' Foal Plate Southwell jumped the rails and unshipped Victor Smyth, while Golden Orb broke the tapes before the four runners got away. Happy Maid was always last.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

The Scientific Mind.

Whilst seated in an outdoor café the other evening an elderly German was seen take his seat at a table after first of all carefully dusting both table and chair with his handkerchief. Calling for the waiter he withdrew a cigar from his case and examined it with great care, at the same time giving his order. On the arrival of his coffee he produced from his pocket a small cylindrical case from which he extracted a thermometer and proceeded to take the temperature of his beverage. Evidently it was not satisfactory, for he again summoned the waiter and sent it away. The waiter brought another cup, and again the old gentleman took its temperature, this time with happier results, and disposed of his coffee in the orthodox manner.

Swift House building.

House building in Germany seems to have been brought to a very fine art. Speed, however, seems to be a greater consideration than efficiency, with the result that a comparatively short space of time is sufficient to enable the followers of the brick layers trade to produce cottages with mushroomlike rapidity. At Brauweiler, for instance, a ruined factory has been converted in two weeks into six brand new cottages. They are certainly not very substantial-looking buildings, but their appearance has helped to solve the problem of overcrowding.

The Snark's Annual.

One can scarcely believe it to be seventeen years since Star Wood ("The Snark") first issued his humorous Summer Annual. The 1919 edition surpasses all previous efforts in the quality of fun displayed, in the clever drawings and the "snap" of the many short stories it contains. The writer is about to go on leave and will certainly take it with him on his journey home. He can think of no better companion to while away the tedium of the journey — that is so far as a book is concerned.

Some Rumour!

L.Cpl. to Officer: "May Private Jenkins speak to you, Sir?"

Officer to Pte. Jenkins, "Well, what is it, Jenkins?"

Jenkins, indistinctly, "Mumble, mumble.."

Officer, "Speak up, my man."

Jenkins, indistinctly, "Mumble, mumble.."

Officer, wrathfully, "Oh, go to Jericho."

Two days later.

Pte. Brown to Pte. Smith, "He'rd the rumour? B'talion's going to Palestine."

Wooden Pegs.

It may not have been noticed that the method of repairing boo s and shoes in Germany is very different to the way such work is executed in England. Instead of the usual brass or iron rivets small wooden pegs are used to fasten the soles. Your German cobbler will stand hard and fast by his system, always declaring it to be the better way. Though much can be said for his point of view, inasmuch as it prevents the rust which usually follows the use of iron rivets and which has a detrimental effect on the leather, it is interesting to note, that it is very many years since "pegging" was extensively used at home.

Some Best Sellers.

We are all more or less conversant with that type of literature that comes under the category of the problem novel. We are also acquainted with that class of story whose vague endeavour is to emulate the novels of Flaubert, Guy de Maupassant or Paul de Kock. We refer to those unsalubrious, sensual, perverted, paper-backed books one sees occasionally in England. Germany is inundated with similar books, but of a more degrading order. You can buy a neat, cloth-bound volume of Goethe for 1.50 M., but the price demanded for these licentious atrocities is five marks. And copies go into their sixtieth-thousand!

The Bells.

The large audience which witnessed the performance last Saturday evening of "The Title" by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company at the Kaisersaal, Solingen, were treated to a little diversion during the last act of the play. The curtain had been raised only a few minutes when the church bells next to the hall commenced ringing in sonorous tones. The noise became perfectly distracting to the audience, and it was impossible to grasp the interesting dialogue between "Mr. Tronts" and "Miss Hildegards." The members of the audience strained their heads forward, put their hands round their ears and employed every possible device to try to catch the words of the players, but with no apparent effect. They became uneasy, and murmurings could be heard which were not at all conventionally parliamentary. The audience was losing its temper and almost got to that point of breaking down altogether when the stoppage of the ringing saved a very critical situation.

Royalty in the Ranks.

A good story comes from one of the units under orders to proceed "Elsewhere." The O. C. thinking perhaps the move meant a return to pukka soldiering, decided to re-open A. B. 68 and therefore paraded the Company to obtain particulars of each man's date of birth, religion, colour of eyes, and socks etc. The C.Q.M.S. started to take down the particulars. Things went well until a nervous and slightly deaf youth approached, when the following startling information was obtained; C.Q.M.S. — "Name?" "Pte. George Pie, Sir." "Age?" "Twentyone, Sir." "Religion?" "C. of E. Sir." "Who's your next of kin?" "The Prince of Wales, Sir." — Luckily his explanation to the O. C. later that he thought the Quarter bloke asked "Who was the next for King?" saved him from a severe punishment for lese Majeste.

All in F. M. O.

Some little while back we commented in these columns on the huge packs carried by school children, containing evidently weighty works of learning. This system of carrying weights however would appear to be the universal one in Germany. In the country districts one can always meet the frau carrying a large bag on her back which is supported by straps round the shoulders and strapped round the waist. By this means a great weight may be carried. The method adopted is the same as that used by Indian squaws in carrying their young. The German workmen invariably adopt the same system and it seems a very effective one leaving as it does both hands free.

IN THE HEAT WAVE, TOO!

Pte. Slogger: "Which way to Bonn, Corporal?"
Corporal: "Keep straight on for five kilos; then bear round to the right for another two. Then it's about another three kilos. You've just missed the last train to-day!"
Pte Slogger: "!!! · · · ???"

Toys for Rubbish.

The German rag and bone man has some different ways of carrying on his trade from his English prototype. In front of their barrows many have a tray with compartments containing whistles, balls, patriotic cards, stringbats and an assortment of coloured flags. Little children emerge from their houses carrying rags, bones or bottles in their pinafores, which the ragman exchanges for a toy according to value.

Any More Big Figures?

The 23rd Royal Fusiliers, it appears, have done famously with War Savings, and claim to have topped the record of the 23rd Middlesex recently reported, with the magnificent total of 26,505 marks in one week of July. Of this sum "D" Coy. subscribed as much as 12,755 marks.

"Company Manners."

Not the least of the pleasures at the British Empire Leave Club is the prevalence of refined manners at the tables in the dining room. Often it is in direct contrast to the attitude observed at mealtimes in units, though why any soldier should permit himself to be slack in his own more intimate surroundings is a mystery, But a visit to the Leave Club seems to put the majority on their best behaviour. There is no need for Walter to issue a growling ukase to Ted to "pass that there pozzy down," for Edward suddenly alters and courteously enquires if Walter would like a little "preserve." And not a few of the kindly ladies attending to their wants regard them as big boys at a tea-party.

Lesser Echoes.

Many tailors' shop-windows in Rhineland now exhibit a label announcing that the cloth used is of English manufacture.

Prizes for Echoes.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's prizes have been awarded to: Cpl. W. J. Wigney, British Armistice Commission, Cologne; Cpl. E. F. Funnel, 77th Siege Bty. R.G.A., Rhine Army, and Serg. A. Crickmore, C/245 Battery R.F.A., Rhine Army.

OUR HOOKAH.

John Edward and I decided one day to make a hookah, a double-barrelled hookah, which we would both be able to smoke at once; and on the strength of this we bought a lot of rubber tubing, some glass pipe, a couple of mouth pieces, a calabash pipe, and a jam jar, and set to work that evening.

John Edward took charge, and under his guidance I cut up the tubing into lengths and fitted them on to the glass pipes which we stuck through holes in the cork of the jam jar, filled the jar half full of water, attached the calabash to one length of tube and the mouthpieces to two other; after which John Edward said it was ready.

Then the fun began. John Edward filled the pipe, seized a match, bit firmly on his tube mouthpiece, and advanced to the fray. I took my mouthpiece and my insignificant but precious person behind an armchair and awaited developments, while John Edward with a hopeful air applied the match to the tobacco. A terrific bubbling ensued in the jar, what time he applied Titanic suction to his mouthpiece; the tobacco burnt furiously; the bottle and John Edward filled with smoke simultaneously and commenced to leak from every outlet.

I applauded vigorously, and, feeling that the time had come to take a hand blew strongly into my mouthpiece. This, it transpired afterwards, was the wrong thing to do . . .

After ten minutes John Edward opened his eyes, and in a half-drowned voice inquired where he was.

"What the deuce did you want to blow for, old thing?" he went on. "You ought to have sucked, just like an ordinary pipe. Don't you see that you suddenly pushed the water and all that up into the pipe and through my mouthpiece?"

I tendered a humble apology, and we relighted the pipe.

John Edward with an evil and revengeful smile took his mouthpiece but it was entirely my fault that my own mouthpiece was not in my mouth soon enough. It was in fact at the moment pointing at his ear from a range of two feet. A jet of water sprang from the end and scored a bull right away.

John Edward took the count, after which he sat up and began to talk. I replied and laying down our mouthpieces, we went at it at the tops of our voices, oblivious of the fact that it was now 1. a.m. and the stentorian voice of an irascible Major who lived next door was calling down curses on our heads.

To this oversight must be attributed our subsequent misfortune. For, finding his protests disregarded, the Major rushed in upon us, to discover that John Edward and I, mouthpieces in mouths and what one might describe as an intense look of compression on our faces, were only staving off instant submersion by blowing with all our might to prevent the water being forced up our own tube by the enemy.

It was only a question of time, and indeed I think that John Edward's lungs were already beginning to weaken, but the sudden appearance of an irate Major of Artillery, clad in pink pyjamas, a green dressinggown, yellow slippers, a scarlet face, and purple language quite unnerved me; in fact this awe-inspiring colour scheme took my breath away — too literal for me.

For a few hectic minutes which reminded me forcibly of Versailles when the fountains are playing, my room seemed full of burning tobacco, gasping and triumphant John Edwards, broken glass piping, and parti-coloured Majors enmeshed in rubber tubing and half-drowned in liquid nicotine — but I must draw the veil, the subject is too painful. Suffice it to say that I am not now popular with some senior officers of the Mess — neither is John Edward popular with

UBIQUE.

THE INTERPRETERS' CASE.

TO THE EDITOR, "COLOGNE POST."

Sir,—As "Acting Interpreter" has voiced the troubles of those men who have just gained an insight into the German language, and who, in his opinion, should be given some band or mark to distinguish them; may I state the case of interpreters who have mastered the German language in all its mysteries and intricacies, and receive absolutely no consideration in respect of their knowledge and usefulness?

Being myself an interpreter, having learnt my German in the piping times of peace at a German university, where I took my final examination for degree just before the outbreak of war, I have come in contact with quite a number of other interpreters, many of whom have learnt their German in the same way as I have done.

May I remark that men whose knowledge of German allows them to converse on any subject, read and understand any book placed before them and write the language with the accuracy of a German, are not receiving the consideration in respect of their knowlege they should do.

I am not stretching a point in saying that the majority of interpreters hold the substantive rank of private or the rank of junior N.C.O's. and receive no pay whatsoever beyond the general pay of their rank.

Quite a number who have volunteered from France and Belgium are away from their units, attached to new units not a soul of whom they know, and are naturally looked upon as outsiders, and at first find a difficulty in getting on with everyone in their new surroundings.

I honestly think that in the light of the above factors and others which could be mentioned, interpreters one and all are entitled to some consideration and should receive an emolument for their services, services which but one man in every two thousand can capably and satisfactorily render.

I would suggest the following scheme: All candidates for the post of interpreter be made to pass an examination, classified according to their knowledge, to receive non-commisioned rank according to their capabilities and also wear a badge, e.g. a sphinx, in the same fashion as the French interpreters. Also by giving the interpreter a definite status, the study of German would be encouraged and our boys would return to Blighty the more capable to capture German trade and understand the German nation the more, a very vital factor.

ARMY COUNCIL'S VISIT: CAVALRY DIVISION AND VI CORPS TO BE REVIEWED.

ARMY COUNCIL'S VISIT.

CAVALRY DIVISION AND VI CORPS TO BE REVIEWED.

The Army Council will arrive on a short visit to the Army of the Rhine late this afternoon, and will be received at General Headquarters with a Guard of Honour in the Dom Platz.

There will be a salute of 19 guns on the river front, north of the Hohenzollern Bridge.

In the programme of the distinguished visitors is included a review of the troops of the Cavalry Division and VI Corps on Monday morning at 11 o'clock. This will be on the Exerzier Platz, Merheim, about 3½ miles east of Cologne.

In the afternoon a review of Women Workers will take place, opposite the cricket pavilion at Lindenthal, at 2.30 p.m.

SINN FEIN IN CLARE.

SUPPRESSED BY GOVERNMENT.

An official Memorandum issued by the Chief Secretary for Ireland announces that owing to the recent increase and the character of the crimes committed in County Clare by Sinn Feiners the Government have decided to suppress that organisation and others like it in the county.

The Chief Secretary's memorandum states that there have been nine separate attacks on the police since the beginning of the year. There have been organised attacks on police huts and barracks, and several constables have been killed or wounded. These are not the only outrages. One of the worst was the partial destruction of the Knockjames National School by fire. The teacher of the school is about to retire owing to age, and his son, formerly a teacher in England, who had joined the Army during the war, was appointed to succeed his father. Hence the outrage. A week after this occurence two men who supported the appointment of the ex-soldier as teacher were fired at and wounded while cutting turf.

WALLS OF DERRY MANNED

FIRST TIME SINCE SIEGE.

Following the proclamation prohibiting Sinn Fein organisations in county Clare, news came yesterday that troops have occupied the walls of Londonderry to enforce the military order that yesterday's Nationalist and Sinn Fein demonstration should not include a procession over that part of the city. From an early hour of the morning troops, for the first time since the siege of Derry, manned the walls of the city. This was the outcome of a military order issued by General Hackett Pain.

Orangemen and other Unionists had expressed a determination to prevent the walls being utilized for an anti-British parade, and grave disorders were anticipated by the authorities. Following the action of the military, however, all is quiet. The soldiers occupying the walls belong to the Dorset Regiment. Troops with fixed bayonets and steel helmets and carrying ball cartridge took possession of the walls and another detachment with Lewis guns were in the police barracks adjacent to reinforce those on duty in the event of a disturbance. The demonstrators, numbering 5,000, made no attempt to defeat the proclamation, but passing under the gates of the walls shouted epithets at the Dorsets.

BOY KILLED BY "PATRIOTS."

The latest shooting outrage in the county differs from previous crimes as the victim, a boy of sixteen, named Murphy, appears to have been himself a Sinn Feiner and a member of the Fianna (Sinn Fein Boy Scouts). The lad, who was employed in a hardware shop at Ennistymon, came home about nine o'clock, and remained up reading after the family had retired to bed. About midnight shots rang out, and when the father came down he found his son lying dead on the floor.

It is stated that a car was heard passing the house about midnight, and shots are said to have been fired from rifles on the road. There are eight or nine bullet marks on the house. The motive of the crime is a mystery.

A SHELLFISH STORY.

There are usually supposed to be two kinds of stories—stories and fish stories. The following is a shellfish story, and happens to be true:—

Mr. John Symonds, a fish merchant, carrying on business on the Marine-parade, Great Yarmouth, found when opening his premises that an oyster had caught a mouse. The oyster had apparently opened to feed, or may simply have been yawning. At any rate, a mouse must have poked its nose into the vortex, for when Mr. Symonds observed them the oyster had the mouse by the head.

A message from Port Said says that the Suez Canal is blocked through the Italian warship "Basilicata" having sunk near Tewfik after an explosion.

ROUMANIA RIGHTED.

SUPREME COUNCIL'S CONCILIATORY REPLY.

The reply of the Supreme Council to Roumania, which is couched in conciliatory terms, says a Paris message, declares particularly that the Entente Powers are trusting in the disarmament of Magyars on Roumanians.

It further asks the latter not to impede the feeding in Buda-Pesth, and in addition, makes the observation that the captured war material is the joint security of the Allies.

The Council suggests that the Roumanians should transport material to certain fixed centres and not to dispose of it without the consent of the Allies. The note does not require the Roumanians to revise the terms of the Armistice imposed on Hungary. The great desire of the Allies is to manifest reciprocal feeling.

ORDER FROM CHAOS.

The Roumanian note, to which the foregoing is in reply, expressed surprise at the first communication received from the Peace Conference, which asserted that Roumania had not changed her territorial claims, but, according to the success of her army, she considered that new military efforts had been made in order to throw back Hungarian offensive. The services rendered to civilization by her sacrifices gave her a new title to claim her rights.

The note denied that Roumanian requisitions had been excessive, and it urged that regarding encouraging pillaging, Roumanian troops, by their presence, re-established order and checked anarchy and devastation. The presence of the Allied representatives at Buda-Pesth was testimony to such a state of affairs.

THREAT TO ARMENIA.

GRAVE SITUATION ON WITHDRAWAL OF BRITISH TROOPS.

The delegation of the Armenian Republic in Paris has received from the President of Armenia an appeal for the help of the Allies in the present threatening situation. A vast movement is being directed by the Turks, Kurds and Tartars against Armenia, led by Kiazim Bey, Enver Pasha, and a number of Turkish officers. This movement is the work of Young Turk agents.

The appeal states that the Allied troops have already evacuated a part of the territory of the Armenian Republic, and the Armenian Government's requests for help have met with no result. The Turkish troops everywhere are disregarding the terms of the Armistice of November 1, 1918, and, encouraged by the withdrawal of the British troops, are endeavouring to establish communication with the Russian Bolshevists. Fighting has already begun between Turks and Armenians in the districts of Charour and Olti. The appeal ends: "Our situation is very critical. The Allies ought, at least, either to help us militarily or send us munitions."

WAR COMRADES AND THE ROSES.

Two ex-soldiers, Herbert Barrett and George Harwood, of Mortlake, who accompanied a party of Comrades of the Great War on a river trip to Weybridge, were each fined 26s. at Chertsey yesterday for helping themselves to roses at Portmore Gate, the residence of Mr. W. E. Ward.

The men stated that they saw a number of people with flowers standing outside the house, and they went inside and picked up the flowers from the lawn.

YORKSHIRE COAL STRIKE.

"UP TOOLS" AGAIN ON MONDAY.

The conference between the South Yorkshire coal owners and the men's representatives took place at Sheffield yesterday morning. The proceedings were of the most friendly character, and at the conclusion of the conference it was stated that arrangements had been made for the men to return to work at the earliest possible moment. Where possible, the men resume work on Monday.

NOBEL LITERATURE PRIZE.

The Swedish Academy has decided to award the Nobel prize for literature to the Norwegian author Knut Hamsum.

ARMY HUTS FOR HOUSING.

Five more local authorities have decided to utilise Army huts to provide temporary housing accommodation, pending the erection of permanent buildings. The Councils concerned are Cornwall, Devon, Suffolk, and the West and North Ridings of Yorkshire, all of which have made application for huts for this purpose.

Southwark Borough Council have had to add 8d. to the half-yearly rate to meet an extra call from the L.C.C. The rates are now the highest ever levied in the borough.

BELA KUN'S BOOTY.

DISCOVERY OF TREASURE TROVE IN BUDAPEST.

TERRORISTS' HASTY FLIGHT.

Most of "Lenin's Boys" and other Hungarian Terrorists are now in gaol, as the police found lists of their names. In Szamuely's saloon-coach were found over 700,000 kronen and a great number of jewels, watches, and rings, belonging to his victims who were executed. In the cupboards of the palace of the Archduke Joseph, until recently the headquarters of the "Red" Guard, 80,000,000 kronen in banknotes were discovered, apparently forgotten by the Terrorists in their hasty flight. This sum is part of two milliards of banknotes stolen from the Austro-Hungarian Bank at Budapest by the Bolshevists.

Bela Kun, who from the first day of his rule reckoned with the possibility of a sudden fall, used every opportunity to get sums of money in gold, jewels, carpets, objects d'art smuggled by trusted adherents across the Hungarian Frontiers to hiding-places abroad. The Austrian authorities have not yet succeeded in discovering this hidden treasure.

MISS V. DOUGLAS-PENNANT.

PUBLIC INQUIRY TO BE HELD.

The Select Committee of the House of Lords set up to inquire into the dismissal of Miss Violet Douglas-Pennant from the Women's Royal Air Force met for the first time on Thursday.

The committee sat for about a quarter of an hour in private, and when the parties were called in it was seen that Lord Wrenbury (formerly Lord Justice Buckley) had been elected chairman.

Lord Wrenbury said Miss Douglas-Pennant was invited by the committee to lodge a statement before September 3 with the secretary of the committee. This statement was to be confined to facts which she deemed relevant, and was not to include evidence by which she would seek to support her case. The opportunity would be given to any persons who in the opinion of the committee were interested, and who wished to take part in the proceedings. to obtain a copy of the statement. Those who could advance further facts were to lodge statements not later than September 23. The inquiry, would be heard in public, but the committee reserved the right to sit in private when thought desirable.

The committee adjourned till October 14.

LORD MILNER ON GROSS PROFITEERING.

An emphatic defence of the Profiteering Bill was made by Lord Milner in the House of Lords on Friday evening. In moving he second reading, he observed that he did not suppose the House would be wholly reconciled to the Bill by the statement that it was an emergency measure. He said that the exceptional circumstances of the time gave an opportunity to the speculator and the unscrupulous trader to enrich himself at the expense of the community. It was plain that the public was being grossly exploited.

For one case in which a man was brought up for trial under the Bill he expected there would be a hundred where men would be induced to set a limit to their greed of gain. The success of the local tribunals under the Military Service Acts and of local food committees entitled the Government to assume that these tribunals would be both popular and effective. It was a measure largely for the protection of the public by putting the public in a position to protect themselves.

After a favourable reception by other Lords, the Bill was read a second time.

ENGLISH WIFE IN AN OPIUM DEN.

Chong Yow, a Chinaman, who occupies premises at Pennyfield, Poplar, was fined £50 at Old-street yesterday for harbouring one and a half pound of opium.

It was stated that he was married to an Englishwoman and had four children. He charged 2s. a smoke. Six pipes were found, and there were beds in every room in the house.

BOOM IN BETTING-HOUSES.

"Betting of this class is more rife in the metropolis than it has ever been in my experience, and I submit that small fines are useless to put a stop to it," said Mr. Muskett, prosecuting for the police, in a case at Lambeth yesterday. (Mr. Muskett has been a solicitor since 1887.)

A coal porter convicted of keeping a betting house at Nunhead was fined £50 with £5 costs. It was stated that 93 slips had been found, one for a bet of £7.

NAVY STILL SILENT.

In the House of Commons Viscount Curzon asked the first Lord of the Admiralty for particulars of the sinking of the Bolshevist cruiser Oleg. Mr. Long replied that the Oleg was sunk by British Naval Forces which encountered her when patrolling and obviously it was undesirable to give the exact means by which the sinking was accomplished.

Mr. Lloyd George desires that no vote of thanks should be passed to him for the services that he rendered during the war.

ANGLO-PERSIAN AGREEMENT.

PROVISIONS OF TREATY CONCLUDED.

An agreement was concluded last Saturday between the Persian Government and Great Britain by which the latter will provide Persia at her expense with expert assistance and advice for the reconstruction of the State.

Details of the agreement was made known last night. Britain will assist Persia in the revision of the present treaties between the two Powers, in the claim to compensation for damage by other belligerents, and in the rectification of the frontier.

Great Britain will lend Persia officers for the establishment of a uniform army. The Treasury and the Government of India will lend jointly £2,000,000, and a British financial adviser will be installed at Teheran, the Persian capital.

Anglo-Persian enterprise will be encouraged to construct railways and improve transport generally, and the Customs tariff will be revised.

The agreement does not mean that Persia becomes in any way a British protectorate, but its provisions will allow of the free development of the country untrammelled by different foreign concession hunters.

The Shah, who has participated in the negotiations from the first, is on his way to this country.

SCOUTS MURDERED.

TURKISH TORTURERS IN ASIA MINOR.

From Greek official sources in London it is learned that telegrams have been received reporting the brutal murder by Turks at Aidin of M. Nicholas Avgeridis, Scoutmaster of the Greek Boy Scouts at Aidin, together with twenty Boy Scouts.

Before being put to death M. Avgeridis was submitted to torture of the most terrible nature, both his eyes being torn out of the sockets. M. Avgeridis was a wealthy inhabitant of Aidin who consistently abstained from taking any part in politics, and devoted his time exclusively to the development of the Boy Scout movement. Both he and his Scouts could have escaped, but the heroic Scoutmaster refused to leave the Christian population in the hour of danger, and met his death, thus proving his loyalty to the chivalrous traditions of the Greek Boy Scouts Corps. His twenty brave little followers perished at his side in a vain attempt to save the life of their beloved chief.

ANOTHER LONDON TRAGEDY.

Scotland Yard officials were busy yesterday investigating a case of an alleged attempted murder of a woman named Daley, who was found terribly injured and unconscious in a house in Olney-street, Walworth, where she had been acting as housekeeper during the absence of a Mrs. Green. When the latter came home on Tuesday, she discovered Daley in a back room in a terrible plight. The place was in the greatest disorder. Tables and chairs were overturned and marks of blood were on nearly every article in the room.

As a result of the discovery and correspondence found in the room., the police visited a tenement in Archer-street, Bermondsey, where a man named Fielder was found dead. It appears that the man and woman lived together for some time, until they quarrelled and parted. Evidence in possession of the police shows that Fielder paid a recent visit to the woman, who now lies in a critical condition in Southwark Infirmary.

SMILLIE RETIRING.

Mr. Smillie on Thursday night was presented by the National Union of Scottish Mineworkers with a cheque for £200 and a roll-top desk, and a piece of plate and a wristlet watch were presented to Mrs. Smillie.

In acknowledging the gifts, Mr Smillie said he always thought old men should make way for younger ones in the Labour movement. He had often thought of dropping out, and the probability was that that would come in a short time.

DISABLED MEN'S SWIMMING RACE.

No fewer than 23 soldiers, each minus either a leg or an arm, and one, in fact, minus both legs, took part at Brighton this week in a third of a mile swimming race from the Palace Pier, and all except one competitor completed the course. The soldiers had been carefully trained by Mr. Hurst. and there were thousands of spectators. Result:—First, Lance-corporal J.G. Blyth, 13th Rifle Brigade; second Sgt. H. Winfield. 13th Rifle Brigade; third, Pte. S.F. Cowley, Royal Warwicks. The legless man completed the course. Major-General Sir Samuel Hickson was the starter and judge.

FRENCH AIR LOSSES.

Casualties in the French Flying Corps have now been made public.

The total killed and wounded are 7,757. As the strength on December 1, 1918, was 12,919 men, the war losses represent 61 per cent., believed to be the highest losses in any arm of any Allied army.

MURDERED WOMAN'S RINGS.

DRAMATIC EVIDENCE IN FINSBURY PARK CASE.

Dramatic evidence in the Finsbury Park murder case was given by a woman at the North London Police Court. Before the magistrate was Frank George Warren, charged with the murder of Lucy Nightingale, and Henry Ball, who occupied the house in Prah-road where the woman was found strangled, charged as an accessory after the fact.

A woman witness, named Parton, who had been living with Warren, stated that on the Sunday night in question Warren went out with another man named Morgan. He returned early in the morning, and Warren washed his shirt. Before going to bed in the morning he gave her three rings, a wedding ring, a gold buckle ring with diamonds and a gold ring with rubies and diamonds having inside the initials "L.O.C." When she asked where he got them he replied, "Never mind." That morning he shaved off his moustache. In the afternoon they all went out and she noticed a newspaper placard about the Finsbury Park murder. She thought Warren and Morgan looked at one another. She said: "My God, you have had nothing to do with that?" Warren denied it, but afterwards when he bought a paper prevented her from reading the account of the murder. She recognised a soiled handkerchief and another with bloodstains on it.

Counsel stated that three rings had been identified as belonging to Nightingale, while the handkerchief with which the woman was gagged was identical with others found on Warren.

The case was adjourned for a week.

CASE OF VON BISSING.

A deputation, headed by the chairman of the District Council called on Baron von Bissing at Felixstowe by appointment. Naturalisation papers were produced by him, and he gave information about himself the points of which have already been published. The deputation pointed out that nothing he could say would alter public opinion. An informal meeting, not connected with the Council, was held afterwards outside the house. A deputy who was admitted to interview Von Bissing told him that his presence in Felixstowe was fomenting trouble, and unless he left the town within seven days something might happen.

3d. FOR MILLIONAIRE.

Mr. Henry Ford, the millionaire motor-car manufacturer, has been awarded 3d. damages in his libel action against the Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Ford sued the Tribune for £250,000 because a leading article called him "an Anarchist" and "an ignorant idealist."

REBUILDING THE RUINS.

It is estimated that some 60,000 workers will be required for the work of rebuilding the devastated regions of France and Belgium. The German Government has for some considerable time past been considering the question of the provision of, and accommodation for, these workers, and has elaborated through its experts a detailed scheme for housing the workers and providing them with everything necessary to meet their physical and intellectual needs.

480 ROUNDS A MINUTE.

DEMONSTRATION OF MACHINE GUN THAT CANNOT JAM.

War Office experts and naval and military attachés from most of the Great Powers have witnessed at Bisley a demonstration of a new machine gun.

It is claimed for the gun that it is the cheapest to make and use, cannot jam, has perfect breech-locking, has no kick, can be used without oil, and is not affected by the heat of the barrel.

The gun is the invention of Colonel Farquhar, and is similar in its automatic and breech mechanism to the Farquhar-Hill automatic rifle, which was adopted by the Admiralty in 1915 and by the War Office last year.

Colonel Farquhar demonstrated with continuous fire that the gun is capable of firing at a rate of 480 rounds per minute. He showed how to fire single shots and how to change from single shot to automatic fire. He also gave a demonstration of fire from the hip, and fired the gun upside down and sideways.

LABOUR'S PARLIAMENT.

GOVERNMENTS, EMPLOYERS AND WORKPEOPLE TO MEET.

A NEW ORGANISATION.

The International Organising Committee which has in hand the preparations for the International Labour Conference, to be held in October at Washington, is now at work in London.

At the Conference each State is to be represented by four delegates—two representatives of the Government, one of the employers, and one of the workpeople.

Each delegate will have the right to put his own point of view and to cast his vote independently, a far-reaching departure from the previous practice of International Conferences between States.

If a draft treaty or convention is adopted by a two-thirds majority, every State of the League of Nations must lay it before its Parliament, and if thus approved the State must ratify it.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE.

LORD LEE OF FAREHAM'S NEW APPOINTMENT.

It is announced that Lord Lee of Fareham has been appointed President of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries in the room of Lord Ernle, resigned.

Created a baron last year, Col. Arthur Hamilton Lee represented the Fareham division of Hampshire as a Unionist for 18 years. He is 50 years of age. He entered the Army in 1888. At the outbreak of war he rejoined the Army as colonel on the staff and received a knighthood in 1916 for exceptional services to the military forces in the field. He was Civil Lord of the Admiralty from 1903 to 1905 and Director-General of Food Production in 1917.

In 1917 Lord Lee presented to the nation, subject to life interest, the famous Chequers Estate in the Chiltern Hills, with the mansion house and its contents, to be the future official country residence of the Prime Ministers of England.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT APPOINTMENT.

Sir George Buchanan has been appointed British Ambassador at Rome, in succession to Sir Rennell Rodd; Sir William Tyrrell is to be second in command to Viscount Grey of Fallodon at Washington; Mr. Max-Muller to be Minister at Constantinople; Sir George Clerk to be Minister to the Czecho-Slovak Republic at Prague; and the Hon. Theophilus Russell Minister at Berne.

OUR HOME WOODLANDS.

NECESSITY FOR REPLANTING EXISTING WOODS.

Major G. L. Courthope, M.P., president of the Royal Arboricultural Society, states that the present time is crucial for British forestry. During the war at least two-thirds of the mature timber of Britain had been sold for war purposes, in addition to large quantities of immature timber. Our existing woods produced less than one fourth of the annual quantity possible under scientific stocking and management. If sufficient home-grown timber had been available for our war requirements it was estimated that, apart from the benefit of increased expenditure at home, at least £75,000,000 would have been saved. It would be the duty of the Permanent Forestry Authority to encourage the replanting of existing woods on sound lines and largely to increase the total area of woodlands in the Kingdom.

WHAT MALTA WANTS.

SELF GOVERNMENT AND UNIVERSAL MALE SUFFRAGE.

The President of the Maltese National Assembly has presented to Field-Marshal Sir H. Plumer a scheme for the reform of the Constitution passed by the Assembly. It demands self-government, the appointment of a civil Governor, a Constitution embracing the dual Chamber system and universal male suffrage, the removal of ecclesiastical disabilities, the abolition of class distinctions, and a democratised Senate.

RE-BUILDING THE RUINS.

Negotiations are still taking place between French, German and Austrian commissions concerning the employment of German and Austrian labour for the rebuilding of Northern France.

German labour is not necessary in Belgium as there are plenty of native workmen available. A settlement of the matter of the protection and insurance of the German workmen is expected.

HOME RAILWAY TROUBLE.

The threatened trouble with railway drivers and firemen on the question of a standard wage has been postponed over the week-end. The new Government offer will be made on Monday.

According to Italian papers, Italy will give up to Great Britain her part of the indemnities to be paid by Germany.

RAYS OF LIGHT.

The Germans have a saying to the effect that everything eventually is revealed in the light of day. "Die Sonne bringt es an den Tag." The Sunlight of Peace is powerful in revelation, and their statesmen and politicians have certainly laid the proverb to heart, and the volume of memoirs and explanations as to the conduct of the war steadily increases.

We are far from making any complaints on this score. After all, we are only concerned with truth, and we welcome the publication of anything, especially from the German side, which confirms the truth regarding the true authors of the greatest crime in history.

Thus a very interesting letter was published recently in the "20 Jahrhundert." It was addressed to Prince Max of Baden from Hindenburg. The gist of it is, that Bethmann Hollweg placed no credence in President Wilson's offer of mediation in December 1916. The decision to adopt the unrestricted U-boat warfare was made dependent upon the military situation; and Hindenburg declared himself in its favour.

Even more interesting, however, are the memoirs recently published, of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz. The extracts represent von Tirpitz as swayed between his desire to give the fleet an opportunity of showing its powers and his fears as to what might in that case happen.

According to the writer of the memoirs, the full responsibility for initiating the unrestricted U-boat warfare rests with the Kaiser. He was responsible for the disposition of the German fleet. We presume that the Grand Admiral has authority for making this statement. If so, the trial of the Kaiser may prove to be even more interesting than we expected. Von Tirpitz has much to say about the weakness and irresolution of the Kaiser.

Wilhelm II. is represented as desirous of conserving the fleet in order that it might act as a point d'appui in future peace negotiations. Events, however, turned out otherwise, and what our Navy left of the Kaiser's favourite arm of the service now lies at the bottom of the sea at Scapa Flow, a fitting grave for the ambitions of the "Admiral of the Atlantic."

GOING HOME.

We have all heard the verdict. In a month or two the great army of occupation in Rhineland is to fade away to the size of a mere Brigade of a few thousand men.

Day by day and week by week we shall be moving off to the Homeland, or hearing of others who are returning. To many it will come as something of a shock. Some had a feeling that life in the Rhineland was to last almost indefinitely. They were settling down to educational courses, to a round of amusement, to country explorations and a dozen or more delightful hobbies.

Others, who have girded against being kept in a foreign land with which they feel no sympathy and for whom the quiet pleasures of peace have no particular charm, will be glad of the coming departure so as to be once again on their native soil.

But whether one's stay in Rhineland is short or prolonged, one cannot restrain the feeling that it has been a privilege in many ways to be here. We are fortunate in the first place to be among those who have survived the horrors of the world's most terrible war. After the years of stress and strife it has been good to enjoy a comparatively restful time by the Rhine amid fine scenery and in historic towns.

The visit to Rhineland and previously perhaps to France and Flanders or the East will have taught us the useful art of observation. It is true that in the past we Britishers have had the reputation of being the greatest travellers, but have we gathered as much knowledge on our trips abroad as we should have done?

We are afraid the answer must generally be in the negative.

We have had the opportunity and it still remains open to us in the further time we may have here to utilise those powers to the best possible advantage.

In that event, we shall not regret an enforced sojourn among our late enemies and shall go home better equipped for the coming war of commerce because of that experience. For all should ever remember that knowledge is power, and to be powerful in this direction is more than ever necessary.

MODERN PRUSSIANISM.

In "The Twilight of the Hohenzollerns" ("Die Hohenzollernadmmerung") which was originally published during the war, the anonymous author has attempted to show by means of quotations that Wagner's "Ring" forms a sub-conscious prophecy of the rise and fall of what we call modern Prussianism.

This idea is a perfectly legitimate one, whether for purposes of satire or of propaganda, and in the present work it is carried out with considerable ingenuity and with only slight alterations in the letter of the text. Add to this the really excellent illustrations by Glyn Philpot, and this short book can be warmly recommended to all who are interested either in Wagner's music-drama or in the development of modern Germany. (The book is conveniently arranged for both German and English readers, the German version being printed on the left, the English on the right side of each page.)

The author justly claims to have stood faithfully by the original text, though it could hardly be said that he has been equally fair in his treatment of some of the characters.

It is rather a shock to find Siegfried converted into Prussian Militarism and Brunnhilde into Pan-Germanism, and it becomes evident, upon inspection, that only by a drastic conversion of this kind could the original words possibly bear the meaning which the author intends they should have for us. Thus a strict adherence to the text has been purchased at the price of falsifying the characters, and this, though it may be good propaganda, is not satire. It is, at best, burlesque.

Further, there is one worse crime, a definite perversion of Wagner's words and intentions. One of the pictures represents Siegfried (Prussian Militarism) standing against as his sword shivers to pieces upon the anvil of the Allied Armies.

Now the whole point of the original is, as everyone knows who has seen the first act of "Siegfried," that it was the anvil that was shivered to pieces by Siegfried's sword and not the sword by the anvil. A distorted interpretation of this kind is not only bad art, but indifferent propaganda.

Fortunately, however, this worst blemish does not prevent the book as a whole from being a happy and successful effort, while, as already said, the pictures, which illustrate each of the chosen extracts, are of quite remarkable quality.

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

V. SCHLOSS BURG.

Rearing its head proudly above the little town of Burg, stands Schloss Burg, a mediaeval castle, from the ages past the seat of the Counts of Berg. It is not quite clear whether this family took its name from the town or vice versa, but although the spelling is different, the pronunciation is the same.

Entering the courtyard by one of the massive gateways, one is confronted with the keep, square and imposing, through which one gains admission to the building itself and from the top of which a splendid view is obtained, from the town itself up to the Emperor William Viaduct, a remarkable piece of engineering skill which crosses the valley of the Wupper a distance of about 1060 feet.

From the keep, one enters the Banqueting Hall, part of the original building. This apartment is large and fairly lofty, the roof being supported by a series of central pillars. The mural decorations here call for notice and consist of scenes from local history with reference to the family. At the far end there is a vivid portrayal of a battle between the forces of Berg, and those of the Archbishop of Cologne.

Another picture shows one of the Counts of Berg leading a recruiting march through the town. All the series are worthy of study, but as the hall is lighted on both sides, some of the pictures will not be seen at their best. The windows, of which there are twelve are rich with stained glass, and portray the crests of important Rhineland towns.

On the walls of the smaller salon adjoining there has been painted a panorama of part of Rhineland, over which are portrayed in rich colouring, representative members of the family tree together with their crests.

This series commences with Adam and Eve, and ends with the late German monarch, with whom the family claim relationship. It is a curious fact that this latter personage completes the tree, there being no further room for additions. The family crest is a Lion Rampant, with a double tail a design that seems not unlike the Welsh Dragon.

Until recently, the upper rooms of the older portion of the castle comprised a museum, but unfortunately at present, all the exhibits have been removed.

From the upper windows, one can gaze down on the lower turrets and in places, the remains of the castellated wall. Looking down into the courtyard one listens for the clash of armour, and the eye waits for a glittering figure on a prancing steed. One can imagine the knight calling a fond adieu to his "Ladye fayre"—can imagine him catching the glove she threw and pressing it to his lips.

Surrounded by splendid scenery, easy of access, this castle is well worth a visit, although your true antiquarian may turn up his nose at it, for whilst the building was founded in 1133, it was enlarged about the fifteenth century, and rebuilt on the old lines in the eighteen sixties. In front of the keep one finds a quite modern fountain and statue which do not go back earlier than 1903.

Intending visitors should proceed to Wermelskirchen by train and make the remainder of the journey on foot, as the scenery will amply repay the trouble.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

(XVIII).

BY LIEUT. W. R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S.

With the advent of a belated summer in Rhineland the question of photographic exposure comes again to the fore. I have examined many negatives during the last few days; negatives that were indistinct. For a short period we have had most brilliant sunshine. Therein lies the cause of blurred photographs. It is all a matter of light.

With such remarkably fine light as we are experiencing one ought to stop down and expose rapidly; let us say, with a 6.3 or 6.8 (anastigmat) at a minimum hundredth of a second. This, of course, depends upon the quality of the lens. Your Goerz Dogmar or your Zeiss Tessar will work, in bright sunshine such as we have had lately, up to a thousandth, though it is rarely necessary to utilise this speed. It is far better, with a 4.5, to stop down, that is to say, decrease the diameter of your diaphragm, and to expose at lesser speed, provided that your subject is not moving too quickly.

It is stupid for a beginner to become discouraged at the first few failures, since, in all things, one learns only by experience. It is actually good to produce a few failures at the outset, but you must study them with the greatest attention, since they will tender you as much information as will a perfect negative.

Again, I have recently seen some negatives, treated by beginners, that were much under-developed. I assume this is due to impatience; a desire to complete one's picture from pure curiosity. It is far better to work carefully. One or two of those shown to me had not been left sufficiently long in the "hypo" bath.

Another fault, producing indifferent negatives, is that of insufficient washing. When you remove your plate or film from the developer a short rinsing in water will suffice, but after immersion in the "hypo" the washing must be so thorough as to remove all traces of the chemical. If this is not done the soda is liable to crystallise upon the surface of the film. Whenever you detect any trace of crystals, seen as tiny sparkles, you ought to wash the negative again. Bad work in any of the processes that go to produce a picture, may become a hindrance to the remaining processes.

Another negative brought to me this week, a really excellent portrait, was completely ruined by "bubbles" which produce "spotty" negatives. This may be avoided if the beginner will learn to rub his finger over the surface of the film whilst it in the developer. Personally, I wash my plates and films in water and rub them before immersion in the developer, after which only an occasional rocking is necessary.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

A PATRIOTIC LETTER.

Sir,—I too, would like to endorse the recent letter respecting the attitude of the Rhine Army and those would-be "Marats" and "Robespierres" at home, who seek by their activities to bring an end to all law and order and further their Bolshevist programme to bring about Soviet government in England.

I doubt whether there could be found any thinking man in the Rhine Army who would give an ear to the vapourings of these cranks who seek to destroy all that is worth while in our own land, which with all its faults is England still and for which so many old and young "Bills" died for.

Some of them are no doubt the originators of the "love-your-enemy stunts" during the war and doubtless enjoyed a fat wage and security at home.

It almost makes one wish that these pests could be treated in the same way as we are wont to dispose of surplus new-born kittens. "PRO PATRIA."

LEARNING THINGS.

Sir,—A feature very marked in your "Echoes from Rhineland" is that in which so many of our men record things "which are done better here than at home." In nine cases out of ten they describe "gadgets" which have been in use at home for years, but have not been remarked by careless youth. This, I see quite well, is a good feature of the "Echoes," for it is is encouraging our young soldiers to observe and not only to observe but to note and record their observations, in itself a most excellent training.

To illustrate my "nine out of ten" I would mention, among others, the shunting "hump," climbing irons, and the gradual starting of railway engines—to wit, the Westinghouse brake system—all used for years in our modest island.

But a number of novelties have been mentioned, and I would fain see the contributions to "our paper" multiplied in this direction. F.O.O.

HANDWRITING.

Sir,—I have read with some interest the remarks of "F.K.D." and "Freedom," on the subject of handwriting, and I agree with "F.K.D." that more attention, not only on the part of the scholars but on the part of the teachers, should be paid to this subject, being, in my opinion, of great importance, both personally, and in business, therefore of national importance.

Surely "F.K.D." is aware that standards of handwriting exist in our own national schools! The fault, in my opinion, lies with the teachers, many of whom do not know how or take the trouble to hold their own pens correctly.

"OLD CHICHESTER BOY."

"SPURIOUS AMBER."

Sir,—A short time ago I purchased in Bonn a rather attractive looking necklace for which I paid 400 marks. I received with it a guarantee that it was "genuine amber."

On being rubbed briskly on a damp hand the beads certainly gave off a resinous smell, but the jeweller still maintained that it is amber.

If it can be proved to be spurious can I take proceedings against the seller through the A.P.M? DOUBTFUL.

WATER TRANSPORT.

Sir,—The extent to which barges are used for transporting goods on the Rhine makes one wonder at the comparative neglect of water transport in England. At a time when railway freights are so high, many of the inland canals which have fallen into disuse could be profitably repaired and used, and considerable economy would be the result. Water power, too, might be much more widely used, particularly for generating electricity, and the centralisation of power would be greatly assisted thereby.

UTILITY.

GERMAN PICTURES.

Sir,—With reference to your correspondent's remarks about counterfeit works of art, let me comment on the excellence of many of the reproductions which are to be had in German art shops. Original pictures of merit are beyond the reach of many people of artistic tastes, but the perfection of German printing renders the possession of really beautiful pictures possible to those of limited means.

ARTIST.

MUSIC IN CAFES.

Sir,—One has read a good deal in praise of the German method of combining café with entertainment, but it is very greatly to be doubted whether the British system of having them separated is not better. The audience at a cabaret performance may be broadly classified as those who want to talk and those who want to listen, and when a musical item of any merit is being performed, the talkers interfere very considerably with the enjoyment of those who go to hear the show. ANTI CABARET.

BRITAIN—IN THE EAST.

From Egypt into China they have builded them a wall;
They have held the front of Eden from the Teuton and his thrall;
On the snowy stairs of Elburz you may hear their bugles call,
"Ye are safe! Be at ease! Ye are safe!"
You shall watch the ships adrifting with the Tigris underkeel.
In the crooked streets of Bagdad you shall see the camels kneel
With the good things out of Persia that the robber could not steal;
Ye are safe! Be at ease! Ye are safe.
In the brain of wounded England lay the silence for a span;
Then she rose and wrought a marvel by the steppes of Turkestan:
O ye women-folk of Irak! O ye children of Iran!
Ye are safe! Be at ease! Ye are safe.

RHYS CARPENTER.

POLO, SWIMMING, DIVING.

Keen Tussle For Western Division Cup.

"SKILL-AT-ALL-SPORTS."

The excitement becoming intensified as each event is contested, the fight for the Divisional "Skill-at-all-Sports" Cup, open to the 1st Western Division, continues, and amidst a crowd of enthusiastic spectators, the water polo matches were played off at the Victoria Baths, Bonn, on Thursday. Each game was of sixteen minutes duration, eight minutes each way, and each team consisted of seven men. The following were the competitors and the officials:—

1st Western Inf. Bde. (14th Cheshires).
2nd Western Inf. Bde. (53rd Welsh).

Disposing of their opponents without much difficulty, the 1st and the 3rd Brigades were left to contest the final, which proved to be the game of the day.

Goal Scored.

For the first few minutes of the game, the 1st Bde. had things all their own way, but, having been used to playing with the goals at the regulation height, their shots were going over the bar. The 3rd Bde., however, were carefully marking their men, and watching for an opportunity to break through. Nor was the opportunity lost when it did come, for before the 1st Bde. team realized that their goal was in danger, the ball had been put between the sticks. Having thus established a lead, the 3rd Bde played for safety, and their tactics proved successful.

Result:—
3rd Western Inf. Bde. 1;
1st Western Inf. Bde. nil.

During the morning's play, the 1st Bde. scored no less than ten goals, whereas only two were scored against them.

Swimming and Diving.

The Divisional Aquatic Sports were concluded on Friday when the swimming and diving events took place. The participants were the same as in the polo. The following officiated:—

"A Most Marvellous Swimmer."

The outstanding feature of the gala was undoubtedly the performance of Pte. Pearson of the 14th Cheshires. A glance at the results shows that he took part in each event, which made it necessary for him to be in the water practically all the time. Only on one occasion did he finish other than first and that was in the 200 yards final. Here, however, he had to swim this race immediately after finishing the 400 yards final.

Presenting Pearson with the silver cup he won on Thursday in the 50 yards open, Major-General Sir E. P. Strickland, K.C.B., congratulated him heartily, and made reference to the fact that during that morning alone, Pearson had swum at top speed no less than sixty-six lengths. "A most marvellous swimmer," remarked one of the Staff officers, and his statement was endorsed by all who were present.

1st Western Inf. Bde. 18 points;
2nd Western Inf. Bde. 14 points;
3rd Western Inf. Bde. 12 points;
Divisional Artillery 2 points;
Divisional Headquarters 0 points.

BOXING CONTESTS.

Second Stage Reached At Beethoven Hall, Bonn.

The second stage in the fight for the Divisional "Skill-at-all-Sports" Cup, open to the units of the 1st Western Infantry Division, was reached on Wednesday, when the Boxing Competition took place at the Beethoven Hall, Bonn, before a large spectotorate. The following were the representatives:—

1st Western Inf. Bde., 1/4 Cheshires.

Divisional Artillery, 104th Bde. R.F.A.
Divisional H.Q. were also represented. Each fight was decided on the points gained in three two-minute rounds. The following officiated:—
Referee:—Lieut.-Col. J. Betts, A.G.S. Judges:—Capt. A. Best; Capt. Peacock. Timekeeper:—Staff-Capt. Jacques, M.C.; M.C.:—R.S.M. Martin, 1/4 Cheshires; Steward:—C.S.M. Hopwood, A.G.S.

At the conclusion of the competition, Brig.-General C. Coffin, V.C., Commanding 1st Western Inf. Bde., thanked Lieut.-Col. Betts for carrying out his duty as referee so efficiently, and replying Lieut.-Col. Betts remarked that the fighting had been clean throughout, holding and hitting with an open glove being the only faults about which we had had to caution the competitors.

The result in points of the whole of the competitions so far as they have progressed is:—

Div. Artillery . . . . . 54 points;
3rd Western Inf. Bde. . 49 points;
1st Western Inf. Bde. . 48 points;
Div. Headquarters . . . . 41 points;
2nd Western Inf. Bde. . 35 points.

Owing to a mistake in the R.F.A. representation there will be a re-pull for the Tug-of-War contest at Hervel on Saturday morning. This and the Aquatic Sports will decide to which unit the Cup will go.

WAR HORSE WINNER.

Success Of Officer's Charger At Windsor Meeting.

POPULAR WIN.

The success of Prevoyant in the Forest Handicap at the Windsor meeting on Friday was noteworthy from the fact that this old horse "did his bit" during the war as an officer's charger. After this honourable phase in his career he was bought back from the Army by his former owner, Mr. Ivall, in whose colours he gained this popular win.

Club Plate:—1, Thendara (11-2); 2, Nausicaa (7-4); 3, Arneta (4-1).

SUMMER SOCCER.

A keen and exciting struggle was served up by 63rd Brigade H.Q., v. 127 Heavy Battery, R.G.A., in their match in Schlebusch on Monday evening. The first half was an almost continuous bombardment of the Brigade goal by the Heavies quintette, led by Batty, of Swindon fame, but Corporal Hobbs in goal proved himself equal to any emergency. His judgment was superb, and the cleverly executed and clean clearances earned for him the applause of both friend and foe. Half time came with the Brigade citadel intact.

After a dangerous burst by the Heavies, which found Sergt. Young on the qui vive, the Brigade began to take the upper hand. Gunner Briggs at centre broke through, and though badly fouled at close quarters, managed to direct the sphere into the net. This spurred the 63rd on, and, though hard pressed on several occasions, they managed to notch up the second point. From a throw in close to Brigade corner post, the ball came out to Hilton who transferred to Cpl. Shepherd; he in turn when tackled tapped on to brother Tom and got into position. Then at top speed he made for goal, and, picking the back, put in the finest shot of the match, which left the "goalie" guessing. No further scoring took place, and the Brigade finished winners of a ding-dong struggle. All the team worked like Trojans in the second half, but chief honours went to Hobbs in goal for his brilliant keeping.

HOCKEY AT BONN.

5th Border Regt. v. 1/12th L.N.L. (Pioneers).

A fast and interesting game of hockey between the above mentioned teams resulted in a win for the L.N.L. by 5 goals to nil. For the winners Capt. Creagh at centre-half, Lieut. Slack, and Pte. Porter in goal were the best of a good, well-balanced team, which, at its full strength, will be difficult to beat.

This is the second fixture between these two teams, the first resulting in a win for the Pioneers by 3 goals to 1. The North Lancs. are very anxious to obtain future fixtures.

GRAND PRIX DE DEAUVILLE.

The following are the probable starters and jockeys for the Grand Prix de Deauville to-day: Mademoiselle Foch (F. Lane), Laurentian (J. Childs), Pussebreul (McGee), Romano or I Arrive (Sharpe), Juveigneur (Bellhouse), Stearine (R. Stokes), Brumado (O'Neill), Suavita (E. Bouillon), Reine Pedauque, Gaba Tepe (C. Childs), Insensible, King's Cross (E. Alemand), and Tullamore (J. Jennings).

RHINE RACING CALENDAR.

Rhineland has now a "Racing Calendar" of its own, issued by the Racing Sub-Committee, British Army of the Rhine, and like its English prototype it contains much information for followers of the turf. Among the contents are rules of racing, regulations, lists of horses, owners, and results of meetings held under Sub-Committee rules. The publication may be obtained at Room 245, Deichmann Haus, Cologne, the price being two and a half marks.

C.P.C. MATCHES.

Much speculation will be aroused by the publication of the Bonn League Table. Events have reached a very interesting stage. At least five teams are in the running for premier honours: several games of a decisive nature have yet to be played. Eight days only remain in which to decide. Here are the positions to date:—

HOBBS AND KNIGHT.

Brilliant First Wicket Partnership of 248.

INSPIRED BOWLING BY HEAP.

A brilliant first-wicket partnership by Hobbs and D. J. Knight, and an inspired bowling spell by Heap, were leading features in the opening day's cricket at Old Trafford, where Surrey promised a mammoth total, had a bad batting breakdown, and finally ran up a score that made them safe.

Run-getting seemed the easiest thing imaginable before lunch, when Hobbs hit his sixth 100 of the season, and got within 10 of his 2,000 runs.

In a couple of hours he and Knight scored 192 without being separated, and gave the finest display of masterly batsmanship seen at Old Trafford this season. Their respective scores were D. J. Knight 148; Hobbs 102.

Lively Army Batting.

Represented by a strong eleven the Army had all the best of the play at the Oval in the opening of their match with the Royal Air Force. In four hours and twenty minutes they put together a total of 387 and then got nine Air Force wickets down for 94.

The Army batting was very bright and attractive, all the men who met with success hitting freely with the exception of Bullen. Parsons, of Warwickshire, made some delightful drives; Astill, of Leicestershire, obtained most of his runs by clean, hard hitting on the leg side; and Williams, of Sussex, and Hydson drove well on both sides of the wicket. Bullen played good steady cricket and P. R. Johnson scored by a variety of methods. The Air Force fielding was excellent, and W. H. G. Heath kept wicket with marked skill.

English Cricket Scores.

Surrey 494 for 3 declared; Lancs 91 for seven.

Warwickshire 252; Gloster 177 for seven.
Notts 385; Leicester 88 for two.

New Tests For Motor Bicycles With Sidecars.

This year's six days' reliability run for motor cycles, motor cycles with sidecars, and three-wheeled "motor-cars," promoted by the Auto-Cycle Union, is pretty certain to surpass all previous events in interest as well as the number of entries, because of the wider scope given to the passenger carriers, which in the early days Van Hooydonk and Wilbur Gunn, who are now successful makers of motor-cars, did much to popularise with their Phoenix and Lagonda tricars. As before, the competing machines are classified on cylinder capacity and weight, which is far better than any form of classification according to horse-power and weight, as by this means one can estimate the merits of any machine by its performance in a moment.

There are five classes in all for motor bicycles of the solo order, ranging from 250 c.c. to 1,000 c.c. without fuel or oil, and an equal number for combination outfits and three wheelers from 350 c.c. to any capacity within the limits of 176 lb. and 385 lb. All the machines must be fully rigged with two independent brakes and tool equipment, and each passenger carried must scale at least 132 lb., or this weight may, if necessary, be made up with ballast.

The main tests are reliability by adherence to schedule and hill-climbing, fast and slow. Other things taken into account include silence, acceleration, maintenance of efficiency (determined by a special test), equipment, and protective devices, and condition at finish. The route is not yet disclosed, but, as formerly, it will doubtless be one combining the picturesque with the practical.

REMARKABLE ATHLETIC FEAT.

Walter Brickett, the British Olympic swimming trainer, who is fifty-four years old, on Friday set himself the task of walking a mile, running one, running another "over hurdles," cycling three miles, walking a mile, and swimming a mile in one hour. He was granted a permit to use the towing path between Putney Bridge and a point just above Hammersmith Bridge for his land efforts, and also a permit to row and swim in the Thames. The Mayor of St. Pancras acted as starter.

Brickett began by walking a mile in 7 min. 59 4-5 sec.; then he ran the distance in 7 min. 15 1-5 sec. The mile with occasional hurdles to negotiate took him 7 min. 27 sec., and he did the three miles cycling in 10 min. 52 2-5 sec. This accomplished, he rowed a mile down-stream in 7 min. 2 sec., and, jumping out of the boat, swam back to the starting-point opposite the London Rowing Club's boat-house at Putney in 14 min. 58 1-5 sec., his total time for all events being 55 min. 34 1-5 sec.—a remarkable performance.

Oldest Tennis Club.

The Gore Court Lawn Tennis Club, which is the oldest lawn tennis club in England, having been started in 1875, opened a three-days tournament on Thursday at Gore Court Park, Sittingbourne.

GOLF TOURNEY FINAL.

Scottish Amateur Champion Defeated At St. Andrews.

SURPRISING RESULTS.

There was some surprising golf in the closing stages of the amateur tournament promoted by the St. Andrews Town Council on the Eden course. In the semi-final on Friday morning, Mr. Denys H. Kyle (St. Andrews University), the Scottish amateur champion, went down before Mr. Ian Munro (Strathpeffer), who beat him by 4 and 3, and Mr. Walter Blackwell (Royal and Ancient) was defeated by Mr. W. Guild (Murrayfield) by a like margin.

Mr. Munro, who is the Highland champion, had caused a stir on the previous day by his remarkable putting. On Friday he was almost deadly on the green—at all events in the earlier part of his morning match. He won the first two holes and the sixth, and at the ninth holed out from a distance of 15 yards to turn 4 up. He became 6 up, but, going off a little in his putting, he lost three holes in succession. Mr. Kyle, however, could not stave off defeat.

Mr. Munro secured the challenge cup and gold medal by beating Mr. Guild in the final by 2 up. A silver medal went to the runner-up. A medal had also been offered for the player making the best single round score in the qualifying competition, and a Mr. J.C. Jessop (Montrose Mercantile) and Mr. John Cavan (Cochrane Castle) had 74 for it is at 75, they played off, with the result that Mr. Jessop won.

Results:

Semi-Finals.

Mr. W.J. Guild (Murrayfield) beat Mr. Walter Blackwell (R. and A.) by 4 and 3.
Mr. Ian Munro (Strathpeffer) beat Mr. Denys H. Kyle (St. Andrews University) by 4 and 3.

Final.

Mr. Munro beat Mr. Guild, 2 up.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

In Blighty.

I received a letter yesterday from one of "Ye Merry Muffins" who have now reached England. He tells me that they had a very pleasant journey. Having a truck to themselves for properties etc., the electricians fixed up the lighting and everything was fine on the Cologne-Calais train. On the boat from Calais to Folkestone, the "Muffins" orchestra played "Auld Lang Syne," "Marseillaise," and other items. Ernest Lonsdale and Alex Factor also contributed to the programme. Now the party are showing at the Garrison Theatre, Chipstowe.

One of the Pedlars.

Audiences at Cologne and Bonn will recognise the caricature as being an impression of Norman Kiddie, of "The Pedlars." His is a comedian of note; one cannot easily forget his droll humour and eccentric style. Norman is the son of the producer of Kiddie's pantomimes—Gar Kiddie. As Squirty the fireman he caused much merriment at Bonn; though he is perhaps at his best in his farcical soldier study. Kiddie has had a versatile career and has in fact been in the business since he was a nipper of three. His home is in Lancashire.

JACQUES.

SHOW-RING JUMPS.

Suggested Improvement.

The following letter which will be of interest to all horse show committees is reproduced from the "Field":—

The average course to which we are accustomed in England is not only monotonous, but it is not sufficiently long to be sure of getting horses placed in their order of merit. We have often seen horses obtain honours over such courses that we knew were lucky to be placed. At a horse show held by the French Army at Wiesbaden some weeks ago I saw the thing done on somewhat different lines, and I think in many respects it was a great improvement on the English pattern. It certainly made a much more interesting event, both to the rider and the spectator.

In a jumping competition open to all Allied officers there were no fewer than seventeen fences and of these no two were alike, but three of them were jumped twice. The fences had no wings. As the arena was being used for other events all the fences were movable. I know this will not commend itself to English ideas, as being unnatural and savouring of the circus, but I can answer for it that the fences were a wonderfully good representation of natural ones, and tested the jumping powers and cleverness of a horse to the utmost. They did more, they tested his condition. The best jump in the event competed again another day, and it was interesting to note what a much more searching test the addition in height of a very few inches to each fence made when so many had to be jumped. The judging was all done from a raised platform clear of the arena, from which every fence could be seen. When a horse had piled up more than a certain number of faults, or exceeded a certain time limit, a bell rang and he had to pull out.

EDDIE McGOORTY.

Explanation Of Recent After-Dinner Experience.

The following is a copy of a letter which has been received by Mr. Chas. B. Cochran from Eddie McGoorty:

Dear Mr. Cochran,—An explanation is due to you with regard to my conviction on a charge of drunkenness. I was not drunk. I attended a farewell dinner given to my friend, Augie Ratner, who left this morning for the States. In view of my forthcoming contest with Beckett I drank very temperately indeed, as the people who were present will tell you. I will ask you this question, Mr. Cochran: Do you think that if I had been drunk and incapable, as described on the charge sheet, my friends would have allowed me to walk from Simpson's in the Strand to the Granton in Tottenham Court-road? Of course not. I must have been a victim to the heat wave. Anyway, I know that I was not drunk, and that is why I demanded to see the doctor. I pleaded guilty in the court because I wanted to escape publicity; but I was unlucky again.

But don't you be alarmed, Mr. Cochran. I shall be fit to fight the fight of my life on Sept. 2. I feel fairly fit to-day, and think I have shaken off the effects of my heat stroke, but I shall not start to train seriously until next Monday. I go stale if I have more than a fortnight's hard work. Don't worry, I shall be fit, and as a proof of my confidence I will post the remaining £75 of my £1000 side stake on Monday next and put my own douceur down if I do not hear from my backer before then.—Yours very truly

Girl Athletes.

"During the past two years and a half," writes Mr. Vernon to the "Daily Chronicle," "I have had a good deal to do with girl athletes, and can see no reason why, with proper training and coaching, British girls should not equal the records made by American girls."

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Work and Play.

Why is it that the Germans, the middle classes at any rate appear to have more time for pleasure than the English? An answer is perhaps to be found in their system of working.

In many of the commercial houses in Cologne one will find heads of departments as well as their subordinates at their desks by seven o'clock in the morning.

Afterwards work is resumed for a short time everybody being finished quite early in the afternoon or evening.

Climbing Irons.

Comment has been made in Echoes upon the climbing irons used by the Germans for scaling telegraph poles and the inference is drawn that here again the Germans are ahead That is not so, for on comparison with those used by the Royal Engineers it will be found that the English article is much lighter and not half so inconvenient to carry. The English irons have no large hoops and the wearer can, without removing them, walk or ride.

Another Schocoladen Story.

A Tommy recently took up his quarters in the new billet allotted to him. The family — mother, father, aunt, and two daughters — were most charmingly attentive and did everything possible to make him comfortable. To show some mark of appreciation he thought he could not do better than make them a small present of something they would welcome very much. Something perhaps that they had not been able to obtain since before the war. What better than a nice box of chocolate? So a nice box of chocolate he bought duly presenting same to mother and the girls. Next morning, quite by chance, he discovered that the ground floor of the house was devoted to business, with large stock rooms. On the side of the house was a huge sign "Schocoladen Fabric."

A Forward Fraulein.

We all have our own ideas about fraternisation and we all have our own opinions regarding war decorations. But both items reached the limits of propriety a few evenings ago. The scene was enacted in a German beer-garden. The players were an English soldier and a young German girl. Both were sitting drinking wine at a table when the Fraulein was seen to suddenly reach forward, unpin the war decorations (the D.C.M., Mon's star, and General Service Medal) from the soldier's breast and, with evident satisfaction, pin them on to her own blouse. A murmur of disapproval arose from other Tommys sitting near and the offended soldier had the good sense to immediately recover his lost ribbons and leave the obviously astonished damsel. One can only imagine the young girl acted without thinking how the medals—especially the D.C.M. — might have been won.

Churchill's Bombshell.

A German informant points out that latest information respecting the strength of the British forces in Rhineland after October has had a mixed reception amongst the female population. The women over forty exclaimed "Thank God!" Those about Thirty remarked "Is that so?" The frauleins cried "What a pity."

The "Baubles" of Kingship.

A little group of interested children gathered around a door step, on which sits enthroned as a true king, and with emblems of power quite as transitory as those of greater monarchs, a boy of about eight years old. His sceptre and orb, so dazzling and awe-inspiring, are an old blackened clay pipe, a cup without a handle and about three spoons ful of soapy water in the cup. He is an "oldster"; he has seen bubbles blown before, but among his worshipping subjects are "kindern" of four and even five years of age to whom this is magic equal to fairyland happenings. He blows one big bubble with especially glorious colours; it dances in the sun as a little fairy might do, and after it has evaded capture for what seems ages, it bursts and leaves no trace of its existence. As the fate of each of his creations hangs evenly on nothing, the youthful ruler of his fellows waits for each bubble to burst or to vanish before he creates its follower. An over interested girl snatches at one swirling globe as it leaves the pipe, and—horror of horrors—the old clay breaks, even like its creations. A wail on the part of its late owner fetches the needful 15 Pfg. out of the writer's pocket to set him functioning again, and after a short interval he is again Master of Arts and Hearts.

Railway Shunting.

The system of shunting over "Humps" is carried out very extensively in the railway sidings in and about Cologne. The way the wagons are shunted over these "humps" has already been explained, and it will be understood that the vehicles gain a good speed when allowed to run down a slope of 1 in 30. The question may arise, "How do they stop the vehicles?" To check the progress of the trucks, as they approach others on the sidings, "slippers" are used. These are placed on the line, and are made in such a way as to allow the wheel of a vehicle to mount it and come in contact with a "scotch" on the slipper. The slipper is thus wedged under the wheel of the truck, and travels along the face of the rail, preventing that particular wheel revolving, and acting as a "skid," thus staying the progress of the vehicle. To be of the use intended, these slippers must be available for use within a few seconds, and to enable the shunters to immediately locate them, a simple, but effective, system is adopted. On the ground between the sidings a number of medium sized stones, painted white, are placed, and against each of these a "slipper" lies ready for use. Immediately a "slipper" is released from a truck it is replaced against the nearest stone.

A Gallant Rescue.

The other afternoon an unrecorded act of gallantry was performed by a British officer near Godesberg. A car containing another officer was going along the embankment when a German woman rushed up crying out that her child was drowning in the river. The officer in the car seeing Capt. Rock about 20 yards off fishing from a jetty, immediately shouted the information to him and no sooner did he notice the child struggling in the water than he dived in, fully clothed, and succeeded in bringing the little one to shore. The rescue was effected in the nick of time for the youngster was rapidly being carried towards the middle of the river where the current is very strong.

OPINIONS OF THE MOMENT.

CHAOS IN TRADE.

Mr. Oswald Stoll, writing on the disorganised state of trade says:—

"In the new movement for the suppression of alleged profiteering a movement which ought to condemn itself by its assumption that most British traders are rogues and vagabonds, we shall suffer more than France suffered generations ago, even as Rome suffered generations earlier. We shall produce famine in food, clothing, shelter, and employment. Our tribunals will drive out of trade those who have made money and do not wish to risk being branded as thieves; whilst those who have not made money will not serve either in means or efficiency as satisfactory substitutes. Profiteering will thus cease in unexpected ways. The nation will look to the Government. Control by the Government would stop supplies if it were to limit prices; or alternatively would involve such subsidies as would mean quite insupportable taxation. But complete dislocation of trade would have intervened, entailing reorganisation of the machinery of trade, with the Government as practically the only trader. Thus would be repeated the situation in which the Western Empire of the Romans inevitably collapsed.

THE CRUELTY OF STRIKES.

Mr. Harold Begbie, writing of the prevalence of strikes, says: "I am convinced that no man with a vestige of human sympathy in his nature would call for a general strike, or a strike affecting the necessary commodities of life, if he realised the infinite suffering entailed by his actions on hundreds of thousands of very poor defenceless and very gallant people."

"ABSENCE MAKES THE HEART—."

The Rev. B.G. Bouchier who has been lecturing to the Rhine troops and is a particularly outspoken London vicar, says:—Where feasible, husband and wife and members of a family should endeavour at least once a year to take their holidays apart. There is such a thing as being too much together.

IN PRAISE OF PADRES.

Major General Sir W. Thwaites speaking at Sherfield Essex, paid a high tribute to military chaplains. "I reckon a good "padre" he said as equivalent to a Brigadier. I saw one of them lead a battalion over the top at the Battle of Loos, and have seen two, one a Roman Catholic, and the other a Church of England man, carrying a stretcher between them for hours under fire."

THE BURDEN OF WEALTH.

Mr. H. C. Bailey, writing of the late Mr. Andrew Carnegie says: — "Of late years he had been deeply impressed with what he called the "crushing burden of wealth." Even with his quick shrewdness and unfailing energy it was no light matter to keep pace with the demands which his own liberality generated far and wide. He foresaw, therefore the undesirability of such a load of care and anxiety devolving upon his widow—reckoning, as he always did, that he should pay the debt of nature first. He was aware, that if the money he left should after his death be scattered in prodigal fashion it would do more harm than good, so he arranged betimes for its permanent administration by a body of experts.

IS IT ANY GOOD TO PRAY?

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

How often has a man asked himself that question. He has sat down and tried to reason out the whole matter, and how often have the words of Fairburn come true:— "The man who does not believe that God can speak to him will not speak to God."

By prayer, we do not mean just asking for something, but we define prayer as the human side of a dual process, carried on between God and man.

Prayer must be logical, and must not attempt to alter the Laws of Nature, which are made by God. The most real, the most scientific prayer was made in the Garden of Suffering:—"Thy will be done."

It is easy to forget that No is as much an answer to prayer as Yes. Men of all nations have always prayed, have always craved for help from someone, and that craving has been intensely real. We call that Someone, God.

Science teaches two great truths in connection with a craving of any kind.

1. That the craving is originated by the existence of the object for which man craves.
2. That desire is kept alive by the supply of that object.

If there had been no cocaine then our papers would not have been full of the stories of the craving of men and women for that drug. The fact of the desire proves the existence of cocaine. Withdraw the supply, and in time the craving dies away, since it was only kept alive by the supply.

Because men desire to pray, proves the existence of prayer, and because men continue to pray, proves, sientifically that prayer is answered. To be truly scientific is to experiment before attempting to dogmatise.

Perhaps we may only look upon prayer as a spiritual exercise, even then we know that the exercise proves the existence of that which is exercised, and what can be called the objective reality of that upon which it exercises itself.

In the old days of fighting, one could listen to the sound of the guns, and without a doubt it proved to one the power to hear, and how real was the sound. Therefore the exercise of prayer itself proves a spirit in man having the power to pray, and a Divine Listener upon which the spirit of man can exercise itself.

The test of reality is experience, and all men have the power to test the great reality of prayer. We are told that Voltaire prayed in a moment of danger. We know that thousands who never even thought of God, have turned to Him in prayer, when all human help seemed cut off. The craving for God, at special moments in life, has been the personal experience of many men and women.

Pray to God yourself, turn to him wherever you may be, and you will prove in your own case that God does answer prayer.

"Ask and it shall be given unto you" was the promise of God Incarnate. Ask for the Holy Spirit, which is the answer to all prayer, and test the reality of the gift by your own experience, and then you can answer the question for yourself: Is it any good to pray?

THE LION LEADS in CURING

Trade Mark — Established 1847

During the strenuous times of the past few years

has more than maintained its reputation, it has gained increased commendation for its marvellous efficacy in removing pieces of shrapnel, splinters of bone, etc., from old wounds, healing them permanently from underneath.

Nature will always assert itself

is that it will not heal till it has thoroughly cleared away all morbid matter. There is no danger to life in curing a bad leg by this remedy, as it does not throw back humour into the system. It cures without lancing or cutting, bringing all disease to the surface and healing from underneath in all cases of Ulcers, Abscesses, Whitlows, Boils, Carbuncles, Fatty or Cystic Tumours, Piles, Fistula, Polypus, Poisoned Wounds, and all forms of Skin Disease, Eczema, Ringworm, etc.

Unequalled as a General Household Remedy for Cuts, Burns, Stings, &c.

Proof. At 59, Gray's Inn Road, E. BURGESS has a Museum of Extractions, consisting of Tumours, Polypi, and diseased Bone; also numerous Photographs of most serious cases, which have all been cured by the Lion Ointment. E. B. invites the fullest inquiry into each case published by him, and is confident that no other remedy can show a tithe of such results. Of Chemists 9d, 1/3, etc. per box; or a SAMPLE BOX post free 9d, from the proprietor—

IRISH AFFRAY CONTINUES.

SERIOUS SINN FEIN RIOTING IN ALL PARTS.

SINN FEIN RIOTS.

"LADY DAY" MOB CHARGED BY MILITARY AND POLICE.

The Sinn Fein trouble in Ireland continues, riots, with window breaking and stone throwing being apparently the order of the day.

There were wild scenes of rioting in Londonderry all Friday night. The Dorsets repeatedly charged the mob, once with bayonets. Much looting was done. The damage is estimated at nearly ten thousand pounds. The city was in complete darkness.

The cause of the disturbance was the lighting of the faction bonfires, which caused rival political sections to assemble in a short time. The hooligans took matters in their own hands and pandemonium raged. Window smashing was carried out an a large scale.

MILITARY STOP PROCESSION.

Fierce riots are reported from several Ulster districts. The military proclaimed Sinn Fein demonstrations at Coal Island and a strong force of the Highland Cycle Brigade arrived. Several flags were seized.

A Sinn Fein band, escorted by large crowds, paraded Coal Island until the military intervened and a general scuffle ensued. Stones were thrown. The commander of the military force received a violent blow on the forehead. Rails were torn up on the Great Northern Railway in Ireland and a goods train was wrecked.

It is reported that a large party is alleged to have attacked Rocky Island, Queenstown, with ammunition. Sentries replied with machine guns. Afterwards no trace of the alleged assailants could be discovered.

PEACEFUL PERSUASION FAILS.

A Belfast telegram to-day states that a strong force of military and police have been drafted into Tyrone as a result of an intended Sinn Fein demonstration. A large stone was thrown at a district inspector's car just missing the officer.

The crowd refused to disperse under the influence of peaceful persuasion and the military and police charged. The police used batons and the military the flat side of bayonets and rifle butts. Crowds ran but threw stones, ten persons being hurt. There were four arrests.

Dundalk had a very entertaining evening, but the fight here was between Nationalists and Sinn Feiners, and the Market Place was the battle ground. In the end honours lay with the former, who brought up a body of pikemen and scattered the enemy.

GUERILLA WAR IN CLARE.

At Moyfad, West Clare, a police patrol was attacked by a party of Sinn Feiners firing rifles. The police returned the fire, and their assailants ran away, leaving one casualty.

PIKEMEN AT DUNDALK.

A "Daily Telegraph" correspondent writes: Dundalk on Friday evening was the scene of many encounters between Nationalists and Sinn Feiners. As the Blackrock Nationalists were returning from a Blackrock demonstration, it is alleged attacks were made on them in Jocelyn-street, Anne-street and Market-square. The square was the scene of the biggest conflict; in its vicinity a large crowd congregated and, waving Sinn Fein flags, booed and groaned at the successive contingents of Hibernians as they passed en route for their homes. In some instances men wearing Hibernian sashes were roughly handled. Shortly after eight o'clock there was a fusillade of stones, and this was countered by a party of Hibernians who appeared on the scene armed with long staves or pikes. For a moment the situation wore a distinctly ugly complexion, but as the crowd quickly dispersed in all directions before the pikemen it became easier. About this time the town ambulance was in action, and it made several journeys to the county hospital before ten o'clock.

After a second volley of stones the Sinn Feiners formed up in military array and marched out of the town in the Newry direction. Almost simultaneously a detachment from the military barracks at Dundalk arrived and occupied the square. A second detachment of soldiers, fully armed and wearing trench helmets, proceeded down Clanbrassil-street, the direction the Sinn Feiners had taken, and cordons were drawn to prevent people repassing certain points. About eleven o'clock the streets were cleared, and a little later the soldiers were withdrawn.

A QUIET SUNDAY.

The situation in Derry was absolutely quiet on Saturday and Sunday. There were no troops on the streets of the city on Saturday night, but detachments were held in readiness in the Court House.

"OVER THE TOP."

INQUEST ON OFFICER KILLED BY TUBE TRAIN.

At the inquest on Second Lieutenant Took, aged twenty-nine, who jumped in front of a tube train at Elephant and Castle station, the coroner on Saturday found that the officer at the time was of unsound mind. Deceased was in the Army of Occupation, and three months ago met with an accident. He had practically recovered, but was still in low spirits, and his general health was very much lower owing to the injections and treatment he had received in France.

Other evidence showed that as the train entered the station Took stepped forward and jumped on the rails. While being moved from under the train he murmured: "Over the top with the best of luck."

PRINCE IN CANADA.

JOYOUS WELCOME AT NEW BRUNSWICK.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, was given a tumultuous welcome on arrival at St. John's N.B. He was met at the docks by the Duke of Devonshire, Sir Robert Borden and the Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick. The police had great difficulty in keeping back the crowds. The Prince presented the colours to a local battalion and visited the hospital, where he unveiled a tablet in memory of soldiers who had fallen in the war. He later attended a reception at the Lieut. Governor's home, where more than two thousand people were present.

BRITAIN AND MEXICO.

DIPLOMATIST EXPELLED FROM THE COUNTRY.

The Associated Press correspondent at Washington says that President Carranza has ordered Mr. Cummins, British Chargé d'Affaires at Mexico City, to leave the country.

While the reason for this action by President Carranza is not specifically stated in despatches reaching Washington, it is understood to have resulted from a recent statement alleged to have been made in the House of Commons by the British Under Secretary of State regarding British recognition of the Mexican Government.

It is asserted that Mr. Cummins has no official status and cannot claim exemption, so that he can do nothing but acquiesce. It is expected that Great Britain will have recourse, at least for the present, to the good offices of the United States or France to look after her extensive interests in Mexico.

LORD INVERCLYDE.

DIRECTOR OF CUNARD LINE DIES AT GLASGOW.

Lord Inverclyde, Director of the Cunard Line, died at Glasgow Nursing Home on Saturday, at the age of fifty-six. He was one of Glasgow's shipping merchant princes, and a grandson of one of the founders of the great line, eighty years ago. He became commander of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve. His son, the Hon. John Alan Burns, who succeeds to the title, is in the Scots Guards and was wounded in the war.

V.C. BELIEVED PRISONER.

Captain G. R. P. Roupell, East Surrey Regiment, who won the V.C. at Hill 60, is reported missing in North Russia, and is believed to be a prisoner in the hands of the Bolshevists. He was recently adjutant at Kingston Barracks, where his father, the late Colonel Roupell, was at one time the commanding officer.

PERMANENT COAL CONTROL.

It is stated that it has been decided, in accordance with the first report of the Sankey Commission, to organize the Coal Controller's Department on a permanent basis. Sir Evan Jones and his staff expect to be housed at their permanent headquarters at the Hotel Windsor in about a month.

BALTIC COMMANDER UPHELD.

In a note addressed to the Allied Governments the German Government rejects the Allied demand for the recall of General von der Goltz, the German Commander-in-Chief in the Baltic provinces.

The engagement is announced of Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma, who is at present staying at Zurich, and the present Grand Duchess of Luxemburg.

GRIP OF DEATH.

BONN SOLDIER EXPIRES DURING TUG-OF-WAR.

There was a distressing fatality at Bonn on Saturday, a competitor in the Tug-of-War in connection with the Western Division "Skill-at-all Sports" competitions, dying suddenly whilst pulling in a preliminary round.

The sun was tropically hot when the two teams — the 104th Bde. R.F.A. and the 1/6 Welsh (representing Divisional H.Q.) took up the rope. The teams were well matched and the pull was exceptionally strenuous. The men were putting their utmost into the struggle when it was noticed that the second man on the H.Q. rope had collapsed. He, however, retained his grasp of the rope and it was thought it was merely momentary exhaustion. He failed to recover and it was then realised that something serious was wrong, as he hung as a dead weight on the rope. Assistance was immediately forthcoming, and with great difficulty the rope was released from the man's hands. Medical aid was at once summoned and every method of restoration tried, but this was unavailing.

Deceased, it is understood, is a married man with two children and was to have been demobilized shortly. The unfortunate occurrence had the effect of marring the proceedings to a great extent.

EX-KAISER BUYS ESTATE?

PURCHASE OF HUIZE DOORN.

It is rumoured that the ex-German Emperor has bought Huize Doorn, a beautiful estate situated in the village of Doorn, about five miles to the west of Amerongen. It is not possible to obtain any positive confirmation of this, though there are good reasons for believing that the report is true.

The local weekly paper the "Doornsche Weekblad" says that the ex-German Monarch paid a visit to Huize Doorn this week.

INCENDIARY.

REPREHENSIBLE CONDUCT OF A SOLDIER'S GANG.

At Wareham yesterday, when Private John Alfred Puttes, of the Tank Corps, was charged with setting fire to some army huts, it was stated that six fires occurred during the month and damage to the extent of £5,000 was done. Five attempts to start fires were also made, even hospital huts not being safe. Puttes said he and his gang were responsible.

AGAINST LETTISH RULE.

PLOT DISCOVERED AND FRUSTRATED.

A Copenhagen Lettish press agency reports that a new German plot against Lettish rule has been discovered and scotched. The plot was to kidnap all superior officers and create disturbances to afford an excuse for von der Goltz troops to occupy Libau. Ostensibly to re-establish order, troops concentrated near Libau awaited a signal when all the plotters were arrested. Attempts to liberate prisoners were frustrated.

EXTRAORDINARY HAMMERSMITH SCENE.

An extraordinary scene was witnessed at Hammersmith yesterday, when a girl aged twenty-six, lately employed at the Ministry of Munitions, dashed into the street in a nude condition, followed by a large crowd. She ran past several shops and entered a butchers, where she tried to secure a knife. She was turned out and ran on, finally taking refuge in a dairy shop. From here she was removed to the infirmary.

FARMHOUSE BOMBED.

Two outrages have occurred in the Aghadown district, some eight miles from Skibbereen. The house of Patrick McCarthy was attacked with stones by a gang of men, and near the house of Denis Cadogan was placed a bomb, which exploded and blew in a window. Both men are respectable farmers, and no reason has been suggested for the attack. Up to the present no arrest has been made.

JAPANESE FINANCE.

The Japanese are sending a special mission to the Omsk Government with the evident object of negotiating with Admiral Koltchak in reference to economic financial and revictualling matters. The Admiral has undertaken to call a constitutional assembly as soon as possible when Moscow is out of the possession of the Bolshevists.

PHARMACISTS DISPUTE.

The dispute between the Amalgamated Society of Pharmacists, Drug and Chemical Workers and the master pharmacists remains unsettled. A scheme was formulated, but it has now been rejected by the men's union. The matter in dispute, which includes improvements in wages and hours, will be submitted to arbitration.

The Imperial Government has intimated that it will exercise an option over half a million tons of wheat.

TATTOO AT DUREN.

IMPOSING SPECTACLE IN CHARMING SURROUNDINGS.

For the IVth Corps Tattoo on Saturday evening a natural amphitheatre below Nideggen, in the valley of the Roer, was chosen, with the audience seated in the steep Western slope. A meadow on the far side of the stream formed a natural stage. From out the trees, some 500 feet above, there stood steep bluffs of brown basalt, crowned with the ruins of the 12th century Schloss of the Dukes of Julich.

At 9.30 p.m. "First Post" rang out on the massed bugles and as its echoes died away, rockets and starlights rose from all the hills and woods and covered the field below with a cascade of light, while the meadow was outlined with green and scarlet lights along the edge of the river and the woods. At the same time the search-lights met to form a vaulted arch above the meadow, under which the most grotesque assortment of pre-historic men and animals indulged in the struggle for existence. When "man" had vanquished, all the mammoths removed their carcases from the field.

The scene suddenly changed and the outlines of the cliffs and of the Schloss above them were picked out with coloured lamps, while from half-a-dozen points "serpents" of gold and scarlet lights emerged from the woods. Up and down, over the folding ground they steadily moved onwards — drawn by the music of massed pipes — and after meeting they performed the most wondrous evolutions which each time ended in an "easy" which took the form of a thistle, a horse rampant or other regimental badge.

Presently the gold and scarlet lamps came to rest in a line well up the field, and a fanfare of trumpets rang out. It summoned from the woods a column of blue and red lights which came forward. They passed round the flanks of the torch-bearers and when they met again the arch of search-lights dropped on to them and displayed a troop of cavalry. For some twenty minutes they gave a delightful entertainment; doing a musical ride at the walk, trot, and canter and finished with sabre exercises with the cold steel flashing in the brilliant light.

Abide With Me.

Again a signal-rocket. The horses vanished and the line of torchmen broke up and moved forward again to form a complex of moving concenturings. Presently these dispersed and further movements ended in the pattern "God save the King", during which the massed bands played the National Anthem with all the thousands of troops and civilians standing to attention. When the tune was finished the pattern vanished and another phrase "Good Night" appeared.

This vanished, piece-meal, as the torches dropped off to sleep, one after the other while the bands played "Abide with me". Gently at first, then the full volume of instruments filled the valley with sound. After the "Amen" the whole of the last verse was echoed from the hills.

A Wonderful Spectacle.

While the spectators were moving off the search lights gave a dazzling picture of the Schloss. In a frame of jet-black night one saw the emerald green foliage out of which rose the rust-coloured cliffs; each vantage point crowded with spectators; while crowning the whole were the ruined walls and turrets of the castle.

Brass and woodwind became quiet but there was still the music of the water singing through the stones, and the whisper of the rising wind among the leaves. When the search-lights were extinguished the moon was just peeping through dappled-grey clouds above the Schloss. Summer lightning and distant thunder foretold the coming storm. To bed, perchance to sleep, perchance to dream it all again.

The conception, performance and organisation of the Tattoo were all alike so excellent, that to mention any names would be invidious.

2 KILLED, 16 INJURED.

LONDON TRAMCAR LEAVES RAILS AND OVERTURNS.

A tramway accident, involving the death of a man named Jackson, and injuries to sixteen passengers occurred near St. Pancras on Saturday.

The car, well loaded with passengers, left the rails and overturned, crushing Jackson, who was standing on the pavement, to death. Two other persons were pinned beneath the car, the driver and conductress escaped with shock.

The car burst into flames.

A later message states that a second death is reported, the victim being Robert Curson, Crafton Terrace. Seven other victims were detained at St Pancras Infirmary yesterday. They are all making satisfactory progress.

BOX TUNNEL MYSTERY.

Gunner Edwin Doyle, charged with the murder of Gunner Rashleigh George White, of Bristol, by throwing him from a train in Box Tunnel, was again remanded at Chippenham.

It was said that the Director of Public Prosecutions was not in a position to offer evidence. Doyle was arrested on his own alleged statement that he had pushed a man from the train.

MR. CHURCHILL'S VISIT.

COLOGNE ACCORDS WAR MINISTER AN ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION.

A BUSY TOUR.

MR. CHURCHILL'S ARRIVAL IN COLOGNE.

Mr. Winston Churchill and other members of the Army Council arrived on a visit to Cologne on Sunday evening, when they were received by General Sir William Robertson and his staff. The Guard of Honour was formed by D. Company of the 23rd Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regiment), and was commanded by Captain Hutchison. The regimental colours were carried, and the band of the battalion was in attendance. Mr. Churchill uncovered whilst the guard presented arms and the general salute was played, after which, accompanied by the Commander-in-Chief he inspected the Guard.

TROOPS REVIEWED.

Yesterday the VI Corps and the First Cavalry Division were reviewed at the Exercier Platz, Merkenich when Mr. Churchill was accompanied by Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of Imperial General Staff and the Commander-in-Chief. The American Army was represented by General Harts and General Allen, while Major Dumont, of the Belgian Mission, represented the Belgian Army. The representatives of the Army Council inspected the troops and the parade was a very impressive one. Lieut.-General Sir J. A. L. Haldane, K.C.B., D.S.O., was in command.

The following formations were on parade:— R.H.A. Brigade and Composite Cavalry Brigade (General N. W. Haig, C.M.G.). Heavy Brigade R.G.A. (Lieut.-Col. H. C. Moultrie, D.S.O.) Second London Infantry Brigade (Brig.-General F. A. Dudgeon, C. B.), Tank Battalion (Lieut.-Col. W. J. Shannon, C.M.G., D.S.O.) From the Northern Division, (Major-General A. A. Kennedy, C.M.G.) there were present: — Northern Divisional Artillery (Brig.-General J. S. Ollilvant, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.), Northern Div. R.E. (Lt.-Col. R. G. Done D.S.O.), 1st Northern Infantry Brigade (Brig.-General C. G. H. Moore, C.M.G., D.S.O.), 2nd Northern Brigade (Brig.-General Potter, C.M.G., D.S.O.). 3rd Northern Brigade (Brig.-General W. G. Braithwaite, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.). Northern Division R.A.S.C. (Capt. R. Chignell, O.B.E.). Northern Division R.A.M.C. (Lieut.-Col. G. O. Chambers M.C.). The Military Mounted Police were commanded by Major J.D.S. Lloyd, O.B.E., while the massed bands in attendance totalled a strength of 580. The total numbers on parade were 404 officers, 8567 other ranks and 1863 horses.

"Sporting Traditions."

The troops marched past the saluting base in review order, the bands playing the appropriate regimental march past, and colours were uncased. Mr. Churchill, accompanied by the Commander-in-Chief, addressed the assembled commanders, and on behalf of the Army Council congratulated them on the admirable appearance and marching of the troops. That was one of the very few reviews of British troops, he said, which had taken place on German ground, and it was a source of great satisfaction to see the men so well trained.

It was pleasing to know that the sporting traditions of the Army had not been lost sight of and that sports meetings had been held regularly. The scheme of education in operation, too, was excellent and through it each man was enabled to better himself with the prospect of his return to civil life.

To these things there must be added a word of congratulation as to the state of readiness in which the Army was found when the final necessary steps had to be taken to enforce our demands upon our late enemies.

INSPECTION OF ARMY COLLEGE.

The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill and the Chief of Staff visited the Army General and Commercial College, Cologne, yesterday morning. There was an inspection of exhibits of work done at the Army Technical College, Siegburg, the Army Art School, Cologne, and students of the commercial Art School of the Highland Division, which is carried on under the direction of Miss Broadfoot. Some excellent book-cover and poster designs were shown having been designed and drawn by Cpl. L.A. Bourne,—Eccalt, B. Jackson, R.H. Munro, L/Cpl. Eccott, G.H. Dickens and F. Gillespie all of the Highland Division. Several of the class rooms where work was proceeding were visited, and before leaving the Rt. Hon. gentleman addressed the staff and students in the library.

Brief, Happy Speech.

In the course of a lightning speech he congratulated the British Army of the Rhine on the excellent institutions which he had had the opportunity of visiting. He also congratulated those who were responsible for the organisation and administration of the College, and particularly those who had been long-sighted enough to take advantage of the facilities provided by the scheme. He said that his visit was necessarily a brief one, and though not qualified to speak on all the subjects taught in the College, he felt sure that what was being done would undoubtedly be most useful to the men when they returned to civil life.

Most of the students laboured under the disadvantage of having had their studies and their lives interrupted by the war, and the College gave them an opportunity of gathering together once again the threads of their former occupations. Others had come to man's estate during the War, and the College though it could not in the short time available completely train a man for business, yet it gave him an insight into the various courses open to him.

Be Prepared.

Mr. Churchill then referred in more general terms and with emphasis to the high organisation of the German in branches of trade and industry. He declared that it behoved us to do all in our power to keep pace with this and to hold our own in the field of commerce particularly during the next ten or fifteen years. This could be best effected through education, and it was a pleasing thought that the students who were individually improving themselves were also contributing to the welfare of the state. It was only so that men who proved themselves so efficient in the arts of war would prove themselves be again equally efficient in the Arts of Peace.

LADIES REVIEWED AT LINDENTHAL.

On the lawn opposite the Cricket Pavilion at Lindenthal a unique and beautiful ceremony took place yesterday afternoon when the Army Council inspected the many units of Women Workers in the Army of Occupation.

These were drawn up on three sides of the square on the lawn opposite the pavilion and included Nursing Sisters under Miss Reid, Principal Matron; Q.M.A.A.C., under Mrs. Feiling D.C.; W.R.A.F. under Miss Chauncey, Administrator; N.A.C.B., under Miss Butler; Y.M.C.A., under Lady Cooper; Church Army, under Miss Fowler; Salvation Army, under Miss Gladden, Adjt.; Scottish Churches Huts, under Miss Johnston; Catholic Club, under Miss Holway; Soldier's Christian Association, under Miss Figg; Catholic Womens League, under Miss Howitt; Lady clerks attached to Military Governor, under Miss Clarke; Rhine Army Dramatic Club, under Miss Bensusan; G.S. Education Instructors, under Miss Drew and the Ladies of the British Empire Leave Club, under Miss Decima Moore, Hon. Director General.

Mr. Churchill's Speech.

After being introduced to the leaders and inspecting the units, Mr. Churchill said, "I am particularly happy to see this parade, a parade unique in the history of the British Army."

He went on to enumerate the useful, devoted and arduous duties performed by the ladies in the field and suggested that it had taken a great war to educe the wonderful capacities of our women workers. Had two more years of war ensued and the man-power scarcity of 1918 continued, he was sure that we would have seen the women workers going into the front line as telegraphists, signallers, clerks etc.

The great lesson to learn from this was the enormous necessity for everyone in the state, forgetting creed, class and sex to pull together; only by that means had the war been won. Coming from the stormy and turbulent atmosphere of England to the peace, calm and order of the occupied area, he was very strongly impressed with the power gained by co-operation, where the women of the Nursing Sisters, Q.M.A.A.C., W.R.A.F.'s and many religious and philanthropic societies were working in full harmony with no jealousy beyond a healthy rivalry. This would do much to make England respected, although perhaps not loved, and he was exceedingly glad to have this opportunity of seeing such a parade.

As he was leaving Mr. Churchill was heard to remark "It was indeed a charming ceremony."

LEAVING ENGLAND.

A telegram from London says—The War Minister travelled to Dover on Saturday in a motor-car, accompanied by a staff including Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson.

The party embarked from Admiralty Pier in the P. 35, and as the warship steamed out of the harbour for Ostend the guns at Dover Castle fired a salute.

THE VICTORIES OF PEACE.

From the earliest days of mankind a war has been waged against nature and the savage instincts of man. The victories gained have not been surrounded by misery and tears. They have been bloodless victories, surrounded by happiness.

Men have toiled unceasingly to wrench from the bosom of mother earth metals which play so important a part in our everyday life. From the surface of the land they have obtained crops and vegetables for food, and fish from the sea.

Scientists probed into the perplexing mysteries of forces and the elements, establishing facts which later the engineer made much use of. He gave us our trains and boats to travel in comfort and with speed. Machines were made which would do work of a kind that no amount of human strength could accomplish, such as cranes, steam hammers, and drills. The electrical elements, formerly regarded as agents of the Master Fiend, were made to give us light, to propel our vehicles and warm our dwellings.

The elements of sea and air were defied in the face of great odds, often accompanied by the loss of life. The impossible of yesterday becomes an accomplishment of to-day. Man travels by air, land and sea, and many girdles have been put around the earth.

Physicians have conquered such awful diseases as smallpox which spared neither king nor peasant. Louis XV of France died of it, as also did Mary II of England. Surgeons conducted experiments until the functions of the smallest organs of the body were known. Dr. Harvey, the personal attendant of James I, discovered the flowing of the blood from the heart.

Social reform conquered the awful vices which dominated the whole world. Now each man is a victor over drunkenness, immorality and the hundred and one common vices which destroy civilization. We have all been lifted from the mire to the supreme heights.

Law and order have taken the places of crime and unruliness. Duelling was made illegal, so also was murder. Now the human life is regarded as something precious, instead of something trivial. A man's property became his own, not to be stolen or tampered with at the will of another. Fraternity took the place of hate and the savage became civilized.

But many of the bloodless victories of Peace are directly due to the bloody victories of war. The Romans fought and conquered the early inhabitants of our own little isles, bringing with them their laws and methods. So the conquered savages learnt to build better dwellings, and learnt the value of order.

Sometimes in the bloody war of army against army we see in the victory, right conquering wrong. Man with an ambition for unlimited might is often the victim of his own wrong-doings. He is defeated and the world is saved from a reign of terror.

So when we look back to the time of our ancestors and see what the victories of peace have done for us we can realize what our victories are going to do for the future generations.

LANGUAGE STUDY.

It is to be doubted if the importance of the study of modern languages in our schools and colleges has been fully recognised in the past, and the report of the Prime Minister's Committee on the Position of Modern Languages in the educational scheme of Great Britain shows that a good deal more attention will be paid to it in the future.

The keenness with which many of the young guards have seized the opportunity of learning German, "on the spot," while in occupation of Rhineland shows that among the younger generation, interest in language study is far from being dead, and that increased facilities for the acquirement of tongues will be fully appreciated and taken advantage of.

In the years which lie ahead of us, international relations will play a greater part than they have ever done before, and the importance of language study in this connection is obvious. A wider and more sympathetic understanding of the ways and modes of thought of foreign peoples is necessary for the well-being of the world.

It has been generally admitted that trade and commerce were greatly impeded in the past by British ignorance of the languages of other countries, and the fact that Spanish was largely studied in Germany has been given as an explanation of the passing from English to German hands of the distributing trade of South America.

In the coming struggle for commercial supremacy the language obstacle must not be allowed to continue. In this respect linguistic ability is sure to prove abundantly remunerative. In the public services, too, great scope exists for those who are similarly equipped.

The national need for language study is clear and there can be little doubt that the detailed scheme which the Committee has evolved for its encouragement in school and university can hardly fail to have permanent and far reaching results.

"C'EST-WHAT"?

Have you ever considered the difficulty of living life on its surface, in this part of the world, compared to what it was, in the old days, in France, or marked the absence of short, trite phrases in conversation, and the lack of an understanding population to appreciate them, even if they are used?

For more than four years "C'est la guerre" was the talisman to the British Tommy, which used judiciously, pulled him out of many a tight conversational corner. It was followed by "C'est l'armistice," and for all I know it may now be "C'est la paix."

It would take an expert psychologist to discover the reason for the temper soothing qualities of such small phrases.

Who cannot remember dropping into a vacant chair, at an open air cafe beside a table carrying easily and with dignity an interesting looking soda syphon.

Out comes a vision of beauty in short skirts and silk stockings with a complexion like a peach, and the daintiest of mouths, who says with the most angelic mile "Ou'est ce que vous allez boire, Monsieur." If you have just been paid, you probably order a bottle of vin blanc; if not, a modest glass of beer.

In either case, to ascertain for certain how much of the peach like complexion is real, you make a sudden turning movement, as it leaves you, and—crash! down goes the soda syphon. And back comes the vision, wearing a most "angelic" frown.

In the excitement, any of the French you have learnt, refuses to disgorge itself from your brain. You wait for the storm to burst, but it never does, because in the nick of time you look up with a smile and say, "Oh Sans faire rien, M'lle. C'est la guerre."

Here, there are no syphons on the café tables to be knocked over. You cannot make the tram guards angry, for you travel everywhere for "nix." What can you say?

A lot of things both good and bad, upon occasion. You can enter into long and earnest explanations with serious faced Germans, who will never understand what you are driving at.

But you cannot say anything that will take the place of "C'est la guerre" and at the same time, clear up the whole business in question. Possibly we are becoming more serious, and such frivolous and mutual understanding between strangers has passed away with the war. But it makes life more difficult.

G.W.E.

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND?

VI. HILGEN LAKE.

It is a real beauty spot and far sweeter than any other I have visited in Rhineland. I came across it quite unexpectedly for it is off the beaten track, but I am glad I have ever been there for it has left an abiding memory. It reminds me of Virginia Water in Surrey, and even a little of Killarney. Thousands of civilians from Cologne seek its charms. If there are any angels in Rhineland they must often linger there, but their earthly counterparts you can find by the hundred arrayed in all the colours of the rainbow. It is the troubador's paradise, and on a Sunday afternoon you can hear the tinkling notes of the guitar, the sounds of laughter and song. It is all so very infectious and you too long to join them.

Come with me to this valley of laughter! Listen to the music of nature, the singing of the birds, the sighing of the wind through the forest trees, the soft lapping of the water against the pebble banks. Ten thousand voices seem to speak to us and for a few hours we can forget that we are strangers in a strange land.

We take the train to Hilgen, a little over ten miles away over the Rhine, and on arrival we make for the highway running through the village in the direction of our outpost line. We take the first turn to the right down a narrow lane and reach a big restaurant where we can refresh ourselves.

This is only ten minutes walk from the highway and the descent is gradual. Leaving the restaurant we proceed along a narrow pathway and suddenly find ourselves in fairy-land. In front of us is a long, winding stretch of water with little islands dotted here and there. On either side are forests of silver birch, pine and other trees, intersected by numerous walks.

We walk along the bank through the trees until we come to a huge reservoir. This supplies several towns with water and is divided from the lake by a big wall of boulders with a narrow channel as an outlet between the two over which there is a foot bridge.

Notice how perfect the basin of the reservoir is with its sloping banks of cobbles. At the extreme end you will also see some high rocks rising sheer out of the water.

We cross over the boulder pathway and the footbridge and make a circuit of the lake. The path winds in and out, up hill and down. As you reach the summit in some places you have a glorious expanse of forest and lake which floods your soul and in that moment makes you a poet. You can now hear the laughter of children. How they revel in the woods! Or you can hear the tinkle of the guitar and some bands of picturesque troubadors come into view. You express your pleasure, if not in words by looks and smiles.

Or turn aside and enter the forest, the deer run wild there, and you may catch a glimpse of one leaping along.

Fill your lungs with the air from the hilltops or the scent of the pine and rejoice with me in the sweetness of life and the glorious gift of nature. How true it is that God has placed us in a sweet smelling garden for our home.

We return to the plains at the close of the day with the hot blood coursing through our veins and full of health, strength and vigour to labour yet for another season with a mind stored with precious memories.

MY FIRST FLIGHT.

ILLUSIONS AND CONTRASTS.

The aeroplane reached the end of its run across the rainsodden ground of the aerodrome. The thin curved wave of mud which had swept along with us just behind the planes disappeared. I knew that, for the first time, I was rising from the ground on wings.

But that is just where, if I were attempting to describe in exact words what my senses perceived, I would be wrong. For we were not rising from the ground. No! The ground was falling away from us.

If my senses did not deceive me (but, of course, they never do anything else) we were continuing our forward flight at exactly the same level while the fields fell away beneath us more and more swiftly, contracting to smaller and smaller dimensions as they did so.

Even to say that we were apparently "continuing our forward flight" at exactly the same level is not exact as a description of this particular illusion of flight. It would be more correct to say that, apparently, we not only remained at the same level but remained stationary while the earth not only dropped steadily downwards but moved along beneath us like a gigantic canvas being wound on a reel.

One's first flight is a revelation of how completely the senses supply the mind with illusions by way of facts. So thoroughly, however, do we as a rule automatically and subconsciously correct their testimony by our educated knowledge of the truth that I only noticed how stationary we seemed to be when we were a couple of thousand feet up.

To all appearances the aeroplane was stationary, a very noisy mechanism suspended motionless in space. And beneath us the earth was tearing along with the speed of an express train. Yet people will often attempt to clinch an argument by saying in a tone of finality "Can't I believe my own eyes?"

And if there is a contrast between the appearance and the reality in flying there is an equal contrast between the sensations one anticipates and what one experiences.

I will give only one instance. In the ordinary way I dislike looking down from a great height. Even if I only look down on the street from a very high window my heart seems to contract, my stomach "turns up" and I feel generally screwed up and anxious to keep a good hold of the window sill.

In many flights, including the first, on the other hand, I have never had the least sensation of height. Instead I have the feeling of being sufficiently confident to sit out on one of the wings if the pilot asked me to do so. I leave it to the physiologists and psychologists to explain these phenomena.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

PRIVILEGE BONDS.

Sir,—Many have been interested in the letters that have appeared under the heading of "Privilege Bonds," but why limit such an issue to any one section of the community?

Would not a "universal bond," simple and attractive, but open to one and all, be more certain of success?

C. A.

MANNERS AT THE LEAVE CLUB.

Sir,—I was astonished to read the paragraph entitled "Company Manners" in a recent publication. I think the remark that "a visit to the Leave Club puts the majority of the diners on their best behaviour" is rather uncalled for.

The writer of this article appears to be astonished that a soldier should conform to the rules of etiquette at all! He to my mind showed a very bad taste in writing in such a tone.

THE TOTALIZATOR.

Sir,—In a recent issue "Habitual Racegoer" joins the ranks of those who attack the "Tote" without thinking. He also gives a list of winners and prices for the last meeting.

Now the secret of why the "Tote" pays bad prices is answered by the results of the races, for every one of these animals with the exception of "Sprint" and "Jimcrack" would be the sole public fancies. The "Tote" must have several animals backed before it can pay good prices, and I ask "Habitual Racegoer" if he would have backed anything to beat "Bally Hooley" which was as near as possible after the leniency of the handicapper a racing certainty.

The public are the best judges of form. Of this I am convinced after 33 years experience of racing in several countries.

The whole fault of the "Tote" lies in the framing of the conditions of the various races, and if these conditions are such that the obvious chances of two or three animals stand out, as they do, well, you cannot blame the public for putting their money on them.

Take for example the Victory Plate, 1st Division, after the three placed horses we are left with only four more runners. You do not require expert racing folk to be on the goods in that event.

MANIFEST.

SHOPPERS BEWARE.

Sir,—Re the letter in a recent issue concerning the sale of spurious amber, might I add a few words to the subject?

Recently, I bought three bottles of Eau de Cologne at 7.50 marks per bottle as presents, thinking naturally that it would be the genuine article. Imagine my surprise, then, when my wife opened the bottle and found that it contained practically nothing but coloured water.

I naturally had the two remaining bottles opened and upon testing them found that they were exactly the same. However, I do not imagine that I am the only one that has been "done" for no doubt Eau de Cologne is what nearly every Tommy takes with him for presents.

Again, a friend of mine purchased a box of cigars in Cologne. The top layer in the box were a fine brand, and a good smoke, but the remainder were beyond smoking.

Now, isn't it high time that the powers that be looked into this fraudulent profiteering by German shopkeepers in the Rhineland and issued stringent orders, making offenders liable to a penalty, or if necessary—imprisonment— the same as they are doing with the profiteers in England at the present time.

FAIRPLAY.

OPEN AIR ENJOYMENT.

Sir,—Your correspondents "Private Bar" and "C. R." are amusing; the former because his letter is full of the egotistical first person singular, and the latter because he cannot see any more in the open air cafe than a young lady and a glass of wine. The main issue is "the greatest good for the greatest number", and the best means to achieve that end.

Our English public-house system lends itself to excessive drinking, and thus furnishes the teetotal fanatic with his strongest argument in favour of prohibition. The normal man or woman is by nature gregarious, and, in the main, enjoys moderate drinking. Why not, then, drink in the company of as large a number of friends and neighbours as possible, accompanied by the uplifting influence of decent music?

But perhaps "Private Bar" is not normal, and certainly the idea of music does not enter the mind of "C. R."

I venture to think that a census of opinion from the Rhine Army would reveal these two gentlemen among the small and abnormal minority.

INTERESTING BOOKS.

Sir,— In the world of Literature there is nothing more perplexing than to make a selection of "best" books. To do this for the edification of others is doubly difficult, for so much must be left to individual taste.

There are, however, a number of books which can hardly fail to satisfy all tastes, which all may read and enjoy.

I have endeavoured to make a fair selection of twelve such novels. There is not space to discuss the merits or demerits of the list compiled by "R.S.A." It certainly shows careful selection, though I confess I was somewhat surprised to find no mention of two writers in particular — Dumas and Thackeray — while Dickens is represented by no less than three of the twelve works. Again if Hall Caine is included, can we forget such authors as Arnold Bennett and Jack London?

My own selection is: — Thackeray's "Henry Esmond," Kingsley's "Westward Ho!", R. Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," Charles Reade's "Cloister and the Hearth," Dickens' "David Copperfield," Dumas' "The Musketeers," Mrs. Craik's "John Sawyer," Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," Arnold Bennett's "Anna of the Five Towns," W. J. Locke's "Beloved Vagabond" (or any of his), and Jack London's "Valley of the Moon."

SEVEN MILES MARATHON.

R.A.F. Hold Third Annual Athletic Meeting.

There was a full afternoon's sport at Farnborough on Saturday, when, on the new ground there, the Royal Aircraft Establishment Athletic Club held its third annual meeting. In the 100 yards open handicap E. B. West, of the R.A.E.A.C., won his heat, with 8¾ yards start, in 9 4-5sec., and subsequently won the final heat in the same time by a foot from Sec. Lieut. E. D. Winn, King's Liverpool Regt. (8 yards start), with the Salford Harrier, Lieutenant G. L. Morgan (7 yards) third. He also won the 220 yards handicap with 15 yards start, in 22 9-10sec., after a dead-heat with Lance-Corpl. Burrows (King's Liverpool Regt.), 20 yards start; and by his third annual victory in the 100 yards R.A.E. championship West made the Bulivant Cup his own property. Another cup which was won outright as a result of a third annual success was the "Shell" Cup, which went to H. E. Reeves, the winner of the seven miles Marathon race, 44 min. 55 3-10sec. Lieutenant G. L. Morgan (24 yards start) was first and R. Heaver (Aldershot), 55 yards start, second in the half-mile open handicap, and the one mile open handicap went to O. Wilmot (unattached), 140 yards start, in 4 min. 41 4-5sec.

92nd BDE. R.G.A. CHAMPIONSHIP.

Interesting Games at Quittingen and Opladen.

At Opladen on Saturday the 223 Siege Bty. R.G.A. (81) met the 2/4 North Midland R.G.A. (70). It was a very keen and enjoyable game. For the winners Gnr. Saxon put up a splendid show, scoring 54. Lieut. Bryan scored 11 and took 3 wickets for 6 runs. Gnr. Inman took 5 wickets for 28 runs. For the losers Cpl. Bird gave a very plucky display; notwithstanding the fact that he sustained an injury over the eye, when he had scored 6, he returned to the ground and finished his innings being top scorer with 15. Gnr. Hawkins scored 14 and Lieut. Lodge 13. Gnr. McSuee took 6 wickets for 25 runs.

Another "Hat Trick".

In the 92nd Bde., Championship the 223 Siege Bty. R.G.A. (38) met and defeated the 261 Siege Bty. R.G.A. (19) at Quittingen on Thursday. For the winners Gnr. Inman took 7 wickets for 7 runs, performing the "hat trick" and Newstead 3 for 9. Sig. Morris and Gnr. Newstead each scored 10.

YOUTHFUL CRICKETER'S SUCCESS.

F.C.W. Newman, of the Dulwich Club, who has been tried for Surrey, was again in fine form on Saturday. He and R.H. Nunes put on 105 for Dulwich's first wicket against L.C.W. and Parr's Bank. Newman's score was 81, and he has now completed his 1,000 runs for the season.

Australians For S. Africa.

The South African Cricket Association has requested the High Commissioner in London to negotiate for an Australian military team to visit South Africa.

Ex-Servicé Men Entertained.

At Luton on Saturday, Lady Wernher, in celebration of Peace, entertained several thousand ex-service men and their relations at tea and sports. Supper for 11,000 was provided. A sack race for members of Lady Wernher's House party caused considerable amusement. The winner was Lord Louis Mountbatton, who received a doll as prize.

STORMY GOLF.

Charles Evans, the holder of the championship, was among those who were overtaken by a torrential storm when the qualifying series in connection with the American amateur golf championship was played on the course of the Oakmont Country Club, Allegheny County. He went out in 38 strokes, but he required four more for the homeward journey owing to the storm, so that his total was eighty. However, he managed to quality for the competition proper, as did Francis Quimet, with 77.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Tuesday, August 19, 1919.

Surface wind from between South west and West reaching 10—15 m.p.h. in the day. Mainly fair but cloudy at times especially in the forenoon. Good visibility. Warm.

BRILLIANT YORKSHIRE.

Champion form against Middlesex at Leeds.

English Cricket Results.

A declaration not unattended with risk turned out well at Leeds on Saturday, for Yorkshire, who beat Middlesex by 187 runs, before 9,000 spectators. In the morning the Yorkshire batting for two hours and a half was brilliant. Kilner led off with some fierce hitting, and Denton and Hirst punished the bowling very severely, putting on 118 for the fifth. In making his third hundred this season Denton was seen at something like his best, and Hirst's innings was free from fault.

Set 341 to get in four hours, Middlesex made a good start. Lee and Hearne played splendidly, and at the end of seventy minutes the 100 went up. For the moment the position was full of possibilities, but after Hearne had been bowled the game underwent a complete change, Rhodes and Wilson carrying everything before them, and three wickets fell at 105.

Results:—

Hants (211 and 210) beat Somerset (191 and 100) by 130.

Kent (279 and 235 for 7 beat Sussex 274 and 100.

Gloster (252 and 102 for 8) beat Warwick (252 and 100).

UP THE RHINE.

Delightful London Division River Trip to Coblenz.

The "London" was, we understand, the first division to run organized river trips for its men, with canteen, music, etc., on board, and very enjoyable they have proved. We were fortunate enough on Sunday last to accompany the second of these excursions organized for officers and nothing could be more delightful.

Embarking at Bonn at 9.30 a.m. we found a goodly company aboard including Major-General Sir Sidney Lawford K.C.B. and Lady Lawford, Miss Decima Moore, many of the Divisional Staff with wives and families, and a fair sprinkling of women workers. The trip was arranged by the genial D.A.Q.M.G. Major Needham, while the boat arrangements were most successfully carried out by the canteen officer, Capt. Reid, the boat itself having been secured through the kindly services of Col. Locke of the A.D.I.W.T.

Excellent music was dispensed by the band of the 9th E. Surreys (by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Longbourne, the Officer Commanding) and was heartily enjoyed by all. The N.A.C.B. had the canteen and luncheon arrangements in hand, the latter being most satisfactory and well served. Captains Read and Haynes, late of the E.F.C., attended to the catering.

A brief stay was made at Coblenz, just long enough to enable the visitors to glance round the town, and a splendid day was brought to an end by a delightful return voyage to Cologne.

The London Division is to be heartily congratulated upon the success of all the arrangements fully seconded by glorious weather.

'Spurs' Ground.

The extensive alterations at the 'Spurs' ground in White Hart-lane are now almost complete. There has been much work to do since the Government returned the stands and the ground to the 'Spurs.'

A. A. AT SPORT.

'R' Battery's Enjoyable Meeting at Poller Weisen.

SUCCESSFUL COMPETITIONS

Ideal weather favoured the Sports Meeting held by R' Battery Anti-Aircraft on August 11th on the Poller Weisen Ground.

Lieut. Col. C.A. Mortimore, D.S.O., R.A. and the senior Officers of the Rhine Army A.A. Group very kindly acted as officials, and the Battery were able to welcome many Officers and men from the other A.A. Batteries. Cheerful selections were given by the band of the 1/6th West Yorks who attended by the kind permission of the Commanding Officer, whilst less legitimate music was rendered by Lieut. M. D. Adamson, R. F. A. and his party under various fanciful noms-de-guerre, heavy disguises and mysterious inspiring influences.

"Sweeps" And "Tot."

Sweepstakes and a Totalisator were in the safe hands of Messes Graball and Bunk, who were very ably represented on the course by Lieut. H. Richards, D.C.M., R.F.A. and a small staff in the accepted attire of large checks and fancy vests; but the Victor Ludorum, Lieut. J.H. Clark, R.F.A., who won five events, was so consistently 'spotted' as the winner that those who yelded to the insistent persuasion of the 'Old Firm' to stake a little on their fancy had little reward, if any, for their perspicacity.

The success of the meeting was undoubted, and was secured by the untiring work of the Battery Sports Committee under the direction of Lieut. J.C.T. Craze, R.G.A., to whom with all others who spared no pains to make the day enjoyable, the best thanks of the Battery are due.

A list of events is appended from which it will be seen that good results were recorded. Prizes were presented by Brig.-General A.D. Kirby, C.B., C.M.G., G.O.C., R.A.

ELEVEN MINUTES.

Tremendous Pulls In Western Division Competitions.

1st BRIGADE HEADS LIST.

What will probably be the last of the competitions for the Divisional "Skill-at-all Sports" Cup, open to the Western Division, took place on Saturday when as a result of the misrepresentation of the R.F.A. in the previous competition, the Tug-of-War was again contested.

Unfortunately the contests resulted in the death of one of the competitors. The tragedy occurred during the preliminary pull of the "heavies" between the teams of the 104th Bde. R.F.A., (representing Divisional Artillery) and the 1/6th Welsh, (representing Divisional Headquarters) and is fully dealt with in page 1.

As in the previous contest the R.F.A. teams experienced practically no difficulty in working through to the final, but again they met their match in the 1st Western Infantry Bde (represented by the 1/4th Cheshires). The pull was of twelve feet only, and, as usual, the two best out of three counted. The referee was Staff-Capt. Jacques, M.C.

The First Pull.

The first pull was between the "heavies" of the respective teams, and both being in great form, there was uncertainty as to the result. Eventually, however, after a pull lasting nearly eight minutes, the 1st Bde. was defeated.

The "lights" then faced each other, and immediately the command "Heave!" had been given, the 1st Bde. pulled their opponents inch by inch towards the mark, finally dragging them over after six minutes.

Following the example of the "lights," the 1st Bde. in the second bout of the "heavies" get down to it straight away, and splendidly coached by R.S.M. Martin, pulled with remarkable evenness, slowly but surely bringing their opponents over the mark.

Turn on the Rope.

After a few minutes rest the "lights" took up the rope to contest the second pull, and in the words of our American friends, it proved to be something "worth writing home about". For six minutes, there was not a movement on the rope except a slight vibration. Then, gradually, the disc in the centre began to move an inch to one side, then an inch to the other, the R.F.A. began to give, and in another two minutes they were within a foot of the rope. Then, realising their danger, the Gunners rallied, and for a few seconds it looked as if the 1st Bde. were about to lose all the ground they had gained. R.S.M. Martin, however, made the signal for the turn-on-the-rope, a manoeuvre which the team executed with the maximum of exactitude. Disconcerted by their opponents' lightning move, the R.F.A., despite the endeavours of their coach, went to pieces and eventually succumbed to the superiority of the 1st Bde. This pull lasted no less than eleven minutes.

R.F.A. Win.

The third and last pull of the "heavies" was much the same as the previous pulls, but, getting their opponents within a few inches of the mark, the 1st Bde. team were given the command to "turn" which the R.F.A. coach had been waiting for, and which he countered by the command "Heave!" at the critical point. The result, as was to be expected, was a victory for the R.F.A.

If, as stated previously the results will be judged on the tug-of-war, basket-ball, boxing, and aquatic sports, the Divisional Cup will go to the 1st Bde. (1/4th Cheshires representing) who have amassed the most points, but it is still undecided whether an athletic sports meeting is to be held or not.

Competition Results.

1st Western Inf. Bde. 78 points;
Divisional Artillery .. 68 points;
2nd Western Inf. Bde. 59 points;
Divisional Headquarters 56 points.

CRICKET FRIENDLIES.

In a cricket friendly at Siegburg, on Friday, the 41st Labour Coy. defeated the 715 Labour Coy. their respective scores being 105 and 25. For the winners Pte. Donald scored 48 and Pte. Pilkingston 28.

At Bonn, the 218th Field Coy. R.E.'s (106) defeated the 74th R.A.S.C. (93). The R.E.'s batted first and made a poor start, but L/Cpl. Burrill and Croach did well, the former getting 52 runs and carrying his bat. Croach scored 28. The R.A.S.C. also commenced badly against the bowling of Bing and Croach, but Pte. Cooke by sound batting pulled the game round. Cooke carried his bat for a well played 47, which included 7 boundaries. Cpl. Burgess was the only other player to reach double figures.

An Enjoyable Game.

A match between the 29th Battalion M.G.C. (183) and X Corps (131) resulted in a very enjoyable game at Bonn last week. The M.G.C. batted first and put up an excellent show, making 183. Top scorers were: Cpl. Knight 45, Pte. Stone 28, Pte. James 26, and Pte. James 21. When Corps batted they seemed to be dogged by ill-luck. Players who usually reach the half century retired with small scores to their credit. Capt. Dickinson, the well-known army player, a brilliant innings of 81 not out.

LONDON DIVISION (170) v. VI CORPS (66) at Lindenthal on Sunday. For the winners Capt. Gibson was top scorer with 48, while Lieut.-Col. Barry secured 38, Capt. Tiegler 26, and Major Ankle 18, whilst Pte. Gorrad took 8 wickets for 16 runs. The highest score for the VI Corps (14) was made by Lieut. Carter and Major Turner was most successful with the ball.

UNUSUAL OBJECTION.

WINDSOR RESULTS.

There was an unusual objection at Windsor on Saturday. In the Manor T.Y.O. Selling Plate Kaloolah, the outsider of the five starters, took the lead after running a quarter of a mile and retained it to the end, finishing a head in front of Smoke Wreath, with the favourite, Over There, a neck further off. Whalley, the rider of Smoke Wreath, did not enter any protest, but Davis, the rider of Over There, objected to the winner on the ground of bumping and boring. No complaint was made against Smoke Wreath, so when the Stewards disqualified Kaloolah the race was awarded to Major Peel's colt, whilst Over There became second, and her owner shared in the surplus brought about by the sale of Smoke Wreath to Mr. Cash for 250 gns.

Windsor summer handicap:— 1, Charley's Aunt (5-2); 2, Dinah Morris (11-8); 3, Double Or Quits (3-1).

Manor selling plate:— 1, Smoke Wreath (5-2); 3, Over There (2-1); 3, Lady Charity (5-1).

Rotschild plate:— 1, King Eber (7-4 on); 2, Croix de Guerre (5-1); 3, Pampean (9-4).

21st BDE. R.G.A. (132) v. IX CORPS TROOPS M.T. COY. (35) at Klein Büllesheim. For the Gunners, Capt. Barlow batted steadily for 35, whilst Dvr. Etchells (29), Gnr. Alcock (16), and Dvr. Lard (16) also played well. The M.T. Coy. did very little against the bowling of Capt. Barlow and Gnr. Littlewood, the former taking 5 wickets for 6 runs and the latter 5 for 19.

1/6th WEST YORKS (109) v. SOUTHERN DIV. M.T. COY. (26). For the Yorks Pte. Gibbon and Pte. Foley batted well to former making 33 and the latter 21 while Pte. Carr took 6 wickets for 10 runs, and Pte. Andrews 4 for 14.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

"The Darts" Again.

The "Darts" concert Party gave a performance at Zülpich on Friday night. The success of the evening went to the girl impersonator who rendered several good numbers, one entitled "Helen of Troy" was particularly good. To conclude the programme a humorous sketch was given entitled "Demobilization."

"The Rascals" At Bonn.

After several successful shows at Horrem, "The Rascals," the Cav. Div. M.T. Coy. Party, are on tour and are playing this week at the Stadt Theatre, Bonn. Their first performance last night was very successful. Jack Knight, the comedian, and the other members of the caste were in excellent form. The staging and general effects were good, and the production all round is well worth seeing.

The "Crumps."

The Crumps gave an exceptionally good show at the "Casino," Euskirchen, last week playing to full houses. In view of their success it was suggested that they should play for the remainder of the week, but unfortunately they were due to appear at Cochenheim, Walberberg and Brühl on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. They will pay a return visit to Cologne this week with an entirely new programme at the Palace Theatre.

Wanted a Pianist.

I heard a good story at the Deutsches Theatre the other evening. It appeared that the accompanist had failed to make an appearance and the audience was clamouring for some rag-time airs by way of an overture. The stage manager was approached and asked if he knew of a pianist in the audience. He thought he did. "Good! Sling the blighter up here," said the questioner. The stage manager looked perturbed. "I'm sorry," he said, "I can't—it's Backhaus!"

Officers' Jazz Band.

Have you heard of the 92nd Bde. R.G.A. Officers' Jazz Band? No! then what a treat you have missed. They performed at a smoker and impromptu given at 223 S. Bty. Billets, Aloysianum Schools, Opladen, on Friday evening, and their efforts were warmly appreciated. After an enjoyable concert given by the men of the Battery, "The Prongs," (92nd Bde. R.G.A. Concert Party) who had already given a show at Burscheid that evening, gave a few of their most popular numbers. Pte. J. Robinson gave "Jimmy" Gnr. McO'Bayman "Liza" and Sig. E.J. Batey, L/Cpl. Castle and Gnr. J.A. Wade all gave of their best.

Leave Club Concert.

The Band of the 51st Leicestershire Regt. under the direction of Ernest W. Goss, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. gave a delightful concert at the B.E.L.C. on Sunday evening. The programme was a very varied one the orchestral selections including a March "Eyes Front" by Howells, "The Bohemians" by Le Duc' "La Coquette" by Laurent and "The Rustic Wedding" by Rimmer. Variations on "My old Kentucky Home" by Rimmer in which the euphonium solo part was extremely well played by Cpl. A.E. Terry proved a very popular item. C.Q.M.S. Atkins's songs were received with great enthusiasm. Perhaps his greatest success was "Snipmate o'Mine." Sgt. Harris sang "Nirvana" with great effect. There were two violinists, Sgt. Dmr. W.E. Coward and Cpl. Rossi both of whom are accomplished musicians and played very well. Cpl. Rossi was much applauded after his performance of "Scene de Ballet" and had to give an encore, as also did Sgt. Dmr. Coward later on in the evening.

In Few Words.

The Starlights tour is, I believe, proving very successful.

The joke about the little dog and the fire-proof safe that caused such laughter in "Well I'm!—!!" has since appeared in a German weekly.

"The Crumps" (London Division Concert Party) are at the Palace Theatre, Cologne, this week.

JACQUES.

FOOTBALL IN PYJAMAS.

An interesting "football match" took place at Merscheid last week between the Rollicking Roffers and the Persevering Parkers, Light Divisional M.T. Coy.

Lieuts. Roff and Parker led their men on to the field and the teams lined up like gladiators. Lieuts. Roff and Parker were tastefully attired as Pierrots, and Lieut. Kay looked sweet in a pyjama suit. The referee—Lieut. Hopkinson—came prepared for all emergencies, with boxing gloves and field dressings tied to his waist.

Where all played well, it is unwise to particularize, but Sergt.-Major Spreadborough in the Parkers' goal played a sound game, apart from a tendency to stray into the forward line. No goals were scored, but the Parkers must be considered the losers, inasmuch as they received more injuries than they inflicted.

FRIENDLY "FOOTER."

The above teams played a friendly game of football at Niederpeis last week. In spite of the extreme warmth, both teams thoroughly enjoyed the game. The Machine Gunners soon commenced their old tactics of making a swift and sudden attack, and in ten minutes had scored the first goal. The game proceeded until half time without any more goals. The artillery were getting little chance to approach the Machine Gunners goal owing to the excellent play of the backs and half backs, who skilfully frustrated any attempt to score on the part of the battery. Half time score was 1—Nil in favour of the Gunners.

In the second half the Battery fared no better and were still unsuccessful in attempting to stem the attacks of the Machine Gunners who, owing to a wise distribution of their men, played with splendid co-operation and effected a good defence of their goal. C. S. M. Robinson, Sgts. Goldring and Scobbie contributed to the general success of the Gunners by their speedy footwork and alertness. The game produced no more goals until 4 minutes before the whistle blew. Pte. Airton the Machine Gunners left back took the ball down the field through half the Battery's defence and scored with a splendid long shot, thus giving the Machine Gunners a win by 2 goals to Nil. The Artillerymen, though playing against odds, played a sportsmanlike and steady game, and contributed to the general enjoyment of the game.

For Notts Forest.

Bulling, who was on Watford's list of players, has been transferred to Nottingham Forest. The Southern League club offered him the maximum wage, but business interests in Nottingham caused him to make the change.

Ideal World's Team.

Several correspondents have asked me to give my Ideal World's Team since 1880 (writes Sir Home Gordon, Bt. in the "Daily Express".) A. and N. Stores Sports.

Next Saturday the Victoria (Army and Navy Stores) Athletic Association will hold an athletic meeting at Herne Hill.

The Happiest Team.

It is too early in the year for any club to assume greatness, but the Arsenal lay claim to having the happiest team in the country.

Big and Brawny.

An impression gained at their first practice game was that West Ham will turn out the biggest, brawniest team that has represented the Upton Park Club in recent years.

Speedy Animals.

The swiftest dog in the world, the Russian wolfhound, has made record runs that show twenty four yards to the second, while the gazelle has shown measured speed of more than twenty-seven yards a second.

Thames Fry Mortality.

While fishing Hampton Deeps an angler met with thousands of small dead fish floating down stream—dace, roach and other fry. The fish seemed to make the river white at one spot, but above a certain point all was wel. The Thames Conservancy has been informed of the mysterious mortality, and are investigating it.

Burned to Death.

While on its way to Wantage, a filly by Beppo was burned to death owing to its box catching fire.

Ju-Jitsu.

Japanese children begin to study ju-jitsu in their earliest years, for it is a system of physical culture, hygiene, and ethics, besides being a form of self-defence and offence.

Extraordinary bargains were obtained at a sale of 2,000 Army cycles at Olympia. Lots of three machines went at from £9 to £11 10s.; lots of five fetched £14 to £18; and lots of ten £27 to £34; and lots of twenty from £35 to £64. Machines sold singly ranged between £4 10s. and £7.

Most Entertaining Batsman.

It might be said without much fear of contradiction that Hitch is the most entertaining batsman of the present day. He is even more likely to do the unexpected than was Jessop, for whereas Jessop would always hit any ball which gave him half an excuse, there is never any telling what Hitch may do.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Serious Pleasure.

Those who make much use of the swimming baths in and about Cologne will probably have been struck by the absence of the rollicking fun not uncommon in English establishments. The average German takes his pleasures as seriously as his meals. Again, the German style of swimming is usually solid rather than showy. Turning to rowing, one cannot help feeling that some good coaches might find profitable employment in Rhineland. Most of the fours one sees on the river row badly and have very little style. And why is there so little sailing on the glorious river?

Cologne's Churches.

Architecture has been defined as "frozen music," and no doubt many of the music lovers in the Rhine Army have an eye for beauty of form as well as an ear for beauty of sound. It may not be generally realised that Cologne possesses one of the most remarkable and homogeneous groups of churches in Europe — we are speaking of buildings of the Romesque style, the growth of which may be studied from such solemn and beautiful early churches as St. Maria im Capitol and the Apostles' Church, to its latest expression in St. Kuniberts. The Dom, apart from its magnificent choir, offers much less of interest than many a little-known church in Cologne.

For Punishment!

During the week-end residents of Cologne had a good opportunity of seeing some really smart English howitzers, for the best four six inch guns in the Corps were up for inspection in the Stiftsplatz. All the competing batteries were very keen, as was proved by the bright steel and brasswork, and general smart appearance. Civilians were very interested, as was demonstrated by the large crowds, and many comments were passed on the various turnouts. They were very hazy as to the object of the demonstration, for one, when told that the best gun would be awarded a prize remarked, "Oh, I thought these soldiers were doing it for punishment!"

A Fräulein's Task.

The other day was to be seen a striking example of the difference between the German and English idea of what is fitting. A Frau going on a visit made her servant drag her luggage about for miles, to the railway station, the road being exceptionally hilly, even for the Rhineland while the day was hot. On arrival at the station the servant looked so exhausted that she could scarcely struggle up the steps with her load. Then she tramped back home again, dragging the empty truck. Can we imagine an English maid performing such a task, especially when it was by no means impossible to send the luggage by means of a cart!

Floating Cafés.

An excellent idea in Germany appears to be the floating cafés that are to be found on the rivers. These are to be seen on the Rhine frequently and apparently are made up from demobilized barges. A large part of the staging is roofed in and used for cold or hot baths, but a portion at the side is fenced off and left open for the purpose of teas, ices, minerals, etc. and it is very pleasant to sit at the little tables taking refreshment rocked into drowsy contentment by the Rhine. Surely something of this sort would be a boon as well as a profitable enterprise to the promoter in England, say, off Westminster or the upper Reaches of the Thames.

A Big Haul.

At Engelskirchen is a shallow lake formed by water running down from the hills near by. This lake is situated on one side of the road, and on the other side, where the land lies lower than the bed of the lake runs a stream. The lake is connected to the stream by a tunnel built underneath the road — the water being held in the lake by sluice gates at the end of the tunnel nearest the lake On Sunday last these sluice gates were opened and in about three hours a large portion of the bed of the lake was above water and as the lake contains a great number of fish many hundreds were left on the land out of the water and soon expired in the hot sun. After the lake had been left in this condition for a few hours the gates were then closed and gradually the lake began to re-fill. The dead fish then floated on the surface of the water and were collected by some of the German inhabitants. Thus a good "catch" was made.

The German Way.

An amusing incident, well illustrating the all-powerfulness of the uniformed official in Germany, was recently enjoyed by occupants of a tram running Lindenthal way. A young German, emulating the practice followed by so many of our men, boarded a tram while it was in motion, whereupon he was vociferously denounced and harangued by the conductor who appeared to be very liverish. To escape the tirade the civilian descended at the next stop and boarded one of the forward platforms. He had, however, been ordered off the whole tram for breaking the rules and authority would not wink at his simply changing from one platform to another. Therefore authority went forward and again harangued. For five minutes were we treated to this pantomime, but it finally ended by the tram moving off with a triumphant conductor and an amused crowd while a discomfited and exceedingly angry sans-uniform being was left, gesticulating, to wait for the next tram at a "haltestelle."

Battlefield Postcards.

It must be with mixed feelings that the Germans see the postcards now on sale in many of the shops of the various sections and devastated villages on the old battle front. True, some of the views are quite interesting and impressive and would indeed be a commemorative souvenir to most of us, but on the other hand several of them are hideous and of a most gruesome nature, depicting trenches full of dead, etc. Surely the Germans have more respect for their "Glorious Dead" when it is considered such an honour to die for the Fatherland.

As Souvenirs.

It is of course natural that anyone going home should wish to buy souvenirs of their stay in Rhineland for relations and friends, but it is not easy to make a judicious choice that will represent value for money, and one needs to be wary. Some of the things that can be bought at reasonably cheap rates are ivory, fashioned into napkin rings, brooches etc., and bead bags for ladies are not over-priced. The figures asked for amber necklaces are not excessive, provided one knows how to discriminate between the real and the false.

Lesser Echoes.

Better and better! We hear from the 51st Bedfords that their Battalion subscribed 73,200 marks for War Savings Certificates for the week ending 2nd August, and 49,600 marks for week ending 9th August. This week they expect even bigger results.

As an officer of the 1st Battn. Machine Gun Corps remarks, "Every little helps." His unit's contribution to War Savings this week is the useful sum of 17,000 marks.

* * *

152 Heavy Battery R.G.A. has sustained the loss of a most efficient and popular N.C.O. in B.S.M. Sanders, who has left for England, time-expired. He was never once absent from duty in action at the guns from April 1916 until the war ended.

* * *

With the introduction of Pay and Mess Book and the consequent withdrawal of A.B. 64, the latter will cease to be a means of a soldier's identification. Warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men will therefore in future wear their identity discs at all times.

* * *

"Blighty Corner". — This is what a little ice-cream shop in a certain street of Cologne calls itself. There is a café at Deutz which advertises itself as the "meeting place of good fellows." And one of the big shops in Cologne calls its tea-room an "agreeable abode," and offers hot and cold plates."

Prizes for Echoes.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's prizes have been awarded to: Pte. S. Corbey, 6 R. West Kent Rgt. Rhine Army; Cpl. Wigney British Armistice Commission, Rhine Army; and Signaller J. B. McDonnell 443 Siege Bty. R.G.A., Rhine Army.

CIVIS ROMANUS SUM.

In the olden days of the famous Roman Empire, all who had the right to claim citizenship therewith, enjoyed complete freedom from the various unpleasant restrictions that neighbouring states were accustomed to impose upon their inhabitants.

A man who could say "Civis Romanus Sum" was accounted of some importance because of the wholesome reverence and esteem, which existed among the lesser nationalities for the powerful Roman Empire.

We Englishmen, whom destiny has chosen as workers at Cologne in "mufti," are in a somewhat similar position to the citizens of ancient Rome, inasmuch-as we can say "I am an Englishman," when accosted for our night-pass, or questioned upon entering a railway carriage reserved for military only.

There is a difference, however, for whereas a Roman citizen was invariably recognised as such, we have frequently to declare our identity to our fellow citizens because we no longer wear the uniform of a soldier. It is a strange feeling, after having held command in the field, to board a Cologne tram realising fully that unless we choose to speak, we shall pass in the eyes of the British soldier as foreigners. Not only as foreigners, but as fellow-countrymen of our late enemy.

Although it is undoubtedly a strain to live here in the midst of our own countrymen feeling that the onus lies upon our shoulders to prove we are Englishmen, there are many amusing incidents which occur here to make up for the feeling of depression which inevitably haunts the civilian from time to time.

The writer recollects an experience which once befell him. Having got into conversation with an officer on the return journey from Bonn to Cologne, he arranged to spend the late afternoon and evening with this said officer at a music hall.

On the way to the hall, two other officers joined the party, the writer not being formally introduced. We all four repaired to the place and enjoyed thoroughly the entertainment — and the wine.

On leaving, it was decided to dine at the officers' club, but when the writer and his first acquaintance reached the club, the other two were nowhere to be seen. Possibly they had found more attractive fish to fry.

After dinner, we two strolled out again into the street, and the writer was cordially greeted by a personal friend of his on the Provost Marshal's Staff; the missing officers were also present.

A little later on, these two made a full apology to the writer for having gone off to the A.P.M. to report that a German spy had taken them to a music-hall, and was now dining with an officer at the club, and would the officials send along a representative to arrest him as he left the entrance.

My informants, I believe, experienced a sensation of wishing to sink through the floor on finding that I was a personal acquaintance of the man whom they imagined would arrest me. Anyway we all celebrated the event on the following night, and are now the best of friends!

NOTES FROM LONDON TOWN.

WAY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

In new offices taken over by the Government recently, blinds were asked for to keep out the sun, which poured in all day, making work impossible. Black blinds were sent. It was pointed out that they were useless, as they excluded all light, and they were eventually removed. After many vain written applications to the Board of Works, appeal was made by telephone. Workmen promptly appeared a day or two ago and began hammering. Asked whether they had come about the blinds, they said, "No; they were putting the hot water pipes in order."

BRITISH HAIR FAMINE.

One of the minor tragedies of the war has been that the wig makers found their hair supplies cut off. Clarkson's, the famous perruquiers in Wardour-street, say that the great hair markets of pre-war days were the Central Empires. During the war, though the Italian market was open, tonnage could not be spared for wigs. Just, before the war, however, Mr. Willie Clarkson acquired two tons of hair, and this, with a large reserve, saved the stage from wiglessness. There is practically no hair to be had in England or the Colonies as "English people are too proud of their hair to sell it." Here is the possibility for a new home industry.

YOUTH IN POSSESSION.

One of the most entertaining, as well as one of the wholesomest, sights in London at present is the army of naked urchins in Trafalgar-square. It must be a gross breach of every regulation sacred to Scotland Yard for the primitive youth of the back streets to swarm into the very heart of "streaming London's central roar," strip themselves to the skin, project themselves into the basins, chase one another in and out of the crowd, stretch themselves flat to dry in the sun, or scramble for the pennies thrown by envious spectators from the parapet opposite the National Gallery. Someone has clearly hinted to the police force to turn their blind eye on Trafalgar-square. Whoever he may be, I congratulate him on his good sense and the humanity of his sympathy with overheated youth.

SEASIDE AND CITY TAN.

It is easy to distinguish the returning from the departing holiday-maker at the railway stations. Not that the tired town dweller has this year quite as jaded an appearance as usual—the heat wave has seen to it that he departs with a preliminary coating of tan. But it is not the tan of his returning brothers and sisters. The Londoner departs for the sea with a pleasing brown complexion. But it is nothing to the brick-red with which he, and particularly she returns. Contemporary feminine costume affords more scope for the tanning process, and the glare of sea and sky is reflected on beetroot necks and vermilion arms. But the real difference between those with a holiday before them and those returning is one of expression. On the one side all eagerness; on the other that look of being swept up again into the daily round while the blue sea is still in their mind's eye.

WASTED ENERGY.

Have you ever realised the cost of the garden path not being wide enough for the wheelbarrow to pass under the pergola? It means 40 or 50 feet journey round by the goldfish pond to the rubbish heap. This adds anything up to a minute to the time required. The latest Reconstruction Pamphlet, "The Uses of Costings," takes up this burning question scientifically. For instance, is it worth while to have afternoon tea for five at a cost of 350 feet of running about (70 foot per cup-run in technical jargon) as well as 35 minutes of the maid's time? The pamphlet suggests that instead of keeping the tray in the cupboard, the silver in the dining-room, the tea caddy on the shelf high up, and running about collecting paraphernalia generally, the really scientific housewife would have a table on wheels, an electric stove, and cakes, milk and tea in get-at-able spots; 350 feet can thus be reduced to 34 feet. Even worse is the case of the garden path too narrow to allow the coal man's cart to enter. The result is that the cart waits outside, that the coal is carried on the man's back, 1,000 hours of labour are wasted every 100 years, and the cost of coal goes up.

TROOPER'S

BLOOD-POISON

"Whilst serving in Egypt I contracted blood-poison in my legs", writes Mr. C. Breakspear, an ex-trooper of A Squadron, 1/1 Berks Yeomanry, from his home, 97, Waverley Road, Reading.

"My trouble was complicated by insect bites and poisoning through washing in unclean water. For four months I had treatment from my military doctor, but as I didn't get any better I was invalided home".

"When I heard about Zam-Buk I determined to try it. After only two dressings with Zam-Buk my sores looked better and I had less pain. So I continued with Zam-Buk, and it wasn't long before all my sores were healed with new skin. Zam-Buk also rid me of a bad attack of ringworms.

"That was three years ago, and thanks to Zam-Buk I am still free from any skin trouble".

Zam-Buk is the one healer every soldier can rely upon. Get a box to-day from a chemist or Army Canteen.

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE DISCUSSES FUTURE POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

PREMIER'S SPEECH.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE TOUCHES MANY SUBJECTS.

Mr. Lloyd George's eagerly-awaited speech was made in the House of Commons on Monday evening. He said that whilst at the Peace Conference, he met many experts from many lands and discussed the industrial position throughout the world. There were many things he feared which never occurred and many apprehensions dispelled by events.

On the other hand, many circumstances had shown themselves of magnitude of which all Governments must take notice. He proposed to place before Parliament and the country serious suggestions and proposals, which the Government had formulated, to deal with the many difficulties, and he asked that the country would realise the gravity of the position and give fair, impartial consideration to the suggestions, realising that the future of the land depended upon the way Parliament attempted to deal with the difficulties. All personal considerations must be put aside and it should be remembered that all should do their best to help the country. Trade was steadily improving, but they had their worst troubles to face.

Public Expenditure.

Referring to expenditure, he said the one way to meet it was to increase the output, yet this was less in every direction, save agriculture. As to the Army and Navy, he wanted everybody to assume that they were cutting down the cost to the lowest figure. The cardinal fact of the moment, however, was that they were not paying their way.

Production had decreased in a way which was serious for the future of the country. What were the causes? The first was due to the change from war to peace conditions. The world was suffering from shell shock on a great scale. The reduction of hours of work was another cause and there was evidence in some industries of a deliberate slowing down due to the fallacy that the less work one did the more there would be for others. That was ruinous policy and he said to employers, and workmen, "get rid of it."

As to war weariness, that could be cured only by the people themselves and he thought they had only to be convinced of the fact to throw off that fatal lethargy which was depressing production and imperilling the nation. The advice he gave to all concerned was to look facts squarely in the face, because they would never get a real answer to the question of depressed production unless they came to understand that labour had benefitted in recent years; wages were more than doubled and hours of work reduced.

He did not contend that the last word had been said as to hours and wages. A Bill had been prepared providing for eighty-four hours a week in all industries as well as improvement in the conditions of living. It was also desirable to give the workers more real financial interests in industry, though profit sharing had been discredited by trades unions because of the possibility of being used against them. They must also remove the apprehension of the workers in regard to unemployment, which was a nightmare.

The Coal Question.

Concerning the coal commission, the Government had been deeply impressed by the evidence of the social conditions of the miners, which, they thought, should be remedied as speedily as possible. They proposed to organise a fund for that particular purpose. They also proposed to submit to Parliament a scheme for the purchase of mineral rights, but the state should not purchase business mines. Steps would be taken to amalgamate the mines in particular, with a view to preventing waste.

Dealing with agriculture, the Prime Minister said he would shortly submit schemes to agriculturists which would restore the industry to the condition it was in forty years ago. He did not wish to anticipate the report of the Agricultural Commission, but he could not imagine any report which did not recommend the continuance of guaranteed payment to farmers, justifying continued efforts. The Government was asked to cut down the estimates. He wanted those who urged that to remember the vital British interests involved in various parts of the world. Until those questions were settled they could not reduce expenditure to normal, though considerable reductions were possible.

Army Estimates.

Regarding army estimates, it must be remembered that the cost of armaments had gone up enormously. The first and fundamental condition of economy was that those who promoted the League of Nations would show confidence in it. If they increased armaments, it was a sham, and would be a scrap of paper. Britain was ready; let all nations do likewise. The conditions at the moment were grave, but they could be redeemed by action. They were suffering enormously from under-production and not living within their means.

WAR MINISTER AT LEAVE CLUB.

MR. CHURCHILL IMPRESSED.

On Monday, at 12.30, the British Empire Leave Club was visited by the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, M.P., Secretary of State for War, and the following members of the Army Council:—Field Marshal Sir H. H. Wilson, C.I.G.S., Lt.-Gen. Sir G.M.W. MacDonough, Adjt. Gen., Maj. Sir A.H.M. Sinclair, Military Secretary, Col. W. E. Pitt Taylor, Military Assistant, Maj. Sir B. F. Burnett Hitchcock, Director of Mobilization, Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, and Lt.-Gen. Sir Philip Chetwode, Military Secretary to the Secretary of State.

They were accompanied by the Commander-in-Chief, Sir William Robertson and the following ladies:—Mrs. Winston Churchill, Lady Chetwode, Countess of Pembroke and Montgomery, and the Hon. Mrs. Rupert Beckett. The club wore its usual air of life and gaiety when the visitors arrived. They were received by Miss Decima Moore, who showed them round. The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill showed great interest in the club, and was vastly impressed by the number of men that use it, and the wonderful variety of entertainments that are provided for them. The party was shown the restaurant where the tables were laid for a three-course dinner, the library, the billiard rooms, etc, and finally the theatre where everything was ready for the cinema performance which would be followed by a dance for the men.

"BOLSHIES" BEATEN.

DRIVEN OUT OF ODESSA BY THE POPULACE.

A War Office communiqué to-day states that the latest information from South Russia indicates little change on the Eastern half of General Denikin's front, North of Kamishin. Fierce Bolshevists attacks, have failed to obtain success.

There has been progress on the Don front across Kamishin. Bala railway and Lemishkino were occupied with the capture of 700 prisoners.

On the Northern front, volunteers pushed on to Krasnenkaya and after the re-occupation of Novokhpersk, on Denikin's Western front, a general advance took place. Krmenchug, an important town on the Dneiper was occupied and the railway junction Znamanka captured. Further South, volunteers advancing West met little opposition.

Anti-Bolshevist revolts are reported in the whole area opposite the West part of Denikin's front. Bolshevists are said to have been driven out of Odessa by the populace and peasants and they have evacuated Kiev and all Ukraine.

RAILWAY RED LAMP.

GOVERNMENT DOES NOT CONCEDE MEN'S DEMANDS.

The Government on Monday made an offer of increased wages to railway engine drivers, firemen and cleaners. In the case of drivers, the increase averages 19s. 6d. a week, but the offer does not concede the demands made by the men. The offer was submitted to a conference on Monday night, which sent a communication to the Government asking for an immediate meeting to discuss the whole matter.

CUSTOMS ACT.

SIR JOHN SIMON PROPOSES TO TESTS ITS LEGALITY.

Sir John Simon has written a letter stating that he proposes to test the legality of the Government's action in excluding foreign goods under the Customs Consolidation Act. He proposes to do this by importing, without licence, goods embargoed by the Board of Trade. He will bring goods from Spain, where he now is, and will sell them in England.

SOME STRIKES OVER.

Several strikes ended on Monday at Hull. The trawlers strike, which had lasted eleven weeks, ended in the engineers deciding to return to work on the terms offered by the employers in June. The paper tube makers at Castleton, Lancashire, the teachers at Heywood and the miners at the Lochore Collieries, Firth of Forth, have also resumed. The teachers agreed to arbitration and the others accepted the terms offered.

THE PRINCE'S TOUR.

The Prince of Wales arrived at Halifax, Nova Scotia, on Sunday on the Dragon and entered the city on Monday. A civic holiday was proclaimed and an enthusiastic welcome given to His Royal Highness.

MORE VISITORS.

Y.M.C.A. HEADS AT COLOGNE: LORD ASKWITH ON LABOUR UNREST.

The great hall of the Central Y.M.C.A., Cologne, was crowded with an audience of nearly 3,000 men on Monday evening to welcome Lord Askwith, the acting Treasurer of the National Y.M.C.A., and well know as an arbitrator in many industrial disputes; Sir Arthur Yapp K.B.E., the Commander-in-Chief of the National Headquarters and the one time Food Controller, and Mr. Oliver McCowen, C.B.E., the Chief of the great movement with the British Expeditionary Force since 1914.

There were present on the platform Doctor Francis, who presided, Mr. W. Ashley, the Chief of the Y.M.C.A. with the Rhine Army, the Rev. A. D. Mackenzie of the Central, and the Rev. George Kendall C.F. The meeting had for objects to see at first hand the work that has been carried out in Rhineland, and to prepare for the demobilization of the various centres in the near future. Doctor Francis introduced the speakers, the first of whom was Lord Askwith, saying, "We all know that it was the Y.M.C.A. who won the war."

Lord Askwith's Speech.

Lord Askwith said that they had been touring France demobilizing the Y.M.C.A.'s there, and were now doing the same in Rhineland. Demobilization was proceeding with great rapidity, owing to a feeling that a quick change must be made in the habits of the Government.

He thought that the papers at home, with an eye to the picturesque, magnified our labour troubles. The whole of Britain was not in a state of tumult and anarchy. Before he came to Cologne he had had a long talk with Mr. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of the N.U.R., and they both came to a close agreement on many points. The chief was that only by national unity could they get the country out of her present difficulties. They must all pull together and try to keep the old country on the top. They must try to enforce national economy and see that the Government cut down their extravagance first of all, and so set an example to the people. They must kill the doctrine of "Direct Action" unless the questions at issue were really of the highest importance to the nation as a whole.

He prophesied a non-settled state of things and that the Labour Congress in September would vote solidly against strikes and call for united action to increase production.

First "Y.M." in Havre.

Mr. Oliver McCowen said that he came out in 1914, and saw the first Y.M.C.A. hut erected at Havre. He had been with the boys all through the campaign and paid a striking tribute to their heroism and cheerfulness under the most appalling conditions. They had been true gentlemen. He had had several thousand ladies working for him in the huts in France and other parts, but he had never known one complaint of rudeness shown to them. After he was demobilized he was going to organise Y.M.C.A.'s in all the towns and villages in England. They must try to make England a happy place and fit to live in. They must be sober and level-headed and not be led astray by unprincipled agitators.

Future Opportunities.

Sir Arthur Yapp had a great reception. He announced that Mrs. Winston Churchill, who had done a great work for the Y.M.C.A., was going to visit the Central during her stay with her husband in Cologne. He emphasized the fact that the whole future of England depended on our soldiers when they were demobilized. After speaking of the great work of the Y.M.C.A. for the troops during the war, he said that in a few months they had secured positions for 20,000 demobilized officers and men, and had several big training centres. They were continuing this useful service and were anxious to help men in every way.

At the close, a flashlight photograph was taken of the great assembly and rousing cheers were given for the speakers, the ladies and Doctor Francis.

PEACE CONFERENCE AND SINN FEIN.

Diplomatic circles at the Peace Conference have been talking mostly of the Irish situation, comment being distinctly unfavourable to the Sinn Feiners, whose conduct during the war was such as to make them forfeit much sympathy.

EGYPT A NATION.

Joseph W. Folk, counsel for the Committee nominated by the Egyptian Nationalist Assembly has filed a brief with the Foreign Relations Committee designed to obtain the recognition of Egypt's nationality. He declares that the status of Egypt should not be made an internal question and should be within the jurisdiction of the League of Nations.

H.L.I. AND KILTS.

The recommendations of Sir Archibald Murray's Committee, anent the dress of the Army has not yet been published. If the suggestions put forward are adopted, however, the H.L.I. will probably lose the distinction they at present possess of being the only regular Highland Corps who do not wear the kilt. Strong influence is being brought to bear to bring about the change.

WAR CRIME TRIALS.

In the Belgian Senate M. Vandervelde announced that a meeting of Allied delegates to arrange procedure in regard to the German war crime trials would be held shortly in Paris.

HELD TO RANSOM.

AMERICAN AIRMEN AND MEXICAN BANDITS.

A Washington telegram states that the missing Army Airmen, Paul Davies and Harold Peterson, have written to Military Headquarters, saying that Mexican Bandits are holding them to £3,000 ransom and threaten death if the money is unpaid. It is stated that the money is being sent to protect the airmen.

WILL THORNE'S OPINION.

DIRECT ACTION INEVITABLY ENDS IN FAILURE.

At the National Socialist Conference at Northampton, Mr. Will Thorne, M.P., said that to every form of anarchism they were resolutely opposed. Direct action inevitably ended in failure and led to reaction.

Mr. Brownlie, Chairman of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, said that neither miners nor transport workers had any more right to hold up the country or wring concessions from it, than had the capitalists.

MINISTERS' CARS.

NUMBERS BEING GREATLY REDUCED.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Bonar Law said that Ministers had decided to give up at once motor cars hitherto allotted to them, and the Government had decided that no cars should be personally allotted to any one number. The number of cars had already been greatly reduced and steps were being taken for further reduction.

DANTZIG PROBLEM.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S REQUEST.

The German Government have sent a note to the Peace Conference regarding the status of Dantzig.

The population wish for information as to the nationality of the port after its separation from the German Empire, also as to the disposition of public property at Dantzig. The present situation is said to be unbearable and it is desired that a new constitution would be established as soon as possible.

HOME SECRETARY FIRM.

NO REINSTATEMENT FOR POLICE.

In the House of Commons on Monday night, Mr. Clynes made an appeal for the men dismissed in connection with the police strike.

Mr. Shortt, replying, said the question of reinstatement was out of the question. Experienced men who took part in the strike were unfitted to be policemen. If particular cases of hardship were brought to his notice he would see what could be done. Characters were being given to some men to ensure their getting other positions.

PARIS TOBACCO CRISIS.

The Paris League of Tobacco Smokers yesterday took steps to deal with the tobacco crisis by visiting various shops. Several shopkeepers gave up supplies of foreign tobacco and in Faubourg du Temple persuaded a proprietor to disgorge hidden supplies of French tobacco and cigarettes.

HIGHER DOCTORS FEES.

Sheffield doctors have passed a resolution that fees should be raised at least fifty per cent above pre-war rates. The General Secretary of the British Medical Association states this has already been done to a large extent throughout London and the provinces but no further increase is projected for the immediate present.

FISH PROFITEERING.

Profiteering by retail fishmongers is seriously regarded by fishing boat owners, says Mr. Quilliam, of the Manx Fisheries Association, and unless immediate alteration takes place, owners will form a syndicate and open hundreds of retail shops. Fish bought at two-pence a pound he adds, is being sold at one shilling; mackerel bought at three farthings is being sold at eightpence.

NEW FINNISH CABINET.

As a consequence of Mannerheim's refusal to remain in charge of the Supreme Command of the Finnish Army, Premier Castren has resigned together with a number of his colleagues. The President has asked the Minister of Commerce Vennola to form a new Cabinet.

MORE PROFITEERING.

Speaking on Tower Hill, Mr. Harry Binner said that an officer complained to him that when buying Victory riband in the city he was charged at the rate of 18s. a yard. He went with the officer to the shop. The assistant smelt a rat and said that a mistake had been made and charged for the second purchase at the rate of 9s. a yard. This was profiteering as the riband was sold at 7s. 6d. elsewhere.

IRISH SITUATION.

UNREST CAUSES GLOOMY AND DEPRESSING OUTLOOK.

Unrest in Ireland is developing and a general feeling of insecurity threatens to paralyse trade. Labour on the land in Kildare and Meath is said to have come to an end for the present. Efforts to settle the disputes have been repeatedly and unsuccessfully made. The result will probably be that the whole of the crops in some districts will not be saved. The outlook is gloomy and depressing.

FEEDING THE CHILDREN.

RESULTS OF YORKSHIRE COAL STRIKE.

Owing to the great distress caused by the late Yorkshire coal strike, children have been supplied with bread by the workshop branch of the Discharged Soldiers and Sailors Federation. The task has now been taken over by the local authorities and when the question of repayment was raised, the miners representatives offered to bear the expenses of relief work out of their reserve funds. This has greatly relieved the feeling among housewives.

ROYAL FAMILY'S WELL EARNED HOLIDAY.

The King and Queen, Princess Mary and Prince Albert and George left Buckingham Palace for Balmoral on Monday night. They will stay in Scotland for several weeks. They were cheered by a large crowd as the train steamed out.

FINSBURY PARK MURDER.

At the resumed inquest on Lucy Nightingale, the married woman found gagged and strangled at Prah-Road, Finsbury Park, a new witness, Harold Morgan, stated that Bourke, who has been arrested in connection with the crime, told him he tied her up and put a pillow under her head. He saw Bourke examining three rings.

Bourke, who was present, asked no questions, and the inquest was adjourned.

SUBMERGED IN QUICKSANDS.

LITTLE BOY'S STRANGE DEATH ON LONDON COMMON.

There are several "Danger" notice-boards on Mitcham Common, but little John Bedwin, six, residing at Tooting, was too young to appreciate these, and so yesterday went paddling in shallow water in one of the sand pits for which Mitcham is noted. Almost immediately he sank up to the chin in a hole, and speedily disappeared. When help arrived he was extricated, but was found to be dead.

HOTEL WORKERS DEMANDS.

At a mass meeting of the British and Allied waiters chefs and restaurant employees Union, yesterday it was stated the Union proposed to enforce a forty-eight hour week with time and half pay for overtime and double pay on Sundays and holidays. Tips were not be considered as wages, the members opined, and better accommodation for indoor workers would be insisted upon. The present membership of the Union is 15,000.

THE LATEST STRIKE.

Strikes are everywhere in the air, and America is no more immune from trouble of this kind than anywhere else. A New York message states that stage hands and musicians at the playhouses struck on Saturday evening in sympathy with the actors. A threat has been made to close every theatre in New York unless the actors demands are agreed to.

DROWNED ON HIS BICYCLE.

The Kent County Coroner held an inquest yesterday at East Farleigh, near Maidstone, on the body of Arthur John King, 32, a demobilized soldier who was drowned in the Medway.

King had been severely wounded twice while fighting on the Western front and his left arm was useless. On Friday when cycling from Barming Bridge on the towing path he apparently lost control of his machine and rode into the river. A great effort was made to rescue him, but he became entangled with the cycle and sank.

The Coroner recorded a verdict of "Accidental Drowning."

WALWORTH TRAGEDY.

A verdict of death by natural causes was returned at an inquest held on Saturday on Dawson Alfred Fielder, whose name was connected with Mrs. Daley who was found with terrible injuries at Walworth. The coroner said that the inquest was necessary owing to statements connected with the tragedy. Fielder was found to have died a perfectly natural death.

Mrs. Daley is in a critical condition and is not expected to recover.

DEATH OF ISVOLSKY.

The death is announced of M. Isvolsky, formerly Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs and Russian Ambassador in Paris, which last post he held at the time of the outbreak of war.

Gracis and Esperanza of Honduras are said to have been taken from the Government troops by the revolutionaries.

EATEN BY EAGLES.

REMAINS OF MISSING CHILD FOUND IN MOUNTAINS.

Human bones, and the clothes of an infant have been found in a crevice in in the mountain rocks among the Pyrenees, France. They are believed to be those of a four year old child who disappeared from a village three months ago.

Weight is lent to the assumption that the child, while playing in a field, was carried off by eagles and devoured, by the discovery close by of an eagles' nest.

LABOUR LEADERS.

VIEWS ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. G. N. Barnes and Mr. J. H. Thomas were at the Working Mens' Club at Kew, presented with addresses in appreciation of their public services.

Mr. Barnes in referring to the League of Nations said he thought we should allow Germany to come in as soon as possible. He regretted, however, that according to recent evidence from Amsterdam the Germans still appeared unrepentant and wished to boss the world in an industrial sense. Our minds were made up and we were determined that this should not be.

Mr. Thomas said that organised Labour and combinations were the only safeguard to the workers for economic conditions, because it was their only bargain in power, but every class must recognise that the State was greater than any section. Labour must bear in mind that just as the power to strike was a weapon necessary in some circumstances, yet a strike should always be the last resort.

THE AGE OF A BRIDE.

The complicated marriage formalities in France have been somewhat simplified by the law of August 8 of this year.

Apart from the technical emandations, a very discreet modification is that which enjoins that the age of bride and bridegroom need no longer be inscribed on the marriage certificate; they are declared of age, or over thirty, but no specific age is given.

ENGINE DRIVER'S GALLANTRY.

LORD MILNER'S MISSION.

In the House of Commons on Monday, Mr. Harmsworth said that the terms of Lord Milner's mission to Egypt were to inquire into the causes of the late disturbances and to report on the existing situation, and form of constitution which under a protectorate would be best calculated to promote peace and prosperity, progressive development of self-governing institutions in the protection of foreign interests.

CIRCUS FAT MAN DEAD.

Jack Wilson, the fat man of a New York circus, whose weight was estimated in the neighbourhood of 40 stone, has died, after an illness of two weeks, following a paralytic stroke. Wilson had been a familiar attraction at the resort for two years, and was a great favourite with the other "freaks" of the show, his especial chums being Eddie Masher, "the skeleton dude," and Frank Lentini, "the three-legged man."

NEW YORK SOCIETY GAMBLERS.

A sensation has been caused by the raiding of a fashionable gambling resort in the midst of the millionaire country homes in Nassau County.

The raid was carried out late at night by detectives and State troopers armed with revolvers. They discovered two roulette rooms crowded with Society folk.

NATURE'S TONIC.

The effect of the weather on the moods of mankind is one of those incalculable quantities which everybody experiences and very few people can quite understand. Sunshine transforms the face of the world. Consider how, under its influence, the thrush sings his unceasing song. He begins with the morning and in the evening he is not tired.

When the sun shines, men and women not only smile, they laugh, and the instinct to sing and dance is awakened, as may be seen at Hampstead Heath on any holiday. Consider how gay country trippers decorate their bicycles and their hats with nosegays of bright flowers. Even the boy who delivers the morning milk whistles as he does so. He may only whistle a blatant music-hall air, and even then he may whistle it out of tune, but he is nevertheless prompted by a certain feeling of the worth of existence.

Many other things in nature conduce to the same feeling. Think of the thrill which a rainbow gives, how the rays of the moon transform and beautify everything, how the romance of life is felt under her bounteous beams.

Think, again of the pleasure which the humour of kittens and lambs and puppies provide, of the graceful playfulness of a colt in a field, of the wonder of a young crop penetrating above the brown earth, of the hope and encouragement suggested by the growing greenness of trees. Think of the music of rushing waters and of sighing winds.

Consider again the joy of flowers, of the charm of an old world garden with its mellow fragrance, of the soothing restfulness of an anemone starred meadow, of the sense of fruition and achievement which a field of mellow grain gives. Think of the constantly operating forces of nature, growing, producing, fertilizing, giving rain and wind, and wonder and realise that she is trying to combat the forces which destroy and depress humanity.

George Eliot has said that nature repairs her ravages with her sunshine, and just as the scars of war on the fields of France are being obliterated by the brilliance of field flowers, so much may be done by men and women in radiating sympathy and optimism. The decaying and rotting influences of strife and discord may be best eradicated by the cultivation of a kindly feeling and a generous outlook.

Let us realise then that Nature is on our side, and that given a choice, she will help us to evolve order from chaos and banish all inglorious things.

ON RUTS.

A word about ruts. Why do we let them stagger us? We go into a library, and see hundreds and hundreds of books. There on the shelves is the grand sum of all the striving and the yearning of our greatest. If only—there we are—that "if" is the symbol of our rut!—if only we had the time! But it is a real rut, nevertheless.

Our lives are moulded to our needs, and our needs are cast in ruts, some of clay, some of bronze, some of dreams. Youth itself is a rut; it can never be satisfied. Old age is the wall where the rut stops, and there we die; some of us bowed and blinded; some, still striving with backs to the wall. But the rut need not blight us, paralyze us. We need not deepen it; we can widen it. It is within the scope of all to broaden the inevitable rut.

Man yearns most towards the unknown, the understanding of things, and nature is all things. She is eternal, as far as our concept of the Eternal can go. Everything is ephemeral to her, even the men she has set apart to delve deep and life-long into her mysteries. We have now widened our concept of the ephemeral; we have widened one rut.

There are others. Take a simple one. The butterfly man! He flits about from this to that. Time to him is not limited, not staccato'd; it is only a bar of eternity. Unaware, his interest is aroused. It may be for one woman, Love short-circuits him. Time suddenly becomes time, or rather it becomes life, with its all too-shortness.

It is in our moments of interest that we learn most and remember most of what we have learned. Knowledge is not merely a maker of new ways, it widens old ones. We can take our routines, our ruts, at a disadvantage by the cunning use of our temporary interests. They have the knack of widening—they are themselves ruts, or rather cell-walls that break down and make bigger, stronger cells.

If every soldier in Rhineland had, with all the cunning of a schemer against narrow ruts, exploited to the full the inevitable first interest in the German tongue, we should not hear so much "nix good" as we do.

Constantly new interests flash on us; that is the time to strike, and at all times it is best to strike hard, our hardest. If the interest should last only a week, or even only a day, no matter! Much can be learned in even a day, and we have thoroughly widened a rut.

We have favourite books, flowers, constellations, heroes, tasks; they are our ruts. Do we know all there is to know of them? Let us then begin with what is part of ourselves, search it through and through, know it, understand it, utterly exploit it. Our interests are part of us. They are the Royal Ruts, the path nature treads—the easy, fruitful path of the least resistance.

"CIVICS" IN THE ARMY.

I have noticed of late that enormous stress is being laid upon the teaching of "Civics" in the Army as though it were the balm of Gilead, or the oil to be poured upon the present industrial waters; and, as a teacher of this subject in a Rhine battalion, I feel that a few remarks from first hand experience might not come amiss. There is no subject in the present Army syllabus upon which the pupil is more woefully ignorant than citizenship, and what is worse, we must confess that this ignorance is not confined to the Army.

How many times a day will our friend the "man in the street" prate of "Freedom" and the State, without troubling in the very least to ask himself what he means by those terms. You know the excuse. It is very old now — there is no time!

Granted, the need of a civic conscience, what are the methods of installing it into the young soldiers of to-day?

Firstly, we have the lecture, which, to my mind, is the least desirable of all methods inasmuch as it pours into the listeners' minds vast quantities of information, without correspondingly drawing out the necessary mind-working from the pupil.

Or, again, there is the simple lesson with its direct question and answer, a scheme which requires much skill, perseverance and patience on the part of the teacher and what is not less important some degree of intelligence from the pupil. How to really interest the young soldier of to-day is a subject of never-ending possibilities. Thirdly and lastly, there is the well-conducted debate.

As far as I am aware this last-named method has not been used to any great extent, though I am optimistic enough to believe it would form the most successful of the three, for here surely the teacher and the pupil work hand-in-hand and come to a mutual understanding. Now controversial subjects would of course be chosen and the susceptibilities of O.R.'s respected — the fact that we are in the army cannot be easily put aside — but even so there is plenty of scope for good work. For this method two factors are necessary — simplicity and clear direction — there is no reason to believe that those are lacking in the average educational instructor.

And here I should like to close with a few words of President Lincoln's. They are the words which lead up to his well-known definition of democracy and their substance is this: "With malice toward none, with charity for all, it is for us to resolve that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom." After birth, begins growth, and we might well pause to remember that it is always a slow process.

CIVIS.

GENERAL SIR CHARLES FERGUSSON, BART.

RELINQUISHES MILITARY GOVERNORSHIP.

This distinguished officer has just relinquished his position as Military Governor of the British Zone of Occupation in Germany, a post which he has occupied with a sagacity, justice and tact that have mastered the great difficulties of an unusual and trying task, that have created and sustained unexpectedly good personal and official relations between the British and the Germans and have resulted in widely expressed appreciation on the part of the latter as to the benefits of the British rule.

Born at Edinburgh in 1885, and educated at Eton, he passed from Sandhurst to the Grenadier Guards in 1888, and in 1896 joined the Egyptian Army. His services in the campaigns of that and the two following years brought him not only a severe wound but a medal with eight clasps, five mentions in despatches, the D.S.O., and a Colonelcy. The year 1899 found him in command of a Soudanese regiment, 1900 saw him at Omdurman. During 1901—03, he was Adjutant-General of the Egyptian Army, and later commanded a battalion of the Grenadier Guards. In 1907—08, Sir Charles Fergusson was Brigadier-General on the Staff of the Irish Command, and from 1909 to 1913 was Inspector of Infantry.

Then came the Great War, and General Fergusson's long and varied experience and his proved ability in the field ensured him high command from the outbreak to the armistice. He came out with the Expeditionary Force, in command of the 5th Division from the Curragh. This Division covered itself with glory at the battle of Le Cateau, when General Smith-Dorrien stood and fought during the retreat from Mons to the Marne. The 5th bore the brunt of the fighting in this famous exploit.

Invalided home in October 1914, when the tide had turned and the long trench warfare had begun, General Fergusson was soon at work again and commanded the 9th Division in England for two months. Then, early in January of '15 he was out again with a still more responsible post as II Corps Commander. In the spring of 1916 he assumed command of the XVII Corps and this he held until ordered to Cologne as Military Governor after the Armistice.

It was the XVII Corps, under Sir Charles' command, which in the battle of Arras, April '17, fought its way forward in front of Arras, from the southern part of Vimy Ridge to Monchy le Preux, and which successfully carried out the terrific and prolonged fighting of Greenland Hill and Monchy.

It was this corps which held the Arras front, the hinge of the British line in the terrible onslaughts of the German army in the spring of last year when the British Armies North and South had to give ground. But the First Army stood and the XVII Corps, falling back slightly from Monchy by a clever manoeuvre that left the enemy barrage to waste itself on unoccupied ground, broke the German attack on Arras, on the success of which depended the enemy's power to widen his new salients and make his general plan a success. In front of Arras the XVII Corps remained: Sir Charles denied passage to the enemy, and the hinge remained until next year, swinging on Arras, when the victorious advance was begun.

In August of last year, General Fergusson's Corps was transferred to the Third Army, and as that Army's left wing it moved forward in touch on its left with the Canadian Corps under General Horne's command. In the tremendous attacks, irresistibly carried through, on that wonderful defence area the Hindenburg Line, the XVIIth had to take — and took — the unparalleled system of trenches, wire, and strong points, where the Drocourt-Queant line joined the Hindenburg line. Those familiar with this area, and only they, can conceive how incredible was the task. The famous line was broken at its strongest points, and the German heart and resistance were broken with it.

Further fighting, and hard fighting, too, awaited the Corps at Cambrai, at the Selle river and elsewhere. But the initiative, the resource, the enthusiasm which had achieved the impossible and captured the impregnable, swept all further obstacles aside, and on the Armistice day the Germans were in rout.

But there was to be no rest yet for General Fergusson. Ordered to Cologne as Military Governor, he arrived with the first of the Cavalry before the main part of the Army had appeared. He brought with him a picked five of his Corps Staff, and with the addition of some officers from G.H.Q. at once set about initiating and organizing the regime which has proved such an unqualified success, and so finely crowned a long career of acting and unfailing service.

General Fergusson's memory will remain, rooted in admiration and affectionate esteem, in the minds and hearts of all who have had the privilege of serving under him. And the Germans will retain the recollection of one who, where he might have used their iron severity and callousness, chose instead to exemplify the firm justice, and control mingled with consideration for the beaten foe, which we are proud to call the British way.

Lieut.-General Charles Fergusson is succeeded as Military Governor by Major-General G. S. Clive, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

WHY?

Sir,—Why is it, I wonder, that the majority of anecdotes and funny stories about the army, portray the private soldier as both illiterate and ignorant?

This may have been so in the far distant past, but at the present time there are men drawn from all classes serving in the ranks, including many who are highly educated.

When will these so-called humourists realise that such jokes are read by the average private soldier with annoyance and disgust?

RAILWAY DEVICES.

As most German locomotives have their cylinders outside and drive direct on to the wheels, it would be interesting to have more details of this marvellous device.

Can it possibly be that your correspondent has taken the "intermittent puffs" of the Westinghouse brake air pump as a sign that the locomotive was working and invented the clutch as an explanation of there being no movement?

R. T. G.

ANOTHER VIEW.

Sir,—With reference to the "Echo" re "Another Railway Device". Is your correspondent trying to pull our legs? If he is we should like to remind him that there are locomotive men in Cologne from some of the premier Trunk lines in England who might be tempted to pull his leg, but if the latter, then we can forgive him, always reminding him that a little knowledge is dangerous.

What I venture to suggest has happened is that he has been standing on some platform watching a train start, and heard the exhaust from the steam head of the Westinghouse Brakepump which exhausts through a pipe from the steam head to the smoke box, thus causing the intermittent puffs that he heard coming from the chimney and which has nothing to do with the driving of the locomotive.

Respecting the so-called clutch, I may tell him that no such device is fitted to any engine on the German or English Railways.

Probably whilst standing by the engine looking at the valve gear, which is outside of most German engines, he has seen the driver, when given the signal to start, move the quadrant block and valve gear owing to the reversing lever being in mid-gear position, and this gave our friend the idea that this was a clutch arrangement.

I should also like to point out to him that if he travels in a carriage of a train that is drawn by one of the two cylinder compound locomotives on the German Railways, he will find when they start that instead of an easy gliding motion, there is a discernable jerking to and fro until the engine gets the train well away.

CHEMIN DE FER.

HANDWRITING.

Sir,—I have followed with interest and amusement the letter on "Handwriting" in reply to mine.

"Awfist" does not appear to understand the difference between the elaborate letterings, for such they were, and not penmanship of the monasteries, and the beautiful copperplate, still the pride of the lithographic artist of our grandparents.

"Freedom," who appears to think that a standard type of handwriting would abolish individualism, cannot have studied very closely, as I have done for over ten years, the alliance of handwriting and character. If he had done so, he would realise his mistake, and that right early.

"Old Chichester Boy" writes obviously from the secondary school point of view, which rarely if ever, looks upon writing as other than an inevitable bugbear.

There is not a national standard of handwriting in our national British council or any other elementary schools. The only standards are those of individual headmasters, and in rare cases education committees. After some eight years experience in elementary school work, I do not think there is much likelihood of my not knowing.

J. KENNETH DOUGLAS.

OPEN AIR ENJOYMENT.

Sir,—The following reflections are suggested by "Private Bar's" letter appearing under the heading of "Open Air Enjoyment".

1. I would like to enquire by what right "Private Bar" assumes he represents the "view of most Britishers"?

2. What does he mean by "the privacy of a saloon bar"? Does he always hire the whole establishment for his "snuggery"?

3. Why must "Private Bar's" refreshment consist in practices which he dare not exhibit in public?

4. The "chatter and clatter" obtrudes itself much less upon the senses in an open-air resort than in the enclosed space of a sand-strewn floor littered with spittoons, — which people miss!

5. Is "Private Bar" firmly convinced that he had better not educate his taste in music, which at present appears to conform to the limitations of his own home, to appreciate (and not be tickled by) a programme performed by professional talent and chosen from the repertoire of the whole World?

6. It is just the narrowness of interest betrayed by "Private Bar" which requires the remedy of contact with a larger number of his fellow creatures.

7. Foreign is not necessarily synonymous with inferior.

8. If "Private Bar" really wishes to continue to live in the darkness of his saloon retreat it was imprudent of him to admit into it the searching rays of "Cologne Post" publicity.

ANOTHER RACE.

Keen Competition For Supremacy In Town League.

C.P.C. MATCHES.

Similar to the situation in the Bonn League is the position of the teams in the Cologne Town League published to-day, and conjecture will be rife as to who will eventually pass into the finals. Army H.Q. Sigs. occupy the premier position at present, but they have played three matches more than the 17th Lancers, who come second, and four more than the 4th Royal Sussex Regt., who are still an unbeaten team. R.A.A. Bty., R.A., and Cav. Div. H.Q. are also in the running. Here is the position of the leading teams:—

	P.	W.	L.	D.	Pts.
Army H.Q. Sigs.	23	19	4		38
17th Lancers	20	18	1	1	37
4 Royal Sussex	19	18	0	1	37
Cav. Div. H.Q.	21	18	3		36

3rd M.G.C. (95 for 6) v. "G" A.A. BTY. R.G.A. (23). The R.G.A. went in first, but nobody was able to do much against the excellent bowling of Barr, who was ably assisted at the other end by Eade. At one time Barr's average was 5 for 3, and he finished up with 8 wickets for 8 runs. The chief scores for M.G.'s were Hughes 23, Pullen 19, Falkinham 13 not out, Freeman 11 not out, Cpl. Halbert 10.

CAV. DIV. A.C. v. 53 NORTHUMBERLAND FUS. Cav. D.A.C. beat the 53rd Northumberland Fusiliers by 10 runs. Batting first on a fast wicket, the Gunners found rungetting difficult, Grey playing a unique innings of 12 scored in two strokes, both sixes. The 53rd scored 20 for their first wicket, playing very carefully, before the tea interval. However, the bowling of Bush and Price proved too good for them, and their tail failed to wag effectively. During the match, Rice secured his 100th wicket this season for the Gunners.

17th LANCERS (118) v. 70 SQ., R.A.F. (81). For 17th Lancers, Sergt. Shenstone scored 19; S.Q.M.S. Wyeth played a brisk innings of 22. Capt. Booles took 6 wickets for 23 runs. Col. Robertson played a good innings of 40 and Sergt. Welsh scored 11 for R.A.F.

RUNNING AND WALKING.

The vastly increased popularity of athletics gives hope for a boom in distance running and walking, and it is hoped to arrange county and district cross-country championships in many areas in the British Isles, and also to develop road walking, by holding novices' and open races at outlying centres. The R.W.A. will hold a junior championship during the autumn, but not until the Brighton walks are over. The National Cross Country Union is also due to meet shortly to consider the future and make any necessary alterations in competition rules.

In the tennis doubles finals played at Newton (Mass.), Messrs. Brookes and Patterson (Australia) defeated Messrs. Johnston and Griffin, 10—8, 9—7, 7—5. The Australians will meet Messrs. Tilden and Richards for the championship of the United States.

JUMPING HINDENBURG LINE.

Claim In Favour Of Charger B.30 Disputed.

With reference to the claim that the charger B.30, recently exhibited at Aldershot Command Show, was the first horse to jump the Hindenburg Line. This is now disputed, the rivals saying the honour now rests with reconnaissance parties of the R.H. and the R.F.A., who went over the systems north of La Vacquerie on the morning of the opening day for the first battle of Cambrai. By noon the whole of the batteries were over and there was no need therefore for those who followed to do any jumping.

The New Zealand Rugby Union have voted for the abolition of the wing forward and for the ball to be put into the scrum by the referee. The former was always a nuisance in the game, and his general disappearance will never be regretted.

OLYMPIA BOXING.

Charles Ledoux—Walter Ross Match Postponed.

CHANGE IN BIG PROGRAMME.

There has been a change in the big programme for Olympia on September 2. Instead of the European bantam-weight championship between Charles Ledoux and Walter Ross, Mr. C. Cochran has arranged to stage a 20-round contest between Johnny Basham, of Wrexham, holder of the Lonsdale welter-weight belt, and Francis Charles, welter-weight champion of France.

This also will be for the championship of Europe, although a Swiss gentleman named Badoud may claim some consideration when this title is in question. The reason for the change of programme is that Ledoux has hurt his hand and may not be able to box for some time to come, and Mr. Cochran is determined to take no chance of disappointing the public on the big night.

The Basham-Charles match had originally been planned for the Holborn Stadium later in the month, but the Ledoux-Ross contest will be kept for the Stadium. Francis Charles will train for 10 days prior to the contest with McGoorty at Stanmore.

BECKETT AND A BELT.

Joe Beckett, heavy weight champion of Great Britain, is the only holder of an English boxing title who does not at present possess a Lonsdale Belt. In earlier days he fought Dick Smith for the light weight trophy, but in that encounter he was defeated and the honour was denied him. Neither of his recent successful contests with Billy Wells and Frank Goddard secured for him the coveted prize in the heavy weight class, Wells having previously won his Belt out-right while the fight with Goddard was not a Belt contest.

In all probability, however, Beckett will, during the coming season, defend his title at the National Sporting Club and make a bold bid for the possession of the Gold Girdle. Who will be his opponent is a matter purely for conjecture at present but two of three "heavies" are mentioned. Both Wells and Goddard have intimated a desire to once again cross swords with the champion.

Owing to an injury to the forearm in the Leicester v. Notts match at Loughton, A.T. Sharp, the Leicester amateur, has decided to take no further part in county cricket this season.

John Berry Hobbs, the well-known Surrey professional, received his benefit from the match against Kent at the Oval, which commenced on Monday and concluded yesterday.

Fifteen thousand people attended on the opening day, when a collection made on the ground realised £171.

Hobbs is one of the leading personalities in present day first-class cricket; as a result of sheer hard work he has acquired a thorough mastery of a great game and rarely disappoints his many admirers. The popular Surrey professional is probably at his best as a fast run getter: he possesses an enterprising temperament and never permits circumstances, however apparently disquieting, to influence his play. As an England player, Hobbs has reached the zenith of attainment at the comparatively early age of 37; he should have several years of first class cricket ahead. He is a native of Cambridgeshire.

The Younger Generation.

"The Younger Generation" is almost the jolliest play that the Rhine Army Dramatic Society has yet given us, and perhaps it is the best. It is, with the possible exception of "Candida," the most serious and the most like real life; it is full of fun from start to finish, not the fantasy and paradox of "Man and Superman" or "The Importance of Being Earnest," or the satire of "The Title," but shrewd homely humour about humdrum people. The kind, but worrying parents, to whom a visit to a (not tee-total) hotel in Liverpool is a wild debauch, and the sons who kick against the restraints of their chapel-going home and think that freedom means getting drunk or living "a man's life" in some vague overseas dominion—most of us know these people, or are these people ourselves. Perhaps Stanley Houghton is a bit too much on the side of the Younger Generation, who have their faults of conceit, bumptiousness and inconsiderateness, and it is not altogether clear how Cologne is more enlightened than Manchester simply because the theatre here is open on Sunday. (Incidentally, Cologne is the most religious large town in Germany.) But it is a first rate play, and an appreciative audience missed none of the good things on Monday night.

Mr. J. H. Hope was in his element as the gently nagging, respectable father. He sometimes put on the shocked expressions of the conventional stage parson; but otherwise his performance was nearly as good as his inimitable Mr. Baxter. Miss Bensusan was as competent as ever in the small part of the mother, while Major Ford was easy and natural as the uncle from emancipated Cologne.

Miss Chisholm was effective as the domineering old grandmother. Let us hope that we are to see her and Major Ford in subsequent productions of the company. Mr. Percy played the part of Arthur, the elder son, with all his accustomed verve, and was particularly good when he appeared as the non-repentant son, indisposed as a result of his evening out. Mr. D. A. Onions scored a great success as Reggie, the younger son, who showed his independence in a milder way than his brother by dining out with a friend at a total cost of "twelve shillings and twopence for two persons"—To quote his father. Miss Shirley King acted with her usual grace and skill as the daughter of the house, while Miss Gabrielle Paul made a pert housemaid. Captain Gordon Blight, whose one-act play will precede "The Younger Generation" on Thursday evening, was effective as Clifford Rawson, "the fiancé." The other parts were capably played by Lieut. H. L. Farnell, and Lieut. Lingford. The play was admirably produced and appropriately dressed.

Starlight Concert Party.

If the testimony of the Cavalry Division and the VI Corps can be relied upon, something really good will be coming to the Palace Theatre, Cologne, next week in the "Starlights" the Light Division Concert Party. Lieut. C. D. Piper, Rifle Brigade, is in charge of the party, while the musical side is in the capable hands of Lieut. A. B. Tonnochy. The troupe of ten includes four or five professionals.

To Be Restored.

The famous Dollymount links, of the Royal Dublin Club, which have been in military occupation during the war, will shortly be handed back to the club.

No Penalty.

So lately as last May there was a rule in force on one of the best-known courses laid out over the Bagshot sand, whereby a ball which stuck where it fell through the green might be lifted and dropped without penalty.

Trainer's Resignation.

J. W. Sutcliffe, the international goalkeeper, has resigned his position as trainer of the Bradford City F.C., and George Robinson, who formerly played half-back for the club, has been obtained to succeed him.

No Wagers Recorded.

Whether because of the circumstance that ante-post speculation is rapidly becoming a thing of the past or owing to the lack of enterprise on the part of the present-day bookmaker in "opening out" on future events, the fact remains that within less than a month of the decision of the race not a single wager has been recorded on the St. Leger.

Sheffield Wednesday.

Sheffield Wednesday players have begun their training, among those who have reported at headquarters being David McLean.

W. Baker.

W. Baker, who played for Derby County in 1914-15, has again thrown in his lot with the club. During last season Baker was on the left wing with Morley for Brentford F.C., champions of the London Combination

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

A Bank Run.

Yesterday owing to the continued depreciation of the value of the mark extraordinarily busy scenes were witnessed at Messrs. Cox & Co. and Messrs. Cook & Son. An announcement that the rate of exchange had gone up caused a veritable run on "Uncle's" and at one period of the morning, officers were forced to wait outside the bank, the interior being full.

What To Read.

With reference to recent correspondence on the subject of reading, the soldier's taste in literature can be more accurately gauged from the demands made at army libraries than in any other way. What seems to be most wanted are modern novels of a bright and amusing type, and while, to see the classics being ignored would be a deplorable thing, there are among modern writers many who are not only interesting but stimulating and instructive as well. The books of such writers as H. G. Wells, Arnold Bennett, Neil Munro, Eden Philpots and others combine pleasure with profit.

The Price of Foodstuffs.

Those individuals in England who spend so much time in striking for more pay and grumbling at the consequently high price of foodstuffs would get much cheap food for reflection if they paid a visit to Germany. A glance at the windows of the provision shops in the Rhineland towns shows the startling price of the chief commodities; and allowing for the different weights and currencies the prices worked out in English values are as follows:— Butter (fresh) 9/- to 10/- per lb. (Inferior) 6/- to 7/-. Cheese averages 8/6 per lb, bacon 12/- per lb and tinned milk 3/6 per tin. A correspondent suggests that perhaps those at home may get some consolation from these figures. Anyway they might have been worse off. For example they might have been on the losing side.

Tabloid Flying Knowledge,

A very useful handy book for all who are interested in aviation has just reached us and we recommend it highly. It is Jane's "Pocket Aeronautical Dictionary" which can be had from Messrs. Sampson Low & Marston London, for 1/6. Everything connected with air travel is arranged in alphabetical order and explained tersely and clearly, and there is besides a glossary of English and French technical terms. Very useful too are the four large-scale plans of flying machines. An hour spent in perusing this pocket encyclopadia will give you a grasp of all essential points about flying and flying machines.

Equipment in the Rhine.

One hears many tales about the condition of the German army on its retreat following the armistice, and anyone who came to the Rhine by road, as did the writer, could see that their morale was bad, for oad bits of equipment were scattered all along the roads. A fresh proof was given last week-end when a soldier fishing in the Rhine had a curious "bite," in the shape of a cavalry sword! A civilian who happened to see the incident, informed him that the bed of the river must be strewn with war material, for it seemed to be the general practice of the beaten German troops, when crossing by the bridges, to strip off every scrap of equipment, and heave it into the Rhine.

National War Savings Committee.

The National War Savings Committee contemplate the preparation of a new lecture entitled "Our Watch on the Rhine" and are most anxious to receive copies of photographs from which lantern slides, illustrating such a lecture, could be made. With many cameras in every unit, there must be a plethora of suitable material and we shall be delighted to receive copies of suitable photographs which we will forward to the Committee. Any photographs illustrating life out here will be welcome but we would like to receive a few showing men crowding round to buy War Savings Certificates. This hint will be sufficient to those units who are continually breaking records in the War Savings line and we expect a mail loaded with photographs. Please address them to W.E.R. c/o Editor, Cologne Post, A.P.O., S.40, British Army of the Rhine.

German Business Method.

There are various business methods adopted, with reference to cost accounts but the one that seems to be pre-eminent is that of a duplicate cash register as used in a number of business establishments in Rhineland. There is the large motor-driven register by which the value of the article sold is stamped, by pressing the required key on the keyboard. The register is used by the waiter while an assistant at the counter has a similar register but smaller. It is quite obvious that at the end of the day, the takings should be equal. Fraudulency is thus avoided. Another example is that where the purchaser having selected an article, is given a ticket with the price of the article purchased which is taken to the cashier. A similar register is used in this case. After paying the cash he is handed a receipt stamped by the register. Meanwhile the article has been transferred to the packing department. This receipt is then taken to the packer who hands over the article after proof that it has been paid for. Each department checks the other. We have no knowledge of this method in England, but it is well worth copying despite the fact that additional assistants are required.

Is it a Record?

The amount of the War Savings Certificates purchased by the 18th Bn. K.R.R.C. continues to grow. The keenness to outdo the previous weeks record has resulted in the magnificent total of 32,330 marks being subscribed for the week ending August 9th. Of this, "H. Q." Coy contributed the sum of 11,285 marks. Is not this the record amount subscribed so far?

A Coincidence.

A young guard stationed at Schaberg was reading in the "Cologne Post" about the intrepid airman, who daringly flew under the L'Arc de Triomphe in Paris. Suddenly the hum of an engine was heard and before he could realise what was happening, an aeroplane swooped down and to the amazement of the onlooker, flew under the centre arch of the Kaiser Wilhelm Bridge. Before the onlookers had had time to recover from their astonishment, the plane shot up again and quickly disappeared.

How Wives can get to Cologne.

Many, both rank and file are groping in the dark as to the procedure to be adopted in the above matter. Application must first be made through the usual channels and in due course a wife is communicated with direct from the Passport office in London and particulars are sent to her. The officer or man who is taking advantage of this privilege should note this and not expect to have the papers returned to him for transmission to his wife. Until recently it has taken a month to complete the above preliminary arrangements.

The best Route.

The best route is from Charing Cross via Ostend and Brussels to the frontier, the train leaving Charing Cross at 8.45 a.m. and connecting with the boat which arrives in Ostend at 3.30 p.m. The night can be spent in Ostend. If this is done the traveller can leave by an ordinary train the next day and break the journey at Brussels and spend an hour or two looking round this famous city and then proceed to Cologne, arriving about 10 p.m. If, however, you wish to complete the journey the same day there is a through train from Ostend to Cologne, which leaves Ostend at 4.40 p.m. just an hour and ten minutes after landing. This is a most convenient train, for it arrives in Cologne at 1 a.m., only about 16 hours from the time of departure at Charing Cross to the finish of the journey.

The Fare.

The first class fare single ticket from Charing Cross to Ostend is £2-3-10, the third class therefore being about half that amount. The fare from Ostend to Cologne is abnormally cheap being only eight francs. The traveller can book a berth in a sleeping car for an extra 20 francs but seeing the journey is concluded at 1 a.m. this is not necessary. If the husband wishes to meet his wife he can get leave to do so, and a movement order will be given to him on which will be written "Payment of fare beyond the frontier." There is a train leaving Cologne at 11.30 p.m. arriving at Brussels where he will change, at 5 a.m. and will arrive in Ostend in ample time to meet the afternoon boat. As regards accommodation in Cologne. The Central Y.M.C.A. is open to assist the wives of men to secure rooms and to help them in every way. This is one more instance of the splendid work carried on, and the great thoughtfulness of the Y.M.C.A. for the welfare of the men.

Lesser Echoes.

"Puzzled" writes suggesting that a standard price for cigarettes should be charged in all canteens. He complains that the price of a popular brand varies from 75 pfgs. for the smallest packet, the lowest price being that chargeable by the N.A.C.B.

* * *

A soldier recently went into a Cologne shop and was served with a cup of coffee. He took a taste of the liquid and put down the cup hurriedly. "Heiss?" the waitress inquired. "Ice!" he replies, "No! That's just what it aint, it's blooming 'ot!"

* * *

The latest fashion of short or rather no sleeves is favoured by the Cologne flapper. One was to be seen on Sunday exhibiting arms which might with advantage have been covered.

* * *

"First to join you and the last to leave you" read the farewell message of the 1st Divisional American troops bound for the coast on Saturday and addressed to French troops. The first American troops, of course.

* * *

Officers travelling on the Cologne Boulogne express and occupying berths near the windows should be wary as to what they hang on the pegs near by. Several cases of theft have occurred lately.

* * *

While many fräuleins do not boast of low necked blouses the idea is popular with males of the wandering minstrel type. A party carrying musical instruments and bound for the country looked delightfully cool in these open neck creations.

Prizes for Echoes.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's prizes have been awarded to: Pte. A. Fraser R.A.S.C. (M.T.) 20th M.A.C. Rhine Army; Cpl. E. Fisher D. of S. & T., G.H.Q. Rhine Army; and L/Cpl. G. Y. Farquhar, 18th K.R.R.C.

THE ECONOMIC OUTLOOK IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Leonard J. Reid of the staff of the "Economist," in reviewing the present outlook, and frankly admitting the difficulties and troubles of the moment, proceeds:—

Nevertheless, I confess myself to be among the unshaken optimists, and I find, even in recent events, support for my optimism. Over and over again during the war and before it, industrial and economic conditions in this country moved to the very edge of a catastrophe.

But just at the very moment when catastrophe seemed inevitable, the common sense of the people woke up, reasserted itself and the crisis was safely passed. I can see at this moment unmistakeable signs that salvation from threatening troubles is at hand. Parliament and Press, and still more conversations in all places where men meet together show that the country is becoming thoroughly, though tardily, aroused to the danger of the situation.

The ordinary commonsense body of national opinion—which, when really roused, reduces always to impotence the efforts in this country of all agitators and make-troubles—is aroused to the unpleasant fact that work and thrift, production and careful living is the only programme which can assure the future prosperity of the country.

The nation has been relaxing its efforts since the Armistice. It has, as it were, been making holiday. This period too is the traditional time of holidays. But the realization of economic facts is everywhere steadily gaining ground and there is every reason to hope that before Autumn gives way to Winter, the nation as a whole will have set itself to the task of applying its enormously increased manufacturing resources to the active work of mass production.

Hard work, and public and private economy alone can pave the way to a lower cost of living—except in-so-far as sheer profiteering is guilty; and the Government have now devised a scheme for curbing the profiteer.

We are, perhaps, too much inclined both to ignore the fact that every nation on earth is now going through similar or worse troubles, and also to let our eyes dwell too much upon the excrescences of discontent and disturbance upon the surface, and to ignore the preparations for recovery and the good omens which lie below the surface. During the whole of July, to take an instance, British industrial and commercial concerns were financing themselves for new work or expansion. During July there were no less than 130 new issues of capital in London, the total sum raised thereby being nearly £63 millions sterling.

Many important concerns appear on the list and these offers were eagerly taken up by the public. Among these issues one of the most interesting to those who watch British affairs from abroad is the new floatation of the British Overseas Bank. This is a new concern with a strong directorate and an excellent backing from a number of great London banks who have taken up large blocks of shares. Its object is to devote itself entirely to financing British Overseas trade, and it will doubtless take care to provide financial facilities for British trade in foreign markets better than was enjoyed before the war.

If, and when, the nation really settles down to steady work—it will find abundant outlet for the products of its industry. Evidence of this fact could be quoted interminably, but I will content myself with taking the cotton industry as an example. Expert observers in Manchester state that, despite higher prices and all other obstacles, demand is the dominant feature in the cotton markets.

High prices and consequent industrial troubles are, after all, the common experience in most countries. The world is adjusting itself temporarily to the present position, just as we shall all slowly—not in the twinkling of an eye, but steadily—adjust ourselves to the exacting requirements of peaceful recuperation. Relaxation and agitation have marked the post-Armistice period; and, although this period is unfortunately not yet over, we are, I believe, nearing the next phase—the phase of vigorous reconstruction.

FAMOUS BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Some time ago Clark's College, that most useful centre for the training of future successful business men, planned an ambitios scheme for the training and finishing of those who had been compelled to spend several of the most vital years of their life in the war. Since that time many hundreds of ex-soldiers have passed through the college, into remunerative business positions, some receiving personal tuition at the College itself, some availing themselves of the practical and efficient postal tuition whilst still serving. At the present time numbers of demobilized men are passing out through this channel into business and the Civil Service, but many soldiers in Rhineland are apparently not aware that they can commence to train at once and have the benefit of instruction from this famous educational institution, even whilst over here. On returning home we understand, soldiers may either continue the postal tuition or attend personally at one of the Clark's Colleges in London or elsewhere. Any soldier who writes to the Demobilization Dept. Clark's College, 126, Chancery Lane, London, W.C. 2, mentioning the "Cologne Post," will receive every possible assistance and advice and all information as to how he may commence at once.

ARMY COUNCIL'S FAREWELL.

WAR MINISTER'S BUSY RHINELAND TOUR FINISHES.

ARMY COUNCIL.

STRENUOUS TOUR OF RHINELAND CONTINUES.

Mr. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War, with members of the Army Council and Staff, including Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, Gen. Sir G. M. W. MacDonough and Sir Philip Chetwode (Military Secretary) continued his busy tour in Rhineland yesterday.

In the morning a visit was paid to Eil where a display by the 20th Squadron R.A.F. was watched with considerable interest. The party then proceeded to Bonn, visited the X Corps, after which their arrival in Remagen was welcomed with a salute of nineteen guns. The return journey to Cologne was made down the Rhine by steamer.

In the evening the distinguished visitors dined in the VI Corps Club with a number of senior officers after which there were several speeches.

Many people were present at Cologne Main station at 11 p.m. to watch the party leave. The ex-Kaiser's private entrance, decorated with palms and flowers, was used.

On No. 1 Platform, there was a Guard of Honour of 100 men of the 52nd D.L.I., Northern Div. under the command of Capt. Moore, M.C., and the salute was given as the War Minister entered the station and when the train moved off.

On the previous day, Romerhof, and Libiar were visited. At the former place, the party was received by the IX Corps Commander and G.O.C. Midland Division. The 1st Midland Brigade was then inspected.

INSPECTION AT RIEHL.

Lt.-General Sir Aylmer Haldane, K.C.B., D.S.O., commanding the VI Corps, inspected the 3rd. Battalion Machine Gun Corps at the Pioneer Barracks, Riehl yesterday morning. In 1914, 1915 and part of 1916, General Haldane commanded the 3rd. Division, subsequently taking over the VI. Corps, and in an address to the battalion, he stated that his association with it went right back to its formation. He paid glowing tribute to the unit's efficiency both on active service, and under the present conditions. He hoped those who found their way into civil life would carry with them that splendid spirit of comradeship that had made their battalion what it was, and hoped that the 3rd. would not cease to exist as a unit. No one knew what the future held, but he wished them all every success. In closing he expressed his thanks to Col. Cranston and Officers, Non-commissioned officers and men of the Battalion for the way in which they had carried out their duties. As General Haldane left the parade ground rousing cheers were given.

WARSAW'S WIRELESS STATION.

It is stated that a scheme is now under consideration by the Polish Government in Warsaw for the establishment of a central wireless station in the neighbourhood of the Polish capital.

American financiers have already evinced interest in the project, and delegates from the Polish Government have been invited by private enterprises in the United States to discuss the matter. These delegates have already left for America on this mission. Offers have been received from the German Government for the construction of the station, but, although the price quoted is some eight times lower than the figure given by other European countries, these proposals are being held in reserve pending the outcome of the negotiations in the United States, as it is naturally considered preferable that the work should, if possible, be carried out by an Allied country.

EX-KAISER'S ABDICATION.

Herr Wahnschaffe, formerly secretary to Herr von Bethmann Hollwegg, publishes in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung a letter which he addressed to the Director of the Foreign Office, Dr. Simons, on Aug. 2, dealing with the events in connection with the abdication question in the early days of November last. In the letter he describes the efforts of the Chancellor, Prince Max of Baden, to circumvent the Supreme Army Command's plan of getting the Kaiser to headquarters.

5-YEAR EMBARGO ON ALIENS.

An amendment to the Commonwealth Immigration Act, which has been introduced in the Federal House of Representatives provides that all persons of former enemy parentage or nationality shall not be admitted into the Commonwealth for a period of five years.

VI CORPS SUCCESS.

TATTOO AT LINDENTHAL IN IDEAL CONDITIONS.

Tuesday night saw the third presentation of the Military Tattoo at Lindenthal by troops of the VI Corps. The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill and members of the Army Council were present. Favoured by the weather and the extension of the hours of circulation, large numbers of the German population flocked to Lindenthal to witness this spectacle. One might almost say that the civil element was as strong in numbers as the military.

The same programme was carried out as on the two previous occasions, it would indeed have been difficult to improve on it. The night was as dark as could be wished, the torches showing up to the full advantage, a most charming and fairylandish effect being produced by the evolutions carried out.

Reminiscent of Past Days.

The pyrotechnic display was a great success. From the time the first rocket rushed skywards until 'cease fire' sounded, it was easily possible to read a newspaper in any part of the ground, so profuse were the rockets. The pall of smoke that hung over the ground at the conclusion of this display, together with the red flares, reminded one of less happy days, when we had also witnessed firework displays of a different nature.

The splendid rendering of the various marches by the massed bands of twelve battalions under Mr. Cooney, Senior Bandmaster, London Division added not a little to the enjoyment of the evening. Great pains must have been spent in training the torch bearers, whose work reflected much credit on those responsible. The drum and fife bands were from the London Division, bugle bands from the Northern Division, Guards were supplied by the 1st and 2nd. Northern Infantry Brigades, 9th D.L.I. and VI Corps Cyclists Bn. whilst the torch bearers came from the 3rd. Northern Infantry Brigade and the 3rd. Battalion M.G.C.

FRENCH VIEWS.

PERSIAN AGREEMENT DISTURBS PARIS OPINION.

Commenting upon the agreement concluded between Great Britain and Persia the "Temps" says:

"We read in Article 10 of the Covenant of the League of Nations: "The members of the League undertake to respect and maintain the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the League against any foreign aggression. Farther on, in the annex, we see that Persia figures among the States 'invited to adhere to the Covenant.' In virtue of the Treaty of Versailles, which contains the Covenant of the League of Nations, and has been ratified by the British Parliament, the 'existing political independence' of Persia must therefore be respected. But it is not respected."

Continuing the "Temps" says: "In thus pointing out the legal position we are actuated by no selfish arrière-pensée. Far be from us the idea of saying to our British Allies, 'Offer us compensation elsewhere and our scruples will vanish.'"

"The British Government," the "Temps" concludes, "understands admirably the text and value of a treaty. It entered the war because a treaty had been violated. Did not the British Government see that in conducting at Teheran the long negotiations concerning the Anglo-Persian agreement, while the Persian delegation in Paris waited in vain for the Conference to grant it an audience, there was this indefensible antagonism between the policy it pursued in Persia and the engagements it undertook here. The security of France in the Europe of to-morrow rests partly on an engagement with Great Britain, an engagement attached to the Covenant of the League of Nations. We cannot endure the thought that British promises are subject to discussion, even when they apply to Asia."

SIR CHARLES SYKES' ILLNESS.

Sir Charles Sykes, M.P. underwent an operation at the hands of Sir Berkeley Moynihan, the eminent surgeon, in Leeds yesterday morning. Last night his condition was reported as "fairly confortable and everything satisfactory."

LABOUR TROUBLES.

POSTMEN'S GRIEVANCE.

A demonstration of London Post Office trade unionists, held at Trafalgar-square yesterday afternoon, protested strongly against the recommendations contained in the report dealing with the employment of disabled sailors and soldiers in the Post Office. It was decided not to cease agitating until the report was withdrawn.

U.S. PRESIDENT.

PROPOSED SUCCESSOR TO MR. WILSON.

The name of Mr. John W. Davis, the American Ambassador at the Court of St. James, is being considered by Democratic leaders in the United States for the Presidential nomination next year, as successor to Mr. Wilson.

The leaders believe that there is little chance of success with any nominee taken from among the politicians who have been actively before the public. It is thought that the voters want new blood in their statesmen, and Mr. Davis is being privately discussed as an ideal candidate because, although little known publicly, he has no enemies.

He has consistently made friends throughout his political career, and is a brilliant speaker.

The fact that he is not associated with any extreme Radical group is considered a favourable point by the Democratic leaders, because it is thought the voters will want Conservatism in the White House during the next four years, whether the occupant is a Republican or a Democrat.

If Mr. Davis retires from London it is reported that the Ambassadorship will be offered to Mr. Polk, who has just succeeded Mr. Lansing as head of the American Peace Mission in Paris.

FOR THE MINISTRY.

2,050 SOLDIERS NAMES ON THE REGISTER.

In the summary of proceedings for 1918 of the Central Advisory Council of Training for the Ministry it is stated that the work had naturally centred round the recruiting for the ministry from the forces, and in January last there were 2,050 names on the register of Service candidates, the armistice having brought a very great increase of the number. Two important reports had passed through the council. The first dealt with the cases of men who had suffered from permanent injury at the war, and gave suggestions as to what should or should not be considered as disqualifying a man for the ministry, and the other dealt with the syllabus for study and with the examination of Service candidates. During 1918 men were being helped to courses at Oxford, Cambridge, Durham (St. John's), Ridley Hall, Highbury, Lichfield, Salisbury, Burgh, Mirfield, Cuddesdon, and Bishops' College, Cheshunt. But the number of candidates who had reached this point was naturally very small, and most of them had already chosen their theological colleges when they came before the committee, so that the list given is accidental rather than typicial.

EX-AIR OFFICIAL IN TROUBLE.

DANCES WITH A POLICEMAN.

Charles William Luxton, aged twenty-seven, of Crondall-street, Hoxton, was charged at Old-street on Saturday with being intoxicated.

It was stated that he was dancing and singing with four other men in Crondall-street in the early morning. He caught a constable by the arm and tried to dance him round, too. The divisional surgeon certified him to be intoxicated.

Luxton denied the allegations, but admitted that he had had perhaps six drinks. He said that he had important work to do, and added:—

"I had been selected to stand at the side of Miss Douglas Pennant during a forthcoming inquiry. Until last night I was chief supervisor at the Air Ministry, a position I had to resign, as the responsibility was too great for me. I have been through the war, and won the Military Medal."

It was stated that before the war he was a probationer under the court missionary. He did well, and had not been in trouble since.

Mr. Clarke Hall: "Well, I don't want to tarnish a good record. Pay the doctor's fee. 7s. 6d. There will be no conviction."

Luxton: "Thank you, sir."

ARMY REVOLVERS WANTED.

Army revolvers and pistols are wanted by the Ministry of Munitions. Suitable weapons, .45in and .455in, of service pattern, and made by Messrs. Webley and Scott, Colt, and Smith and Wesson, will be purchased by the Ministry, and persons having any to dispose of should send them by parcel post to the Chief Inspector of Small Arms, Enfield Lock, Middlesex, for valuation. The sender may fix his own price for the pistol, and if not will be offered the price of the valuation.

FOUND AFTER 18 MONTHS.

At the Minnie Pit, Halmer End, Staffordshire, where a disastrous explosion occurred on January 12, 1918, the body of the 153rd victim was brought to the surface yesterday. Only two more bodies now remain in the workings, which will be entirely cleared in a few days.

FISHERMEN'S PROTEST.

Devon and Cornwall fishermen are refusing to go to sea in consequence of profiteering and declare that they are unable to earn a living. Fish which they sell in the morning at two or three shillings a stone is retailed later at 8d or 9d a pound.

LAST FLIGHT.

TWO AIRMEN KILLED IN A RHINELAND CRASH.

On Wednesday, influenced by the fresh morning breeze and bright sunshine, two members of the Royal Air Force climbed into a Rolls-Royce Bristol aeroplane with light hearted happiness. Little did they or the officers and men of the Force who watched them, guess that the hapless airmen were about to take their last trip in this world. Yet such, unhappily, was the case.

Speeding along the turf, the machine rose gently into the air and continued for some distance close to the ground. Then for some unaccountable reason unsteadiness was noticed and the plane crashed. Both the occupants were killed.

DEFEATING FOOD PROFITEER.

Sir Kingsley Wood, M.P. in opening the Beckenham Allotment Society's annual exhibition at the Technical Institute Beckenham, on Saturday afternoon, said undoubtedly Adam was the first allotment holder, and it may well have been that Eve was the first to do a little profiteering in the apple line. (Laughter.) To-day there were well over a million and a half allotment holders, and their efforts were worth half a dozen Acts of Parliament in defeating the food profiteer. It was a public scandal that at such a time evictions were taking place and notices to quit were being showered on thousands of allotment holders.

There were a large number of members of the House of Commons, however, who were very anxious to safeguard, protect, and foster the allotment movement in the country, and he was glad to see that as a result of a discussion which had taken place in the House upon the position of allotment holders in the parks and open spaces, they were to be allowed to remain for another two years.

STRANGE THAMES SCENE.

HORSE DROWNED IN TRYING TO SWIM ACROSS THE RIVER.

The spectacle of a horse attached to a cart in which was the driver, floundering in mid-stream in the Thames caused considerable excitement among hundreds of river-folk near Canbury Promenade, Kingston, yesterday afternoon.

The horse, belonging to Mr. W. Wells, contractor, of Kingston, was taken to the river's edge to drink, and getting suddenly out of its depth, it endeavoured to swim across the river.

It was, however, dragged down by the cart, and both horse and cart disappeared under water.

The driver, Harry Fletcher, managed to jump from the cart, and with difficulty got to the bank, but the horse was drowned.

HOUSING SCHEMES.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES PAY FROM CAPITAL ACCOUNT.

The Ministry of Health have issued General Housing Memorandum No. 2, dealing with the expenditure of local authorities in connection with the preparation and execution of housing schemes by their own staff, under which local authorities may make payments out of capital account to architectural, surveying, or engineering staff temporarily engaged in a whole-time capacity exclusively for the housing scheme, and also to permanent salaried officers of the local authority employed on the scheme. The memorandum is the outcome of representations which were made at the inception of the housing campaign by the Institution of Municipal and County Engineers, which at once recognised that permanent officers of local authorities could not be expected, without suitable remuneration, to undertake a large amount of additional work which would inevitably fall to their share, even when extra assistance was provided. The issue of memorandum will remove a stumbling block, and enable local authorities to allot all the expenses of a housing scheme to the actual scheme.

LONDON ALLOTMENTS.

PROTEST AGAINST PROPOSAL OF THE L.C.C.

Mr. J. Forbes, general secretary, National Union of Allotment Holders, speaking at Brockwell Park yesterday, said the L.C.C. had been persuaded to reverse its previous decision to terminate all the allotments at the end of this year, and had now decided to close down half this year and the remainder next year.

Such a decision was regarded by allotment holders as inequitable and unfair; was against the public interest, in view of the need for food production and the fact that allotment holders were helping to stamp out profiteering in vegetable food; was contrary to the assurances given to allotment holders, and was leading to friction.

The L.C.C. he said, had been one of the most unsympathetic authorities administering the allotments orders.

The meeting unanimously agreed to press, in co-operation with the National Union of Allotment Holders, for tenure for two years from the termination of the war.

RETURNED LOOT.

GERMANY STARTS TO DISGORGE STOLEN GOODS.

A Geneva correspondent wires that Germany has begun to disgorge the goods stolen in Northern France during the four years' occupation by the Crown Prince and German traders—from generals down to private soldiers.

Almost daily since the month of June wagons laden with such miscellaneous goods as machinery, utensils, tapestry and jewels have been passing through Switzerland and across the Rhine to France.

It is estimated that over 100,000 tons of material have already been delivered up by the Germans, who continue to examine each French claim by a special commission installed at Wiesbaden.

The restored goods are worth many millions sterling, but only about one-fifth has yet been delivered.

Four acres of King's Wood, adjoining the historic Leeds Castle, near Maidstone, have been destroyed by fire.

BOGUS "V.C."

WELL DECORATED MAN CHARGED IN LONDON.

A young man attired as an officer of the Royal Air Force, who was said to have been masquerading as a war hero, was brought before Sir John Dickinson, at Bow-street, yesterday, on a charge of wearing military uniform, without authority. He was described on the charge-sheet as Ian Irvine Barclay, aged 23, electrician, of St. Margaret's Hope, Ronaldshay, Orkney.

Detective-inspector Alfred Collins, C.I.D., attached to the War Office, said the accused was brought to the Horse Guards on Thursday, where he was interviewed before Major Thunder. He was then attired in the full uniform of an officer of the Royal Air Force, and was wearing, besides badges indicating the rank of major, the ribbons of the following decorations, viz., Victoria Cross, D.S.O., M.C., Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Force Cross, Air Force Medal, 1918, Mons Star, and General Service, also the Victory ribbon, five service chevrons, pilot's wings, and two wound stripes. Defendant represented himself as Major Ian Irvine Barclay, V.C., of the Royal Air Force, and produced two visiting cards bearing that name and description. No entry corresponding to that description could be found in the lists of the Royal Air Force or the V.C. Defendant had made other statements to the effect that he had been presented with the V.C. by the King in person at an investiture at Buckingham Palace, and he had pretended to describe the circumstances in which he won the distinction. Eventually however, when witness told him he believed he was masquerading, he admitted his story was untrue, and said he had never been in the Army, that he bought the uniform a week or two ago at Gamage's, and that he had since been staying at the Savoy Hotel. Previously he had lived with his father, a schoolmaster, in Orkney. In defendant's possession was found a cheque drawn in his favour for £200 purporting to be signed by "George Smart," but defendant admitted he had filled it in himself.

Defendant now said that when the war was going on he was living at St. Andrews, where people were always taunting him about not being in the Army, although as a matter of fact he had tried to join several times and had been before four medical boards, but had always been rejected on account of heart trouble. That was why he bought the uniform, thinking it would make people believe he had really been in the Army, but he admitted he had acted foolishly.

Sir John Dickinson said he could not accept that story, considering that the war finished in November and that the uniform was only obtained a fortnight ago. He ordered a remand to enable the police to make further inquiries.

HAUNTED BY AIR RAIDS.

Stated to have been so much upset by air raids that she had not been able to sleep well since, and to have been haunted by the fear that there would be a repetition at some future time, Alice Esther Crowley, 55, a house-keeper, of Canonbury, committed suicide by gas poisoning.

At the inquest yesterday it was stated that the woman had been suffering from neurasthenia, and although she had never threatened her life she had expressed sympathy with "suicides," who, she thought, were plucky people.

A letter in her handwriting ran: "I am so sorry for giving all this trouble. Pray do forgive me. . . . I am so ill, but not insane."

PETERLOO CENTENARY.

Manchester celebrated on Saturday the centenary of Peterloo, that tragic episode in the industrial history of the country which caused so great an upheaval. A crowd of Manchester workers, it will be recalled, gathered together on Peter's fields to urge great reforms, and were dispersed by Yeomanry with drawn sabres. A number of people were killed and several hundreds injured. There was a mass demonstration on Saturday in one of the city's parks. As the procession passed the Free Trade Hall, which stands on the site of Peterloo, hats were raised and the "Red Flag" was sung.

JEWEL THEFT.

MUCH WANTED MAN AND HYDE PARK ROBBERY.

In the course of a statement to the police Hilda Harris declared: "I was upstairs packing when Collinson went down and got the jewellery. But I had part of the money, and I will take the blame." Evidence to this effect was given on Saturday at Marylebone, when Detective Pearce added:—

"A man now awaiting trial at Maidstone on two charges of house-breaking at Eastbourne has been concerned with this woman all over the country in various cases of larceny and house-breaking."

Harris, who is twenty-two, is a servant of Pevensey-road, Eastbourne, and was charged with being concerned with Mayne Thomas, otherwise Arthur Collinson (the man referred to), in stealing and receiving jewellery from a house in Cambridge-street, Hyde Park.

Mrs. Townsend, a boarding-house keeper, identified the woman as having stayed at her house with a man in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas. On October 9 they disappeared, and she missed jewellery to the value of £100

RUSSIAN OFFICERS IN COLOGNE.

Russian officers who passed through Cologne on their way to England to train for Koltchak's forces in Russia were regarded with great curiosity in the streets. Most of them have been prisoners in Germany, and, before proceeding East they will undergo a period of training in a camp established for the purpose at Newmarket. The stained and war worn uniforms in which they arrived represent practically every branch of the Russian Army. Some are clad in dilapidated Hussar uniforms, some in the caps and high boots of the Cossack regiments, some are in civilian clothes, and a few have British Army greatcoats. The uniforms of practically all the allied forces are now familiar to most soldiers stationed in Rhineland, but the Russian officers because of their unusual attire excited a great deal of interest.

TRAGEDY IN WALES.

HUSBAND DEAD; WIFE HACKED WITH RAZOR.

Summoned to the house of a collier at Newton, Ebbw Vale, early yesterday morning, the police found Mrs. Annie May Booth suffering from serious throat and wrist wounds, and her husband, Arthur Booth, dead on the bed with a terrible gash in his throat. Near by was a bloodstained razor, and the room showed signs of a struggle.

Booth and his wife, it is said, visited a local cinema on Saturday night. Awakening about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, the wife missed her husband. Thinking he was ill, she got up, and found him in the kitchen smoking and counting his money. She asked him what was the matter, and he replied "Nothing." Both went back to bed, and Mrs. Booth said she was awakened by her husband slashing at her with a razor. She got up, and rushing into the street was taken in by neighbours.

Booth was a discharged soldier, and apparently the couple had lived very happily together.

MOTOR BANDITS.

SMART CAPTURE BY LONDON POLICEMAN.

A gang of motor bandits, whose exploits have been engaging the attention of the London police for some months, have been specialising in stealing rolls of cloth from tailors' shops, and it is estimated that they have got away with something like £40,000 worth.

Their latest adventure was at the tailoring premises of Mr. Arthur Papworth, Holloway-road. Here in the early hours of Friday morning they committed a daring burglary, but the booty, valued at £1,500, was saved by a police constable, Acting-Sergeant Morgan. One of the gang, which numbers five, narrowly escaped capture.

A Ford box car stopped opposite the shop, and the policeman saw several men carrying bundles across the pavement. He tackled them single-handed, but they all bolted, though one received a heavy blow on the neck from his truncheon. In the car, which was captured, £600 worth of cloth was found, with some jemmies. Iron gates at the shop's entrance were found smashed, and the door damaged through being forced.

AUTUMN FOOD SITUATION.

It is announced by the Ministry of Food that the thirteenth Labour Conference to be held at the County Hall, Westminster, will not be convened for an earlier date than the third or the last Saturday in September. The Food Controller hopes to preside at the conference, and to make a statement on the autumn situation.

Mr. Gilbert Miller writes pointing out that Mr. Rupert D'Oyly Carte is entirely responsible for the forthcoming production of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas at the Princes Theatre.

LOOKING AHEAD.

One of the features of German cities which must strike even the most casual observer is the high degree of perfection Germany has attained in the art of town planning.

The question of advancement in this way is one of the problems to which the Ministry of Reconstruction is applying itself, and a recent pamphlet issued on the subject shows that it has been approached in no haphazard manner.

The central idea is the building of streets in such a way as to facilitate future expansion, and from this point of view Germany has certainly looked further ahead than most countries.

According to the Town Planning Bill of 1919 every local authority must undertake a housing scheme so that the importance of an increased understanding of the best systems is clear. Certain broad principles must be observed. As an instance the advantage of having a standard width for different types of streets is obvious. By this means certain main arteries can be used for traffic which can be almost wholly diverted from the residential roads.

A definite system of development, too, gives landowners comparative security against loss resultant on the depreciation of the surrounding district. In many cases a street of artistic and up-to-date dwellings has suddenly gone down in value because an adjacent owner has erected a factory, or a row of houses of a meaner type. Scientific town planning provides ample safeguards against this.

A modern development of town planning is the erection of garden cities and garden suburbs, and public opinion is gradually veering round in favour of this idea. Bournville and Port Sunlight are notable examples. Garden suburbs at Hampstead and Letchworth followed and that the future holds great possibilities in this direction cannot be doubted.

The importance of the future preservation of gardens and open spaces is being more and more realised and in this way most continental cities excel those of Great Britain. The street-gardens of Cologne make a good illustration of this and they do much to beautify the city.

A great deal has been said during the war about making our country a place "fit for heroes," and surely there could be no better monument to those who fell in the war than a united effort to make our towns more healthy, more beautiful and more convenient.

It is to be hoped that as the result of that effort, the time will come when comfortable and sanitary dwellings will be the right of everybody. As some one has said "If Egypt could plan towns for the benefit of her slaves four thousand years ago, can England do less for her free men today."

A REMINDER.

PLEA FOR BRITISH FACTORIES.

Before the dawn, in drenching rain we were ordered to advance from the front line trenches in defence of Ypres—glorious "Wipers." Our movement was quickly spotted by the enemy and a sharp rattle up of machine guns and heavies followed. As we groped our way in the darkness, a shrieking shell burst in our midst and the captain was amongst the victims. "Go on lads, don't stop for me, my work is ended—good bye, and God speed." And so passed away one of the most gallant of the "Contemptibles."

A few moments later we were at grips with the enemy; as many as could, beat a hasty retreat, the remainder were beyond the power of recording their opinion of a British cavalry regiment in action, unmounted.

Four years later, almost to the day, the armistice is signed and the guns silenced. An army of occupation is on the banks of the Rhine and the successors to the gallant contemptibles are there to hold that which has been won by such bravery and at such tremendous sacrifice.

The Germans, unashamed, come forward with their wares and invite our splendid fellows to buy them. Tempting offers of cameras, field glasses and other articles, which for the present may be difficult to obtain from good old Britain, are lavishly displayed. But it is surely unthinkable that any of the sons of the noble British Empire will yield to any such specious offers. Lest forgetfulness should betray any of them, it may be opportune to relate what the British manufacturer of some of these articles that the Germans are anxious to dispose of have been doing during the great conflict.

All the British factories devoted to optical instruments and photographic apparatus at once turned their plants over to the production of munitions of war and achieved astonishing results. Optical glass of finest quality had hitherto been almost entirely made in Germany, and the industry was heavily subsidized by the German government. In a few months British scientists in collaboration with the glass workers produced a better quality of optical glass than anything the Germans had ever turned out.

This quickly led to the production by British optical works of photographic lenses of a far greater efficiency than any German lenses. Our wonderful airmen thus equipped proved themselves vastly superior to the enemy airmen, and their photographic surveys of the lines, camouflaged batteries, and the like, surpass anything accomplished during the war.

Prismatic field glasses, gunsights and periscopes were also rapidly produced to equip the armies of the Allies as well as the British forces. All of a quality certainly equal, and in many cases superior, to those in use by the enemy. This, despite the fact that Germany had been preparing such equipment years before the eventful August 1914.

British camera works abandoned the supplies of instruments for the peaceful requirements of amateur and professional photographers, and concentrated upon the production of aerial cameras, notably the gun camera, which enabled young recruits to become efficient marksmen in the air without firing a single bullet. What the promise of enormous supplies of such accurate scientific instruments meant to the cause of the Allies, history will record. Suffice it to say that in no instance were our enemies able to match the British manufacturers either in quality or speed of production. The glass and optical works and camera factories have been enormously increased in size during the war and the most accurate machinery and apparatus installed for rapid reproduction work. This was essential to cope with the unparalleled demand for supplies, and now that the war is over those facilities are being transformed as quickly as possible to apply them to the production of those instruments which the Germans are endeavouring to supply at the expense of the British manufacturers.

A little patience and supplies will be freely forthcoming, and, be it remembered, of a quality equal to, if not superior to anything the German or anyone else can produce. Think of the demobilized men for whom employment must be found in the old country, of the sacrifices made by those who were able to answer the call to fight, and of the splendid service rendered by the British manufacturers at the expense of the good will of their ordinary business, and there will be no temptation to become possessed of a German camera or of a pair of German binoculars.

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

VII. NIDEGGEN.

It is the Matlock of Rhineland and once seen will never be forgotten. You proceed to Düren and there change, the rest of the journey taking about forty-five minutes.

The train from Düren runs through a lovely valley, on either side of which are heather covered hills and forests. Some parts of the journey remind one of Devonshire, for the earth is red and there is also red sandstone.

There are many picturesque villages and farms nestling under the hills which make the journey all the more interesting; the harvest fields too delight the eye at this season of the year. As the train rounds a curve, one is thrilled by a vision of incomparable beauty.

Towering to great heights are huge rocks of curious shapes, nature's sentinels guarding the rich and fertile valley. They remind one of Wharncliffe Crags, the beauty spot near Sheffield. Far away stretch mighty forests and purple clad moors. On the top of a huge rock, which rises sheer from the heart of the mountain is an ancient castle dating from 1267. Ruined walls indicate the more distant line of fortifications round this stronghold and there is a tower which has weathered the storms of ages. Near by can be seen the spire of a church and far across the valley on the opposite range of mountains there is another.

We leave the station, which is crowded with civilian visitors, and walk to the lower part of the village where there is evidence of the presence of Highland troops for on a whitewashed cottage you see painted "Seaforth Strasse." Someone gifted with imagination has so renamed the spot for an arrow indicates "The Valley of the Moon."

Along this valley runs a beautiful stream. You cross it by an ancient stone bridge, on which is the carved figure of a monk, and you enter "Johnnie Walker Strasse." On the right is a huge wooden wheel connected with a water-mill, and there is a rushing mountain torrent.

High walls, the origin of which cannot be ascertained with certainty, surround this little mountain town. It is rich in historical interest, and even in early times, the place must have acquired a more than ordinary importance from its situation.

Passing through an ancient gateway built of red sandstone you enter Nideggen and are struck with its architectural beauty. Here are ancient cottages and modern hotels, where one can obtain refreshment. In the square is a wonderful stone cross surrounded with trees. Its steps are worn hollow and it dates from an early period.

The visitor seems to be plunged suddenly into the mediaeval period as he makes a circuit of the ivy covered walls. A regimental band playing on the slopes of the Castle, awakens memories. Khaki and the green of Alpine dress intermingle in the streets. Here are crowds of civilians who have come from the towns on the plains, and many are carrying bunches of heather. They are revelling in the beauty of the scene. Where could be found a sweeter or more romantic spot; where could the reflective mind find a place richer in historical interest in Rhineland than the walled mountain town of Nideggen?

CAMERA FIENDS.

There are many men in the Rhine Army who do not carry cameras, and they — when their advice on some matter photographical has been rejected — usually dub us "Camera Fiends."

To my mind there is a distinct difference between the "Fiend," and the "Enthusiast."

One beautiful sunny day my camera and I sallied forth to acquire a few really good photographs wherewith to quiet that still, small voice which will one day enquire:—'What did you do in,' etc., but we met George, who enquired, hearkened, and accepted a purely mythical invitation to accompany us.

I suppose that it is needless to say that the Dom was the first objective, but in time I had arranged everything almost to my satisfaction; I say almost, because the camera enthusiast is never entirely satisfied; there is always some unattainable spot wherefrom the perfect photograph could be procured.

Then George's movements made me realise that his ideas of the origin of the Dom were not the commonly accepted ones; obviously he had not read it's history; neither did he appreciate it from an architectural point of view. No, he appeared to think that I was present only to take his photograph, and the Dom had been raised there solely and entirely for the purpose of being arranged round him as an effective background.

I protested, explaining that my object was not to perpetuate the fact that cigars had once been even so cheap as to come within his means.

He stood fast, and puffed clouds of rank smoke.

I appealed to my view-finder, it silently answered that my photograph would merely show George with a fringe of Dom.

I appealed to two newly arrived enthusiasts, but one was a sergeant-major and the other didn't seem very intelligent either.

Ultimately I resorted to strategy and affected to click the shutter and prepare my case for departure; the trick worked and as George approached I grasped my opportunity and exposed the plate: I had won and the picture was mine.

I commenced to pack up, but it seemed that I had mislaid the darkslide cover; it was not in the case; neither was it in my right-hand pocket nor my left hand pocket; I was not standing on it, where could it be?

I eyed George suspiciously, yes. I felt sure he had it. I explained exactly how he stood in my estimation, I explained it very thoroughly, and in great detail in language which I owe to various units and composite messes.

Then I turned to my camera and found that the dark-slide cover was still in the dark-slide.

Camera Fiends should be exterminated.

R.A.S.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

BRITISH BAND CONCERTS.

Sir,—"Royal Warwicks" views are interesting and have much to commend them. I agree that more should be seen of the regimental bands in the neighbourhood of Cologne and not only should they be induced to perform in parks and other places where people are to be found, but in the central squares, of Cologne. Too much of their talent is to my mind hidden under a bushel.

WEST YORK.

RUGGER FOR THE WINTER.

Sir,—I am in accord with "An O. T. Fifteen" that an effort should be made now to organise competitions for Rugby teams.

Too much attention is paid to the sister game to the detriment of the other. I know from my own experience the difficulty it is to raise a Battalion side, not because fellows are unwilling to play, but because a determined effort is not made to foster interest in the game.

A few soccer enthusiasts invariably rule the roost, and apply the damper to the better game. Consequently men fall in with the crowd, and the otherwise good rugger player is compelled to play soccer. By all means let us have competitions, but a start should be made now.

ENTHUSIAST.

CABARET OR — —?

Sir,—With regard to the subject of "Open Air Enjoyment" I think there is much to be said in favour of the cabaret system obtaining on the Continent.

What can be nicer than to be able to take a drink under the trees in the open air? Compare this with the stuffiness of the average English hotel or public house bar. Here there is a double inducement to drink more than would be the case if there were other attractions in the form of music and amusement.

The average working man at home seeking some relaxation and congenial company finds it in a bar. How much better it would be were he able to take his better half along with him, instead of as he is obliged to do, leave her at home.

There is nothing demoralising to my mind in the cabaret system, an opinion which is shared by many who made the acquaintance of the cabaret for the first time in France.

T.N.

FRAUDULENT TRADESMEN.

Sir,—I was interested in the letters appearing in recent issues under the heading of "Spurious Amber."

My advice is for intending present buyers to look carefully at any article which is handed over the counter of German shops. There is undoubtedly a fraudulent spirit abroad amongst shopkeepers as evidenced by the experience of "Fairplay." I hesitate to say that all are tarred with the same brush, but the shopper should be wary.

Instance the sale of watches and clocks. Recently I bought a clock and was handed a glowing guarantee in German. The striker failed after a few days and when I took the clock back I was politely informed that the striker did not come under the guarantee and a charge would have to be made.

Now the mechanism has gone wrong and the clock reposes on the shelves of the shop at which it was bought. How it will go on when demob. comes along I do not know. Moral: Shop with caution!

HAD SOME.

KNOWLEDGE OF HISTORY.

Sir,—In a recent issue there appeared a paragraph dealing with the remains of a ship's lifeboat which is suspended underneath a gateway in this city.

This boat belonged to a cruiser of the Imperial German Navy called the Stadt Cöln or Köln which was sunk by gun-fire in the first sea action of the war in the Heligoland Bight.

One is constantly struck by the extreme haziness which we Britons display with regard to outstanding events of National importance.

It seems rather comic to contemplate, but it is a fact nevertheless that the average Englishman can tell you the date of the accession of our friend William the Conqueror, but not the date of the battle of Trafalgar, or more recently still—Jutland—the greatest naval action the world has ever seen. So much for history.

R.N.V.R.

RAILWAY DEVICES.

Sir,—A correspondent makes some rather erroneous statements concerning German railway engines, unless he is speaking about a rare type of engine that is never seen on the main line work around Cologne.

I travel to Cologne by train nearly every day and more often than not the engine has to "set back" before being able to get away. This is caused through most of the engines having cylinders that are compounded and not two or more high pressure cylinders as in England.

There is no gearing on steam locomotives with the present arrangements as one of the driving axles is the crank shaft or with outside cylinders the crank pins are fitted in the driving wheels.

The reason that a two-cylinder compound engine does not start so well is that there are two dead centres, while on engines fitted with two high pressure cylinders, and the cranks set at an angle of 90 there is always a cylinder or rather piston at work.

The puffing that your informant could hear when the train is stationary is the brake air pump. On some of the heavy freight engines there is also a water pump for feeding the boilers, but on most engines two injectors are used.

"KEEP ON KEEPING ON."

If the day looks kinder gloomy,
An' yer chances, kinder slim,
If the situation's puzzlin'
An' the prospects awful grim,
An' perplexities keep pressing,
Till all hope is nearly gone,
Just bristle up an' grit your teeth,
An' keep on keeping on.

B.A.R. AQUATICS.

Two Days Splendid Sport at Deutzer Industrie-Hafen.

IDEAL WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Ideal weather conditions prevailed for the two days British Army of the Rhine Aquatic Sports, held at Deutzer Industrie-Hafen, on Tuesday and Wednesday. There was an exceptionally large number of entries, as a result of which the whole of Tuesday afternoon had to be devoted to the running off of heats in the various events. The heats, without exception, were closely contested some very fine swimming being witnessed. All the competitors were keen to qualify for places in the final on the following day.

On both days there was a goodly assembly of spectators, including a large number of ladies.

In the finals on Wednesday afternoon, naturally the standard attained was even higher than that of the first day. The outstanding events were the 450 yards, won in fine style by Pte. Pearson, the 50 yards open which went to Lieut. Philp, and the 100 yards (varied) in which 2/Lieut. Brown was successful. In the latter race four styles were adopted — the first 25 yards breast stroke, the second back stroke, the third with the under or over arm side stroke, concluding the final 25 yards with the crawl stroke.

The Y.M.C.A. provided refreshments for the competitors and the spectators along-side the baths.

In spite of the fact that only a week was available for preparations, the arrangements were excellent and those responsible are to be congratulated upon the results.

ARMY CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Comments On Recent Trials In Rhineland.

Trials for the Army championships, which take place at Aldershot, on August 28 and 29, have been held at Reinl by the Army of the Rhine, with the result (writes F. A. M. Webster, ex-English Amateur Javelin Throwing champion, in an English contemporary) that some good exponents of field events have been discovered, notably Lieut. A. O. Straker, 15th Hussars, who won the 120 yards hurdle in 17 1/5 secs., and the high jump at 5ft. 5in. In the latter event Lieut. Napier, 1/5th South Staffs., cleared 5ft. 4in., and Capt. Saunders, 12th Tank Battalion, 5ft. 3in. The long jumpers showed moderately good form, Gunner Burrows, 481st Siege Battery, clearing 19ft. 8in.

Scotland did well in the shot putting. Lieut. Fraser, 1/5th Camerons, won with a fine effort of 35ft. 2½in. Corporal G. R. Watt, 5th Gordons, was 2nd, at 32ft. 5in., and Lieut. Napier 3rd, 32ft. 1in.

How Lieut. Straker will scrape at Aldershot against Corp.-Major Macintosh (2nd/16 Guards), holder of the high jump championship, and Lieut. Ritchie, Black Watch, depends upon how he comes on in his last ten days of training. Ritchie has several times equalled 5ft. 5in., while Macintosh cleared 5ft. 6in. recently, and is the most experienced jumper of the three. On his form at Reinl, Lieut. Fraser is likely to find himself in the first three of the shot putters at the Army championships.

Championships in France.

At Beau Mauris, near Calais, the championships of the Army in France and Flanders were held recently. There is some doubt as to whether the winners at these championships will be available for Aldershot, but they are well worthy of representation, and if they do compete Sergt. McColhoun, R. Irish Horse, should not have much difficulty in carrying off the shot putting, for he covered 40ft. 9in. at Beau Mauris, thus beating Capt. McClenman, R.A.M.C., 38ft. 3in., and Corporal Donald, 36ft. 10in. Captain McClenman, who was 2nd, is, I believe, the old Territorial champion, who won his M.C. early in the war, and who is quite capable of beating 40ft. when he is in form, as well as being a first rate hammer thrower, and more than useful with the javelin and discus.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Thursday, August 21, 1919.

Surface wind South-Westerly 10 to 15 m.p.h. Generally fair but some low cloud probable. Good visibility. Very warm.

COLOGNE RACES.

First August Meeting: Form and Forecasts.

BY ROBERT LE DIABLE.

THE MEDIOCRITY STEEPLECHASE, DIVISION I should provide material for an interesting race. Of the public performers we like best Madeleine, Zillebeke, Rednal and Bowman. Of these the first named we think is a good animal and just the sort to make a jumper, but with no evidence of her ability in that direction we pass her over here. Zillebeke and Rednal we think are just useful animals in their own class. Much more to our liking is whose form at Spa and at Kalk, where he won on successive days, coupled with the fact that he escapes a penalty here makes the race appear a good thing for him.

In the MEDIOCRITY STEEPLECHASE, DIVISION II there are a lot of unknown or moderate animals and it is with no great confidence that we predict the victory of Irongate.

The same remark applies to the MOSELLE PLATE, DIVISION I and it is more out of respect for the capabilities of the jockey than of the horse that we make

In the MOSELLE PLATE, DIVISION II we note Civvie, who ran first in Mascot's race at the last meeting, Polly Dear, Nolo, Girls o' Girls, Melody and Bryan. We split our vote between Girls 'o Girls and Nolo.

THE CHAMPAGNE STEEPLECHASE will produce a small field of good horses. We hear Jimmy waits for Crefeld and if we owned Paddy he would do the same, as it is our opinion that he will not win at Cologne. We think Barney is handicapped to win this race with Radius the danger.

THE COLOGNE STAKES is an interesting handicap. Velociter has plenty of weight and so has Pop but he may beat anything. Billy on form obviously has no chance against Ballyhooley and we think Reynards Comet and Winamere overweighted. If Southern Joy runs the race is as good as over as we would stand recent form in Ireland against troop horses in Germany but we are advised that he will be an absentee. Girlso' Girls, Ballyhooley, Swan Song, Nolo and Tommy G are well in but on what we saw at the last meeting we go outright for Sprint.

In the PRINCE OF WALES STAKES our remarks above apply again to Southern Joy. Otherwise it appears an open race and we give Sahib, Old Bucks who had good form in Brussels, Madeleine, Johnnie Walker, Mascot and Major Hornby's selected (Winamere, Digby Grand or Billy) good chances. We have no evidence that Mascot gets this distance but if his able trainer is satisfied on this point we should be the last to oppose him. To sum up we leave the issue to General Tudor and Major Hornby.

In the ARMY COUNCIL STAKES Mascot and Pop have crushing weights and we shall be surprised if either of them faces the starter. Velociter is weighted more on his reputation than his form and Chief's Right can have no chance with such as Civvie who beat him at even weights at the last meeting. Sprint appears well handicapped and the same remark applies to Civvie, Swan Song, Geebung II and The Squirrell. We pause at the name of "Remember Me" as we think this is one that will pop up some day. We think is thrown into this race but he will have to go to beat Geebung II and should Sprint wait for this race we would have him on our side.

M.P. Wins Tennis Final.

At the Felixstowe lawn tennis tournament, C. G. Leo Lyle, M.P. for Stratford, won the men's singles by beating B. E. Hurty in the final.

At Southampton the first-class player styling himself of Overseas, won the single and also secured the doubles with Captain Kirk Grease. The mixed doubles were won by C. O. Tuckey and Mrs. Tuckey.

At Worthing F. R. L. Crawford beat the International, C. P. Dixon, in the men's final, and Mrs. Satterthwaite beat Mrs. O'Neill in the ladies' final.

Good Going.

For the Hurst Park meeting, which will be held on Friday and Saturday, the ground will be in splendid condition, as the hydrants have been kept going during the heat wave, and these will continue to be used up to the day of the meeting unless rain falls in the meantime.

Generous.— The Automobile and Motor Union has placed its foreign touring organization at the disposal of officers who have their cars in Germany.

THE LAST DAY.

All C.P.C. Matches To Be Decided By Aug. 25th.

UNPLAYED GAMES A DRAW.

Only four days remain to play off undecided fixtures in the "Cologne Post" Competition. All results must reach this office by 10 a. m. on the morning of the 25th August. If games remain unplayed or reports fail to reach us by then the match will automatically be declared a draw—one point being awarded to each contestant. There is no time for delay as the League table must be made up and the final positions published on August 27th. All queries, protests, etc., must arrive within the next few days. Appended are the results of recent games:—

9th D.L.I. (110) v. No. 2 WATER TANK COY. (68). The D.L.I. batted first and compiled a very useful 105 chiefly through the batting of Pte. Forthingham 32 not out and Cpl. Ramsden 27. The Water Tank Coy. very quickly piled up 8, and it looked at one time as if they were going to win, nevertheless their last wicket fell for 68. Pte. Carden batted well for 29, Cpl. Toy obtained 16 and Pte. Holmes 14. Sergt. Smith for the Durhams took 8 wickets for 44, Pte. Kay 2 for 23.

483 FIELD COY., R.E. (119 for 8) v. 12 ROYAL IRISH RIFLES (38) at Wald. For the winners Spr. Feltham made 33 and Lieut Monteith 23.

2nd BN. M.G.C. (86) v. 3rd NORTHERN BDE. (50) at Langenfeld. The Machine Guns had first knock and scored 86 runs. Pte. Pickler was responsible for 27, Cpl. Vose for 12 and Pte. Lee 12. The 3rd Northern Bde. were all out for 50, the Machine Gunners winning by 36 runs. Ashworth batted well for 15 and Forbes for 14.

2nd BN. M.G.C. (55) v. 51st DEVONS (53) at Langenfeld. The Devons batted first Capt. Petherton scoring 16 and Sergt. Binner 10 while Pickles took 7 wickets for 16 runs. The M.G.C. scored 55 thus winning by 2 runs. The end was very exciting. With 5 wickets to fall only 5 runs were required yet the last man scored the winning hit. Cpl. Vose took 4 wickets for 13 and Sergt. Neale 4 for 9.

17th LANCERS (78 for 5) v. BAKERIES SPORTS CLUB (47). For 17th Lancers Major Michelle scored 23 not out, Capt. Clark 21 and S. S. M. Simpson 11 while Capt. Bell took 7 wickets for 21 runs. For the Bakeries Pte. Lewis made 11, Cpl. Webster 11 while Pte. Lewis took 4 wickets for 26 runs.

420 SIEGE BTY. R.G.A. (44) v. 237 FIELD COY., R.E. (16) at Forsbach. This match resulted in a win for the Gunners by 28 runs. Dean and Greenhalgh batted well for 15 and 7 respectively. Cpl. Allen took 6 wickets for 12 runs and Pte. Phillips 3 for 16. Greenhalgh and Dean with the ball were deadly, bowling unchanged, Dean took 7 wickets for 7 runs and Greenhalgh 3 for 6.

LANCERS IN FORM.

High Scores in Cricket Friendly at Lindenthal.

A very interesting cricket match took place at Lindenthal, on Tuesday last, when Transportation met the 17th Lancers in a friendly game. Transportation won the toss and batted first, making a score of 173. The chief contributors to this excellent figure were Corporal Fish and Colonel Owen. The former batted very carefully, giving no chances, whilst the latter played a very forceful game, making 31 in about half an hour.

After the tea interval, the Lancers gave a splendid display, particularly Major Michalle and Sergeant Shenstone, whose partnership accounted for the majority of the runs required. The match ended in a win for the Lancers by 5 wickets. Transportation's weaknesses were in fielding and bowling; three catches were dropped and the ball missed on numerous occasions, whilst the bowling was too inconsistent to be effective.

A RED LETTER DAY.

Will Mc Coorty's Speed Bring Him Victory?

DEADLY PUNCHES.

Now that September 2nd is drawing near, when Mr. Cochran presents one of his richest programmes at the Olympia, the boxing scribes are discussing the chances of the respective fighters.

McGoorty has long been promised a match with Beckett, so that it is only right that the choice should have fallen on him as the substitute for Carpentier. Although the American holds no championship title, yet after his sensational defeat of Reeve, he has been regarded as good enough to meet the best of our men, or Carpentier. McGoorty is seven years older than our present champion and will probably scale a little more than 12st. when he enters the ring, but for all that he hits as hard as most heavyweights, and far harder than many, and he is an exceptionally clever boxer who combines the best points in the "American style," which makes so much use of in-fighting, with many of the characteristics of our own school.

McGoorty's most deadly punch is a left hook, which has secured for him many of his most notable victories, says a boxing correspondent in the "Times." Beckett also is rather fond of this particular punch—Goddard had more than enough of it at Olympia—so it will be interesting to see which of the two uses the blow to most advantage. McGoorty is the quicker of the two, but Beckett's youth, weight, and fighting qualities should more than make up for this. The meeting should prove full of excitement while it lasts; it is doubtful if it will go for more than half the stipulated length.

An American Giant.

The last of the fights arranged for the occasion will be between Arthur Townley, of Birkenhead, and Fred Fulton, the American giant. Fulton was born in April, 1891, so that he is now 28 and Townley will have the advantage of youth. On the other hand, Fulton will have much the longer reach—he is the tallest man in the ring at present, being 6ft. 4½in.—and his offical weight is given as 220lb.—15st. 10lb., so that in this also there will be a marked difference in the men. In fact Fulton is as tall as Goddard and nearly two stone heavier than the soldier; in boxing there is, of course no comparison between the two, for the American is a really clever boxer. Among Fulton's most notable achievements have been victories over Sam Langford, who retired after seven rounds, Gunboat Smith (seven rounds), Frank Moran (three rounds), Porky Flynn (four times), Carl Morris (twice), and Arthur Pelky. Most of these victories have been secured with a knock-out blow. Altogether September 2 should be a red-letter day in our boxing calendar.

152nd H. B., R.G.A.

The 152nd H.B., R.G.A. have reached the zenith of their series of successes by winning the first prize in the gun team competition open to the Army of the Rhine, at the Army of the Rhine Horse Show this week. The battery is fortunate in having such an evenly matched team, which contrary to the opinion of many, are all from the one unit and not selected

The event, open to the pair of heavy draught horses and wagon, was also won by the battery with a pair of light bays, driven by Dvr. Attley.

The congratulations of the battery are due to Sergt. Frith and his detachment of drivers and gunners who have spent endless leisure hours in preparing horses, harness and gun for the many exhibitions during the last few months.

1/5th WEST YORKS. SWEEPSTAKE DRAW POSTPONED.

Owing to repeated applications for tickets the 1st West Yorks "sweep" will remain open until Saturday next and the draw will take place on Monday 25th, time and place as announced previously.

Tickets (5 marks each) can be had at the N.A.C.B. Officer's Club, British Empire Leave Club and No. 1, 2, and 3, Army Cinemas.

52nd Battalion Sherwood Foresters Success.

At the Brigade Sports, Horse Show, and Gymkhana held recently in which the competing battalions were the 52nd, 53rd and 51st Sherwood Foresters, the 52nd Battalion secured the highest number of points, being particularly successful on the second day when they took seven firsts, five seconds, and six thirds.

BOOM IN FOOTBALL.

Rosy Prospects For The Coming Season.

LARGER LEAGUES.

For the coming football season the greatest boom in the history of the premier British sport is confidently anticipated, all present indications pointing to an enhanced popularity. This will be the first season of football under old-time conditions since 1914-15. The game commenced in earnest in Scotland on Saturday, when eleven matches were played in the First Division of the Scottish League, but in other parts of the British Isles, league football will not seriously begin until the last Saturday in this month.

The Football League, the world's greatest tournament, has increased the number of its clubs to twenty-two in each division, and there will also be twenty-two clubs in the First Division of the Southern League. The second division of the League will consist of Welsh clubs only, managed by a Welsh committee, run as part of the Southern League organizations. There has been an increase in the charge of admission from 6d to 1/- but attendances are not expected to suffer as a consequence.

The F.A. Challenge Cup, popularly known as the English Cup, the F.A. Amateur Cup, the County Cup, international matches, inter-league games and other representative contests which have been closed for five years will all be resumed.

The various Clubs are making every endeavour to secure the best available talent and the football promises to equal in quality the first class expositions of pre-war days.

The Shilling "Gate."

The objection to the shilling gate in League football during the approaching season is entirely confined to Scotland. An investigation among the London managers has not brought to light any semblance of an organised opposition such as is being fomented in the Glasgow area.

In England, whatever profit a club makes, the maximum dividend it can declare is 5 per cent, while the directors have to work in an entirely honorary capacity. In Scotland it is different; there it is a case of unlimited dividends.

CHALLENGE TO ALL COMERS.

Shrubb Carrying Out 1st Class Running Programme.

Alfred Shrubb, the noted runner, who for six years was coach at Harvard University, has returned to England where he proposes to revive interest in first class running, and intends carrying out a series of matches, starting in the South of England. He will take on all comers and hopes to find new champions. He will probably be first matched against George McRae.

TWELVE HOURS' ROAD RIDE.

The Anerley Bicycle Club's invitation twelve hours' unpaced scratch road ride ended in favour of C. F. Davey, of the Vegetarian C.C., with a distance of 209 miles. W. A. George, Etna C.C. (the winner in 1913), was second, with 204½ miles, and W. Hinds, Bath Road Club, third, with 197 miles.

The race for the Tricycle Trophy, which this year was held in conjunction with the former event, drew three tricycle starters, of whom W. C. Williamson, Gospel Oak C.C., proved successful, with a distance of 181½ miles.

3rd. BATTALION M.G.C. SPORTS

This afternoon, at the sports ground, south of the Mulheim Bridge, the 3rd. "Emma Gees" hold their sports meeting, commencing at 1400 hours. By kind permission of Lieut.-Colonel R.H.R. Brocklebanck, D.S.O., the band of the 9th. (Queens Royal) Lancers will play during the afternoon.

The programme includes, in addition to the usual 100 yards and Mile events (which latter is open to the Army of the Rhine) such items as Individual and inter-section tent pegging, wrestling on mules, a band race, officers race, Jam and Bun race, whilst a pillow fight over a large tank of water promises to afford some amusement. All long distance heats and events which were at all lengthy were run off last week at the preliminary meeting, so that there should be no lack of incident this afternoon.

The National Game.

Mr. Gilbert L. Jessop in the "Sunday Express" says:—Even if we would, we can no longer shut our eyes to the fact that our boast of cricket being our national game no longer holds good. For every one who indulges in cricket football can supply ten.

A Super Club.—The Royal Flying Club has opened at Hendon. It hasn't had its big official inaugural ceremony yet; that comes later, but it's in working order.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

Empire Leave Club Concert.

A most delightful entertainment was given on Tuesday by the Braganzas Concert Party. The stage effects and costumes were excellent and "Babs" was one of the best "ladies" we have seen here. "Sailors don't care", "Italiano", and the "Wild Women" were among the many songs which were much appreciated, as also were the two selections given by Lieut. Ingall and the recitation by Len Austin. We very much enjoyed Cuff Moffatt's selections, in fact the whole company are much to be congratulated on the enjoyable evening they provided.

Farewell New Bing Boys.

Demobilization and other causes have resulted in the breaking up of yet another concert party. The New Bing Boys, who rightly claim to be one of the best shows in the Rhine Army, gave their farewell performance at Wiesdorf last Thursday. During the last ten weeks they have shown to ten thousand soldiers in Rhineland, and have seldom failed to receive an enthusiastic reception. Capt. C.P. Thomas C.F. and 2/Lieut. A.V. Priston are to be congratulated on the success of the party.

Rhine Army Drama.

Next week the Stadt Theatre, Bonn, is to receive a visit by the popular British Rhine Army Dramatic Company, and the programme will be as follows:—Monday "The Younger Generation" preceded by "The Dream Child"; Tuesday, "The Importance of being Earnest"; Thursday, "General Post"; Saturday, "Helen with the High Hand". Bonn audiences have previously had opportunities of sampling the productions of this very excellent company, and in their latest plays they are more than maintaining the splendid reputation already established.

Those Merry Micks.

A welcome return visit to Cologne by "The Merry Micks" brought a huge audience to the Central Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday evening. I was very pleased with the show and very much struck with their Oriental scene and the harmony number "Some Sunny Summertime" was vociferously encored. It is hard to individualize in such a talented troupe, but the work of L/Cpl. Turner and Lieut. McCracken in "Black and White" was responsible for most of the merriment. Pte. Bergonzi deserved great credit for the electrical effects. One hopes to see this show in Cologne for a week before they leave Rhineland watch will be in the near future.

SPORTS AT SOLINGEN.

20th K.R.R.C.'s Successful Meeting: B. Coy's Win.

A most successful Sports meeting was recently held by the 20th Battalion King's Royal Rifle Corps, the weather being ideal both from the athletes and the spectators point of view.

Owing to the numerous entries for the various events it was necessary for each Company to hold its own meeting previously, the successful competitors then taking part in the Battalion Sports. During the day a visit was paid by Major General G. D. Jeffreys, C.B., C.M.G. (Commanding the Light Division), who was very pleased with the afternoons sport. The Battalion Band was in attendance and played selections throughout the afternoon. A cup for the company gaining the highest number of points, and a shield for the most successful platoon, could not be awarded until the result of the Cross Country Run was known, which took place five days later, and, as a result, the cup and shield were awarded to "B" Coy. and No. 7 Platoon respectively.

As will be seen from the following totals, "C" Company were the runners up for the cup, their No. 10 Platoon being in the same position with regard to the Shield.

Results:—

"B" Coy.—28 points
"C" Coy.—23 "
"A" Coy.—12 "
"D" Coy.—11 "
H.Q. Coy.— 6 "

At the conclusion of the programme, the Commanding Officer, Lieut.-Colonel F. G. Willan, C.M.G., D.S.O., presented the prizes and congratulated the winners on their excellent performances.

Many thanks are due to the officers and other ranks, members of the Sports Committee, who, through their efforts in every direction, ensured the success of the meeting.

2nd LIGHT BRIGADE LEAGUE.

In connection with the 2nd Light Brigade Cricket League, the 483 Field Coy. R.E. played 12th Royal Irish Rifles at Wald. The R.E. compiled a score of 119 for 8 and were easy victors, the Rifles being all out for 38. For the winners Spr. Feltham was top scorer with 33, while Lieut. Monteith added 23.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Boxing Revival.

Smoke Wreath by Cigar.

Smoke Wreath, who was awarded the Manor Selling Plate at Windsor on the disqualification of Kalooloh, is one of the first, if not the very first, two-year-olds by Cigar to see a racecourse.

A Triangular Duel.

With half the programme of the Professional Scratch Tournament at Thurston's over, the issue has practically narrowed itself down to a triangular duel between F. Lawrence, of Birmingham; T. Carpenter, the Welsh champion; and Albert Raynor, the Sheffield left-hander.

A Coincidence.

Most golfers have a story to tell of some remarkable coincidence which has befallen them on the links, but that in which James Braid was concerned at Walton Heath the other day would be hard to beat. "Jimmy" was playing on the new course, when he drove a long ball slightly into the beard of the 15th hole. He took an iron and laid the ball dead. In the afternoon he drove with the self-same ball, and it came to rest in exactly the same place, just behind the divot which he had made in the morning.

Welter-weights.

Frank Moody, the Welsh welter-weight, is to meet Gus Platts, of Sheffield, over thirty rounds at Grimsby on August 25.

Newport Rugger.

Fred W. Birt, who has been elected captain of Newport Rugby Club, has selected another Welsh international as his vice-captain—Reginald Plummer, who was "capped" for Wales against Scotland in 1912.

Ex-Champion Seriously Ill.

The many friends of Mr. H. L. Doherty will hear with regret that the ex-champion has been seriously ill; indeed, his health still gives cause for some anxiety. After undergoing a severe operation, Mr. Doherty is now at Margate, and the latest intelligence is that there is a slow improvement.

Homers in Hot Weather.

Pigeons will home through hot weather providing it is clear, but if they get heat and haze with it, it slows them down, and a long fly in hot, oppressive weather compels them to pitch for water. Old birds know how to fend for themselves if under these conditions, and dozens of them at a time on a hot day have been seen to drop by the side of a pond, take a drink and then immediately make for home.

Training McGoorty.

Happenings at Ostend.

Mr. Bottomley's Panzy won a selling race at Ostend. Hey Diddle Diddle also scored; while Capt. Hargreaves' Barium took the handicap in which Minstrel Park and Misleading Lady were unplaced.

German and Internationalists.

Mr. W. Bensemann, a German subject, who is well-known to a large number of footballers in England has been endeavouring through the English Press to get into communication with several famous international players, including Steve Bloomer, Edgar Chadwick, Fred Pentland, and Sam Wolstenholme.

Three-Day Cricket Favoured.

Apparently most of the counties are in favour of a return to three-day matches next season, and also think a revision in the system of calculating points in the Championship table desirable. Warwickshire suggests the following method of scoring—five points for a win outright, one point each in drawn games, with an extra one for the side leading on the first innings.

Change of Date.

The Miltown Malbay race meeting, appointed to be held on August 22, has been abandoned, and a new fixture on Sept. 25 applied for.

Well Advised.

Mrs. Harold Cayzer appears to have been well advised when she gave Major Astor 3,000 guineas for the two-year-old Plunkette, a fair portion of the purchase money being recovered by the filly's victory in the Cleaver Plate.

Swimming World.

Cygnus Club is rapidly regaining its old position in the swimming world. It is one of the most famous clubs in the metropolitan district, and has the great advantage of always being well supported by its old members, many of whom have done great service in the promotion of a knowledge of the art among children.

The All-round Indian.

In Mr. Gunesakara, the Indian medical student, Captain Warner seems to have discovered the bowler that Middlesex have been long needing. He was first included in the team as a batsman, having made countless centuries for the Gymkhana Club. He is still a fine bat—probably the best Indian run-getter we have seen since the days of Prince Ranjitsinhji.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Germans at the Tattoo.

That the German has a liking for the spectacular was demonstrated on Tuesday evening when huge crowds of civilians were present at the VI Corps tat too. They all evinced the greatest interest in the proceedings and obviously very much enjoyed the impressive spectacle. The massed bands were also centres of attraction, the German being a notorious lover of music.

Bank Queues.

The favourable rate of exchange attracted long queues at Messrs. Cox & Co. and Messrs. Cook's bank premises again yesterday morning. During the hours these establishments were open the cashiers worked without a break. The knowledge that there had been a further fall in the value of the mark led to much business which otherwise would not have been transacted.

Sunday at Bonn.

Many Protestant soldiers in Bonn noticed the change in the usually austere streets last week-end. The banks of green shrubs on the pavements, and here and there a little altar, almost covered with fresh flowers, made a bright splash of colour in almost every thoroughfare. It was the occasion of the Procession of the Host and crowds lined the route, to watch the choir, the windows, and the little children all dressed in white, some carrying the altar-ornaments, and others, long sprays of lilies, as the procession passed along, each member of it telling their beads, and repeating "Aves." Not the least agreeable feature was the reverence shown by British soldiers, which came as a pleasant surprise to both the participants and onlookers.

Paper Dresses.

While the war was on a veil of mystery shrouded the domestic life in Germany and now and again through this veil drifted wisps of rumour. Amongst those many rumours one can remember the tale of paper dresses. Has anyone seen a paper dress in Germany? We doubt it, the dress materials being on the contrary singularly strong and durable. On the other hand paper curtains and table-cloths are no novelty and are so well-manufactured as to defy detection until handled. Apropos of dresses, shortly after the young guards landed in Germany, an excited youth approached the writer stating that he had seen ladies' dresses of paper displayed in a shop but investigation only proved this to be one of the full length paper patterns so common in German dress-makers' windows.

Medal Ribands.

There seems such a divergence of opinion as to how medal ribands should be worn that the official instructions are of interest. Medal ribands should be worn on the left breast and be half an inch in depth. In the case of other ranks they should be sewn in a horizontal line, without intervals, midway between the first and second buttons of the jacket. When only one riband is worn it will be placed with its centre above the button of the left breast pocket. When two or more are worn they will be placed so that the centre of the row is above the button of the breast pocket. If there is not sufficient room to wear ribands in one row, they should be worn in two or more rows, the lower being placed half an inch below the upper. In order to clear the pocket it may be necessary to raise the upper row.

A Popular Sergeant.

Particularly sad are the circumstances attending the death which occurred at Wiesdorf of Staff Sergeant Charlison, D.C.M. of the R.A.M.C. He was knocked down and killed on Monday night by a train proceeding to Opladen. He had just left some messmates and was walking over the road railway-crossing when he stumbled and before he could recover and get clear. the train was on him. He was struck by the buffer and when picked up it was found that his neck was broken his right arm fractured in several places and some of his ribs badly smashed. Death was instantaneous. Charlison, who enlisted shortly after the outbreak of war, had been out in France since 1915 and had just re-engaged for a further twelve months service. He is unmarried and his parents, with whom much sympathy is felt in their bereavement reside at 88, Henderson St. Leith, Scotland.

The Loyal Men's Club.

Some weeks ago, thinking men of the 12th Lancs. Regt. at Bonn-Kessenich banded themselves together for the purpose of thoughtful social intercourse, an idea to be commended. A secretary and a useful committee of N.C.O's and men, with the padre as president, have drawn up a programme of weekly meetings of a helpful character. Each Wednesday, a paper on some social topic is given by a member or visitor and freely discussed by the members. Last week's paper on "Citizenship" by Pte. Dewer made one furiously think how different the true citizen is from the Bolshevist. Valuable contributions were made by many of those present. Corporal Jameson is billed for to-night to give a paper on "Should the church provide amusement for the people?" The motto of the club is "Use Time Wisely," and the condition of membership is a desire for thoughtful intercourse and reading.

A New Experience.

On Tuesday for the first time the civilians were permitted to remain out of doors between the hours of 23.00 and midnight and thousands were glad to avail themselves of this privilege. It almost appeared that they remained out purely for the sake of taking advantage of the new concession. At 23.30 many were observed in earnest conversation with their neighbours and seemed to be thoroughly enjoying the midnight hour talk.

A Parallel.

"When I passed two military policemen the other day it came into my mind to say a few pleasant words to them," writes a local resident. "Remarking the two significiant initials M.P. on their arms and knowing that M.P. also signifies Member of Parliament, and touching their armlets with my fingers, I said 'The two initials: Member of Parliament?' The two M.P.'s commenced laughing at my whimsical pun and we left one another, as friends I hope. Now putting a parallel I might make the question if any of the pre-war German policemen would have had the condescension or the complaisance to accept a similar harangue on the street. Without any doubt the poor delinquent who had dared do anything like this would have been fettered and not see for a long time the quickening beams of the sun."

Lord Askwith in Cologne.

Lord Askwith, who this week visited the Y.M.C.A. Central Hall, has captured the hearts of the working classes at home. He is a man of infinite patience and tact and has settled many intricate labour disputes. He was deeply moved by the great reception given to him by what is considered the largest audience of Tommies ever seen in Cologne. Cries of "Good old Askwith" were heard everywhere. His address was an intensely practical one and revealed not only the expert but a man who has intense sympathy with the working classes. His call for economy and unity was received with great applause and the results of the meeting will be far reaching.

Who Kissed Her?

A good story was told by Mr. Oliver McCowen against his chief, Sir. Arthur Yapp, in the gathering. They were speaking at a meeting together in England, and were the guests in a delightful home where the chief attraction was a young lady of fourteen summers. Mr. McCowen, wishing to obtain the favour of the lady, said to her "I only spoke twenty minutes at the meeting." "Yes!" she replied "but Sir Arthur spoke for an hour." The next day he gave her a shilling thinking it was a good tip. "Oh!" she replied "Sir Arthur gave me half a crown." The following morning on leaving he kissed the little maid. "Oh!" she said, "Sir Arthur kissed me and mummy too!" This created great laughter, but the laughter was increased when Sir Arthur, with a twinkle in his eye, said "Mr. McCowen is an Irishman and it is hard to get even with him, but for once I'll show him up. The story he told about me should be reversed. It was he who kissed mummy."

Queries continue to reach us. Happily the class of correspondent who wants to know the name of the Mayor of Paddington or of the first man to cross the Hindenburg line has respected our intimation but queries as to medal ribands and demobilization continue to arrive. We would like to deal with them, but regret that we are unable.

Corps began a War Savings campaign on August 11th conducted by Capt. and Q.M. F.W. Hay M.C. In five days the battalion purchased 2,116 certificates, representing over 116,000 marks.

A GARRISON CHURCH.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

It is in the centre of this city by the Rhine where the busy, eager multitudes are pressing continually. The gargoyles above the flying buttresses have been the silent witnesses of many strange processions in that street but none to equal those of the present day.

To thousands of men 57 Schildergasse will be a place of abiding memories, for here they have received inspiration and strength to help them in their everyday tasks.

It is a bit of England to them, and there is this to be said about the grand old service of our National Church, that, wherever it is held, East or West, North or South, at home or abroad, it is ever the same. Out here in Cologne, morning and evening, the same prayers are being said as in the village church at home. The thought is wonderfully comforting and the hour of worship is made all the more impressive.

Here, too, all are one. The Commander-in-chief and the private kneel side by side. In this church many of the greatest of our land, who have been visiting our army, have worshipped, and here we see the daughters of our island home, nurses, voluntary workers and wives.

It is Sunday morning and we begin the day by attending the celebration of Holy Communion. As we reverently join in the service our minds go back to other celebrations on the field of battle. There with the shells screaming overhead we knelt around our Lord's Table and were fortified in spirit to face the dangers of battle and our everyday life. Many of our comrades who were with us then have crossed the river of death, but we remember them in this hour, and we remember too our dearest and our best.

A crowd of men and officers fill the church for "Morning Prayer." The Chaplain rings out the cry of old, "I will arise and go to my Father," and our hearts willingly re-echo the petition. Is there anything more moving than to hear the hymn which the men sing with a full glad heart:

"New every morning is the love
Our wakening and uprising prove;
Through sleep and darkness safely brought,
Restored to life and power and thought."

The Psalms and prayers all stir our hearts this bright August morning. We have our memories. We have our loneliness. We have our tasks, but we also have this radiant hour. Oh, to only be alive, to enjoy the beauty of the world, to have visions of the future!

The Chaplain's message uplifts us and for awhile we forget that we are wanderers.

It is the hour of "Evening Prayer." Still the call of worship is incessant, and the men respond. They come from many parts of the city to this central church, for there is an irresistible attraction about it.

As we see the eager, upturned faces of the men we know that they are responding to the call of prayer. The Magnificat, the Nunc Dimittis, the Apostles' Creed and the Collects all thrill the soul with emotion. We hear of a voice whispering to us out of the heart of life appealing to us to be true to God, to be true to our fellowmen, to be true to duty. It is all so very stimulating.

Especially do we feel the beauty of the Collect:

"Lighten our darkness we beseech thee, O Lord."

How many times this was on our lips in the old days of warfare!

One verse of our closing hymn expresses all we feel about the day's services:

"We thank Thee that Thy Church unsleeping,
While earth rolls onward into light,
Through all the world her watch is keeping
And rests not now by day or night.

MR. CHURCHILL'S DEPARTURE.

MILITARY FUNERAL OF ROYAL AIR FORCE OFFICERS AT BONN.

ARMY COUNCIL.

LAST DAY OF WAR MINISTERS VISIT.

Wednesday, the last day of their visit, was a busy day for the Army Council. Among other places visited was Bonn, where the 29th C.C.S. and the Science College were inspected. At the latter the classes were going in full swing and Mr. Churchill took great interest in the work being done.

Having delighted the sentry by chatting with him for a few moments, the War Secretary proceeded to see what a real thing Army Education has become. The science laboratories interested him considerably and he carefully inspected some of the apparatus in use. A class in agriculture and another on practical pig culture were next visited, the models of pigs coming in for a considerable amount of attention.

On leaving Bonn the party went to Remagen, where a salute of nineteen guns was given, and proceeded to Cologne escorted by the Rhine Army Flotilla.

DINNER AT VI CORPS CLUB.

In the evening a farewell dinner was given at the VI Corps Club in the special dining room on the ground floor. This was beautifully decorated with palms and orange lilies, the following guests occupying tables arranged to form three sides of a square: General Sir W. Robertson, Rt.-Hon. Winston Churchill, Field-Marshal Sir H. H. Wilson, Lieut.-General Sir G. Macdonogh, General Sir Ian Hamilton, Lieut.-General Sir C. W. Jacob, Lieut.-General Sir P. Chetwode, Lieut.-General Sir T. Morland, Lieut.-General Sir J. A. Haldane, Sir P. Freyer, Lieut.-General Sir W. Braithwaite, Maj.-General Burnett-Hitchcock, Maj.-General Sir H. Hutchison, Maj.-Gen. G. Clive, Brig.-Gen. Lambert, Brig.-Gen. M nkhouse, Lieut. Stoker, Brig.-General Hankey, Brig.-Gen. Fuller, Maj.-Gen. Sir A. Chichester, Maj.-Gen. Sir S. Lawford, Maj.-General Sir R. Buckland, Commander Acheson, Maj.-Gen. G. Boyd, Maj.-Gen. H. L. Reed, Brig.-Gen. Maxwell Scott, Brig.-Gen. Rotton, Lieut.-Colonel Dutton, Colonel Pitt Taylor, Brig.-Gen. Tandy, Maj.-Gen. C. R. Ruckle, Maj.-Gen. Sir W. Heneker, Maj.-General Sir H. Thompson, Maj.-Gen. A. Kennedy, Maj.-Gen. H. Tudor, Brig.-Gen. Coffin, Brig.-Gen. I. Stewart, Brig.-General C. Evans, Colonel Goffin, Captain H. A. Campbell, Captain George, Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. Godley, Maj.-Gen. Sir H. Jeudwine, Maj.-Gen. Sir E. Strickland, Maj.-Gen. Sir C. Mathew, Maj.-Gen. Ritchie, Maj.-Gen. J. Higgins, Brig.-Gen. N. Haig, Brig.-Gen. Kirby, Colonel P. Hazelton, Rev. F. Anderson, Captain Peck, Rev. Stewart, Major Sir A. Sinclair.

The decorations of the dining room and ante-rooms were wonderfully done, settees, palms, flowers and the cool-sounding trickle of running water making up an enjoyable ensemble. Great credit must be given to Major Traylen, the energetic secretary of the Club, for the beauty and organization of the whole affair. An admirable programme of music was rendered by the "Pedlars" Concert Party orchestra under the direction of Gunner H. Jackson R.G.A., and added considerably to the enjoyment of a remarkable evening.

From the VI Corps Club the visitors drove straight to the station where they were received by a guard of honour consisting of 100 men of the 52nd D. L. I. under the command of Captain Mawer, M. C. After inspecting the guard the Secretary of State and his colleagues entered the train and proceeded to Boulogne.

PRINCE AS CANADIAN.

The Prince of Wales, landing at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, had a great reception. Speaking at an official lunch the Prince said: "I have come to Canada not as a stranger but as a Canadian. I have lived with your soldiers at the front, and I wish you all to consider me as they, I hope and believe, considered me—one of yourselves."

HUNGARY'S TROUBLES.

THE ECONOMIC MENACE.

The new Hungarian Cabinet formed by the Archduke Joseph is meeting with little enthusiasm amongst the general public, and the failure of all efforts to persuade the Socialists to enter the Government is widely regretted. It is also feared that the Entente may refuse to recognise a Government which contains no representative of such a large section of the people.

The shortage of food and coal is becoming alarming and it is even rumoured that the train service may be entirely suspended within the next few days unless large quantities of coal are received at once. Another economic menace is the lack of raw material, which has already thrown 80,000 workers out of employment.

Vigorous preparations have already been begun for the election campaign. The new "Help Hungary" party has issued an anti-Jewish programme.

AEROPLANE CRASH.

FUNERAL OF HANGELAR ACCIDENT VICTIMS.

A spell of gloom has been cast over No 5 Squadron, R.A.F, as a result of the sad accident involving the deaths of two of the squadron's most popular officers, which occurred at Hangeler Aerodrome on Wednesday.

The victims were Lieut. R. R. Evans (21) and Lieut. V. Limerick (22), who were pilot and observer respectively of the crashed Bristol aeroplane.

The funeral took place yesterday, at Bonn, with full military honours, and was attended by a large number of officers and other ranks of 5 Squadron as well as those from other squadrons in the neighbourhood. Both the deceased officers had considerable flying experience during the war. They were men of the brightest disposition and were regarded with the highest esteem by a very large circle of friends. Their skill as aviators was generally recognised and their future, consequently, seemed very promising.

At the funeral, which was extremely impressive, the firing party was provided by the 5th Bn., The Border Regt.

The deepest sympathy of all is extended to the relatives of the deceased in their loss.

VAGARIES OF CREDIT.

WHAT OUR £1 NOTE IS WORTH.

What is an English "Bradbury" worth to-day, when placed upon the counter of the world's mart?

Quotations from America keep dropping against us in a sensational manner, so that the sovereign is now only worth about 4 dols. 13 cents. (17s.).

If a British workman gave a pound Treasury note out of his earnings to an international moneychanger he would get for it goods to approximate value in foreign countries thus:—America, 17s, France, 27s, Germany, about £4 10s., Italy 31s. 6d, Holland, 19s, Norway, 20s. 3d.

PRODUCE MORE.

The only solution to strengthen the exchange against America is to increase production. "There is no other method of restoration to the normal. Purchases of huge quantities of American foodstuffs have made the sovereign worth less in America, and until we turn out more manufactured goods we shall not find any real advance on the present exchange.

BOY'S INFATUATION.

LOVE SUICIDE AT 13.

The death of a lad of 13, Harold Ellison, of Seaforth, through taking rat poison, was inquired into at Liverpool.

"He was a boy for girls," said Ernest Firth, aged 12. "He often told me he would take some poison because a girl did not like him. In the winter he threatened to drown himself, only the water was so cold." On Saturday, August 9, Harold showed him a small brown jar, saying, "it is rat poison. I am going to take it for the sake of a girl, because she does not like me." He put some poison on the cork and licked it off. Half an hour later he ate some more.

Next day Harold refused food and went to bed. On the Wednesday he told his father he had taken poison. The jar when found was almost empty. The lad died on the Friday. The girl was aged 14.

The father described his boy as stubborn and strong-willed. "All I could get out of him was that he had some bother with two girls."

Medical evidence was that death was due to phosphorous poisoning and heart failure.

The coroner found that the boy took his own life, and expressed the opinion that his mind was deranged. "Boys of this age," he said, "get some queer notions. Unless some sensible person talks to them, they form wrong impressions."

TRADE WITH RUSSIA.

SUGGESTED POLICY.

The Peace Conference has reached a decision upon the measures to be substituted for abandoning the attempt to blockade Russia. The plans are being kept a close secret, but they amount to this, that neutral Governments will be told that it is better not to trade with Bolshevist Russia, and inducements may be held out to them to join in a voluntary ring round Russia. As, however, Sweden is doing good business with Russia it is difficult to see what persuasions can be employed. The crux of the matter is that America is trading there and says she sees no reason why not do so, pointing out that we are not in a state of war with the Bolshevists. Germany also will be asked to withhold goods, but the Allies wishes can in no way be enforced.

BOLSHEVISTS RUN.

DENIKIN SWEEPS SOUTH RUSSIA.

General Denikin's recent successes in South Russia are developing in a rapid war march of victory. A War Office communique says:—

Denikin's left wing continues to gain brilliant successes. The Bolshevists now admit that they have been driven out of the two important towns of Kherson and Nikolaieff, the occupation of which in the early part of this year was heralded as a decisive success on the part of the Soviet armies. "These gains have now been wrested from them by the irresistible advance of Denikin's troops. The Bolshevists have been driven back to the line of the Bug by the pursuing volunteer cavalry.

Further to the North, on the Dneiper, Denikin has occupied Cherkassy (less than 100 miles south-east of Kieff, the capital of the Ukraine. At Cherkassy the last railway line (from Central Russia to Odessa) which remained to the Bolshevists crosses the Dneiper. This important passage has now been lost to them, and there can be no doubt—even though no confirmation has been received of the Bolshevist evacuation of the great port of Odessa—that its fate is now sealed. Soviet Russia will very shortly lose, if it has not already lost, its last footing on the Black Sea shores.

ST. PANCRAS ACCIDENT.

WAR CRIPPLE'S DEATH.

At the inquest on Alfred Henry John Jackson and Robert Curzon, killed in the St. Pancras tram accident, Jackson's wife said that he was crippled at Loos. She was standing near the scene of the accident, heard a crash and saw the car topple over. She rushed to render assistance. She heard that a man was under the car, but she did not know who it was and did not see her husband until she saw his body in the mortuary.

A doctor said the legs were broken and the body burned.

Jesse James, the last passenger to get on the car before the accident, said that there was nothing unusual about the speed and there was no swaying.

Other witnesses said that when the crash came, the driver stuck to his post and did all that was possible to prevent overturning.

The inquest was adjourned. Jackson is to have a military funeral.

BLOWN OUT TO SEA.

TWO BOATS MISSING IN FIRTH OF FORTH.

Three pleasure boats, which put out in the Firth of Forth, were caught in a sudden gale and carried out to sea. Two of them are still missing, and anxiety is felt for the safety of their seven occupants.

The third boat was rescued by a Dieppe steamer after tossing about the mouth of the Firth for four or five hours. The crew of the Dieppe vessel threw the occupants of the pleasure boat (two soldiers and two girls) a rope, by means of which three of the party got safely on board, but before the rescue could be completed the small craft drifted away with one of the soldiers. He was driven by the wind on to the Fife coast, where he made a safe landing.

Other pleasure boats from Portobello also had exciting experiences, and in one case a party of women and one man were rescued with great difficulty.

ROUMANIA'S OFFENSIVE.

Message from Bucharest show that the Roumanians are preparing a great offensive beyond the Dniester. Several regiments from Transylvania have arrived at Bendery, which will be the base for the operations.

M. Mazeivsky, the new representative of Petloura at Bucharest, is considering an agreement between Roumania and the Ukraine for common action against the Bolshevists.

THE SHAH'S VISIT.

It is learnt officially that the Shah of Persia will not, according to present arrangements, arrive in this country until the end of September or early in October.

FRENCH BOY SCOUTS.

SOLDIER'S FIRST TRAINING.

The French Army authorities have taken up the Boy-Scout movement, and a camp for Boy Scouts has been formed by the Military Governor of Paris, at which 350 Scouts will have a fortnight's training in physical drill, football, basket ball, swimming, trench digging, and fascine making.

It is hoped to make these holiday camps general, so that with the proposed shorter military service, the recruit will reach barracks not only fit and with the rudiments of military lore, but also eager for games and sports to relieve the tedium of his soldier life.

The Orient Express does not run any more, as the Austrian railway authorities declare that they have no coal.

BOLSHEVIST NAVAL DEFEAT.

NO PARALLEL DURING WAR.

From a naval standpoint the action of Sunday in the Gulf of Finland has no parallel in any action that took place during the great war. In view of the reported increase of efficiency in the Russian warships and of the alleged risk that our forces might be overwhelmed by a sudden attack, it is all the more remarkable that four vessels, including one of 23,000 tons and one 17,000 ton battleship should have been sunk by vessels of the smallest class in the British Navy. British casualties number 17.

The British coastal motor-boats are not more than seventy feet long, with a crew of five, are armed with torpedoes or depth charges, and move on the water rather than through it, their bows pointing high in the air and thus reducing resistance. A speed of well over forty knots is attainable, and such is their handiness, combined with the small target presented, that they have a larger proportion of successful attacks to their credit than any other class of warship or torpedo craft.

As an example of war experience applied to naval construction these boats are a splendid testimony to the skill and ingenuity of British shipbuilders and marine engineers.

PEACE TREATY.

WILSON PLEADS FOR RATIFICATION.

At a conference with the United States Senate Foreign Committee on Tuesday President Wilson appealed for the immediate ratification of the Peace Treaty, saying that the re-adjustment of American life to normal conditions depended on this. Until then business would be at a great disadvantage, and the nations who had ratified the Treaty would get in front of the United States in trade. The only obstacle to ratification was the doubt as to the meaning of certain provisions of the League of Nations Covenant. The Committee must either accept the Treaty and Covenant as they stood or reject them. Other treaties were delayed pending the ratification of the German Treaty.

YORKSHIRE AT WORK.

BUT PITS BADLY DAMAGED.

West Yorkshire miners have decided to resume work at all the pits as soon as possible. This decision was announced at the conclusion of a conference between the miner's representatives and the coal-owners held at Leeds on Wednesday.

Inquiries in the coalfield show that from a great many pits no coal will be obtained for at least a month, owing to the damage sustained to the workings by water and by falls of roof.

It will be remembered that the trouble, so far as the miners of South Yorkshire were concerned, came to an end last Saturday.

The West Yorkshire men, however, held out on a question of making the winding engine-men's wages retrospective. The owners then said that there could be no discussion until the men resumed work.

ANOTHER LITTLE DRINK.

BEER RESTRICTIONS TO BE REMOVED.

Colonel Gretton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it was intended to regard the Output of Beer Restrictions Act, restrictions on the quantity of beer brewed to which the Act applies as having been removed by order under the Defence of the Realm Acts.

Mr. A. Chamberlain: It is proposed to repeal the Output of Beer Restrictions Act early next session, and, in the meantime, in view of the undertaking to remove all restrictions on the output of beer, I have thought it right to instruct the Commissioners of Customs and Excise to refrain from enforcing the provisions of the Act.

T.F. BRIGADIERS.

In a written answer to Mr. Samuel Samuel, Mr. Forster says that it is not intended to appoint brigade commanders to Territorial brigades until the future of the Territorial Force is finally decided. Territorial Force brigade commanders will be appointed from the list of officers selected as qualified for such appointments. The claims of Territorial Force officers will be considered with others.

PREMIER'S HOLIDAY.

The Prime Minister and Mrs. Lloyd George left Waterloo on Wednesday night for Britanny, where they will spend a holiday. As the train was leaving, a General who was seeing a lady friend off, tried to get her a seat in the same coach as the Premier's party, but he had to find accommodation elsewhere.

TRANSPORT SUNK.

One hundred and ten persons are reported missing.

SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN.

LUDENDORFF'S REVELATIONS.

An instalment of Ludendorff's memoirs which appears in the "Times" contains Ludendorff's story of the inception of the "unrestricted submarine campaign" which started on February 1st 1917. In the previous August, both Hindenburg and Ludendorff were opposed to "unrestricted" war by submarines, not on principle but on the ground that the time was not ripe. There was some fear of Holland and Denmark entering the war, but after the German victories in Roumania this apprehension disappeared and "none was felt as to Switzerland, Spain, Sweden, or Norway." It was, however, deemed very probable that the United States would join in the war against Germany. The Chief of the Naval Staff, a friend of the Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, was confident that the campaign would have decisive results within six months. The loss of freight space and the reduction of overseas imports would produce economic difficulties in England that would render the continuance of the war impossible. Shortage of shipping would cut down transport of munitions and in particular transport from England to France, which traffic could also be directly attacked. After more tentative peace talk the Kaiser on January 9th 1917 authorised the unrestricted submarine campaign for February 1st. Ludendorff, less sanguine than the naval experts, reckoned that perhaps within twelve months tangible results might be awaited. He admits that he was wrong.

DOG SAVES CHILDREN.

The children were in a yard watching the dog swimming in the River Don. At the foot of the yard is a fence and a drop of five feet into the water. The children leaned against the fence and it gave way.

Lucy Morris, aged 5, climbed on to the retriever's back in the water and Horace Porter, aged 7, caught hold of its tail. The dog turned for the bank, and the children landed on a strip of sand.

Walter Gilbert swam out to the others and saved them, bringing three to the bank in one journey.

SINN FEIN CAMP.

The recent raid on the Irish camp and college at Glandore, County Cork, led to sentences at Skibbereen, County Cork, of six months' imprisonment, without hard labour, on Professor O'Sullivan, Carlow College, and J. B. O Driscoll, rural councillor, Skibbereen. They were charged with unlawful assembly, illegal drilling, and having in their possession revolvers, automatic pistols, and ammunition.

Evidence showed that with 60 other Sinn Feiners they were living in a fully-equipped military camp, with German ground sheets and Irish volunteers' belts and uniforms. It is said that the men were preparing to make an attack on police barracks within a couple of miles of the camp.

MISSING GOLIATH.

A further message received by the French Military Aeronautics Department states that Dakar is still without tidings of the "Goliath" aerobus. Patrol boats have searched the coast, and the military and civil authorities have sent parties to explore inland. Although four days have now elapsed since the "Goliath" must have come down, it is still hoped that she has been able to land at some out-of-the-way spot where communications are difficult.

It is now recalled that Lieutenant Bossoutrot said that he intended flying the latter part of the voyage over the Atlantic, instead of keeping over land, and this thought renders the suspense doubly cruel.

INFLUENCE OF THE FILM.

When two brothers named Rimmington, aged 10 and 8, were charged at Leicester with breaking into houses and stealing jewellery, Treasury notes, and money to the value of £70, their father said the boys had been influenced by films, and they thought they were doing a film "stunt."

The Chief Constable said the lads, though not previously convicted, had bad records. They also admitted breaking into three other houses. Both are to go to an industrial school until they are 16.

CURBING PROFITEERS.

To defeat profiteering in potatoes in the Isle of Man, Mr. Joseph Cunningham, a member of the Manx Legislature offers, to sell and deliver to the island consumers potatoes at 1d. a pound. He is the largest grower in the island.

Cardiff Council suggest opening two open air markets. Maidstone Council are being urged to open a daily market.

While a squad was receiving instruction in machine gun work in a barrack-room, it was stated at Aldershot, Corporal Leslie Anderson, Machine Gun Guards, was killed by a live cartridge getting into a dummy clip by mistake.

V.C. MAKES GOOD.

REGAINS HIS COMMISSION.

Lance-Corporal Onions, who now lives at Monkseaton, Northumberland, enlisted early in the war and was soon promoted lieutenant in a well-known regiment. In London one evening, he got into a disturbance in a restaurant. Someone from the back gave an instruction which he resented rather forcibly. The new arrival was an assistant provost-marshal, to whom when he recognised him, Onions offered an apology. On inquiry it was found that Onions was spending a week-end in London without leave. He was court-martialled and cashiered.

Determined to make good, Onions at once volunteered as a private in the Devonshire Regiment, and on arrival at the Devon's training depot he asked to be sent to France immediately. On April 17, 1917, he went to the Devons in France.

A month later he found himself in a hospital at home. As soon as he was well again, he pleaded to be sent back to France and in March 1918 he was again with the 1st Devons. He was promoted lance-corporal, and on August 22, south of Achiet-le-Petit, his chance came. In company with another man, he was sent out to re-establish communication with a battalion on the right. In an old trench he saw a large force of Germans approaching. He placed his comrade on his exposed flank and opened rapid fire.

They inflicted heavy losses on the Germans, and some threw up their hands. Corporal Onions called on them to surrender, and no fewer than 200 Germans gave up, Onions, who was wounded, and his companion marching them back to headquarters.

For this he received the Victoria Cross, but regretted that he was not restored to his former rank as officer. When demobilized in March last he gave up all hope of reinstatement, but since then his case has been considered by the Army Council, and Corporal Onions now states that he has been notified that he is to be "gazetted" 2nd lieutenant as an act of grace in recognition of valuable services. He will relinquish the temporary commission on the same date, but will be granted permission to wear the uniform on appropriate military occasions.

SELF DEFENCE.

The young man, Herbert George Ladbrook, who has been charged with the manslaughter of Private Lawrence Kelly at Sutton, has been discharged by the Sutton magistrates.

Evidence was given that Kelly, who appeared to be the worse for drink, struck at Ladbrook, and the latter merely defended himself. Kelly slipped and fell and died later.

The jury at the inquest had returned a verdict of accidental death, and the magistrates yesterday said they would not be justified in sending Ladbrook for trial.

THE LATEST STRIKES.

The cranemen at Swansea Docks have struck work unofficially for a minimum wage of five guineas per week.

The builders' men in Buckingham are on strike, the labourers demanding 1s. per hour instead of 9½d., and the tradesmen 1s. 3d. instead of 1s. The builders state that, owing to contracts, they cannot at the moment agree to the increase.

FRATEL'S WITNESSES.

It is stated that the Convening Officer has granted the request of William Fratel, assistant surgeon in the Indian Me ical Department, who is being tried in connection with the alleged neglect of sick in Mesopotamia, that the Court Martial should be adjourned in order to enable Fratel to call witnesses from India and Mesopotamia. It is expected that these witnesses cannot reach England in less than two months.

HOW THE WAR ENDED.

Addressing the Canadian Club at Ottawa, General Sir William Currie, Commander of the Canadian forces in France, stated that the Supreme War Council early in August 1918, had planned the battle of Amiens as the last battle of the year, the purpose being after taking our objectives to dig in for the winter and await the development of a great American Army. So great was the success along the whole line, however, that the armies pressed forward, ending the war.

EXONERATED.

At a Naval Court-martial on Wednesday at Chatham into the loss of the mine-sweepers "Gentian" and "Myrtle" in the Baltic on July 15th it was stated that the "Gentian" struck a mine while sinking another mine, and the "Myrtle" ran into the mine and sank. The "Myrtle's" crew were taken aboard the "Gentian" and the whole were afterwords transferred to another vessel.

The court exonerated the crew of both vessels.

AN EDUCATED ARMY.

Of all the important utterances made by the Secretary of State for War while with us, we would fain give greatest weight to those concerning the education of the army. No absolute dictum was pronounced, but the manner in which the subject cropped up time after time leads us to hope that it is the subject to which the Army Council is giving immediate and earnest attention.

Tried out in the Rhine Army, education, a proper well-organized education, has proved itself to be a feasible proposition. The war has proved to us that an army educated in many directions is essential.

War used to be an affair of man to man and boldness and brawn were the requisites. To-day it is largely an affair of mechanism and science, man's chief part is to provide the directing brains. In every department, science has exhibited her power, and is not to be denied that to-day a scientific training is necessary to efficient soldiery.

In the war now ended, we found ourselves pitted against a scientifically constructed and trained organization and at times it caught us napping. But when once awakened we were soon able to show that we had the brains; they simply needed the spur of action to equal, and in many cases to outdo, those of the enemy.

We remember seeing some notes taken by a "gas officer" in the early days of the gas outrage. They were ludicrous, a boy, with even such an elementary training in science as is given in a British higher-grade school, would have laughed at them, or wept. Yet the officer who had taken them was energetic and painstaking, he simply lacked education in science. As in gas, so in many other departments new to this war, our men must be trained, not merely taught things but educated, trained to seek, and to find, the why and the wherefore.

It may be urged that this is unnecessary in the rank and file, but it is untrue. The man, who tackles his job — however lowly it may be — with the knowledge of why he does this thing and that thing, is infinitely more enthusiastic and effective than the automaton who works in the dark.

Apart from possible warlike action there is another reason why the soldiers should be educated, a reason of infinite and indisputable importance. Hitherto the army has been looked upon more or less as a blind-alley profession, but it ought not be so.

Despite various philanthropic associations, despite War Office actions, we have frequently found the time-expired soldier to be at a loose end, no trade in his hands, no special knowledge enabling him to win a decent living in civil life.

Under the new scheme, the scheme which we fervently desire to see developed to the utmost, the years of training for war will also be years of training for peace, and at a period in a youth's life when he is best able to learn.

If the scheme is developed as it has begun, developed fully, we shall have a much more efficient fighting machine, men will be much happier in army life, and when the return to civilian paths takes place, the ex-soldier will have a ready-forged weapon in his hands to enable him to wage the war of peace.

Mr. Churchill's words on several occasions indicated that the value of education is recognized and the whole nation should be ready to back up the scheme which makes for greater efficiency both in war and in peace.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

A little whitewashed cottage with a smithy near by, and of all the wonders the proverbial chestnut tree spreading its branches over all like a healing shadow!

It is in the centre of the village and in front there runs the long white road leading to the interior.

The blacksmith has grizzled hair and a wiry frame. He might have been jolly once upon a time, but he seems to have passed from the sunshine of life into darkness. His weather beaten face has a hard grim look, and his eyes are fixed and staring. Has there been some great tragedy in his life or is it the constant glare of the fire? I wonder!

What a strange fascination there is about a forge and a blacksmith! In my boyhood days it was my one dream of earthly bliss to wield that mighty hammer and make the sparks fly, but circumstances decided otherwise.

I turn aside from my walk and join the children. The glowing coal, the red hot iron, the waiting horse and the quaint old Prussian awakened my interest. I was under a spell, and coming back across the years an old school song hummed in my brain:

My face is smutty I know.
I'm rough and tough and haven't a care
I'm happy to work alone.
Cling! Clang! Cling! Clang! Cling!
Plenty to eat and plenty to drink,
Rough and tough and happy you see,
Always as jolly as jolly can be,
Wouldn't you like to be like me?"

Whether the old man I am gazing at could come up to that description is doubtful. He has passed through hard times when food and drink were not too plentiful in this part of Rhineland.

What wonderful processions has this knight of the hammer seen passing backward and forward on the road near his smithy! There came a day when the mighty host of Prussians, with their guns, their cavalry, their infantry marched by.

Day after day, host after host, followed in quick succession and his old anvil rang, with the music of triumph. War! War! It thrilled his blood and he saw red. His comrades were forging the chains of a great empire, they were beating to the dust their enemies even as he forged and beat the red hot iron with his mighty blows.

Then came the awakening, slow but sure, and passing the old smithy he saw the dispirited remnants of that host return. In that hour the music of his anvil was in the minor key. The glory of his race had departed, they had lived by the sword and perished by the sword.

One morning a greater surprise awakened him and looking down the old road he saw the advancing hosts of the might of Britain. Their bands were playing the songs of victory; that day his anvil was silenced and the hard look deepened in his face.

Who knows the thoughts passing through the grim old blacksmith's mind as he still swings his hammer? He must work to live, and so I leave him and the children, and pass on my way.

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

VIII. A RAMBLE TO ALTENBERG.

We have priceless opportunities in Rhineland for enriching our imagination and knowledge and at the same time keeping ourselves physically fit. Our pleasures are close at hand, but do we really make the most of them?

Have we heard the call of the road, that intense longing to explore the unknown pathways, revel in new beauties, and at the close of the day feel the joy of achievements and renewed health?

To begin with, your spirits are volatile, your mind alert, your body in the pink of condition. How readily you find in the details and incidents of your tramp infinite amusement and food for thought!

Suppose you take the tram over the Hohenzollern bridge to Dünwald, and then begin your tramp. Turn to the right at the end of the village down the road which leads to Altenberg and Dabringhausen.

It is a long, long trail but you will pass through the sweetest and quaintest villages in Rhineland. The road is flanked by avenues of fruit trees and verdant pastures. You cross meandering brooks and perfect trout streams. If you are observant and have a smattering of botany, ornithology, and geology you will revel in the rocks, the flowers, the birds, and without even a smattering of any 'ology you will rejoice in the grandeur of nature, and instinctively make comparison with your own beauty spots in the homeland, and that in itself will prove a benediction and chase away all the monotony and dullness of the city and lowlands.

Passing through Odenthal, with its quaint church and old bridge the scenery becomes richer. Pinewoods and hills stretch away in the distance and in the meadows you will notice the splendid herds of cattle grazing.

At Altenburg you must rest and explore the beauties of the place. Here you can obtain refreshments for it is a noted forest health resort and popular with the residents of Cologne.

This small village has one big surprise—an imposing Cathedral, a real gem of architecture and its setting of towering woods is perfect. You will be thrilled as you enter it, especially if someone happens to be playing the organ. Its simple grandeur, massive columns, vaulted roof and stained glass windows impress you and fill you with something akin to awe.

Near by are the remains of an old monastery and a magnificent meadow used by our officers as a polo ground. You can also wander through exquisite pathways in the wood, and if dusty and tired bathe in a stream of surpassing sweetness.

As you have already walked seven miles, I should suggest that you entrain at Burscheid, this will mean another three miles walk but it will well repay you. You pass under the ancient stone archway opposite the Cathedral and climb the steep ascent through the woods to the road. Here a guide post will point the way. The view from the top will live foreover in your memory, it is almost indescribable. You can have tea at Burscheid and you will return to Cologne with a wonderful feeling of exaltation.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF EDUCATION.

It is the prerogative of the schoolboy to make at one time or another some glaring blunder when answering a question or setting forth his views and ideas on a particular subject or on things in general: in short, it is the schoolboy's privilege to perpetrate a "howler."

Taking advantage of this, though all unwittingly, a young Briton wrote, "On the top of a submarine is a long narrow tube called a periwinkle." How delightfully absurd! — a veritable howler!

Like the poor, we have the howler always with us. The schoolboys of yesterday are the soldiers of to-day. And now that the troops are attending classes under the Army Education Scheme we must not be surprised if these children of a larger growth produce occasional howlers which, if not exactly like those of their earlier years, will differ from them in degree rather than in kind.

A history class had been learning a list of dates: 55 B.C. — Caesar's first invasion of Britain; 43 A.D. — Roman Conquest began; 410 A.D. — Romans left Britain. When question time came round, one pupil gravely informed his teacher: "Julius Caesar came 55 B.C. and went away at 4.10 p.m." This would-be historian is by no means the only one who has come a cropper when dealing with abbreviations. It was a juvenile admirer of Sir R. Baden-Powell who, when asked the meaning of "B.Sc." immediately replied "Boy Scout."

Nor are humorous mistakes of this description made entirely by the sterner sex. We are indebted to a budding Waac, for the delightful information: "King John lost his crown in the laundry; he never smiled again," whilst her elder sister, in writing a short biography of the poet quite seriously tells us: "After twice committing suicide Cowper lived till 1800, when he died from natural causes."

After listening to their teacher read the Casquet scene from the "Merchant of Venice" a class was asked to write an account of what they had heard. From one of the resulting compositions we learn: "Portia was not allowed to tell the suitors which one she favoured, but she gave Bassanio the glad eye."

Many will be surprised to know that "St. Andrew is the patent saint of Scotland; the patent saint of England is John Bull," whilst R.A.M.C. personnel may be particularly interested in the information: "An appendix is a portion of a book which no one has yet found to be of any use;" and also to learn that "The Tropic of Cancer is a painful and incurable disease."

To a beginner in history we are indebted for one of the worst, or perhaps, best blunders on record. His ideas about the Provisions of Oxford, Magna Charta the Peoples' Charter of 1848 and certain modern movements could hardly be of the clearest when he wrote: "The chief provisions of the Great Charter were: (a) Universal Suffering, (b) Votes for Women, (c) Abolition of Property." *B. Our Readers' Varied Views.

BAND PERFORMANCES.

Sir,—I agree with your correspondent's view regarding band concerts. Too many band performances are given within units where comparatively small numbers get advantage of them. Were these performances given in central places and previously announced, I am sure they would be very largely attended.

MUSICAL.

FOR WEEK-ENDS.

Sir,—Might I suggest that a residential club at Bonn or at some other popular resort on the Rhine would be greatly appreciated. The present officers Club at Bonn is excellently managed and provides very good facilities for meals, but is not residential

There are many officers stationed in Cologne whose duties permit of their spending week-ends, but the difficulty in many cases is to find sleeping accommodation. WEEK-ENDER.

CLUB'S CLOSED DOOR.

Sir,—Many great improvements have recently been observed in the administration of No 1 N.A.C.B. Officers Club, Cologne. But why, oh why, is the main entrance invariably closed?

I have, I should think, asked every member of the club staff the cause of this, but nobody has been able to explain.

By keeping the door closed, officers are caused the inconvenience of walking round to the side door, while, all traffic being restricted to this entrance, there is always a great conglomeration of people in the narrow dining-room doorway. O.B.E.

DEFRAUDING SOLDIERS.

Sir,—Many German tradesmen are defrauding soldiers by other means than selling spurious goods. Many of them have one price for Germans and a much larger one for the British.

Many articles are displayed in the windows at certain prices, but the intending purchaser finds when he enters the shop that a larger price is demanded. The only remedy is to boycott such shops entirely.

FAIR PLAY.

WIVES FOR COLOGNE.

Sir,—All honour to the lady-workers of the Y.M.C.A. for their efforts on behalf of the wives of men, but the need of their assistance is felt more keenly at points en route from Ostend to Cologne.

Many wives will be called upon to make the journey unaccompanied and undertake continental travel perhaps for the first time. It is natural then that they would be grateful for any assistance at Charing Cross station, Dover, etc. A vast organisation like the Y.M.C.A. should be able to render valuable help. Perhaps other readers will express their views.

GRATEFUL.

A READER'S PLAINT.

Sir,—Under the heading of "The Editor's Letterbox," many a topic is discussed and much of interest can be found in that column. But a point that strikes me is, why are so many replies written in such a satirical manner?

Surely a man is entitled to express his opinion without making comments which are written with the express purpose of ridicule. It is well to encourage the use of "The Cologne Post" for interchange of views upon current topics, but at the same time one cannot help feeling that a reply such as that of "The Open Mind" in your issue of to-day, is ungentlemanly.

May I call for a more friendly criticism and therefore encourage, rather than discourage, the use of your columns for the discussion of items of interest?

BIGGO.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.

Sir,—Why do the Post Office authorities cease to issue Treasury Notes, Postal Orders, War Savings Certificates, etc., during the period just prior to the value of the mark falling?

The soldier was paid between 1st and 15th August inclusive, at the then current rate of exchange, and was debited £1 for every 70 marks 60 pfg. drawn by him.

On 14th and 15th August he could not exchange his marks into English money through a British Post Office, at the same rate at which they had been paid to him, yet the rate of exchange was not altered until August 16th and by waiting until that date to exchange his marks into English money he would have to pay 77 marks 40 pfg.

The only exception to this rule was when an urgent case arose. The sum £1 could then be obtained by a soldier of upon receiving a note authorising same and signed by an O.C.

DEMOBILISABLE.

A REMARKABLE ENGINE.

Sir,—With regard to the starting of German railway locomotives by means of a clutch surely the writer has made a mistake and mixed it up with motors.

During my experience with locomotives I have never met or read of an engine of this type.

Anyone having a slight knowledge of the working of a loco, would know the impossibility of working it by that means, as it is driven straight from the cylinder direct to the driving wheel. The only way of working it by a clutch of this sort would be by means of a crank shaft and a friction clutch, and no friction clutch would ever stand the strain placed upon it by a railway engine.

The intermittent puffs he refers to, is the water pump working the clutch and is simply the placing forward of the reversing lever which opens the cut off of the valves working in the steam chest and thus allows the steam to rush into the cylinder and put the engine in motion.

The jerky motion can be eliminated by the gradual releasing of the vacuum brake.

LIGHT DIVISION.

1st and 2nd Brigades Hold Successful Athletic Meetings.

EXCELLENT PROGRAMMES.

The Athletic Sports held by the 2nd Light Brigade, at Bavert, Wald, were a distinct success. The meeting was favoured with delightful weather and the very fine track presented an animated scene from the first race at 10.15 hours till the presentation of prizes at 19.30 hours.

Large crowds thronged the ropes all day and loudly voiced their enthusiasm. The Bands of the 6th London Regt. (by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Brady D.S.O.,) and 9th London Regt. The arrangements which enabled the programme to be carried through without a hitch, reflected great credit upon the committee.

Among those present at the meeting were Major-General G. D. Jeffries, C.B., C.M.G., and officers of the Light Divisional Staff. Special mention should be made of the fine work of Lieut. 1st BRIGADE.

On Saturday last the Sportplatz Solingen was the scene of the sports of the 1st Light Bde. (comprising the 13th, 18th, and 20th Battalions K.R.R.C.). The weather was ideal, and huge numbers of officers and O.R.'s attended. Brigadier-General G. V. Hordern, C.B., C.M.G., opened the proceedings at 15.00 hours by inspecting the Brigade Picquets, after which the sports commenced. Each item of the long programme was keenly contested, but the honours of the day fell easily to the 18th Battalion, which carried off ten first prizes out of a possible 14.

The 18th Battalion Concert Party ("The Greenjackets") in fancy attire, enlivened the proceedings, and during the afternoon the massed Brigade bands rendered a most enjoyable selection of music. The "joyrides" on the two tanks were in great demand and thoroughly enjoyed.

A most delightful afternoon was brought to a close by the presentation of prizes by the wife of Col. H. A. Vernon, D.S.O., O.C. 18th Battalion.

STANDARD GOLF BALL?

In golfing circles there has been considerable discussion of late respecting the proposed standardisation of the golf ball, and it would appear that the volume of opinion is entirely opposed to any such proceeding. The main line of argument is that given average wind and normal weather conditions three shots will still be required to reach long holes with the present small heavy ball. But there are some golfers with low handicaps who view with alarm the excessive hitting powers of themselves and their friends.

Friday, August 22, 1919.

Surface wind between south-west and west, about 10 m.p.h. Mainly fair, but sky extensively covered with low cloud at times, especially in the early part of the day. Good visibility.

SERGEANT'S HAT TRICK.

Under ideal weather conditions the 3rd Battalion Machine Gun Corps held their sports on the ground south of the boat bridge, Mulheim yesterday afternoon. There were a large number of visitors, amongst whom were many English ladies. Not the least enjoyable part of the programme was the excellent musical selections played by the band of the 9th. (Queens' Royal) Lancers, which was present by kind permission of Lt.Col. R.H.R. Brocklebank, D.S.O.

The catering arrangements were excellent and were appreciated fully by the large number of visitors.

SAILOR'S SUCCESS.

Seaman Hall wins fine fight with Housego.

Seaman Hall (Chatham) compelled the hard-hitting Fred Housego (Paddington) to hold out his hand at the Ring after a really fine struggle lasting 14 rounds. The bout had scarcely commenced before Hall's friends received a surprise. Housego, using his left hand with fine judgment, forced an opening for the right which caught the sailor beautifully on the point. After taking a rest of eight seconds, however, Hall resumed and easily outpointed his rival. Housego, after taking two counts in the second and one in the fourth round, boxed very strongly at times, but could never really claim an advantage over the sturdy sailor.

A peculiar incident occurred in the seventh round. Housego, whilst in the act of rising at the count of eight from a knock-down blow, saw Hall rushing over towards him with a threatening right-hand uppercut. The Paddington man, to escape, immediately placed his right knee on the floor. Meanwhile, the timekeeper, calling out the fateful "10," Hall went to his corner under the impression that he had won. The referee, however, decided that the bout should proceed. Subsequently Hall had much the best of the exchanges, and, after being put down in the 14th round, Housego retired.

GREAT WICKETKEEPER DEAD.

The death occurred on Wednesday in a nursing home of Gregor MacGregor, the famous England and Middlesex wicket-keeper.

He was born at Edinburgh on August 31, 1869, and educated at Uppingham and Cambridge. He got his blue as a Freshman, and for several seasons his wicket-keeping to the bowling of S. M. J. Woods was the talk of the cricket world. He visited Australia with the English team in 1891, and for some years was captain of Middlesex.

MacGregor was also a famous Rugby football player, appearing either as full-back or three-quarter for Scotland in twelve international engagements—five times against England. At Cambridge he played full-back against Oxford in the matches of 1889 and 1890.

EXCITING FINISHES.

Narrow Wins In "Cologne Post" Cup Matches.

DEADLY BOWLING.

Low scoring, happily, when characteristic of both sides does not deprive a cricket match of the possibility of an exciting finish. Such has been the case in several C.P.C. matches played within the past few days.

Bowling for the London D.M.T. Coy., against the Southern D.M.T. Coy., Pte. Jacobs secured 7 wickets for no runs. The following are the latest reports to hand:—

75th BDE. R.F.A. (51 for 7) v. 1/5 WEST YORKS (49) at Marienhof. The West Yorks batted first, Cpl. Marriot scoring 20 for the visitors. Bdr. Mitchell bowled splendidly for the Gunners taking 8 wickets for 11 runs.

"MAPS" 4th F.S. BN. (82) v. 31st LABOUR GROUP (57) at Klottenberg. Best performances were L/Cpl. Saunders 26 for Maps, and Cpl. Tranter 7 wickets for 17 runs for Labour Group.

LONDON DIVISION M.T. COY. (100) v. SOUTHERN DIV. M.T. Coy. (8) at Thielenbruch. The Southern Div. M.T. Coy. absolutely collapsed before the bowling of Pte. Jacobs and Lieut. Weight. The former created what is very close to being a record in the Cologne Post Competition by securing 7 wickets for 0 runs, the latter taking 3 for 6. For the winners, Lieut. Bailey played a good innings and secured the top score of 39, other scores being Pte. Howkins 17, Cpl. Wright 16 and Pte. Hey 13.

1/5th SOUTH STAFFS (69) v. 145th SIEGE BTY. R.G.A. (52). For 1/5th S.S. Pte. Parsons scored 19, Pte. Davis 11, and C.Q.M.S. Critchley 34. For 145 S.B. Cpl. Burden scored 17.

1/5th SOUTH STAFFS (180) v. 16th FIELD AMB. (40) at Gommern. For F.A. Pte. Saville scored 12. For 1/5th S.S. Pte. Johnson scored 19, Sergt. Burton 24, Pte. Parsons 58, C.Q.M.S. Critchley 30 and C. S. M. Norman 23.

185 SIEGE BTY., R.G.A. (48) v. IX CORPS M.T. COY. (40) at Flamersheim. The game got very exciting towards the finish with only 5 to win and 3 wickets to fall, two of them fell for 4 runs leaving one run to win; however this was easily got and the IX Corps total passed. White for the IX Corps took for 18 runs, while for 185 Siege Bty. Bdr. Yewdall took 5 for 10 including 4 maidens in his 10 overs.

23rd ROYAL FUSILIERS (66) v. 51st KINGS LIVERPOOLS (21) at Klop. For R.F.'s Pte. Birkley scored 21 and Pte. Rodgers 15 while Pte. Birkley took 4 wickets for 9 runs and Capt. Nelson 5 for 11.

4th ROYAL SUSSEX (118) v. 51st AUX. BUS. COY. (62) at Siegburg. For 4th Royal Sussex Lieut. Bryan scored 79 and took 4 wickets for 2 runs, Pte. Williams took 3 for 4. For 51st Aux. Bus. Coy., Sergt. Tudor scored 42 and took 3 wickets for 42 runs.

2nd BATT. M.G.C. (146 for 5) v. 180st LABOUR COY. (38) at Zollstock. The Labour Coy. batted first and were dismissed for 38 runs. Pte. Pickles had 4 wickets for 7 runs and Sergt. Mitchell 5 for 22. For Labour Coy. Burroughs made 16. The M.G.'s had no difficulty in knocking off the runs required. Pte. Pickles made 51 retired, Sergt. Mitchell 39 not out, and Pte. Jones 34 not out.

53rd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (160) v. CAV. DIV. H.Q. (52). For the 53rd Northumberland Fus. Crompton (46), Tennant (36), and Feather (31) were the principal scorers.

To the doubles championship which they won at Wimbledon, Norman E. Brookes and G. L. Patterson, the famous Australian pair, have now added the American title.

In the final at Newton (Mass.) Brookes and Patterson defeated Tilden and Richards (U.S.A.) in a match which ran to five sets, the scores being 8—6, 6—3, 4—6, 4—6, 6—2.

JEROME TRAVERS DEFEATED.

The utmost astonishment was caused on the Oakmont Country Club's course, Allegheny County, Pa., on Tuesday when in the first of the match play stages of the United States Golf Association's Amateur Championship, Jerome Dunstan Travers, winner of the event in 1907, 1908, 1912, and 1913, was defeated by C. G. Waldo, Junr. of Detroit.

Travers never settled down to his proper game, and was beaten by 8 and 7.

Charles ("Chic") Evans, Junr., the seventeen-year-old boy competitor, "Bobby" Jones, and Francis Ouimet, were among those who passed into the next round.

74th Bde. R.F.A. (279 for 8) v. Northern D.A.H.Q. and N.D.A.C. (166).

Played at Lindenthal, this match produced some excellent cricket. Going in sixth man for the Brigade, Lieut. Grehan going in last man for D.A.H.Q. compiled 65, his innings being a display of excellent cricket.

"B" Battery at first looked as if they were going to do as they liked with the bowling. However, the bowlers soon altered their methods, Gnr. Davis taking the last four wickets with four successive balls.

By One Run.

RICHMOND WATERMEN'S REGATTA.

Richmond Watermen's Regatta, the oldest event of its kind in the United Kingdom, was held on Wednesday.

It was unfortunate that the weather should have been bad, for the proceeds were divided between the Richmond Royal Hospital and the Richmond Watermen's Benevolent Fund. The four-oared race, open to the police of the United Kingdom, for a challenge cup, was won by a local crew (V Division), and City-road (G Division) were second. Ernest Barry, the world's sculling champion, rowed in the Twickenham crew which took part in the final heat for a prize of 20 guineas, presented by Lord Cave, for fours composed of Service men. The race was won by a four from Hammersmith.

Wimbledon Park have won the Wimbledon League championship and the Hood Cup by reason of their better shots average over Cottenham Park.

PLYMOUTH ROCK BEATEN.

Race Meetings at Stockton and Bath.

HORSES "MISSING."

Race Meetings were held at Stockton and Bath on Wednesday, the results being appended.

At the former meeting Prince Herod was expected to run in the first race, but no trace could be found of the crack Foxhill two-year-old. It appears that he was sent off from Foxhill to Stockton with three other valuable horses—Spiral Spin, Eager Agnes colt, and Gay Lord, each of which had engagements yesterday, but they had evidently gone astray or been hung up on the railway.

In the absence of the unbeaten Prince Herod, the unbeaten Plymouth Rock was made a warm favourite, but to the consternation of those who laid the odds, Piraeus, after giving a lot of trouble at the post, got off first and, never being headed, won by a length and a half from Griggs's smart colt.

RAIN STOPS PLAY.

Only Two Hours Cricket In Kent v. Lancs Match.

To the great disappointment of over four thousand spectators, 3,872 paying for admission to the Bat and Ball Ground, Gravesend, on Wednesday, only about two hours' cricket was witnessed in the opening of the return game between Kent and Lancashire. Drizzling rain and a very heavy shower in the afternoon was responsible for the curtailment.

NO MORE 2-DAY CRICKET.

Important Decision by Advisory Committee.

There is to be no more two-day county cricket.

At the meeting this week of the Advisory County Cricket Committee it was decided that next season play in first-class matches shall extend over three days.

The committee decided that in 1920 points will be allotted as follows:—

	Pts.
For a win outright	5
For a lead on the first innings in an incompleted match	2
For each side in a tie match	2½
For each side in a tie on first innings in an incompleted match	1

Percentage will be reckoned on the basis of points scored to points obtainable. Matches in which the two sides have not completed an innings each will be ignored.

Officers and men who were serving in 1919 and will be serving in 1920 in a county regiment will be qualified to play for that county in 1920, provided they have not played for any other county.

CURIOUS CRICKET INCIDENT.

Gilligan, after batting thirty-five minutes, walked away thinking he was bowled, as Boddington knocked the bails off. At the close of the innings, however, Blake, the square-leg umpire, said he was not stumped, but the scorers had recorded him as being out that way, and credited R. Tyldesley with the wicket.

"Razor" Smith.

"Razor" Smith, who is farming somewhere in Norfolk, and who has only played one game of cricket this year, went to London specially to be present at Hobbs' benefit match.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

New Leave Club Hours.

By request, the hours of the Leave Club entertainments have been altered to their original times. Dances on Mondays Wednesdays, and Saturdays will therefore be from 6.30—9.0 and entertainments on Tuesdays and Fridays from 7.0—9.0, while the Sunday concerts will start at 6.30 p. m.

Allied Band To Visit Cologne.

A great feature of next Sunday's concert at the British Empire Leave Club will be the Belgian Band of the 1st Grenadiers. This is the first time an Allied Band has given a concert in Cologne, and their fame has so far preceded them, that they will doubtless be given a very hearty welcome by the British troops on the Rhine. By special request the hour has been changed to 6.30 p.m., finishing at 8.45. Among the soloists will be Miss Ada Moore and Major Greenlees, while Lieuts Mearns and Ramsay will sing a duet, and Cpl. Rossi will play a violin solo.

Bump!

"The Crumps" having given an "al fresco" performance at the Army Horse Show this week were returning by lorry to the Palace Theatre, where they were due to appear at 6 o'clock, when they narrowly escaped what might have been a serious accident. Their driver, trying to avoid knocking down some civilians in the Kalk road, collided with a tramcar with a horrible crash. However, it was soon discovered that no one was injured beyond a severe shaking.

An Appreciation.

"R.E." writes:—Permit me to say how much Miss Sara Silvers concert was appreciated by us at Euskirchen where she appeared a few evenings ago. The patriotic tone occurring all through was splendid and supplied what is often lacking in our concert programmes of to-day. Her songs of the "Sister Service" must have appealed to many of us who realise what that glorious "Silent Navy" of ours has done. To her closing verse of the evening comes back the answer "God bless our women-folk" and thanks for all they have done for us.

The Jingle-Johnnies.

In their cosy little theatre in the Infanterie-Kaserne, Bonn, the party of the 16th Lancashire-Fus., "The Jingle Johnnies," are giving delightful little shows from time to time. I went down there the other evening and quite enjoyed myself. They are augmented by a charming orchestra under the direction of Lieut. Cocker, who was also the producer of the show. The general effects and lighting are excellently carried out under Sergt. Kenyon. I was much struck by the gorgeousness of the dresses. The concerted numbers were excellent and the individual turns very versatile. Commendable, too, are the scenic paintings of L/Cpl. Norman, and Ptes. Ward and Cosling.

The Artistes.

First and foremost among the performers is Sergt. Preston, whose comedy ranges from an Elizabethan Captain to Old Bill. Pte. Pullen in the sketch and in vaudeville is very good. Lieut. Gilmore makes a dainty "girl," while Sergt. Griffiths has a pleasing voice: his rendering of "Sympathy" called for much applause. There is an excellent conjurer in the party who addes to the versatility of the evening. L Cpl. Cotton, Ptes. Cosling, Hudson, Nixon, Reynolds, and Capt. Cox are the other members of the caste. Last, but not least, Lieut. Chester gave some clever solo and chorus items. He is to be the future producer of the party. The show concluded with a laughter-provoking army sketch.

29th Brigade, R.G.A., "Smoker."

The W.O's and Sergeants of the above Brigade held a highly successful "Smoker" at the Krause Saal, Endenich, last week. The large messing hall was very tastefully arranged. The catering was productive of much gratifying comment and equalled only by the splendid vocal and musical renderings by really talented artistes. R.S.M. Freeman, taking the chair amid many cheers, called upon B.S.M. Mogan to open the programme. The turns then followed in rapid succession, each artiste receiving much applause.

Songs were rendered by B.S.M.'s Eade and Morgan, B.Q.M.S.'s Earith and Milne, Sergeants Burt, Billing, Cornwall and Spredbury, Corporal Woomack and Sadler Stevens. Bombardier Ranicar, and Gunners Burnham and Davison officiated at the piano.

Special mention should be made of B.S.M. Eade, the well-known variety artiste, who "enthused" the audience by his versatility. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by a vote of thanks being passed to the Chairman.

JACQUES.

OLD SCOUTS CIRCLE.

Last week was spent in exploring the vicinity of Coblenz and Treves. The heartiest thanks of the circle are due to the secretary of the American Y.M.C.A., Coblenz, for his splendid co-operation. Many pleasant hours were devoted to viewing the principal points of interest in Treves.

* * *

On Wednesday the circle was formed into patrol formation and many important points discussed. It was decided to proceed to Zülpich, on Saturday, meeting under the amusements board, main station, at 14.00 hours.

* * *

Yet another excursion has been planned for Sunday, a visit to Münstereifel, leaving Cöln main station by 11.49 train. A greater attendance is requested and expected by regular members.

CONSUMPTION TRIAL.

The result of the Ealing and District Motor-cycle Club motor consumption trial over a measured course has been announced. The run was by a 2¾ horse-power Wooler motor-cycle, owned and ridden by Mr. K. V. Chidley, who used the standard model cycle that took him from London to Edinburgh, from which he obtained the gold medal. The judge was Dr. Low (Major, R.A.S.). The consumption of petrol was 307 miles to the gallon, and it was so remarkable that another test over the same distance was made, with the result that 311 miles to the gallon were registered.

Ladies' Swimming Record.

On Friday, Aug. 29, Miss Phyllis M. Gant, of the Hammersmith Ladies' Swimming Club, will attempt to lower the long-distance swimming record of 36¼ miles in 10 hours 17 min. at present held by Miss Eileen Lee, of Teddington, made by her three years ago, when she swam from the Lock at Teddington, to Wapping and back again to Richmond.

Amateur Golf.

An open amateur golf tournament has been arranged to take place on the Shirley Park Course, Croydon, on Saturday, Oct. 25. Play will be by strokes over thirty-six holes, two prizes being given for handicap and two prizes for the best scratch returns.

Two Day Cricket.

Writing in the "Nation at News" Jack Hobbas says:—It goes without saying that twenty-two first-class players cannot do themselves justice, in a run-making sense, in a two day match, and although reckless hitting may be very good to watch, it is not so certain that it is good for the supremacy of English cricket.

Charity Tourney.

A professional golf tournament in aid of the widow and children of the late Tom Ball took place at Raynes Park on Wednesday.

Caledonians' Loss.

London Caledonians will lose a very clever forward in A. F. Niven, who on being demobilised has been transferred from London to Glasgow by his firm.

Golf Course for Sale.

Clacton golf course, two Martello towers, and the jetty are included in the 163 acres of freehold land on the Clacton sea front to be sold by Messrs. Knight, Frank, and Rutley.

Disappointing.

Without being unkind, what can be said of Monday's proceedings at Wolverhampton, where only sixteen horses competed in five events, and a sixth was declared void because there were no runners?

First Foal Winner.

Some buyers of yearlings have a prejudice and will not purchase first foals, though the first produce of their dams often turn out winners, as in the case of Thendara, who raced with the utmost gameness to relegate the favourite—the Nausican filly—to second place in the first race at Windsor.

Few Birds.

The opening days of the grouse season in Perthsire have confirmed the worst fears as regards a shortage of birds.

Brookes and Patterson.

In the tennis doubles final, played at Newton, Massachusetts, Messrs. Brookes and Patterson (Australian) defeated Messrs. Johnston and Griffin, 10—8, 9—7, 7—5.

Facts about Hobbs.

Hobbs' period of qualification for Surrey ceased in 1905, and he was immediately given a place in the county team. In his first county match (v. Essex, at the Oval) he scored 28 and 155.

Batted 5½ Hours.

Lancashire are entitled to high praise for drawing the game with Surrey. They entered on their second innings 283 in arrears with six hours and a quarter to bat—if they could. Makepeace batted for five hours and a half and scored 152.

Trout in Suction Pipe.

A monster trout, measuring 15in. in length, which had been drawn into the suction pipe at Sedmires Reservoir, Sheffield, held up the water supply in Broad-street. The corporation workmen, while trying to solve the difficulty of securing water, discovered the trout alive, firmly wedged in a section of the water main.

Ceratopogon Pulicaris!

You may not recognise his name—but you know him quite well. He's the little stinging fly which is biting everyone who tries to enjoy the evening outdoors. He will not bite you, however, if you always use. . . .

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

A Coincidence.

It is of interest to know that one of the subalterns of the 4th North Divisional Train Company taking part in Monday's Review appeared at his first review as a trooper in No. 4 Troop C Squadron, 4th Hussars, on 9th November 1896 at Bangalore, and his troop leader was Mr. Winston Churchill. It will in all probability be the last review this officer will take an active part in, and it will be all the more memorable to him as he was of course reviewed for the last time by the troop officer who led him at his first review.

Mrs. Winston Churchill at the Y.M.C.A.

The Cologne Central Y. M. C. A. was honoured by the visit from Mrs. Churchill and Lady Chetwode. Dr. Francis showed them over the vast premises and they were greatly impressed by the enormous crowd of men there and especially by the excellent dinners with which they were being served by Miss Rathbone and her staff. The distinguished visitors were evidently delighted with the Boxing Tournament of the London Division that was being held and Mrs. Churchill expressed her great regret that she was unable to remain to the end, as she was requested, to present the prizes gained. Mrs. Winston Churchill is herself a Y.M.C.A. hut-worker and is Honorary Treasurer of the Ladies Committee in London.

Chapter of Accidents.

A Cologne fräulein on holiday ben! found that Sunday last was one of her unlucky days without a doubt. She began her day of misadventure by missing a train for Coblentz, whither she intended to proceed with a picnic party. Determined to get away from her native town, however, she went by train to Bonn, thence by boat to Godesberg. By some unlucky chance she lost her friends here and spent a disconsolate morning alone. In the afternoon, a bathe struck her as being a happy idea and she stooped to place her hand in the river to ascertain the temperature of the water. Then she slipped and was immersed. The crowning stroke of misfortune in this girl's unhappy day was when she missed the last train and walked back from Bonn!

A Musical Echo.

The British have for long been regarded as egoistic and self-complacent, so it is gratifying to note that we are not the only offenders in this respect. At a concert given at the Deutsches Theatre recently I sat next to a young German, not a seasoned critic, but certainly a lover of good music. He greatly enjoyed a "suite" by Coleridge-Taylor, tastefully rendered by the orchestra, and remarked to me "sehr schön." The condescending tone of his remark rather nettled me and I afterwards learnt that English music is not generally appreciated in Germany, and that, with the exception of musical comedy "hits", very little has been imported, even before the war. The laurels for the heavier classical music may go to Germany, but the modern ballads of this country are, much inferior to ours. The saying "There are no songs like the old songs" is true here, for some of the old Folk songs are very sweet by comparison with the modern songs — when well rendered they have a haunting sort of effect. The artistic tendencies of the German race seem decidedly on the heavy side, and the rather showy sentimentality of the people is expressed in most of the songs they sing.

Envious Frauleins.

Prior to the great war fancy-dress balls were in great vogue in Rhineland and especially in Cologne, never a day passing without one or two fixtures of this nature in the dancing resorts of the neighbourhood. Dancing in Germany was rigorously barred during the war and up to the present has not been resumed to any great extent. Consequently it is not surprising that envious eyes are cast by the German folk, and more particularly the fräuleins, who have a great weakness for dancing, at Britishers wending their way in fancy-dress costume to the dances.

A Contradictory Nation.

If anyone were asked the question as to whether Germans love fresh air, nine out of ten soldiers would answer in the negative. Even during the heat wave a journey in the past few weeks in a tram car or train was a source of torture to an Englishman. The carriages and cars are apparently sealed against the entrance of any air. The same may be said of theatres, music halls, cinemas and restaurants; all are suffering from a voluntary "Air Blockade." Yet a walk through the town in the early morning will discover the fact that all house windows are wide open and the method of airing the bedclothes is to pile the whole bundle in the window sill, irrespective of the weather being propitious or not.

Labour Saving.

Many visitors to Rhineland have commented upon the system of flats existing here, but have they ever thought of a cute little labour saving electrical device behind the door? It serves a double purpose. Take the case of a visitor to say, the third or furth floor, whose time is limited. He presses one of the buttons opposite the name of the person living on that floor. A few seconds elapse, and there comes a click and the bolt is electrically withdrawn from the door, thus saving the people in the flat the trouble of descending to undo it, and the buzz announces the fact that the inmates of that particular flat are in. And so the visitor pushes the door open and walks upstairs. Suppose the people were not in, there would be no answering buzz, and the visitor is saved a fruitless tramp up one or more long flights of stairs—a great consideration to a man who has a round of visits to make.

Ceremonies of the German Church.

What excitement would be caused in the streets of London, where thousands of persons are continually on the move, it is hard to imagine, but in Düren no notice was taken. He was evidently the High Priest of the loyal church. Wearing the full clerical dress of his dignity, he was accompanied by a choir-boy who also wore vestments. This choir-boy carried in his left hand a lantern and in his right a small bell. As the pair approached any civilian, either male or female, the acolyte gave his bell a ring to attention. On seeing who was approaching, a male raised his hat and knelt before the priest till he had passed by. A female would kneel in the same manner but make the Sign of the Cross. It appeared that the clerical pair had been to a house for the purpose of administering Holy Communion to a dying person. The lantern carried by the Choir boy was the symbol showing what office of the Church had been performed.

Which is the Best?

Much argument has been heard as to which has the best system of tramways, England or Germany. A great fault with the double or treble tramway car is noticed at the terminus. Just watch the uncoupling and swinging of the trolley which is necessary before the car is ready for the return journey. In a car with two trailers there is the uncoupling of the rear trailer, a move of twenty yards and then the first trailer is uncoupled. Next the driver changes ends, the conductor swings the trolley round, and the car crosses the points. Manual labour is now required. The first trailer is pushed over the points and then we get the driver changing ends again. Back goes the car across the points, couples up with the first trailer, and then we have another step-dance by driver and conductor. One trailer pulls on the down line, the second trailer is pushed over the points.

The British Way.

And now for the last scene just another alteration by driver and conductor. Back goes the car, couples up with second trailer; the trolley is turned round, the driver changes ends and he gets ready for the return journey. This is the British way. The car arrives at the terminus, the driver changes ends. He pulls on to the down line very slowly, the trolley during this movement turning right angles to the car, by running up an extra wire fixed to a standard on the pavement. As the car continues to slowly move over the metals, the trolley begins its return journey, until finally it is drawn across to the down wire, an operation which takes about twenty seconds to accomplish. Which is the best?

OPINIONS OF THE MOMENT.

OUR WOMEN.

Mrs. Crooks, wife of the popular Labour M.P. replying to the denunciations of the women of to-day made by the Vicar of of St. Mary's, Wellingborough says: Mr. Watts, must be one of those people of limited vision who are dazzled, or shocked or pleased, as the case may be, by the people who live their lives in the limelight, and who do not give a thought to the millions of decent people of all kinds who are living their lives decently and quietly. Has Mr. Watts already forgotten the splendid record of British women when they helped their brothers fathers, and husbands to win the war. Women have learnt many lessons in the war. I am sure they have become more natural. Conventions are not the bugbears to them they used to be. Women dare to think for themselves and to come to conclusions for themselves, quite undeterred by "what people will say." Do the men who wish to see England a great nation object to that?

MANLIER CURATES.

The Bishop of Chelmsford takes the following view on the above subject: During the war more than 1,000 chaplains went to the front and faced death with the men in the trenches. Some hundred of them were killed or died on the battlefield and the rest have returned home determined to render to the great masses of the nation equal help and equal sympathy with men to that which they gave on the battlefield. The clergy have left behind them the reproach that they appealed chiefly to feminine interest. They are alive to-day to their responsibilities, and many of them are abandoning their old methods of parochial work in order that they may have greater time to devote to the men who have returned from the front. There is a great alteration going on in the character and type of clergy in the Church of to-day, and a distinct type differing from what was the most prevalent type among the clergy is being evolved.

CHAOS OF OUR PRODUCTIVE SYSTEM.

Mr. Hyndman interviewed on the above subject, declared: Our whole productive system is in a state of chaos. We must have a definite policy from those in power. It is no use to talk about economy unless you are prepared to stimulate production. Exchanges are falling against us; waste is going on everywhere amongst all classes; billions of paper money without the gold to back it have been issued; we have been threatened with anarchy and direct action. All this, and yet we have at hand the means of making wealth unprecedented in the history of the country. There should be greater organisation and co-ordination between all the workers and the Government departments to prevent waste in every shape and form. I am more than ever convinced that the way to a happier England is not by direct action, but along peaceful lines—that is, to increase production to its greatest output, and so distribute the wealth obtained that it is not given to profiteers nor to one section of the working classes more than another. The sooner the Government takes up the question of organisation and distribution of the nation's work the better.

MAKING MARRIAGE HAPPY.

Lady Muir Mackenzie writing on the subject of "Making Marriage Happy" says:—Our young idealists seem to think an unseen orchestra will always be playing a wedding march, and that even on £ 300 a year it will be possible to drink nectar from golden chalices. They also suggest that in marrying they have done something so unique and miraculous that the sun, moon, and stars will feel honoured by being asked to dine with them. All these ideas are gleaned from exotic poems and moving operas, and the older people who have learnt to be content with the knowledge that "the absence of pain is pleasure," enter into a conspiracy of silence, and even encourage exaggerated hopes. I think some of us are already aware of a significant though, at present, formless movement around us. Some new phase of life and conduct seems to be on the verge of manifesting itself. May it not be that out of this we shall obtain reconstruction and readjustment even in the sphere of marriage? Let us endeavour to direct the new force with wisdom, for we shall not be able to suppress it with silence and ignorance.

LUCK.

The Lord Major of Liverpool writing on the subject of "Luck":—One hears some succesful men described as lucky, others as unlucky. There are, it is true, cases of misfortune that seem inexplicable, when everything a man does seems to end in disaster. But my opinion is that there is nothing truer in life than the saying, "As a man sows, so shall he reap." So-called good luck in a business man is more often than not the harvest of years of toil, perseverance, and energy. Good luck, too, is often a question of character; for the character is the foundation stone of all great success. Let a man live in his city for a period of years, let him behave conscientiously, faithfully, and straightforwardly towards his fellow-men, let him build up in the imagination of his friends and fellow-workmen a figure of a man whose world is his bond, then in the years to come he is bound to have good luck, or what may be even better worth having, the esteem and regard of all those who know him.

AUGUST IN RHINELAND.

Sunshine has flooded the world in a glamour of gold and its exceptional heat has had a real touch of alchemy.

These August days are rich in opportunities in Rhineland. Now is the time to gather the harvest of a quiet eye, to enrich with the wonderful treasures of wood, field and stream so that when the winter storms come and the days are short and dark we may find warmth and joy at the fires of memory. Creation may become our recreation. We are the heirs of the world and all its beauties. It is our birthright of which none can rob us.

August is the summit of the year, it suggests achievement. In it we enter the year's heritage. Nature gives us a month or two, of which August is one, on the years tableland when we should take time to think and live.

August speaks of life so vigorous, so varied, so full, and each may glean in her fields according to his desire.

Shake off the dust of the streets of Cologne, and come with me into the country. In the place of the turmoil, the glitter, the artificiality of Hohe Strasse, seek the woods and the fields. If the day is hot, there is no need to walk, the trams will take you there.

Here you will see the fields white unto harvest, and men and women are already gathering in the precious grain. The crops are beautiful, the gardens rich in produce, the trees in the orchard and flanking the wayside full of fruit. Listen to the reaper's song! Listen to the song of the birds, how happy they are! They too are beautifully provided for. All nature chants a psalm of thankgiving, a Te Deum of Peace that is echoed in our hearts.

True at times in contrast we remember other days; days of stern wayfare of shell-swept fields, of desolation and misery, but the blue sky stretches like a curtain of hope over our sorrows, our loneliness, and a soul healing restfulness takes possession of us. We too join in nature's song of praise for we are so thrilled with gratitude — only to be alive, the joy of it on these August days!

Here is a brook by the wayside. How sweet and refreshing to drink of its waters. Listen to the music of its ripple as it glides along to join the brimming river. We follow its course for a little way to a rustic bridge and resting there the haunting refrain of Tennyson's great poem is recalled:

"Men may come and men may go
But I go on forever."

The words are glorious. How refreshing and cool they are in the heat of the day!

We climb the hill through the bracken and the purple summer heath. Now we come to a new heaven because the air is so refined and invigorating after the low lying plains.

We return in the cool of the evening. The afterglow of the summit abides in the west, caught and imprisoned by the August mistiness long after night begins.

Day or night, in valleys or the hill tops, in fields or woods of Rhineland, August has priceless gifts for those who explore her ways.

RAILWAYMEN'S WAGES.

GOVERNMENT CONCEDE INCREASED PAY THAT GIVES SATISFACTION

RAILWAY PAY.

GOVERNMENT CONCESSIONS MEET WITH SATISFACTION.

The Government on Thursday made a fresh wages offer to the railwaymen, whose union leaders decided in favour of acceptance. The offer to cleaners is the same as the last, but the daily pay for drivers and firemen is revised as shown:

Drivers and Firemen.

Year.	Union demand per day.	1st Gov. offer per day.	Accepted offer per day.
1st and 2nd	12/-	11/-	12/-
5th, 6th, and 7th ..	16/-	14/-	14/-
8th and onward ..	—	—	15/-

The union demand was that the 16s. rate should apply to the fifth year and onward. It will be noticed that a compromise was reached both on the question of amount and that of the years of service.

Firemen and Assistant Motormen.

Year.	Union demand per day.	1st Gov offer per day.	Accepted offer per day.
1st and 2nd	9/6	8/-	9/6
3rd and 4th	10/6	9/-	10/6
5th and onward ..	11/6	10/-	11/-

All these figures include war bonus.

The Government did not advance on its offer for cleaners, and the following scale, which was put forward on Monday last, was accepted:—

Per day.

16 years and under ... 4s. plus war wage
17 years ..... 5s. „ „
18 and 19 years ..... 6s. „ „
20 years and over .... 7s. „ „

The original union demand was 8s. per day for those aged eighteen and nineteen years, and 8s. 6d. per day for those of twenty years and over. Cleaner's war bonuses, amount to 16s. 6d. per week for those of eighteen years and under, and 33s. per week for those over eighteen.

AIR STUNTS.

FLORAL WREATHS FOR BRITISH AVIATORS.

DUTCHMEN'S AMAZEMENT.

Amsterdam has been astonished by the exhibition given by British airmen on British machines at Elta. "The Daily News" says that when "Avros" and "B.A.T." machines arrived at Amsterdam the pilots were surprised at the amazement displayed by the Dutch at some of the ordinary evolutions they employed in test flights on their machines.

The result was that the British airmen decided to give a real exhibition of fancy flying. Major Draper, on a B.A.T. Bantam, and Lieutenant Roberts on an ordinary 504 K "Avro" went up from the aerodrome and separately in full view of the crowd of about one hundred thousand people, proceeded to show what good pilots could do with British aeroplanes. Every stunt that has ever been invented was carried out including dash, looping, rolling, spiralling, side slipping, flying upside down and the "falling leap."

Fokker's Congratulations.

On their descent, both pilots were formally crowned with floral leaves by the authorities but probably the greatest compliments paid to Major Draper were the congratulations and open wonder of Fokker himself who, good pilot though he is, declined to compete against the British machines and men.

AMEER INSECURE.

DISAPPOINTED HOPES.

It is learned concerning Afghanistan that no further reports regarding the military operations on the North-West Frontier have been received and that the tribal situation is quieter.

There is evidence that the Afghans, while disappointed with the peace terms are disposed to make every effort to carry them out and to restrain their own tribes as far as possible. The Ameer's position is insecure, as his bid for popularity by declaring war on Britain failed and his hopes for help from the Bolshevists are being met with nothing but fine words. It is now probable that he will return to the policy which has kept peace on the Indian frontier for the last 35 years.

MORE QUARRELLING.

The Montenegrin Consul-General at Christiania says that the Montenegrins have risen against the Serbian attempt to bring Montenegro under Serbian rule and that fighting has already occurred. The Serbian Press states that the Montenegrins are well armed and well led and fight with their traditional bravery.

"BOLSHIE" HORRORS.

CHILDREN KILLED IN THEIR CRADLES.

It is learned from a very reliable source that the Bolshevists have completely devastated and ransacked the stanitzas of the upper Don district, which, it must be remembered, rebelled against the Soviet power.

Most of the farms were burnt, and in consequence the population has nowhere to live. Live and dead stock, as well as corn having been taken by the Reds, no farming is possible.

The population has undergone unspeakable cruelties: children were killed in their cradles, old people were burnt together with straw, and many people have been shot and executed.

5,000 men have been executed in two of the stanitzas, the Migulinskaya and the Kazanskaya. In addition 373 men were shot in the Sestranovsky village, 370 men in the Olkhovsky village and 197 men in the Nijnimrachinsky village.

STILL ADVANCING.

DENIKIN DOES WELL.

General Denikin has now taken Cheraski and placed himself across the remaining railway to Odessa. The main centre of interest is, however, Denikin's western front, where it seems probable that his successes will shortly bring him into touch with the Allied troops on the left flank and will doubtless give the signal for a rising of the whole Ukraine. Less than 150 miles separates the anti-Bolshevist forces on the Western and Southern Russian fronts.

In West Russia a crisis is approaching in Latvia. The news as to von der Goltz is unconfirmed, but there is no truth in the reports that the Germans have been heavily attacked by the Poles on the Posen border. The total Bolshevist forces on all fronts are 485,000 while it is estimated that there are 727,000 in the interior.

There has been serious fighting on the western front during the past week. The North-Western Army and the Esthonians were thrown back by the Bolshevists, who crossed the Luga and now hold the entire west bank. Further south there has been heavy fighting near Porkhov and Pskov, where the Bolshevists are continuing vigorous counter attacks, forcing their opponents back some distance. In the Pskov area the Bolshevists are within nine miles of the Pskov-Riga road.

SUCCESSES IN THE NORTH.

All is quiet on the Murmansk and Archangel fronts. The recent Bolshevist attack west of the Murman railway was evidently due to the mistaken impression that the British troops had been withdrawn and that only North Russian troops remained.

A communique issued on Thursday states that a wire from Murmansk dated August 20 reports that the enemy was attacked by our troops seven miles south of Kapasolga, after an artillery bombardment. They were driven from their positions and pursued south several miles, prisoners being captured and losses inflicted. Our Russian troops on the Shuga peninsula dispersed the enemy, capturing 59 prisoners and three machine guns; they also captured after a sharp fight a village twenty miles south of their former position on the Shuga peninsula, 32 enemy dead being counted east of Lake Onega. Two enemy forces attempted to attack a village in our possession but lost their direction and attacked each other, suffering heavy losses.

AUSTRIAN TREATY.

A SURPRISE SPRUNG.

The Big Five in Paris engaged on the completion of the remaining treaties have passed finally the military, naval and aerial clauses of the Austrian compact. It was hoped that the Treaty would be signed by the end of this month, but a surprise was sprung on the Supreme Council on Thursday by the Austrian delegates, who said that they must take the documents to Vienna for approval by the Constituent Assembly before signing it.

£64,000 IN PRIZES.

AIR MINISTRY'S SCHEME.

The Air Ministry's scheme for the greatest flying competitions in the history of aviation was published yesterday. The main idea, it is stated, is to increase the safety of air travel.

£64,000 will be offered in prizes, and the machines competing, big and small aeroplanes and seaplanes, must have been designed and constructed within the British Empire.

Just at the moment when the state of civil aviation is rather depressing, the Government competitions should give a much-needed stimulus to the industry.

LABOUR UNREST.

SCHEME FOR MORE FRIENDLY UNDERSTANDING.

HOURS AND WAGES.

The Hours of Employment Bill, and the Minimum Rates and Wages Commission Bill, submitted to Parliament, may be regarded as the first fruits of a national industrial conference. The conference was summoned last February and appointed a joint committee of employers and Trade Union leaders, who drew up a comprehensive report dealing with some of the most prominent causes of labour unrest.

Their three immediate recommendations were for legislation enforcing a general forty-eight hours week, the establishment of minimum time rates of wages and the creation of a national industrial council, which should bring together the knowledge and experience of all sections and focus them on the problems that affect industrial relations as a whole.

The two Bills introduced by the Government may be regarded as an indication of the importance which the Government attach to the Committee's decision During the recess, employers and Trade Union representatives on the joint Committee will circulate details to the various organisations which they represent, together with their scheme for the formation of a national industrial council which, it is hoped, will be established in the Autumn.

RAILWAY PRESSURE.

TO BE RELIEVED BY UTILISING COASTWISE SERVICE.

In order to relieve the railways of traffic which can better be carried by coastwise steamers, the War Cabinet have directed the railway companies to refuse all goods to which this description applies. The traders will be refunded the difference in the freight charges.

The Board of Trade, in making the announcement, says that railways are congested with goods that might go by water. Coastwise service can only be re-established on a pre-war footing by being assured of a reasonable amount of regular traffic. The absence of shipping facilities is impeding transport of all kinds.

No goods which have been imported from foreign countries or which are intended for export to foreign countries will be carried by rail between points which can be effectively served in the whole or in part by coast-wise carriage. —Wireless Press.

FEAR OF OFFICIALDOM.

CITY COUNCILLOR THINKS WE CAN'T STOP PROFITEERING ENTIRELY.

Mr. D. G. Collins, of the City Corporation, is strongly in favour of allowing the hawkers to compete freely with shopkeepers rather than embarking on a scheme of municipal trading, says "The Daily Chronicle."

"Municipal trading," he said, "only means an extension of officialdom and administration, the cost of which must be added to the price of the article. I do not think the rates were ever intended to compete with private trading. Let the hawkers wage war on the profiteer, and it will have a deterrent effect. You will never stop profiteering altogether; it began with Cain and Abel; but the more competition there is the lower will be the prices."

CANTEENS COMMITTEE.

WELFARE PROPOSALS.

The Canteens Executive Committee of the United Service Fund met on Thursday, General Sir Julian Byng presiding. The activities of the fund were divided into five groups. First attention is to be given to questions concerning the welfare of serving officers and other ranks. A sub-committee has been appointed to deal with questions of welfare. On it ex-service men will be represented, and the committee will find out ex-service men's wishes as to the provision of clubs. Other proposals include grants of capital for helping disabled officers and men and their dependents, and for recreational purposes. The claims of women will not be forgotten. Individual applications cannot be dealt with.

NEW YORK ACTORS' STRIKE.

There was a jam of traffic yesterday afternoon in the theatre district says the "Daily Chronicle."

While dilapidated carts, resurrected from goodness knows where, bumped against fashionable motor-cars, 2,000 or more actors and chorus girls—the latter in the gayest of gay attire—came singing in brave parade through the rain, that had slowed up into a drizzle. Some of the best-known artists on the American stage cracked jokes with the crowds that lined the Broadway to cheer them.

At night four more closed theatres and a roof garden were added to the Equity Association's score.

The Air Ministry announce that the aerodome at Guston-road (Dover) and the landing ground at New Holland (Yorks) are being relinquished by the R.A.F.

STOLEN MOTORS.

CONVICT-INFORMER'S REMARKABLE EVIDENCE.

Sidney Meredith, the convict motor thief gave further evidence at Westminster yesterday in connection with the charges against William George Stephenson, 47, motor repairer, of 30, Westhorpe-street Putney, of receiving stolen motor-cars. One of the cars, it was stated, was stolen from outside a house during a doctor's almost momentary absence and while the engine was still running.

Meredith last week made a remarkable confession regarding his methods, stating that he kept motor-cars under observation for days before driving off with them. He alleged that he sold cars to Stephenson at a fixed price of £50 each. Cross-examined yesterday by Mr. O'Connor for Stephenson, Meredith said he began operations as a motor-car thief last December.

How many cars do you think you stole while you were at liberty?—It is a hard question.

Theft of 30 Cars.

You need not pretend to be too particular.—So far as I can recollect, I should say somewhere about 30.

You are not suggesting that you sold all of them to Stephenson?—Not all of them.

I suggest, and I make no bones about it, that your idea was to blackmail Stephenson, and, failing that, to come here and commit perjury?—Your suggestion is very much wrong.

When did you first conceive the idea of turning informer against Stephenson?—On June 24.

Why did you make a statement against him?—Am I obliged to answer that?

Mr. Chapman (the magistrate): Yes.

Meredith: This man had had hundreds and hundreds of pounds out of me. I asked him to find counsel when I was charged. I wrote to my mother and she went to see him, but he denied he had ever seen me. When a man does a thing like that, after the money he has had out of me, and refuses to get counsel, which might have meant a less sentence for me, why should he get off?

Then it was because Stephenson refused to assist you financially?

The Magistrate: I think you can rest content with his statement.

Mr. O'Connor Is Meredith your correct name? It is the name I was convicted in. That is good enough. I refuse to answer.

Remanded.

NO NEW AUTHORITIES.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION PROCLAMATION.

A new proclamation has been issued in which it is stated that so long as the British military authorities have control of the area occupied by British troops, no alteration of the German constitution will be permitted in the area, and no new authority will be acknowledged without the approval of the British authorities.

Any person who offends against the Proclamation, or helps in such an offence will be liable to imprisonment or expulsion from the occupied area, or with both.

STINIE MORRISON.

A FRESH PETITION.

During the next few months Stinie Morrison, who is undergoing life imprisonment for the murder of Leon Beron on Clapham Common, will be again before the public.

The solicitor for Morrison recently received new information which is expected to throw fresh light on the case. The man in posses ion of the evidence is now in the Army in India, and his demobilisation is awaited before a new petition is presented asking for Morrison's release.

OPEN MARKETS.

SCHEME TO DO AWAY WITH PROFITEERING.

The open markets movement to combat profiteering is gathering momentum in London and the provinces. Yesterday it was decided to hold street markets at Southgate, Egham, Hounslow, Wealdstone and Sevenkings.

Oxford opened a market yesterday and the stalls were cleared by mid-day. The prices were much lower than at retail shops. It is stated that Lord Leverhulme, who is now in Scotland, intends to open a number of shops in London for the sale of fish direct from his Scottish fisheries.

The effect, it is believed, will be to cheapen fish generally. The Food Controller has refused to sanction an increase in price paid for milk to producers this autumn.

WIDNES BY-ELECTION.

Mr. Arthur Henderson has accepted an invitation from the Labour party in Widnes to stand as their candidate in the coming by-election.

Mr. Fisher, the Unionist candidate, has issued his election address. He expresses the hope that with his long experience of politics, both as a private member and subsequently as a Minister of the Crown in New Zealand, he may be able, if elected, to contribute a useful share in the deliberations of the House of Commons.

GERMANS IN ENGLAND.

ENTRY ONLY BY PERMISSION OF HOME SECRETARY.

A regulation stating that "no former enemy alien may land in the United Kingdom except by permission of the Home Secretary" is stated by the "Evening News" to be coming into force in about ten days time. It is understood that it is the intention of the Home Secretary to keep out all enemy aliens except those whose presence may be of benefit to British trade. Already thousands of applications from Germans to enter and live in this country have reached the Home Office.

TO WIND UP BUSINESS.

A few Germans have been granted permits to go to England for short periods to wind up concerns which they formerly owned. Their movements will be restricted and they must return to Germany immediately they have completed their work. British born women, resident in Germany, will be allowed to visit Great Britain freely after September 1st.

The machinery for the regulation of German trade with this country is being brought into existence and it is probable that German traders who wish to do business with us will have to obtain certificates from British consuls in their country. The Home Office regulations apply, of course, to Austrians, Turks and Bulgarians as well as to Germans.

OFFICERS PAY.

PAY OF BRITISH OFFICERS ON INDIAN ESTABLISHMENT.

An Army Order issued yesterday states that the special arrangement under which Indian rates of pay have been issued to British service officers in virtue of their having been on the Indian Establishment on 5th August 1914 and having proceeded out of India for purposes connected with the war, will terminate with effect from 1st January 1920. This rule, however, will not apply to Royal Engineer Officers who had completed 5 years' service with an Indian formation or on Indian rates of pay on that date, and whose service while on the Indian Establishment is reckoned for pension under Indian Army rules.

Moreover, the issue of Indian rates to British service officers serving in Mesopotamia and Aden and other theatres of operations, which for the purpose of the issue of regimental pay have been treated as Indian, will not be affected by this order.

FREEDOM FOR BIRDWOOD

FAMOUS GENERAL PRAISES THE DEVONS.

General Sir William Birdwood visited Totnes yesterday to have the freedom of the borough conferred on him. The Mayor and Corporation received him at the railway station. He was introduced by Colonel Mildmay, who paid high tribute to his brilliant services in Gallipoli. Acknowledging the presentation of the freedom, General Birdwood said that some people were preaching that the British was a decadent race and minimising what had been done. He hoped they would give lie to that for the sake of their children's children. Without boast, they should be told what we had done and that we were not responsible for the war. Alluding to Devonian spirit, he recalled the Second Devon's famous stand at Chemin des Dames and said the county yielded to none in what she had done in the Army and Navy.

SCHLESWIG PLEBISCITE.

The International Commission controlling the plebiscite in Schleswig held a preliminary meeting on Thursday. It will, when peace is ratified, take up quarters at Flensburg, and while the vote is being taken three British, one French and one Italian cruisers will lie off the coast and two thousand troops will be landed. The voting in the northern zone is to take place three weeks after the ratification of peace, and in the southern zone two weeks after.

"JOCKEY" IN TROUBLE.

Described as a plausible and dangerous scoundrel Edgar Frank Douglas Smith who posed as a jockey, was at London Sessions yesterday sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment for obtaining by false pretences three hundred pounds from Mrs. Vera Cubitt, widow of officer killed in the war, and seventy pounds from James Oswald Hartley, formerly a steeplechase rider. Prisoner burst into tears while sentence was being passed.

EXTRADITIONS DEMANDED.

The French Government will demand the extradition of Generals von Heinrich and von Graevinitz, who were governors of Lille, as well as that of their accomplices. Captain Himmel, chief of the German police, will be tried by a Council of War at Lille.

DANISH PRINCESS'S RETURN.

Empress Marie of Russia (sister of Queen Alexandra) has returned to Denmark after six years' absence. She intends to settle at a small castle near Copenhagen.

FINE FEATHERS.

DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE'S REPORT ON BIRD PROTECTION.

A wireless message says that the important report of the Departmental Committee on the protection of wild birds recommends the establishment of an ornithological advisory committee for the provision of bird sanctuaries by the central and local authorities, with small state subsidies for watchers, and the general protection of all birds, eggs and nests throughout the country on Sundays. Osprey, continues the report, is perhaps the worst sufferer at the hands of fashion and is accordingly scheduled for absolute protection all the year round.

Protection all the year round is also provided for a few others of the rarest species, including bittern, golden eagle and some of the more uncommon owls. Most of the import nt laws as to birds, snail apply also to eggs.

International Convention.

The Committee point to the gross insufficiency of existing provisions and to an example set in this matter by America and Hungary. There, protection is given to birds during the breeding season. It is urged that the killing or taking of birds in any public place, highway, byway, common or waste land should be prohibited throughout the year. As regards international action, the Committee recommends international convention to prohibit importation of feathers of wild birds destroyed merely for their plumage.

The Committee recommends that the use of aircraft for killing wild birds should be prohibited, as also that of mechanically propelled boats or vehicles. Provision of perches on all lighthouses is one of many minor propositions.

DOG DETECTIVE.

BLOODHOUND TRACES MISSING

On Friday last a London holiday maker, William Ernest Biffen, of George-street, Hanover-square, who had been staying at St. Ives, set out to walk to Zennor by way of the cliffs to make a sketch of the famous Gurnard's Head.

When Mr. Biffen failed to return to St. Ives a diligent search was organized, but no trace of him was found till a bloodhound arrived from Scotland Yard.

The dog was first given some of the missing man's clothing to smell, and was then taken along the path on the cliffs Mr. Biffen was thought to have taken.

When it halted at a spot on the edge of the cliffs, the searchers descended to the beach at that point and there found the dead body of the missing man in a cove.

BOMBED CHURCH TO RE-OPEN.

The church of St. Edmund, King and Martyr, Lombard street, is to be re-opened on October first. The church was a victim in an invasion by a Gotha one Saturday morning in July 1917. A bomb crashed through the western parapet and the roof seriously damaging the interior of the church and a fine organ. A sister of the parish clerk was in the church at the time arranging flowers at the altar and has not yet recovered from the shock then sustained. A relic of the attack preserved is believed to be part of propellor. The church was insured for three thousand pounds but its restoration cost far more.

SOUTH WALES TINPLATE TRADE.

There are indications of a revival in the South Wales tinplate trade, which was badly hit by the war.

Orders are reported to be coming in from the old markets in Europe, including Germany and Austria.

South Wales manufacturers are dubious of their ability to retain the whole of their old markets in Europe, as the price of Welsh tinplate is more than double what it was before the war. American manufacturers are cutting in heavily.

Relations between the South Wales tinplate maker and workman are harmonious.

CANTEEN PROFITS.

An Army Council Order issued on Thursday night gives a statement fo accounts to the end of 1917 of the Expeditionary Force Canteens. It was necessary to run the organization on a profits basis to repay loans and to provide against risk of loss through enemy action. The canteens realised a turnover of £25,000,000, on which a profit of £2,000,000, or more than ten cent on the turnover is shown.

BABY FARMING CASE.

Yesterday Henry Melville Hatchard and his wife Beatrice were committed for trial charged with the manslaughter of two babies at Leytonstone. It was stated that the female prisoner adopted nine children for a total sum of £120.

ARMY HUTS AS SCHOOLS.

Owing to the high cost of labour and materials, the Board of Education is asking education committees to consider the advisability of putting up buildings of lighter construction and of utilising Army huts for school accommodation.

THE FUTURE OF THE ARMY.

Now that the Army Council have terminated their visit to our area it may be assumed that the purpose for which the army is to be used in the near future has been decided. But it would be as well to remind those who anticipate the rapid dissolution of our forces that the country has certain foreign commitments which will require the maintenance of a fairly large army for some little time longer.

America which has disbanded her army in such a short space of time presents no close analogy because that country has not the foreign interests to preserve which the possession of an extensive Empire imposes upon Britain.

The Peace Conference has had to decide such a multitude of questions which leave an element of doubt as to their effectual result that one cannot definitely say that the outcome will not be accompanied by the possibility of danger. Therefore forces must be maintained in the danger zones notably in the east where our interests are so extensive and so easily threatened.

Again the Irish administration require strong forces to keep in check the intransigent elements which threaten to break the peace within our own dominions and until a solution is found for the acute situation in that country the presence of a strong military force is the best deterrent against ill-advised action.

Further, our country has to undertake its share of reconstruction, not only at home but abroad, and that work can only be accomplished confidently without fear of outside interference behind the sure shield of military power.

But perhaps the point most easily missed in considering the further retention of a large military force is the fact that even America has now recognised the advantages of military service being compulsory and Britain is now likely to be the only power which undertakes to defend herself with a voluntary army.

Thus other countries can afford to set about the rapid dissolution of their armies because they have the machinery of a new national army ready to hand which does not exist in our country.

With these points in mind one must await with patience the settlement of the various points which still admit the possibility of danger before the British army can, with any degree of safety, be reduced further in numbers. Otherwise there is the danger that our country may not be able to play her part in the reconstruction of Europe which is required and expected of us.

CO-OPERATION IN BUSINESS.

At the present time, when the future prosperity of Great Britain is so much at stake, the importance of scientific business management cannot be overrated. Within the last decade we have made great progress in the science, but much remains to be done.

The wise employer must always have in mind the broad principles of co-operation. He must create a system under which his workers work hand in hand. Good management does not consist of getting the last ounce out of the workman and then casting him aside as useless, and the more care there is expended on the material welfare of the worker the better will his output be, both in quantity and quality.

The workers of the country must be educated by their chiefs to a high sense of responsibility, and to the necessity of conforming to the ordinary rules of health. The introduction of canteens for the provision of suitable meals for workers was a big step in the right direction. Adequate feeding, like housing is one of the most pressing problems of the moment.

In the matter of the construction and equipment of factories a constant lookout must be kept for new methods. In this way also a great advance has been made. One of the greatest factors in reducing operating costs has been the introduction of labour saving devices, most of which originated in America.

There has been in the past years, among some British firms, a tendency to be too conservative with regard to new systems, and in many cases old appliances which have long outlived their utility have been retained. It is therefore essential to successful business in the future that every new system or appliance must be examined and treated on its merits.

Much expense is involved, too, in the employment of workers who repeat or unnecessarily supplement the work of others, and in the future a strenuous effort must be made to reduce all expenditure of energy to that which is absolutely essential.

The best way of tackling the problem of increased production which lies ahead is by training the workers in efficiency and every effort must be made to encourage them to take advantage of the existing facilities and to create new ones. Inducements and benefits must be offered to create and maintain an ambition for promotion.

In the struggle for industrial supremacy with which Great Britain is faced, science in business management assumes a position of importance to which it has never attained before.

THE REWARD OF GENIUS.

Filled with enthusiasm and desire to emulate the officer, although not of that exalted rank who, on venturing to send an advertising suggestion to the editor of a daily paper, received a three-figure cheque for his effort, I took up "ad" writing. As a warning to others may I be allowed to recount my experience.

With the aid of a "won" fountain-pen, sundry A.B. 136 and the application of a wet-towel to my head for the three nights I confined myself to my billet, I evolved the following clever advertising couplet:—"Travellers sailing down the river Cheer-i-oko, Always drink Squibbs' Cocoa."

Being my first attempt I was modest in my demands of Messrs. Squibbs, merely asking for "Bradburys" instead of a cheque; pointing out to them that "some day" Derby recruits would be demobilized, and what a great effect it would have on them on seeing the above couplet in big letters on landing on their native shore, realising it was written by a comrade-in-arms.

It was with trembling hands that a week later I opened a letter addressed to me, and bearing Messrs. Squibbs' imprint. To avoid raising jealous pangs of sight-seers of the expected "Bradburys" I retired to the corner of my billet to peruse the communication. Here are some extracts:—

"We thank you for yours of the 10th ult. enclosing a suggested advertisement for our world-famous cocoa . . . . . Evidently you are not aware that advertisements should contain indisputable facts. Our chief-clerk, Mr. Jones, is away ill. He sat up two nights running perusing the Encyclopaedia Britannica from A to Z in search of your river Cheer-i-oko, and reports it is non-existent. A visit to the Reference Library at the British Museum reveals the same fact . . . . . We read your effort to our office boy, who immediately expressed a desire to take his war bonus out in whisky, in lieu of cash for the future.

"Whilst admiring your British pluck in sending us your attempt, we are compelled to inform you that we are taking legal advice as to what claim we can make to your C.O. for deduction from your pay for the indisposition and loss of our clerk's services, and general disorganisation of our office staff etc. as the direct result of your advertising ability (?)."

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

AUSGANG.

Ausgang is rich in history. Something has been happening there ever since the earth cooled, and though we have no proof that anything that happened was of the least interest, the fact that nothing at all is known about its past allows us to suppose that it was the scene of earth-shaking events. If Caesar makes no mention of the place in his Commentaries it is only too likely that he suffered an overwhelming defeat here which he wished to hush up.

This disaster doubtless figured largely in the German communiqués, which have unfortunately not come down to us, owing to the fact that the art of writing was unknown to the Germans of the day. No traces are left of the turbulent past, but if the archaeologist finds Ausgang disappointing the historian may well feel a quickening of the pulse and lose himself in dreamland as he stands beside the new Savings Bank and thinks of all the picturesque folk who have lived and loved here — gallant knights and sturdy burghers, margraves and troubadours, franklins and sumners and seneschals and all that.

The church of St. Gudbrand on the Bismarckplatz is very old and goes back to the Crusades. It was, however, probably burned to the ground in the Thirty Years' War, the Seven Years' War, the Hundred Years' War, the War of the Spanish Succession and the War of Jenkins' Ear, for nothing survives of the original construction but the site, at present occupied by a red brick edifice erected in 1885 in the Gothic style; this building is but little better than Cologne Cathedral (of which the defects have already been pointed out in this journal) and is only interesting in being one of the few Rhenish churches which does not possess a fine Rubens.

Of the foundation a pretty legend is told, well depicting the stormy nature of the times. When the blessed Gudbrand of Hazebrouck came preaching the Crusade to Rhineland, the reigning Count of Ausgang, Conrad the Bad Tempered, took the cross. He had not been away many years when he received an anonymous letter from a devout woman of Ausgang informing him that his spouse, the Countess Mechtildis, had forgotten her marriage vows and had centred her enthusiasm on the inspired Fleming.

In an indescribable fury the outraged husband hurried home, bringing a view of Jerusalem painted on a slice of olive-tree, a gilt model of the Antonia Tower, and a rosary sold in Acre but carved in Byrminghame. Arriving just after Mass, he perceived a man in ecclesiastical costume counting the collection, and with one stroke of his well-stropped sword felled him to the ground, crying "Foul Gudbrand, thou may'st conduct thy improprieties in another world." "Thou labourest under a misapprehension," retorted the dying man. "Whom thou art after hath been dead and canonised this year past; I am but a locum tenens!" And shaking with mirth at the amusing error he passed away.

There are some charming walks about Ausgang; sign-posts and beer-houses have been provided by the Ausgang Young Excursionists' Society, "Gott strafe England." I can recommend that to Abfahrt (the next station on the main line—you must have noticed it as you passed through). Leaving the Slaughter House on the left you proceed by a cinder path to the handsome new Gas Works. Follow the drain to the Chemical Manure Factory, where you turn sharp to the left and have a fine view of the Abfahrt Penitentiary.

Go round the Penitentiary and thence along the sleepers of the private railway leading to the Sewage Farm, and home by the Ausgang Town Rubbish Heap. A pleasant variant is to start by the Rubbish Heap, thence to the Sewage Farm and along the line to Abfahrt Penitentiary and the Chemical Manure Factory, where you turn sharp to the right; follow the drain to the Gas Works, and so home to the Slaughter House by the cinder path.

Rhineland is full of such beauty spots.

REMEMBER!

"Smith 98765; that's the lot" said the post corporal. A brown hand reached out eagerly for the letter, and the jostling, expectant crowd dispersed with expressions of satisfaction, disappointment or resignation, accordingly as they had been favoured by the gods.

Dicky Smith was jubilant, he had received three, and whistled cheerfully as he examined the writing and postmarks while making his way to a shady spot for a few minutes peace and quietness.

The first one selected contained news from the neighbourhood of his home, with comments thereon by an old school-chum.

A French stamp adorned the second envelope and brought a smile to the lad's face; a smile which expanded as he began to puzzle out the curious un-English sentences expressing the affection of fair Isabelle, and recalling many pleasant hours spent in an old village "somewhere." The crosses following the signature, at any rate, he reflected, could not be misinterpreted.

The third was from home. His mother and brother were quite well, he was glad to see; but he did not linger in the reading, and relighting his neglected cigarette, turned again to try and elucidate some of the more complicated passages in Isabelle's missive.

In a little suburban house a gentle faced woman went about her morning work. Life had been a struggle since father had died many years ago, but still she stuck to it, and only the premature silver in her hair indicated the severity of that struggle. She paused suddenly as her ear caught a well-known sound; a distant gate clicked and rat-tat went a door-knocker.

Nearer and nearer came successive knocks and her face became a trifle strained as the footsteps approached the house; they passed; and she carried on.

At midday young Tom came in for a hasty mouthful. "No letter from Dick again?" he queried casually, bounding upstairs to change for an afternoon's cricket; and as he took a clean handkerchief he never thought that a tear had mingled with the soapsuds. G.H.B.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

Sir,—I should like to support "Fairplay" in his experience as to the methods adopted by some German shopkeepers.

Many of our soldiers will doubtless be induced to purchase watches and clocks, indeed I have heard of cases where Tommies have been advised to take the opportunity of securing a watch under particularly favourable conditions. Do so, but give the watch a trial before you part with your money.

I did not, and with what result? The watch has for the second time been returned to the seller and he has yet to explain away the fact that the face-piece which was said to be luminous is not luminous. I failed to apply the test on purchase. VICTIM.

AN APPRECIATION.

Sir,—I have often thought how I would like to see more letters in the columns of your paper in appreciation of the untiring labours of the British Rhine Army Dramatic Company.

It seems to me that their excellent work for our benefit calls for more than a passing reference.

It has been my good fortune to witness all but one of Lt. S.E. Percy's productions and I am sure I am expressing the opinion of many hundreds who have seen them, when I say how immensely we have enjoyed these classics and now keenly we have looked forward to subsequent productions.

One feels that if these sentiments could be put to the Army the verdict would be carried unanimously. N.C.O.

CABARET OR——?

Sir,—I agree with "H.H.T." and "Al Fresco" upon the subject of cafés on the continental style in England.

In an English public house or saloon bar there is one object only — to drink. Consequently men gather there and do nothing else but drink; very often an amount more than is good for them.

In the Rhineland cafés a large number of people gather and we get music; both diversions in themselves. I think most people will agree that a large room or open space with the uplifting influence of music, is more desirable than a small room filed with the odour of smoke, beer and spirits.

If the continental style were adopted in England, I fancy drunkenness would decrease.

As "H.H.T." suggests, it would be interesting, if it were possible, for a census of opinion to be taken. Without doubt those in favour of open-air cafés would be in the majority. C.H.N.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Sir,—Some advice or information in your columns as to how soldiers of the Rhine may get personal belongings home would be very greatly welcomed.

Many of us, especially those who have been here for nearly nine months have gradually acquired, in the pursuit of our educational studies quite valuable collections of books, materials, and so on, all of which must be got to England somehow if we are not to lose precious helps and much usefully spent money.

Also many who have musical instruments, clothes and theatrical "props" of all kinds sent over for the purpose of entertaining in our units are wondering how these things are to be saved.

We certainly cannot carry them but are quite willing to pay for carriage and forwarding if there are any civilian or other channels available for this purpose.

Personally I have acquired a most valuable collection of books on art and printing which will be invaluable to me at home in my business and I know others who have similar properties in their hands and I am frequently asked, how can I get these home? RHINO.

THE RHINE TRIPS.

Sir,—May I through the medium of your valuable paper, air what I and a good number of my colleagues feel to be a real grievance.

Recently we had the pleasure of an enjoyable trip on the Rhine, and a most delightful time was spent by all, more so as the day was an ideal one, being hot, which fact aroused a terrible thirst on all the party, who proceeded below to quench it.

However on arriving at the counter, having, waited a considerable time to do so, we were informed that we were not eligible to drink a bottle of beer, as it was reserved for sergeants only.

No one wishes to condemn the sergeants in this matter, but it was not quite cheerful to be at the end of a long queue, 100 or so and observe eight sergeants, purchasing as many as five and six bottles, whilst the other ranks, in many cases old soldiers, are refused one drink.

I feel sure that this is not the official way of running this canteen, and shall be glad if you will insert this letter, with a view to a different arrangement on future trips. BOMBARDIER.

BOOKS TO READ.

Sir,—Having read with interest the letters on "Interesting Books," I have been surprised at the selection of your correspondents. I have looked for a letter on the subject from one of the teachers at Cologne.

I cannot understand why the correspondents should go back to the old books such as "John Halifax, Gentleman." I am sure no sane man will say that the art of writing has not improved. Then why try the impossible, i.e., deter progress, and go back to these old books?

The only old books that should be alive to-day are, the works of poets, Marx, Tolstoi, Carlyle, Grant Huxley, and all others dealing with education.

My selection therefore would be: The Last Weapon — Theodora Dixson-Wilson. Iron Heel and The Little Lady of the Big House — Jack London. The Prospector — Ralf Connor. The Lumberman — Steward Edward White. The Girl of the Limberlost — Gene Stratton Porter. The Stickit Minister — S. R. Crockett. Leonore — Arnold Bennett. Queen Sheba's Ring — H. Rider Haggard. The Mighty Atom — Marie Corelli. A Modern Utopia — H.G. Wells. The Importance of being Earnest — Oscar Wilde. There are books quite as good by Mark Twain, Baroness Orczy, and Hornung.

BREAKING OF RECORDS.

The entries for this year's championships are in every respect unprecedented so that with favourable weather many sporting records must go by the board. Entries for the Southern Command were determined by the results of the championship meeting at Portsmouth this week, and those for the Irish Command will be made after the athletic meeting at the Curragh which opens to-day. According to present arrangements the only track final to be decided on the opening day will be the three miles. More than one champion has entered the competition while a fair number of competitors at the A.A.A. Championships are also in one or other of the events so that a very high standard of athleticism should be witnessed.

EVENTS FOR OUTSIDERS.

The only events which have not filled well are those for outsiders. The police tug-of-war, for instance, (10 to pull, limit 130 st) has very few entries, and the same applies to the police relay and to the 220 yards and 880 yds. demobilized soldier's events.

Commenting on this, "Sporting Life" says:

"One would have expected to find men like W. A. Hill, G. P. Sweet, C. Griffiths, P. Hodge, and others of their class competing at the meeting where their old comrades are running. The Army Athletic Association cannot be expected to include events for other than Army men if those they do put on are not better supported."

THE RUNNING HILLS.

On Saturday, Sept. 20, W. A. and A. G. will (all being well) give a great treat to the London Athletic Club's patrons at Stamford Bridge, when the A.A.A. Ten-mile Running and Seven-mile Walking Championships will be included in that club's programme, for W. A. Hill, weather and other conditions permitting, is having a cut at E. H. Pelling's 250 yards record of 24 4,5secs., which has stood unbeaten for over thirty years, and A. G. Hill will endeavour to beat the British record, standing to the credit of the late G. W. Hutson, at 3min. 9 3 5secs. Hutson's feat was performed at Stamford Bridge on July 20, 1914.

BECKETT v. McGOORTY.

Visit To American's Training Camp At Stanmore.

TWO-HANDED PUNCHES.

A select party visited the Abercorn Arms at Stanmore the other day to witness Eddie McGoorty in training for his match with Beckett on Sept. 2nd, when the programme will be:—

10 rounds, Arthur Townley v. Fred Fulton.
20 rounds, Joe Beckett v. Eddie McGoorty.

The spectators were numerous when the American turned out to do his work, which he obviously enjoys like a glutton. The camp is quite a large one in a beautifully situated area, and Jack Curphey and George McDonald take care that their charge wants for nothing in the way of exercise. McGoorty is a fine figure of a man. Good legs and powerful shoulders, just a trifle round-shouldered as befits a boxer, McGoorty strikes the eye as a particularly awkward man to deal with.

His work satisfied everybody present, more particularly his two rounds with Roland Todd, who is a very good boxer, and the way the principal punched the ball was an eye-opener. McGoorty carried on his work practically without a breather for forty minutes; he perspired a little, but then that was only natural in such a moist atmosphere. McGoorty's two-handed punches may cause more trouble to Beckett than the latter's admirers anticipate.

IF SHE HAD WON.

Racing was continued at Deauville this week, where the fields have been good and four first favourites have proved successful.

M. Vanderbilt won another two-year-old race with Glorious, one of his own breeding. This was the stable's fourteenth victory since the Normandy campaign started, and none of his representatives, it may be mentioned, have run unplaced. Baron Rothschild won the Prix du Mont Canisy from the largest field of the day. One of the runners in this event, Zepelinade, was so neglected in the betting that had she won she would have been returned at the fabulous odds of 7,200 to 1. It would have been a record for the totalisator had it come off.

LADIES SWIMMING CHAMPIONSHIP

The Southern Counties 220 yards ladies' swimming championship was decided at the Worthing Baths, when the following were the results:—

Heat 2: Miss Florence Sancroft, Holloway United S.C. (3.27); Miss Mabel Fletcher, City of London S.C. (holder) (3.31⅕); Miss Irene B Christie, Natantas S.C. (3.35⅖); Miss Priscilla L Tett, Beckenham S.C. (3.59).

Final: Miss Fletcher (3.30⅕) 1, Miss Gant (4.35) 2, Miss Newman (3.47) 3; won by 2yds. 3yds. Miss Sancroft gave up.

"ENGLAND'S BEST CRICKETER."

Thirty of England's leading amateur and professional cricketers were asked this week by the "Daily Express," who in their opinion was the best all-round cricketer in England, and why. The replies revealed an almost overwhelming majority in favour of George Brown, of Hampshire. The reasons given were as follows:—

1. He is a really good fast bowler.
2. He is a fine forcing bat. (Witness his 100 made in ninety minutes last week.)
3. He is a fine defensive bat (He can, when it is necessary, restrain his rate of scoring to five runs an hour.)
4. He is a wonderful outfield.
5. He is the best "close-up" field in the kingdom.
6. He is a magnificent wicketkeeper. (Look up his performances during the recent Bournemouth week.)

THE KING AND HIS DOG.

When the King was making arrangements for his visit to Balmoral he caused inquiries to be made at the Board of Agriculture as to the possibility of taking his favourite dog with him. Lord Stamfordham was informed that a licence could only be granted on condition that the dog was taken to approved veterinary premises at Balmoral and kept in quarantine for six months. In the circumstances his Majesty decided to leave the dog at Buckingham Palace.

BATTERY CRICKET.

A Cricket match took place between D Sub, of 145 Siege Battery and the Caterpilla Section on the Battery ground, and resulted in a win for the A.S.C Section by 33 runs. Batting first the section scored 66, thanks to the splendid display of Bailey, Smith and Peachey, the battery only replying with 33. White and Smith bowled well taking 5 wickets for 13 runs and 5 for 20 respectively.

EASY VICTORIES.

Latest Reports of "Cologne Post" Matches.

ALL-ROUND TEAMS' SUCCESS.

The matches recorded today in "The Cologne Post" Competition are illustrative of the frequent superiority of the all-round team against the eleven that shines in batting or bowling only.

Detailed in summary form are the latest reports to hand: —

1/6 WEST YORKS REGT. (62 for 4) v. 75 BDE. R.F.A. (56). For the Yorks, Pte. Carr took 6 wickets for 27 runs, Pte. Burnett 3 for 10, Pte. Foley batted well for 19 not out and also Pte. Gibbons for 14. For the R.F.A., Gunner Goodwin batted very well for 27.

185 SIEGE BTY. R.G.A. (58 for 7) v. 1/5 SOUTH STAFFS (54). For 1/5 South Staffs, Sgt. Burton was top scorer with 14. 185 Siege Bty. went in and knocked up the runs required for the loss of 7 wickets, Trotter being top scorer with 13.

CAV. DIV. H.A. (103) v. 2nd Bde. R.A.F. (28) at Quadrath. Spr. C. Smith made a splendid 43. Whittaker bowled very well, taking 7 for 43. The R.A.F. came down badly against Cpl Adams and Sergt. Keevill, who claimed 5 for 12 and 5 for 15 respectively, no one reaching double figures.

53rd NORTHUMBERLAND FUSILIERS (160) v. CAV. DIV. H.Q (52). The losers, who were weakly represented could do very little against the bowling of Yardley and Crompton, who both took 5 wickets very cheaply. Sergt. Keevil, however, batted well, making 25 not out. Crompton (41), Tennant (36 and Feather (31) played splendid cricket for the winners.

WAHN SURVEY DET. (78 for 8) v. 3rd NORTHERN BDE. (75). For Northern Bde., Lieut. Ireland scored 38; for W.S.D., Cpl. Davis scored 31 not out and Capt. Jones 17.

BOULOGNE REGATTA.

Swimming Races Thrown Open To British Troops.

The Boulogne Rowing Club held a regatta this week—the first since the outbreak of war. Entries for the rowing events were not numerous; no fewer than 35 of the club's best oarsmen have given their lives in their country's cause. With characteristic generosity the French threw their swimming races open to the British troops. The results in these were:—

300 Metres:—Pte. Boland, Light T.M Battery, 1; L/Cpl. Larder, A.S.C., No. 12 M.T. Co., 2; Pte. Dessobeaux, French Army, 3; 20 metres, 10 metres

200 Metres:—Capt. Little, R.A.M.C., 1; Pte. Boland, Light T.M. Bty., 2; Pte. Desobeaux, French Army, 3; 40 metres, 30 metres.

60 Metres (Women):—Worker Hook, Q.M.A.A.C., 1; Worker Lowe, Q.M.A.A.C., 2; Worker Moseley, Q.M.A.A.C., 3; 2ft, yd.

A DRAMATIC FINISH.

There was a dramatic conclusion to the Surrey v Kent benefit match at the Oval, in which Hobbs, the hero of the day, rightly figured prominently, the honours being shared by Crawford. Surrey had 42 minutes in which to get 95 runs. Amid tense excitement they succeeded in obtaining them with eleven minutes to spare.

The cheering that greeted this remarkable performance was as terrific as it was deserved.

A CORRECTION.

In our report of the British Army of the Rhine Horse Show results we regret an error in the F. W. D. Lorries (with gun or pontoon) section. The first prize was won by the 24th Siege Bty R.G.A., 21st Bde R.G.A., IX Corps Heavy Artillery and not by the VI Corps 35th Bde R.G.A. Heavy Artillery, as stated.

R.A.F. ATHLETICS.

Success Of Rhine Army Entrants At Stamford Bridge.

HIGHLY CREDITABLE PERFORMANCES.

The initial sports meeting of the Royal Air Force A.A., held at Stamford Bridge, Chelsea, on Thursday, favoured with ideal weather, was an unqualified success. The racing was of the keenest, and several highly creditable performances were recorded. The South-Western area secured the King's Cup with a total score of 34 points, the Midland Area running up with 27 points, and Halton and Northern Area deadheating for third place with 12 points each. Sergt.-Maj. Mawby secured the 100 Yards (R.A.F. Championship) and the 220 Yards.

An exceptionally smart P.T. display by the R.A.F. drew much appreciative applause, and a novel event—the Pals' Obstacle Race—a strenuous 440 yards which included progression by the three-legged method, sack jumping and walking on a rolled barrel, with an apple in the mouth which had been secured from a pail full of water—caused much amusement. The band of the R.A.F. School of Music was in attendance, and added to the enjoyment of an exceedingly fine afternoon's sport. Details:

Salmond of the Signals carried his bat for 22. The Gunners started well, but collapsed, and 9 wickets were down for 47 runs. Two catches were then missed before the R.E.'s score was passed. The Gunners won by 13 runs.

Scores: R.A. 63; R.E. 49.

For the winners Lieut. Sanders hit 24.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

Leave Club Whist Drive.

Another successful whist drive was held at the Leave Club on Thursday. Forty tables were filled and the play was brisk and fast. Gentlemens prizes were won by:—1st, A. E. Tomlin, 154; 2nd, Pte. Watson, 152; 3rd, L/Cpl. Burrough, 150; and the ladies by:—1st, G. V. Shaw, 151; 2nd, S. Hyman, 151; 3rd, E. Cox, 149. Lt. Vernon again very kindly presided over the whist drive and Ptes. Beale and Duffy were most competent M.Cs.

An Accomplished Violinist.

Miss Doris Cloud the Australian violinist, and company visite Zülpich on Monday night and gave a delightful concert. Miss Doris Cloud proved herself a violinist of high accomplishment and her pieces "The Canary" and "Two eyes of grey" were well received. The remainder of the artistes were very pleasing, each being encored again and again. To conclude the programme "Land of Hope and Glory" was given as a duet to the accompaniment of the violin and piano the audience joining in the chorus.

A Neat Dancer.

This cliché is an impression of Bobbie Macauly of "The Pedlars" (Lancashire Division Concert Party). He is a big favourite with the boys and his dancing acts with Jerry Joyce are always popular items on the programmes. Exceptionally neat in his movements, and having a pleasing voice, he invariably scores in light comedy. Macauly is a professional artiste of some years standing and has toured extensively with the Four Le Roys. He played "Buttons" in Mr. A. Behan's "Wait a Minute" revue. Since he has been in the Army Bobbie has figured conspicuously in concert party work.

The Dream Child.

It was a touch of genius on the part of the producer — Lieut. Esmé Percy — to keep our interest in Arnold Bennett's dry humour, and our enthusiasm in Oscar Wilde's scintillating epigrams, unalloyed, by giving us in "The Dream Child", by Captain Gordon Blight, a piece of the most beautiful pure sentiment, as an effective contrast. The play, as a play, is good and the author is to be highly complimented on a fine piece of work.

The Acting.

How far it would have gone without the powerful aid of such acting as that of Miss Gabrielle Paul, Miss Bensusan, and Lieut. E. Percy, it is hard to say, but I judge from the results which were almost without parallel in the history of the Deutsches Theatre. A packed house was held spellbound the whole time, and during the long soliloquy by Paul Percy, in almost complete darkness, one could have heard a pin drop. The verdict of the audience is final. The "Dream Child" — the first born, I believe, of the author — will live and live long, and when brought to London should create in my opinion a popular furore that has not been met with since "Peg o' my Heart."

JACQUES.

"CHIC" EVANS DEFEATED.

In the United States Golf Championship, "Chic" Evans the holder, was beaten by Francis Ouimet, the conqueror of Vardon and Ray in 1913, before a great crowd.

An Irish Champion.

P. O'Hare (Dundalk) qualified at Bangor County Down to represent Ireland in the Professional Golfers' Association Tournament at Walton Heath. O'Hare is the holder of the Irish Championship.

RHINE GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

Final to be played To-day at Marienburg.

The final of the Golf Championship for the Army of the Rhine will be played today over the Marienburg golf course on the Bonn road. The match will be played over 36 holes, between Lieut.-Col. A. G. Barry and Capt. A. H. Read.

Play will commence in the morning at 10.45 and in the afternoon at 1.45.

"B" SIEGE PARK ITEMS.

The Headquarters and Workshops of "B" Siege Park occupy the same factory at Mulheim. In order to make the "occupation" as pleasant as possible the C.O. Major C. B. Evans, has been instrumental in having a large room fitted up as a recreation hall. A wet and dry canteen has been installed, a small reading and reference library is available and a full list of entertainments for the benefit of all ranks has been arranged.

* * *

On Thursday a Smoking Concert was held. Major C. B. Evans was in the chair and was well supported by officers and men from the Siege Park and Workshops. That well known concert party "The Prongs", gave a very fine programme. This was supplemented by local talent and was greatly appreciated. Cheers for the C.O. brought a successful and enjoyable evening to a close and the wish was expressed that another "Smoker" be arranged.

* * *

The first round of a ping-pong tournament has been played off and speculation is rife as to the ultimate winner.

* * *

Lt. R. W. Brown, who is an enthusiastic swimmer, has organised a strong swimming class. Great interest is being shown and good headway made by non-swimmers. Some swam the first time they entered the water, due to the successful land drill given by Lt. Brown at the instruction classes.

* * *

A football team has been formed and already two trial matches have been played. It is hoped to put up a good show in the League this season.

Mr Gregor Macgregor.

The funeral of Mr Macgregor, the famous wicket-keeper, takes place today, and the Surrey Middlesex match will not begin till twelve o'clock.

Anglo-Scottish Bowls.

The revived Anglo-Scottish bowls match, held under the auspices of the E.B.A., at Bellingham, resulted in a win for the Scots by 256 to 216.

Racing Films Popular.

"The most astonishing development in the British film world at present," said a London film renter, "is the popularity of any picture of horse-racing."

French Racing.

Racing in France is approaching pre-war standards, and yearlings sold recently at Deauville fetched good prices. A colt by Bruleur—Kizil Hourgan was sold for £6,040, the highest price ever paid for a yearling in France.

Bradford City.

The Bradford City Football Club's eleventh annual report shows a loss of £240 17s. 1d. on the season's working, which, added to the adverse balance of £6,104 9s. 8d. makes a total deficiency of £6,345 6s. 9d.

The Midgets.

Freeman, the midget Kent cricketer, asked if he was the smallest man playing in the county game, said it was a toss-up between himself and "Fanny" Walden, of Northampton. Neither is too small to play in class football. Walden playing for the 'Spurs, and Freeman for Maidstone.

King of Spain's Horses.

The King of Spain's horses have had a very successful time during the present racing season, they having taken part in 84 events and won 45 of them.

W.B. Albion.

West Bromwich Albion have plenty of skilful men; in fact, they have only lost Shearman, Brown, and Mann by transfers, although, of course, Lieutenant H. G. Bache and Lieutenant W. H. Jackson fell in the war.

Valued Services.

In recognition of his long and valued services to the cycling community, Mr. S. R. Noble, who was for a long period secretary of the N.C.U., is to receive a presentation at a dinner to be given in his honour at the Holborn Restaurant on September 6.

Soccer Captain.

Evan Jones, the Welsh international, late of Bolton Wanderers, has been appointed captain of Swansea Town.

Skootamotas.

Golf Mystery.

That one player of only equal skill and of less physical power than another should be able to hit the ball farther is one of the mysteries of golf.

The Spoon.

George Duncan, Abe Mitchell, and Alexander Herd still have an affection for the spoon, but it is not utilized extensively in the higher walks of golfing rivalry.

Matched for £1000 Aside.

The Irish horses, Rather Dark and Clonree, of whom the former won at Tramore, have been matched, it is stated, for £1000 aside, to run two miles over hurdles. Another match also mooted is that between Ironmaster and Coaxer.

Long Hitter's Test.

There will be some sort of test for the long hitters at Totteridge on September 20. A four-ball match is to be played in the morning, and Ray and Mitchell are to be on opposite sides. There is sure to be some fierce pressing.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Saving the Porter.

One does not see on the platforms of Cologne station big piles of luggage and parcels, porters dodging about with piled up trucks and shouting to people to get out of the way, a common sight at home. In Cologne there is a narrower platform between those used by passengers. The luggage and parcels are brought up from below by elevators in bogies and put into the vans. This is a method which might well be adopted by British companies thus obviating the labour of porters and incidentally saving the tempers of prospective travellers.

A Cologne Incident.

Two elderly people were moving some furniture along the Kaiser Wilhelm Ring when a British Army motor lorry passed them, and the driver stopped at a paper stall on the corner for a "Cologne Post." Soon away again, the driver was alarmed to hear cries of "Halt!" and to see the excited look of pedestrians near by. He stopped only to find that the two-wheeled hand-cart had been attached to the lorry. The old man still in the shafts had found it impossible to keep up with the pace, while his Frau was doing her best to save the goods from finding a place in the roadway.

English Murdered.

The menu card of at least one Cologne cafe is amusing and a fine example of how English should not be written or printed. "Gold Diners" is evidently meant to supply information that cold dinners are served, but just what is served cold is left unstated. The proprietor evidently found this too much for him. At any rate he has tried his apprentice hand at light confectionery for we are advised that he has "I class Kakes and tarts" for sale while under the heading of "Different water drinks" we get "Arienheiler bubbling water," whatever that may mean. "Ice-creams" include "Vanille, allow and miseeu" and "Granit-Ice, witn raspberry naturell."

Lofty Drying "Grounds".

An agreeable omission in Rhineland towns is the back garden washing ground. We are all too familiar with the aspect of London back gardens on washing da s with their array of clothing exposed to the gaze of neighbours. In Germany however, the Frau would be horr fied at having her garden disfigured by drying laundry. So she gets over the difficulty by having the drying ground on the roof of the house; and, owing to the height of town buildings here, and also the deep parapet running round the roof, the display of linen is rarely seen from the stre t. One obvious advantage in this method is that it protects against pilfering. At the same time one is inclined to pity the Frau who washing the clothes in the cellar then takes them to the roof to dry.

Very embarrassing!

The other day one of our men who is billeted in the neighbourhood of Solingen paid his first visit to the baths there. The first class bath was luxurious and he greatly enjoyed it. As he was getting out of the bath, he espied the shower bath apparatus. Near this was a cord under which the word "Bedienung" was printed. Thinking this meant "pull," his knowledge of German being very limited, he pulled the cord. Instead of water coming, the door opened and a frau entered. Tableau! The frau took in the situation at a glance, and in broken English volubly explained to the confused and blushing "guard" that "Bedienung" meant attendant and that the shower bath was worked by a lever. The thoroughly embarrassed guard gave a gasp of relief, when the frau with a knowing smile on her face disappeared.

A German Weakness.

It is of interest to the student of German to study the quotations and snatches of verse carved or painted on the walls of dwellings and other buildings. Even chemists shops and swimming baths have come under the influence of this custom and many of the sayings or "Sprichwörter" are quaint and amusing This love of rhyming and folk lore has been handed down since medieaval times and is still strong in Germany. The following near Godesberg is interesting and shows how the usual cursory notice "Please do not throw paper about or damage shrubs" has been set to rhyme:—

Was in der Stube gilt als simpler Brauch,
Das halte fest im Walde auch,
Lass niemals auf den Boden fallen
Papier, Orange, Eierschalen.
Halt rein und säuberlich das Waldlokal,
Dann bleibst wil kommen du hier überall.

Y.M.C.A. Reading Circle.

The usual weekly meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Reading Circle Euskirchen had this week a most delightful paper on "Victor Hugo," by Captain A. S. White, who in the course of his paper showed the development of French literature from the 17th, through the transition period of the 18th, to the 19th Century, and the position of Hugo as the recognised leader of the romanticists. The life of the great author was handled with a touch of intimacy, which added greatly to the value of the paper, bringing out the master mind of rhyme, the development of Hugo through the varied phases of his writings and the wonderful retention of the characteristic vigour with which be was endowed. The paper was followed by discussion, and a vote of thanks to the speaker. Next week's topic is to be a paper on "A Shakespearian Flower Garden."

A Victory Number.

The 3rd number of the 3rd Battn. Machine Gun Corps Magazine is at hand and is indeed a creditable production. In a brief article entitled "Victory," Lieut.-Col. Cranston makes a strong appeal for unity and unselfishness of purpose in the work of re-construction. Three pages are devoted to sport in all its branches—a strong point with this battalion. As in previous numbers there is an article dealing with the fighting history of the unit.

"A night in the Channel" is a cameo of the war, whilst two pages of "Harrassing Fire" makes spicy reading. Amongst other items, are "Laws and Customs of Cricket" by Major G.G.M. Bennett, and a pleasing poem by Rex entitled "The Present."

Another feature of interest incorporates the impressions of various people who attended the victory march at Paris.

The Honorary Editor (Lieut.-Col. W.J. Cranston) has every reason to be proud of his magazine, which fully maintains the standard of excellence attained in previous numbers.

Separation Allowances to Wives.

Separation allowances to wives residing with their husbands in Germany will be adjusted through the account of the Command Paymaster, G.H.Q. Applications should be made by the soldier's Commanding Officer to the Regimental Paymaster at home for the necessary authority for transfer of payment, to be sent to the Command Paymaster, G.H.Q. On receipt of this authority, the Command Paymaster will authorize Officers Commanding to pay the wives direct from their Imprest Accounts. Payment at the weekly rate will be made monthly in advance, or at shorter intervals if more convenient. The instructions do not apply in the case of wives visiting their husbands for short periods. In this case, issue will be made as far as possible to nominees in the United Kingdom, or on the return of payee.

tably they have been entertained by their British comrades.

Sunday in Rhineland.

One cannot help but notice that Sunday among the German people is a day of enjoyment and pleasure, much more so than it is in England where fairs and dances are not held on the Sabbath. Take the car to Riehl and get off at the fair ground and you will find it is practically impossible to move for civilians. In the morning most people go to church and the remainder of the day is given up to pleasure. The ever popular café and garden are crowded, also the steamers on the Rhine. The cars do full business up to a late hour, especially from the districts surrounding Cologne, like Bensberg and Königsforst. Altogether Sunday seems to be the popular day of enjoyment.

A. C.O.'s Conundrum.

When is a soldier not a soldier? The reader is wrong if he thinks the answer is "When he is a camouflaged civilian." The conundrum is the outcome of a ranker's experience the other day. To the staff of a Cologne C.O. there was recently posted a number of men who all had been khaki-clad for a matter of two or three years, and the C.O. had occasion to examine their records with a view to the issue of medal ribbon. While doing so he made a discovery at which he professed to be profoundly surprised. On the crime sheets of each one of the new arrivals there was not a single entry to be found. "And you call yourselves soldiers," he drily commented, with the jocular addendum "I shall have to see what can be done to convert you into real soldiers before you leave the Army."

American Soldiers in Cologne.

Large chars-a-banc, crowded with American soldiers have been seen driving round Cologne every day during the last fortnight and have attracted much attention. The soldiers were from Berlin where they had been collected from the several Prisoners-of-War Camps in Germany in which they had been caring for the many Russian, and a few British (invalids, for the most part) prisoners still in Germany, They come every day in batches of 60 or 70, are met by a representative of the Cologne Central Y.M.C.A. driven round the City, brought to the Y.M.C.A. where they get dinner, and then are driven back to the station, where they entrain for Paris en route for America via London. The Americans say that on their return home they will make known how hospi-

SIBERIAN STRUGGLE.

DARING LONDON ROBBERY: MOTOR BANDITS' GREAT COUP.

SILESIAN STRUGGLE.

POLES IN REVOLT.

Information regarding the Polish rebellion in Upper Silesia is conflicting, but it seems that the revolt is still most serious. German troops have recaptured some villages, but they have not obtained any final result. Fierce fighting continues, and disturbances have started in other places, for instance, in the Ratibor district, where the rebels have been reinforced by Polish Legionaries. It is rumoured that the rebels have taken Germans to Poland from places they are occupying, and that they have a very strong organisation. Everywhere they are masters. At Kattowitz especially, there were sanguinary battles, in which many houses were destroyed and a great number of civilians were killed or wounded.

According to a message from Kattowitz there is a real franctireur war throughout Upper Silesia. All prisoners on both sides are killed immediately. Air fights have also taken place, and the Poles have shot down some German aeroplanes. A German cavalry detachment was attacked and all the men killed.

The mining strike is continued. It is in reality a general strike, and there is no chance of it ending soon. Owing to the situation in Silesia, the German-Polish negotiations at Berlin have been broken off, the Polish delegates declaring that they cannot continue the discussions so long as the German troops in Silesia arrest and shoot Poles in masses.

The latest information is that after a conference in Berlin between the German Government and the Polish Mission, an "armistice" was arranged. An Inter-Allied Commission is proceeding to Upper Silesia.

PRACTICAL CONFERENCE.

REALITY NOT IDEALISM.

"This concurrent advance in social and industrial well-being is what is aimed at in the Labour Chapter of the Peace Treaty."

To achieve it is the business of a separate organisation, which has been set up under the aegis of the League of Nations and which will hold its first meeting at Washington in October. Detailed proposals, framed in the light of information collected in respect to industrial conditions in all countries, will be submitted. These proposals, however, will be submitted to the Governments concerned prior to the Conference, so that the Governments may advise their representatives upon them, and will therefore be to an extent morally bound to accept the principles involved in them. This indeed may be said to be the feature which will distinguish the conferences of the new organisation of labour from the International conferences of labour with which we have been familiar.

These gatherings have been in the main of representatives of labour only and they have adopted resolutions of an idealistic character, which whatever their effect on the public mind, have not brought about any immediate practical results. In future practical results will be achieved by all-round co-operation. Employers also will be represented. In fact the new conditions bring in all interests to work together for the common good.

SHIPS AND MINES.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST DANGER.

An investigation has been held into the circumstances in which the American steamship "Englewood" struck a mine on August 14. It is believed that a drifting mine which had become waterlogged caused this accident. Drifting mines are normally quite innocuous, and when buoyant are not only easily seen and avoided in daylight, but are also light enough to be washed clear of a vessel by the wave thrown up from the bows. Should a mine, however, become waterlogged and float submerged before obtaining a negative buoyancy and sinking, this is not the case, and there is a possibility of an accident should the safety gear of the mine have become impaired.

Since the armistice this is only the third case of accident to a merchant ship that can be ascribed to striking a waterlogged mine. Special vessels are detailed to deal with drifting mines in all areas where it is thought necessary, and merchant and fishing vessels are directed to endeavour to sink by rifle fire all drifting mines met with on their passage, a reward of £5 being paid by the Admiralty for every mine sunk by a British vessel.

PETAIN AS POLITICIAN.

In the forthcoming French General Elections, Marshal Pétain will be a candidate for election as senator in the Department of the Pas de Calais. Marshal Pétain is a native of that department, where his father was a farmer.

ROBBERY EPIDEMIC.

MOTOR BANDITS' HAUL AT LONDON FACTORY.

For cool impudence, a gang of London robbers reached about the limit early the other morning, when they carried out successfully a daring burglary. The scene was at Crews Market, at the Tottenham end of Seven Sisters-road; the premises robbed were those of Messrs. Pearson (Limited), pyjama and shirt manufacturers. An entry was forced into the shop by a jemmy, a plate glass window in the door being broken. Several parcels of valuable material were abstracted and removed in the car. Apparently the thieves were disturbed in their work, as there were signs that they had intended also to break into the premises next door, which are occupied by Mr. Quigley, a toy manufacturer.

Threat To Shoot.

Mrs. Hinds, who lives a few doors away, said that at 3.20 a.m. she heard a car in the street. It stopped outside Messrs. Pearson's shop and four or five men got out. The car drove away at a furious rate. Another car came along and four men got out.

She then heard something smash. She leaned out of the window and was seen by one of the men who was evidently on guard, and he came under her window and watched her for some minutes, but did not speak. She described him as a young man, dressed in a light suit, with a light Trilby hat, and said she would know him again. Three other men walked down the road and round to the back of the building.

After about 20 minutes a girl came along the street and stopped opposite the shop. A man crossed to her and used threatening language. Mrs. Hinds was able to distinguish "N.3" on the number plate of the motor-car, but could not see the remaining figures. This was a small car with a light top.

Mr. Roberts, who lives a few doors away, also saw the gang from his window. They threatened him and told him to keep inside. He then went to the back of the building, where he found two men on guard and saw three others further down. They threatened to shoot him if he did not go back.

ANOTHER DARING RAID.

Another "hands-up" raid by armed men on a London suburban railway booking office, following the outrage at North Dulwich last Friday, has taken place, this time at Boston Manor, a small station on the District Railway between South Ealing and Hounslow.

On Wednesday night Fred Brown, a lad of 16, a relief booking porter, was on duty at the station between 10 and 10.30, when, looking up on hearing a tap at the door, he saw two youths in the office, one pointing a revolver at his face.

This youth covered him with the revolver, while the other demanded to know where the money was. The boy was too frightened to resist, and the raiders rifled the till of all its money, £16, and, hearing a train approaching, made off, and disappeared in the open country surrounding the station. They threatened the boy with death if he raised an alarm.

The police have so far no clue.

Scotland Yard is of opinion that the youths are the same who worked the North Dulwich outrage.

GERMAN PRESIDENT SWORN.

IMPOSING CEREMONY AT WEIMAR.

An imposing ceremony took place at Weimar, when the President of the German Republic, Herr Ebert, took the oath under the new German Constitution. The House was fairly full, only the places of the Nationalists and Independent Socialists, the extreme Right and extreme Left were empty.

The end of the ceremony was a long speech by the President of the National Assembly in which he took leave from Weimar, where, far from revolutionary Berlin, the first Parliament of the young Republic had taken refuge. The organ played as the deputies left the House.

Herr Ebert also made a speech to the immense crowds waiting outside. He swore again to be true and faithful to the new German Constitution and finished by shouting "Long live our dear German people." The band played "Deutschland, Deutschland über alles," as the President's motor car disappeared round the corner.

DEARER PORRIDGE.

Oatmeal was decontrolled three months ago, on May 19. At that time the retail price was 5d. a pound in England and Wales, and 4½d. a pound in Scotland and Ireland. £5 5s. a bag of 280lb. is exactly 4½ l. a pound wholesale. Oats have risen, and are now 65s. per quarter.

KING COAL.

MR. HOOVER ON EUROPE'S PLIGHT.

Mr. Hoover has returned to Paris after a busy visit to Central Europe and Silesia, and has laid before the Supreme Council the impression made upon him by his journey. His conclusion is that, unless the very widest, almost autocratic, powers are given in dealing with the coal situation in Silesia, nothing can save Europe from a crisis which will show itself both economically and politically.

In Budapest, Mr. Hoover says, there is a tremendous scarcity of food. Hospitals which contain over 20,000 patients have no anaesthetics, antiseptics, or dressings. There is no milk for children. Throughout Austria and Hungary both rickets and tuberculosis have increased to an absolutely appalling extent—in fact, rickets is described at being "an almost universal disease among children in Hungary." Everywhere paper clothing and paper bandages have to be used, the limited stock of better dressing being reserved for very special cases. There is no vaseline or any other ointment with which to treat the skin diseases and bedsores caused by the malnutrition of babies. Sterilizing has had to be reduced below the safety point owing to the coal shortage, and cleanliness of linen in hospitals has become as impossible as surgical asepsis.

Nearly all the troubles of Austria and Hungary can be traced directly to the world coal crisis. This question of coal is, indeed, at the present moment, perhaps the most important question the world has had to consider since the outbreak of war in 1914. America can supply Europe with a certain amount of coal, but for every ton of coal shipped from America to Europe, one ton of foodstuffs will be kept in the New World. Throughout the world, in spite of the difficulties of collecting precise information, it may be said with some confidence that this year's harvest is good, except in the Baltic Provinces.

TURKEY DEFIANT.

COMPLICATED SITUATION.

The position in Turkey, and especially in Asia Minor, is very uncertain. About a fortnight ago operations were begun by the Tartars and the Kurds, acting at Turkish instigation and led by Turkish commanders, against the southern frontier of Russian Armenia. The Armenians south-east of Erivan were driven out of Djulfa and Nakhichevan and compelled to fall back north-westwards along the Tabriz-Erivan railway as far as Kamarlu, sixteen miles south of Erivan. Small-arm ammunition was very deficient among the Armenians, and the situation was regarded as serious. The Armenians have now resumed the offensive south-east of Kamarlu, and their first operations have met with success.

In the Aidan Vilayet, fighting between the Greeks and Turkish irregulars has again broken out north-west of Smyrna. The situation in this quarter, where Italian, Greek, and Turkish troops are all engaged, becomes daily more complicated.

SYMBOLIC STROKE.

GERMANIA MONUMENT DAMAGED BY LIGHTNING.

The fate of the monument "Germania," erected to commemorate the German victory of 1870 and the foundation of the empire of the Hohenzollerns, has now been revealed. Last summer, a few months before the final defeat, "Germania" was blasted by a symbolic flash of lightning. The public regarded the event as a sinister presage. The authorities censored all communication about the damage to the statue, and endeavoured to restore the figure. This hasty and secret restoration was badly botched. The thunderstorm in which "Germania" suffered lasted only a few minutes. A single sword of flame from the sky crossed the sword brandished by "Germania" and broke it. The Imperial eagle was smashed, and a big fissure appeared in the pedestal. The decorative motif of "the angel of war" was also destroyed.

STRIKE AT DUNLOP'S.

Between 9,000 and 10,000 workpeople employed at the Dunlop Rubber Works Company at Aston, Birmingham, have come out on strike. A demand was made at short notice on behalf of a section of the workpeople for payment of a special rate for night duty. The firm refused to discuss it, unless the case was put through the proper channels. The majority of the strikers are non-unionists, and the trouble has been caused, it is stated, by recently demobilised men not belonging to any union, who have been trying to take matters into their own hands. The rubber departments only are affected.

8 DROWNED IN SEINE.

A party of eight persons in a boat on the Seine near Rouen were drowned through a panic. The boat leaked and shipped large quantities of water. The occupants became frightened and crowded together at one end and the boat capsized. The entire party were drowned before the eyes of a man on the bank, who was powerless to do anything.

Viscount Grey of Fallodon expects to leave England on September 16 to take up his post at Washington.

HOME INDUSTRIES.

PREMIER'S AMPLIFICATION.

Mr. Lloyd George has issued a statement amplifying his recent speech on the Government's policy regarding trade, industry and labour.

The Premier states that the Government will seek emergency powers to enable the Board of Trade to check any flood of imports, for instance, from Germany, that might arise from a collapse of exchange so disproportionate to the costs of production in the country of origin as to enable sales to take place in Britain at prices altogether below the cost of production here. Also the Government intend to prohibit the import, except on licence, of products of various unstable key industries. A key industry is an industry essential to the nation which had to be specially fostered during the war, and which could not maintain itself at the level of production necessary for the nation if Government assistance were withdrawn.

Steps are being taken to establish a system of export credits for the purpose of facilitating the resumption of export trade to disorganised parts of Eastern Europe, for example Serbia, Roumania, Poland, and parts of Austria. Credits will be furnished to the extent of £26,000,000.

SHOTS AT DANZIG.

GERMAN AND ALLIED SAILORS.

Collisions between German and American sailors have occurred at Neufahrwasser, Danzig, as a result of petty jealousies arising out of a dance. Quarrels broke out in a dancing-hall, and were continued in the street, but ended when the Americans had returned to the destroyer Hale. Sailors on leave from the small German cruiser Frankfurt encountered some American sailors when passing the Hale, and one German sailor was badly injured. The German sailors, who had been joined by civilians, thereupon became excited, and then a number of Americans, together with sailors from the French destroyer Claymore, charged the crowd. Shots were fired from the French destroyer, and four persons were wounded slightly. The Grenzschutz were immediately called out and cleared the neighbourhood, whereupon the Americans and French withdrew.

IRISH HUMOURS.

The Cork police have received a report of an attack near Dripsey, in the county, on three persons engaged in conveying milk to a creamery. It is stated that three men were waylaid on a lonely part of the road by a number of young fellows, some of whom wore masks. These attacked, gagged, and bound the drivers, smashed the milk churns, cut the harness of the horses to pieces, and then scattered in various directions, leaving the victims bound and helpless on the roadside. These were subsequently released by passers-by in the same district, but some time later Shandy Hall, the residence of Mr. John Murphy, was attacked by a party of masked men.

AMERICA AND RHINELAND.

According to the "Echo de Paris" President Wilson declared to the Commission for Foreign Affairs of the U.S. Senate that Japan had promised by a document to give back Shantung to China, but he refused to communicate these documents to the Senate.

During the discussion Mr. Wilson declared also that American troops will remain in the Rhineland during the whole period fixed by the Treaty.

DWINDLING ARMY.

The Helsingfors correspondent of the "National Tidende" states that the situation with regard to the North Russian Army is still bad, desertions being numerous. The army has dwindled from 35,000 to 15,000 men. Reval is now a British Naval base and all war materials for the North Russian Army are being sent via that port.

The same paper states that England is asking for a railway concession through Esthonia to Russia to open up a road to the Russian market, also that negotiations are going on with a view to leasing the islands of Dagoe and Oesel to England for the purpose of constructing a large commercial port.

SOLDIER'S THIRD FLOOR LEAP.

When arrested in the Strand yesterday by a military patrol, a Canadian soldier, Le Bonty, hit one of his captors in the face, and dashed down Savoy-street, closely pursued. He ran into Savoy-mansions, occupied by War Office officials, and raced upstairs. Finding escape impossible by any other means, he leapt from a third-floor window and fell on the pavement.

He was taken to Endell-street Military Hospital with a fractured thigh and a dislocated arm.

FEW NEW WARSHIPS REQUIRED.

Dr. Macnamara replying at the Admiralty to a dockyard deputation, said it was the Board's intense desire to reduce to the utmost any changes that would bring distress, but discharges must take place.

There was abundant repair work at present, but few if any new warships would be required. The Admiralty desired to give all naval work possible to Government yards, and were seriously considering a proposal to use them for building merchant ships.

DISABLED SOLDIERS.

MORE MONEY AND BETTER TRAINING.

Important announcements were made by Sir Robert Horne yesterday in the course of an interview at Glasgow. The Minister of Labour, who is visiting the city to investigate several matters connected with his Department, observed that facilities for training were being very greatly increased.

Concerning pensions, he said that while undergoing industrial training, partially disabled ex-service men are in future to be treated as men unable to earn anything and are accordingly to receive the full pension allowance granted in cases of complete disablement. In addition, the Government have decided to extend the second period of unemployment donation from 13 weeks to 20 in the case of the disabled soldier who is unemployed, while such of those men as are receiving the lowest scale of pensions are to be given an extra allowance, amounting roughly to 4s. per week.

Subsistence Allowance.

It had been further arranged, he said, that when the place in which training was given made it necessary for a man to reside away from his home and family he would receive a subsistence allowance of 17s. 6d. a week.

Steps were about to be taken to begin a campaign for the purpose of ensuring that employers throughout the country should afford employment, in a reasonable percentage, to partially disabled men. The Ministry of Labour had been in close touch with employers and trade unions and they had reached an amount of agreement which gave them the greatest possible hope for the success of the scheme. "The cases of these men," said Sir Robert, "lie upon the conscience of the people, whose burden they have borne."

TOWARDS INDEPENDENCE.

ROUMANIA'S AGREEMENT WITH UKRAINE.

The Ukrainian Press Bureau in London has received intelligence from Bucharest, that the negotiations entered upon between an extraordinary Ukrainian mission and the Roumanian Government have terminated to the satisfaction of both parties.

The Roumanian Government accords to the Government of independent Ukraine the free passage through its territory of armaments, munitions, and other indispensable supplies. The two Governments pledge themselves not to take up arms against each other, and Roumania has, in addition, agreed to be the interpreter at the Peace Conference of the wishes of the Ukraine.

This important agreement, the first serious step towards the recognition of the independence of the Ukraine, has afforded the latter an opportunity of considerably developing the struggle against the Bolshevists.

JAPAN'S ARMAMENTS.

The Japanese Navy Department's programme of new construction for this year will add to the navy two battle-cruisers, three light cruisers, five first-class destroyers, five second-class destroyers, several submarines, and a number of gunboats suitable for service in China. The battle-cruisers will be of 40,000 tons displacement, and will embody the latest improvements evolved by the British Navy during the war. This programme is expected to be completed by 1923, in which year the Japanese battle fleet will consist of eight modern Dreadnoughts and six battle-cruisers.

PROFITEERING ACT.

We understand that active steps are being taken to set up as speedily as possible the necessary machinery for putting the Profiteering Act into operation. The regulations are being drafted, and it is expected that the local committees will be at work in a few weeks, if not earlier.

STOLEN STORES NOT MISSED.

At Biggleswade, yesterday, Charles Walker, employed as a butcher at Henlow Aerodrome, was sentenced to two months imprisonment for the theft of various articles of the value of £9 5s. from the aerodrome stores. Mr. R. S. Fordham, the chairman, commenting on the fact that the stolen stores were not missed by the aerodrome authorities, said:— "If this can go on at Henlow it can go on anywhere else," and he protested against the squandering of the taxpayers' money.

"RED" LITERATURE.

At Nottingham Daniel Lazarus, 19, born in England, of Russian parents, was remanded, charged under the Defence of the Realm Act with conduct calculated to cause disaffection among the civil population. It was alleged that Lazarus, who had been engaged as a railway booking clerk, had given a man a pamphlet urging British porters to prepare for a revolution. At his house a quantity of Socialist literature was found, and pamphlets dealing with the Military Service Act. Bail was refused.

FEWER GERMAN TRAINS.

Owing to the shortage of coal the German train service will be much reduced during the winter, and the trains will be neither heated nor lighted.

SAFE FLYING.

FURTHER DETAILS OF AIR MINISTRY'S COMPETITION.

Further details as to the Air Ministry's Imperial flying competition show that the main idea is to increase the safety of air travel. £64,000 will be offered in prizes, and the machines competing, big and small aeroplanes and seaplanes, must have been designed and constructed within the British Empire.

These competitions should give a great stimulus to aircraft. The first prize for aeroplanes will be £10,000 for a small type carrying two persons. For a large type machine carrying 15 persons exclusive of crew, £20,000 is offered, and for a seaplane £10,000. Each machine must carry parachutes and the seaplanes lifebelts as well for all passengers and crew. The small type machine must be capable of flying with a full load at a maximum speed of 100 miles per hour and a minimum speed of forty miles per hour; and the large type at ninety miles and forty-five miles per hour. The small machine must be capable of rising 500 feet in the first minute and the large type 350 feet in the first minute. "Full load" for small machines includes the usual instruments, sufficient petrol and oil to fly 450 miles — a load of 440lb. The large machines must carry petrol and oil sufficient to fly 600 miles and a load of 3,000lb. — this not to include the weight of the crew but to include the weight of the passengers. Seaplanes must fly eighty knots with a full load and also at a speed below forty knots. They must also be capable of climbing 350 feet in the first minute.

UNREST IN ITALY.

FIREARMS TO BE DELIVERED UP.

Throughout Italy private owners of firearms and explosives of every description, as well as other weapons of offence, must reveal them and deliver them up to the public authorities, who will judge in individual cases whether the owner is entitled to keep them. This step was made necessary by the discovery, during the strike agitations of the past few months, that suspected organisations had been accumulating arms with a view to a revolutionary and anarchist outbreak.

Thousands of arms have already been handed over by law-abiding citizens, but what the Government, of course, wants to get at are the non-law-abiding citizens who look to foment trouble, and a severe eye will be kept on these. However, since the failure of the last general strike a month ago, and especially the breakdown of the Hungarian Soviet, the agitation for a revolution has diminished considerably.

FIRE IN A CINEMA.

THEATRE DESTROYED WITHOUT LOSS OF LIFE.

Shortly before 10 o'clock a film in the operating box caught fire, and the flames quickly spread. The operator was badly burnt, and had to be carried from the building.

An alarm was raised, but fortunately there was no panic, and the house was cleared without accident to anyone.

2 ICES — £2,000.

"Give me two ice creams and the necklace is yours," said a litle page boy to an ice cream seller in the Tuilleries Garden, Paris. The necklace, composed of pearls, is said to be worth £2,000. It belongs to an American woman staying at a Paris hotel. A page boy stole it, gave it to a companion, and this companion offered it to the ice cream seller for 10f. The ice cream seller had not 10f. to spare. The day was hot and the ice cream was tempting. Thus the pearls changed hands for the ices. The mother of the ice cream seller was alarmed and informed the police. The necklace has been restored, the ice-cream seller is the poorer by two ices, and the page boy and his companion are at the police station.

EARLY CLOSING BILL.

Sir Kingsley Wood's Shops (Early Closing) Bill, the text of which was published yesterday, proposes 8 o'clock as the closing hour on Saturday and 7 o'clock on other week-days.

An exception is made of tobacconists and confectioners, whose closing hours will remain 9 and 8 respectively.

Certain exemptions may also be granted by the local authorities responsible for enforcing the Act.

CARNEGIE'S £10,000,000.

Carnegie died worth under 50,000,000 dollars (nominally £10,000,000). His fortune was immensely reduced by gifts and also by the marriage portion of his only daughter.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN.

The current ebullition of feeling expressed in the French press against the Persian agreement demonstrates the ease with which the apparently well founded understanding between the two neighbouring countries can be threatened.

The Entente established between the two countries by the instrumentality of the late King appealed to the popular imagination no less than to the good sense of the nations, and the mutual understanding only required the pitiless attack of the German armies to deepen the respect of the two nations for each other.

The difficulties of the peace which is the outcome of the war requires that our friendship with France must be devoid of any feeling of distrust.

The present chaotic domestic condition of Persia would, if permitted to continue, leave her an easy prey for her hereditary enemy the Turk, and the machinations of Russia, should that country ever care to renew her policy of irritation in Indian affairs.

The close proximity of our Indian empire makes it imperative that we should take an interest in the restoration of Persia from the condition of internal anarchy and utter defencelessness in which she now exists.

That is our defence for having made our agreement with Persia and we feel confident that the validity of the defence is not questioned in France. There the opposition is entirely inspired by our attitude to the French policy in Syria. (To the French people the outlook is that we have insisted upon France holding her hand in Syria and resisting an actual protectorate being established over that country while we have, in effect, gained what amounts to an equivalent in Persia.

Whatever justice there may be in this view, and it is debatable, there can be no doubt that every effort should be made on both sides of the channel to remove these sources of distrust. No one makes the mistake of supposing that there is no further need for friendship with France. It is as necessary now as it ever was. It is not required that the two countries should imitate each other in manners or in thought but the application of a little insight and discrimination is wanted on both sides.

GOD AND THE FOOL.

"There is no God" are the words used by some, but King David, in his writings calls this type of man a fool.

As the great Universe in which we live goes on day by day in the same orderly way, men say it is all governed by the Laws of Nature, and think when those magic words have been used, all argument or assertion that a God exists, turns into mere idle words.

We know however that there can be no law unless that law has been made or given by someone, thus the very fact of the law implies a Law Giver or Maker, and the Christian religion calls that Law Giver, God.

If the Universe is governed by laws, and the order in things implies that it is so, then the universe acts according to some settled plan, and a plan must imply thought, and it follows as a natural sequence that the thought implies a thinker. "The world" as Professor Wragg puts it, "is not a fortuitous concourse of atoms", and we can readily see that there is no room for chance in the great Divine Plan, "for how can life in its most elementary form be a combination or inter action of dead matter and blind force."

The vastness of space must impress the human race with its own insignificance, and show mankind that a power must guide that vast array of stars.

Every science has to take some basis for its experiments, something taken for granted, and upon that hypothesis, science can work. Men should not blame the Theologian who in studying the science of God, takes his hypothesis as God.

Some speak of evolution, and in that think that they have found the answer to all the problems of life; in that magic word, think that they have found the acme of perfection in the way of argument as to what the world is, and the key to all the problems of the origin of life.

Every effect must have a cause in the chain of evolution, and even if one is told that it all comes from an original dust which science calls protoplasm, that dust in the great chain is only an effect, and one must go back some time to a first cause. No better First Cause can be found than God.

God the great Hypothesis upon which we build our hope of salvation and immortality. God our great Figure one, our First Cause, our Law Giver, who governs all.

Truly in the face of the great Universe it must only be the fool who can say in his heart that there is no God.

A GARRISON CHURCH.

WITH THE CATHOLICS.

Down one side of the Church of the Minorites there is a throng of khaki with a sprinkling of Germans; down the other there is a throng of Germans with a sprinkling of khaki. A few W.R.A.F.S. and British women, some subalterns and field officers, and other ranks in plenty, knee or sit here or there, intermingled without design.

In this House of God worldly precedence seems not to be observed. As we Catholics enter the church, we feel that God our Father sees our naked souls. If we linger near the door like the publican He knows we feel our unworthiness to come at all; and if we go up nearer to the Holy of Holies He knows that we are like little children, yearning for a closer embrace from He our Greatneart.

A priest and a server enter, and Mass begins. At the foot of the altar the 42nd. Psalm "Judge me, O God" is said in Latin, followed by the mutual confession of priest and people. We scarcely hear the minister; that does not trouble us. As children we learned the story, the fact and the action of the Mass, and now it hardly matters whether we read our books, say the rosary, sing a hymn, or simply watch and think. We know what is going to happen, and mutually we acknowledge our mistakes and ask for forgiveness. It is our little "clean up" in preparation for a visitor.

The priest has moved now to the altar; he says a prayer and then the "Glory be to God on High." Another prayer, and then a reading from the Episdes. Soon he is at the other side of the altar for the Gospel. We in the body of the church rise to our feet out of respect for the evangelical message.

After a while we again glance towards the altar, and all kneel down. In the manner of long ago the celebrant has taken bread and wine, and he offers them to Heaven, along with the hearts of himself and the people. It is a co-operative offering.

A minute or so goes by, the priest has taken the bread in his hands, and, in the words of Christ at the Last Supper, he says, "This is My body." Taking also the wine, he again speaks for the Master, "This is My blood." And we Catholics believe that Christ has come again; that, in a mystical way, He has again inhabited our little world: that again he is offering himself to the Father, for us and all others.

It has happened then. He is here. We can hardly make our hearts sing "Blessed is he that cometh," so stunned are we by the awfulness of it all, the nearness of God to us, the "far-awayness" of us from God. Doubts do not trouble us. We have taken the plain meaning of the Scriptures, we know He said, "The bread that I will give you is My flesh," and again, "Take ye and eat, this is My body which shall be delivered for you; do this in commemoration of Me"; and yet again, "He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood abideth in Me and I in Him." God can do all things.

Did He not implant His Son in the womb of the Virgin without human assistance save the maiden's acquiescence? Did not that Son rise bodily from the grave wherein He had lain dead? If He wishes to hide Himself under the appearance of bread and wine, may He not do so?

The Mass goes on, the remembering of the dead, the Lord's Prayer, the "Lamb of God," the "Lord, I am not worthy;" and then the Communion, actual and spiritual. Another prayer or two, followed by the reading of that wonderful Gospel of St. John, "In the beginning was the Word."

After a few more prayers the service is over, and we leave the church. From the days of Abel there have been sacrifices to God. The blood of lambs and of oxen, the first fruits of the year have all served to show man's fealty to his creator. But the offerings were never rich enough for the Maker of all things.

Even the hearts of man, which He loves and longs for, are but a dingy offering to so Divine a being. So He sent His Son, not to destroy the old sacrifices, but to build up a new one and unite the old with it. This new sacrifice was first offered on Cavalry, and, in accordance with the commands left to His apostles, it is offered daily throughout the world in the mystical sacrifice of the Mass. As we take part in it we help to fulfil the prophecy of Melchisidech, "From the rising of the sun to the going down thereof there shall be sacrifice."

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

IX. ARENBERG.

The closer my acquaintance with the lovely Rhine valley becomes, the greater grows its charm and the more beautiful its hidden beauties.

How often long repellant German names hide a locality of exceptional attraction, I realised when fancy led me a week ago to discover the unsuspectedly interesting grounds of Pfarrer Kraus at Arenberg.

This place is so well worth a visit, that the effort to catch the early train to Coblenz is amply repaid. I know of no view to surpass the one we enjoyed from the hills beyond the pontoon bridge of this town, with its imposing buildings and monuments, its lovely pleasure grounds and noble bridges spanning the broad rivers as they lay shimmering in the splendour of August sunshine and melting amongst the blue hills in the hazy distance beyond.

It is from the valley below that one finds the trams for Arenberg. We soon reach our destination and just casually enter an ordinary looking church inside the gates. But once across the threshold, we stand spellbound and amazed at the exquisite loveliness of the interiors.

The whole of the walls, pillars and ceiling are decorated throughout with a mosaic of rare and beautiful stones, which form a most effective setting for numerous tableaux which surround the church. Special attention has been paid to the most important scenes connected with the birth and death of Christ. Both these incidents occupy the space at each end of the church.

The latter behind the altar exceed in perfection of detail the most extravagant expectancy and the way in which colored glass windows diffuse a lovely glow of light on the faces of the Madonna and Christ, imparting an unearthly radiance, makes one feel they are looking on the faces of angels.

This scene, including the crucified malefactors and the women weeping at the foot of the cross, is the most appealing representation of this heart-rending spectacle imaginable and only the most callous would fail to be moved by the greatness of that sacrifice and the marvellous love that prompted it.

Paths outside thread the grounds and a pleasant pine wood, in which one comes on as many as twenty notable chapels and numerous shrines, all reproducing familiar Bible stories replete with vivid reality and local colouring.

Such subjects as "The angel Gabriel appearing to the Virgin Mary," "Christ in the carpenter's shop," "The raising of Lazarus," "The Disciples asleep in the garden," and "Our Lord's agonised prayer in Gethsemane" are so beautifully executed, that they appeal alike to young and old.

These grounds are situated amongst most ideal surroundings and a ramble in this vicinity cannot be surpassed for the glorious prospects on every hand.

It was a revelation as to the way our American allies are treated when on returning to Coblenz we were able to wind up a most enjoyable day at their model Y. M. C. A. with such a sumptuous feed of soup, roast fowl, green peas, ice etc. that one wished in vain for a winter appetite in place of a heat wave apology.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

CABARET OR . . . ?

Sir,—How keen "H.H.J." seems on cafes, women and wine, not forgetting music appeals to him.

Moderate drinking is in its place, but in the company of friends accompanied by the uplifting influence of music it generally accumulates.

In some extraordinary way the idea of cafes falls to the ground on return to home life. Is it that the English way, appeals to one more?

If people have no interest in the works of nature, sport etc. then the only place where they can enjoy themselves is in a cafe.

C. R.

ARE GERMANS IMPOLITE?

Sir,—In reply to "G.Y.F." I would like to point out that politeness on the part of Germans is much more noticeable in the smaller towns around Cologne than in Cologne itself.

In one township not a hundred miles from Cologne I notice that local residents invariably doffed their hats to one another, while British officers and men were shown courtesy and respect.

In Cologne these small amenities of life are lost amid the hustle, and if I mistake not, the resident is not so refined, while his treatment of the weaker sex is not considerate. Instance the gathering of four men and three women at the entrance to a certain residence. The door was opened, the men crowded in and the women were left to follow.

B.A.R.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

Sir,—Can any of your readers in Cologne help me in regard to my piteous appeal in to-day's advertisement column?

I much prefer developing and printing my own work, but I cannot possibly find the time to do so. I have tried a number of the German photography shops, with the result of getting, from excellent negatives, very indifferent and careless prints. The negatives, too, are often spoiled.

These shops have such a rush of work that they only turn out approximations and what might have been worth keeping or sending away is worthless for either purpose, a fair result instead of a valuable one being the outcome.

I want to find someone who understands how to get the best effect from each negative and who will do it as carefully and painstakingly as though it were his own. I am quite willing to play a fair price for such work, according to results.

SEEKER.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.

Sir,—"Demobilisable" appears to imagine that the Post Office authorities cease to issue Treasury notes etc. at certain times just as the whim seizes them. This is, of course, entirely wrong. The P. O. is much too busy an institution to carry out whims, they simply act as ordered and cannot be blamed for carrying out orders.

There is, moreover, a good reason for the order, obvious to all who are acquainted with matters in the Occupied Area. With no exchange restrictions there might be some temptation to speculate on the vagaries of the value of the mark and such speculation is undesirable from every point of view, except perhaps that of the lucky and self-seeking speculator.

An invariable rate would relieve the P. O. people of an enormous amount of labour. To be blamed for having the labour increased is distinctly unfair.

SYMPATHISER.

This correspondence is closed.—ED.

THE TOTALISATOR.

Sir,— "Manifest's" reply to my letter simply amounts to the suggestion that the Rhine Army racing public are capable of consistently placing the first three horses, although as I take it he would agree himself, the racing experience of the majority is negligible and their inside knowledge absolutely "nil".

He further apparently considers that where there are only seven runners the above feat is ipso facto, simplicity itself. If this is his experience as the result of thirty-three years racing I wish he had been with me to guide me on the first day at Ascot this year when there were, speaking from memory, only 29 runners in seven races. What a day we should have had! As it was, in company with most people, I found quite a lot of losers.

No. The prices I complain about started as long ago as the early Kalk meetings when in a field of over forty animals, the vast majority of which were not even known by name to even a fraction of the public, the favourite was beaten and the winner returned at the remunerative price of 2—1!

I say again that prices have been returned by the Rhine Army Totalisators that are mathematical impossibilities if only the normal percentage of the stakemoney is deducted. If "Manifest" wants to prove I am wrong, all he has to do is to let the public know just what percentage is being deducted. That is what a good many people as well as myself would like to know and this is the sole object of my letter.

HABITUAL RACEGOER.

THE PRESENT.

You're full Lad, of hope for the future,
You're thinking of days that are past,
But you're missing the wonderful treasure,
Of the days that are now flying fast:

To grieve o'er the past Lad, is folly,
No time can compare with to-day,
If the times that are gone Lad, were jolly,
Make the present as happy and gay:

So seize Lad, your chance in the Present,
Dont mourn o'er the past, but be sure,
That you profit by all bygone errors,
Then the future will smile at your door.

SPORTING PROWESS.

121st Heavy Bty. R.G.A.'s Successful Season In Bonn District.

With the imminent closing of the "C.P.C" Competition, the above battery concludes a successful football and cricket season in Bonn and the surrounding district. By winning the Bonn Football Cup, holding a good place in the Cricket League, and securing premier position in the sports held recently by the 29th Brigade R.G.A., the 121 H.B., R.G.A have been prominent in Rhine Army sport since arriving in Bonn in December of last year.

A DRAWN GAME.

In connection with the 84th Bde. R.G.A. Cricket League, a match was played at Mehlem between the 336 Bty R.G.A. (89) and the 84th Bde R.A.S.C. (89). The Gunners batted first and compiled a very useful score, chiefly through the good batting of Lainchbery (28), Lieut. Williams (19) and Quinnell (12). The R. A. S. C. started badly, losing their first wicket with only one run on the board, but Cooke and Cpl. Wright batted very well for the third wicket, taking the score to 54 before Wright was bowled. With Cpl. Gee in, another good stand was made and the R. A. S. C. looked like winning. Cpl. Gee, however, was bowled and then wickets fell fast. Cooke was run out when he had made 44. Wanting one to win with one wicket to fall, the last man went in and, amid, great excitement, was bowled by the first ball, the game thus ending in a draw.

Sunday, August 24, 1919.

Surface wind Westerly, 5—10 m.p.h. Generally cloudy, but fairer at times. Good visibility. Moderate temperature.

DIPPER'S DAY.

Dipper, of Gloucestershire, accomplished a striking performance in the match against Leicestershire. During the day he took fourteen wickets for 104 runs, an achievement which, on top of his several recent big innings, places him amongst the outstanding players of the year. Strangely enough, Dipper has rarely previously met with success on a sticky wicket. On the same day he played a not-out innings.

AMERICAN AMBITIONS.

It is reported that Mr. Joe Woodman, of Boston, Mass., who first brought Sam Langford to England about a dozen years ago and later Sam and Porky Flynn, proposes paying another visit, bringing with him the pair mentioned and other new blood of which he has a very high opinion. One of them is an 8st 4 lad, named Snyder, with victories to his credit over such boxers as Johnny Rosner, Young Zulu Kid, Pal Moore and Joe Lynch, his ambition being a meeting with Wilde, to whom the men mentioned have also fallen. Socco, a strong lightweight, and Egan, an 11st man, whom Woodman describes as the best middleweight he has ever seen, are also spoken of as being in the party.

BRILLIANT BOWLING.

14 Yorks and Lancs Batting and Bowling Averages.

C.P.C. MATCHES.

Probably the best bowling average for the entire season is that of 2 Lieut. C.H. Fishpool (1/4 Yorks and Lancs) who, as recorded below, has taken 88 wickets for an average of 2.87 runs. Considering most of the matches were played on a prolific scoring ground at Blücher Park, this record is doubly remarkable.

The season's bowling averages for the 1/4 Yorks and Lancs are as follows:—

Name	Runs	Wickets	Aver.
2/Lt. C.H. Fishpool	255	88	2·87
Pte. Senior	115	19	6·00
Capt. Dixon	267	30	8·9
Pte. Bennett	374	41	9·12
Cpl. Fletcher	38	6	6·33

The batting averages for the same club are:—

	No. of inn.	No. of runs	Most in inn.	Times not out	Av.
Capt. Dixon	16	260	59x	3	20·
L/Cpl. Paine	16	289	58	0	18·
Col. Headlam	14	208	53	2	17·
Cpl. Fletcher	12	151	57x	3	16·77
Pte. Herbert	8	92	27	1	13·1
Pte. Senior	8	103	48	0	12·87
2nd Lt. Fishpool	10	125	44	0	12·05
Cpl. Hyde	10	103	24	0	10·03

Appended are short summaries of the latest matches in the Competition:—

MIDLAND D.A.C. (48) v. 16th FIELD AMB. (28) at Nieder Elvenich. The visitors batted first, but on a very fast wicket could not make much headway against the D.A.C. bowlers. Darvel with 4 for 15 and Doenra 6 for 10 dismissed the Ambulance for 28. It was a long time before the D.A.C. could settle down, but thanks to Lieut. Bishop, who compiled a useful 10, the D.A.C. passed their opponents score at the fall of the 8th wicket and made 48 in all.

Other Results.

Deacon hit 5 boundaries for his 20. Bdr. Harlock (6 for 31) was in great form with the ball and only Major Rowntree (26) and Major Kershaw (16) reached double figures for the visitors.

RULES OF RACING.

The revised rules of racing relating to entries of horses on the death of a nominator, will come into force on Sept. 1 next.

The Epsom Derby and Oaks and the Doncaster St. Leger of 1921 will close on the first Tuesday in October.

A DELIGHTFUL DANCE.

Enjoyable Function at A. G. and C. College.

Excellent music, dispensed by the orchestra of the "F" Batty A.A. Section, and a good floor made dancing most enjoyable.

Several of the rooms adjoining the dancing room were tastefully fitted up as supper rooms, wherein the daintiest of suppers appeased the appetites and thirst produced by August dancing. Among those present were Brig. Gen. Fuller; Colonel Gossett; the Commandant of the College; Col. Heath, Major Myles and many of the others, ladies and gentlemen, connected with the college work. Representatives of many spheres of army work were also there and a large number of British officers' wives.

RHINE GOLF FINAL.

Ex-Amateur Champion beaten at Marienburg.

BRILLIANT PLAY.

Golf of the first class was witnessed at Marienburg yesterday, when the finals of the Rhine Army Golf Championship were played. The course itself is bare and uninteresting, the hazards few and not too well sited and the sultry weather had rendered the greens fast and tricky, in spite of the care with which they had been tended. The golf, however, was of a very high standard as numerous 3's and even 2's testified.

The most interesting event was the final of the men's open in which Lieut.-Col. A. G. Barry, D.S.O., M.C., 41st Bn. M.G.C. was challenged by Capt. A. H. Read, O.B.E., of the G.H.Q. staff. Lieut.-Col. Barry, a well-known figure in the golfing world, is best remembered by his sensational victory in the Amateur Open Championship in 1905. His opponent, Capt. Read, had shown consistent form in the eliminating rounds and rose to the height of his power during the final stages of the competition.

Six Holes Halved.

The game opened rather tamely owing to faulty putting, Col. Barry taking the first three holes and then losing the fourth and fifth. Play through the green was excellent on the part of both competitors, but short approaches were not placed dead and the next six holes were halved. Capt. Read then gained the lead by a four at the 12th and a two at the 13th. Col. Barry, however, rose to the occasion and with the aid of a brilliant three at the 16th ended the morning round 1 up.

During the afternoon's play, Capt. Read especially distinguished himself by the accuracy of his run up approaches. At the 3rd, a short hole presenting difficulties owing to an embanked roadway five yards before the green, he twice succeeded in obtaining a two. This, with a two at the 17th gave him a card showing three 2's and eight 3's during the course of the game. Col. Barry had bad luck in finding hazards three times during the last round and in spite of magnificent play through the green, failed to reduce the lead gained by his opponent during the early stages of the afternoon's play.

The End.

The end came with unexpected suddenness at the 33rd hole. Col. Barry had reached the green (360 yards) in two and appeared to have the hole well in hand as his ball lay less than a yard from the pin. He overran his putt, however, and failed to hole the return shot, leaving his opponent to hole from a well-placed third, in four. Capt. Read, whose short play throughout the afternoon had been beyond reproach, thus won by 4 and 3, thereby winning the Championship Cup of the Army of the Rhine.

Further results will be published in our issue of Tuesday.

PRIVATE FLYING.

£450 Single-Seater Biplane On The Market.

The Austin Motor Company, who, during the last four years of the war, built upwards of two thousand service aeroplanes for the Ministry of Munitions, has decided to test the present conditions of and outlook in civil aviation by marketing a single-seater biplane of the "Pup" type, selling at £450, and specially constructed with a view to accommodation in an ordinary garage and use in restricted grounds.

The wing span is given as 21ft. 6in. and the wings fold up. Its fuselage length is only 16ft, and the machine with wings folded can be accommodated in a garage 18ft. long by 9ft. wide by 8ft. high, so that storage should present little difficulty. It is equipped with a six-cylinder Anzani static radial engine warranted to drive the machine at a maximum of 85 miles per hour in still air, and as the range of controllable speed runs down to 30 miles per hour, the little biplane is quite a manageable affair. It can climb 5,000ft. in eight minutes and 10,000 in eighteen, which would suggest the latter to be its "ceiling."

For the design, which is not a mere imitation of a military machine, but specially drafted for its set purpose, the following points are claimed: Stability in the air; comfort in flying; simplicity of construction; little adjustment or attention needed on the ground; reliability of the frame, landing gear, &c., are constructed throughout of steel, the use of wood being entirely eliminated; low landing speed and ability to pull up after a very short run; a reliable engine, the Anzani radial engine is giving very good service. It has been put through its paces by a distinguished R.A.F. pilot, who was delighted with its simplicity and airworthiness.

M. J. G. RITCHIE BEATEN.

In the men's singles at the Northern lawn tennis championship meeting at Scarborough, B. Norton (South Africa) beat M. J. G. Ritchie, L. Raymond (South Africa) defeated M. Hicks, Captain O'Hara Wood (Australia) beat Captain Styles (South Africa), and C. Lyles outplayed R. D. Watson, who retired.

LORD GLANELY STILL LEADING.

With Somerset Lassie and Scatwell winning for him last week, Lord Glanely further increased his lead over Lord Derby, whose only success was gained with Glaciale. Alec Taylor, F. Barling, the Hon. G. Lambton, H. Persse, F. Hartigan, and Gilpin all added to their totals in the trainers' list during the week.

Fox, with five winning rides, was the most successful jockey. Donoghue, who only had six mounts, won three races; while Carlaske had a blank week.

FOOTBALL AT HOME.

Strenuous Preparations for the Coming Season.

In the football world at home there is great activity; all the Clubs are holding their practice matches and trials and finding the worth of the players at their disposal in preparation for the opening of the season so close upon us.

Perhaps never before has there been such great uncertainty as to the relative strength of the clubs in the various leagues. After a break of five years, it is only to be expected that numerous changes must be effected. Many brilliant soccer stars made the supreme sacrifice in the great war, while others have retired from the profession. A large number, of course, remain and will turn out for their old clubs, but generally speaking there has been an unprecedented re-shuffle and until the various teams actually meet, no-one can possibly form an accurate estimate of their comparative strengths.

Has the standard of football deteriorated as a result of the break? That, also, remains to be proved, but close followers of the code assert that it has not and declare that we can confidently look forward to expositions of the game equalling anything that was ever seen in pre-war days.

One thing very certain is the eagerness of the public for the opening of the season; everything indicates an increased popularity and an even greater following of the world's greatest tournament. Consequently the English clubs have justification for anticipating a year of unparalleled prosperity.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

Leave Club Programme.

From 5 to 6 this afternoon the Rev. C. E. Wheeler will converse in the writing room at the British Empire Leave Club, and 6.30 p.m. the Belgian Band, 1st Grenadiers, will pay a special visit, when songs will be sung by Miss Ada Moore, Major Greenless, Lieut. Ramsay, and Lieut. Mearns, Cpl. Rossi playing the violin. To-morrow from 5 to 6 there will be an impromptu concert by Miss Ada Moore, a practice dance following in the theatre half an hour later. On Tuesday the fixtures are:—Dancing class in theatre (5-6); impromptu concert (5-6); and "Prongs" concert party (7p.m.).

Further Arrangements.

Permission has been given by the Commander-in-Chief for a Fancy Dress Dance, which will be held at the Leave Club from 5p.m. to 10p.m. on Wednesday. A masked jazz band will be in attendance. For the remainder of the week the arrangements are as follows:—Thursday—Drum and Fife Band of the 23rd Middlesex Regt. (by kind permission of the C.O.) from 5 to 6; whist drive 6.30 p.m.; Friday—Dancing class in music room (5,6); dance in theatre (6.30). From to-day all entertainments at the Club are starting half an hour earlier.

The "Prongs" at Opladen.

The "Prongs," 92nd Bde. R.G.A., Concert Party, gave a concert at 223 Siege Bty billet, Opladen, on Wednesday evening, before a packed audience. By special request they gave that ever amusing show "The Yorkshire lad in London," in which Pte T. Robinson, Sig. Edwin J. Batey, and Pte Leslie Clarke displayed excellent talent. L/Cpl Castle presented a screaming burlesque, "The Toreador." Gnr. J. Wade (Piccadilly Johnny) gave an amusing song in which he explained the unpleasantness of demobilization. "Jimmy" and "Liza" (Gnr. F. O'Beyman and Bdr. J. Norton) also gave of their best. "The Prongs" are showing at the Leave Club, Cologne, next week. Since playing at the Apollo Theatre this party has given forty-two shows at different towns and villages in Germany.

JACQUES.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB "AT HOME."

Brilliant Function.

On Friday evening Miss Decima Moore, C.B.E. and the officers and staff of the British Empire Leave Club were at home to invited officers of the Rhine Army and the "Palace of Delight," looking if possible more delightful than ever, was the venue of a brilliant scene.

The G.H.Q. Jazz Band gave a most excellent programme and the dancing was greatly enjoyed until the early morning.

Among those present were Lieut.-General and Lady Jacob, Major General Sir R. Hutchinson, Major-General and Lady Lawford, Major-General Chichester, Major-General Boyd, Lieut.-General Sir I. A. Haldane, Major-General and Mrs. Clive, Comte de la Massignac, Brigadier-General Fuller, Brig.-General Tandy, Col. and Mrs. Melville, Col. and Mrs. Fane and many of the General Staff.

The decorations of the fine dancing hall looked magnificent and the whole scene while dances were proceeding was a blaze of colour. The gardens were illuminated and the open air was greatly enjoyed as a relief from dancing in August.

Good music, splendid dancing hall, dainty supper, and the presence of British ladies made the evening one to be remembered in the annals of the Rhine Army.

CHARLIE STONE WINS.

Conn Loses Decision on Points at Liverpool.

At the Liverpool Stadium Charlie Stone, of Taffs Well, scored a surprising victory over Joe Conn, of Bow, receiving the verdict on points.

Conn was mainly on the defensive in the first round, but adroit slipping and short left-hand jabs beat Stone's swings, though the Welsh boy landed a hard right to the stomach. Stone replied to a left hook with a similar punch which made the Londoner step away, and then Conn was rushed to the ropes. He tried a right cross which Stone cleverly avoided, and Conn nearly went through the ropes.

Stone boxed capitally during the fifth and sixth couple of rounds, quite holding his own, but he was warned for hitting low in the eighth, though Conn had chopped the blow down. The Londoner ended the round with a lovely right to the chin, and he made use of this blow several times in the ninth round. By now it was too much a one-man show to be interesting, and, excitement having completely gone, the spectators laughed at the cool way in which the Londoner picked his punches or strolled away when assured that Stone was completely covered behind crossed gloves.

SECOND SPORTSMEN'S BATT.

The reunion of the 2nd Sportsmen's Battalion, 24th Royal Fusiliers (City of London) will take place on Monday, Sept. 22. A service in memory of the officers and men who have fallen will be held at noon at the Church of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Trafalgar-square. In the afternoon there will be a trip up the river, starting from Westminster, ladies being invited to join. The reunion dinner will be held in the evening at the Cannon Street Hotel, under the presidency of Major-General Sir Geoffrey Barton, K.C.V.O., Colonel, Royal Fusilier Regt.

CARDIFF RUGGER CLUB.

Members of the Cardiff Club have commenced serious training in preparation for the start of the season in a fortnight's time, and a trial will take place at the Cardiff Arms Park, in which several new players are expected to participate. Cardiff have been fortunate enough to secure several promising men, among them being Ivor Williams (Pontypridd), a centre three-quarter, Idris Richards (Pontypridd), a forward, Jack Hennessy (Rhymney), a forward, and Wooldridge, a centre three-quarter, who captained one of the Royal Air Force XV.'s.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

£1,400 Offer Declined.
It is stated that an offer of £1,400 for Gift of the Gab has been declined.

His Lonely Furrow.
While Mccoorty, Beckett, and Townley are able to find plenty of sparring partners, Fred Fulton, who will box Townley at Olympia on September 2, is ploughing a lonely furrow at Maidenhead.

Princess Margaret and Bideford.
Lord Derby's two-year-old filly by Harry of Hereford out of Spean Bridge has received the name of Princess Margaret, and his two-year-old filly by Swynford out of Anchora is to be known as Bideford.

Guides Race.
The feature of the Grasmere sports programme was the guides' race 1,600 feet up the hillside. A famous winner, Dalziel, of Keswick, was killed in the war, but one of his brothers was competing. The race was won by J. Pooley, of Hawkshead.

Cycling Trophy.
C. B. Kingsbury, the famous All England champion cyclist, had the misfortune to puncture a tyre in the final for "The Daily Telegraph" cup. Kingsbury was the holder after the last race in 1914, and he won his heat comfortably. The trophy was won by A. H. Earwaker, of Portsmouth North-end Cycling Club.

Rugger in S. Africa.
The New Zealand Service Rugby team on Wednesday defeated Pretoria by 5 points to 4.

Double Event.
At the Royal Navy and Marine Athletic Championships, at Portsmouth, Corporal McQuale won the 100 yards and the 440 yards races.

30 Signed On.
When Tottenham Hotspur go to Coventry to open the League season, it is hoped to put in the field a team out of the 30 signed-on players that will uphold the new position.

Sea Angling Festival.
The Southend Amateur Angling Society is already busy making arrangements for the town sea angling festival in October. There will be many prizes. The two Hon Secs., are Messrs. O. M. Howard and A. H. Hawkes.

Swindon's "Profs."
The roll of Swindon's professionals contains sixteen names—nine of them belonging to men who were wearing the Swindon colours when League football was closed down in 1915. For instance: L. Skiller (goal); A. Weston (back); W. Tout, W. Silto, and M. Lockhead (half-backs); R. W. Jefferson, H. J. Fleming, W. Batty, and T. Bolland (forwards).

Scratched.
Air Raid was struck out of the Cesarewitch at 9 a.m. on Thursday.

Wu and Wei.
S. C. Wu and L. Wei, the Chinese pair, beat W. Radcliffe and J. R. Brinkley at the Folkestone Tennis Tournament.

Sgt. Jim Harris.
Sergeant Jim Harris finds he can do the middle-weight limit. Before the war he won boxing distinctions as Private Harris, and in the war gained a D.C.M.

Feat at Lord's.
Few cricketers have in their first season scored a century at Lord's on a sticky wicket. This feat crowned the many fine innings Yorkshire's discovery, Sutcliffe, has played during recent weeks.

N.C.U. Championships.
Great interest is being taken in the "Victory" Meeting of Champions to be held at Herne Hill on Saturday, Sept. 6. The entries for the mile N.C.U. Championship include all the well-known riders of the day.

Prospects for the "First."
Partridge prospects for the "First" are fair. Snowstorms during the late spring destroyed many nests, but fortunately the thunderstorms which so often work havoc with young partridges in July have been absent.

All to Favourities.
There were 20 races at Stockton, 16 going to the first favourties and the remaining four to second favourities.

Interesting Exchanges.
While Tothill's victory in his billiards match with Brady, at Thurston's Hall, was practically assured when play was resumed on Thursday afternoon, the exchanges were decidedly interesting.

Angling Revival.
Nowhere is the great revival of angling more apparent than on the trout streams of England, and it is certain that there have never been more rods at work than this season.

Splendid Sport.
The Dumfriesshire Otter Hounds continue to show splendid sport, and from their fixture at Irongrey they registered their twentieth kill of the season—a fighting dog otter weighing 23lb—after a run lasting three hours and a half.

Grouse Bags.
Some of the biggest bags for grouse yet recorded are those reported from Lord Hothfield's Appebly Castle estate, Westmoreland. Shooting did not open until Monday last, and on the first two days the nine guns out obtained 235 brace of birds on the first and 315 brace on the second day.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

What did She Mean?

The other afternoon, a party of young guards were walking along the road leading to the Kaiser William Bridge. Passing a bench on which a rather haughty fraulein was sitting, one of the lads in his best German said to her "Promenade mit me, Fraulein?" Fixing the speaker with a stony stare, the fraulein in very good English freezingly replied:—"No, tharks, I am aiting for a soldier." The emphasis on the last word was marked, and greatly discomfited the the young guard whose embarassement was heightened oy the laughter and friendly sarcasm of his chums.

Cologne School Primer.

With somewhat mixed but unforgettable recollections of one's first book at school — "the penny book," as it was known to the present writer and his youthful confreres — the scholastic primer used by the children in Cologne strikes one as being a veritable tome, a depository of comparatively abstruse knowledge conveyed in anything but monosyllables. While we were wont to struggle with the immortal "cat on the mat" and "Sam at the well," little Struwelpeter learns what the cavalryman wears, the virtues of patience, and varieties of speech in the animal world. In the 1919 edition of the "Kölner Handfibel" (erste Abteilung) we read:—"Der Kaiser ist ein lieber Mann, er wohnet in Berlin." One seems to have heard a rumour somewhere at some time or other that his residence was a little farther west.

Mutual Congratulations.

We are indebted to the Acting Editor of the Magazine of the 3rd Battalion Machine Gun Corps for the appended appreciation:—

"On the 26th July, the daily newspaper of the Rhine Army published its hundredth number. We feel sure they will not consider it presumption on our part to offer our heartiest congratulations. How many difficulties have been overcome, how many setbacks have been wrestled with, in producing such a periodical, only its original staff know, but they were many. It has been a gigantic proposition, a gigantic success. The 20th. November should see their second century. 'Here's to it'." May we reciprocate the good wishes therein expressed and offer ours for the continued success of the Magazine so admirably produced by Lt.-Colonel W. J. Cranston, D.S.O., the honorary editor.

Corporals' Picnic.

The Corporals of the 1/6th West Yorks are nothing if not original. They have recently had a most enjoyable excursion to the frontier beyond Wermelskirchen, five lorries being placed at the disposal of a party of 120. Leaving Cologne early, the trip took them through some of the most charming scenery in Rhineland. They had a splendid lunch of sandwiches, buns and fruit in a meadow by the roadside, a fire being lighted gipsy fashion for the making of the "Char." It reminded one of the school-excursions in the old days. Afterwards, they danced on the green to the accompaniment of a melodion and two mouth-organs. Cologne was reached at 8 p.m. on the return journey. Corporal Fowler was in charge of the catering and gave every satisfaction in the way he performed his task. This kind of excursion might well be copied by other units in the Rhine Army.

Boycotting a Language.

After the outbreak of the war some indignant people considered it a form of patriotism to boycott the German language, at the same time thinking to do Germany injury commercially. Were they not letting their idea of patriotism run away with their common sense? In nearly every district it was suggested that its teaching should cease. If England did this, it was unlikely that other countries would follow suit. Long before the end of the war, people foresaw that with the coming of peace, Germany would make strenuous efforts to recapture her lost trade and this has proved to be so. As we found out the German method of conducting warfare, so we must find out her methods of conducting warfare on the markets. But how is this to be done if linguists cut the German language and schools refuse to teach it? The only way to get to know a country is to speak its language. Great strides are being made towards establishing Esperanto as a Universal language. When this language is being used throughout the whole word, what is to prevent Germany from using it? In fact up to the commencement of hostilities Germany used it more than any other country. So what harm can we do Germany by refusing to speak German? It will not put her out from the business world not will it do so in the future when the world's commerce will be probably carried on in an international language.

Coal Economy.

A familiar sight in German streets is a heap of black oblong blocks, being shovelled into the cellars of the houses. They are briquettes, a substitute for coal which has come widely into vogue as a result of the war. Most consumers of coal have found the briquette an economy; but the ordinary form is wasteful. The block having been put into the fire, gases force their way out from the centre, and burn with a white flame in which unconsumed carbon escapes. As the flame cools it turns into a dense black smoke containing much heat, which flows up the chimney. Whilst in France we were accustomed to egg-shaped briquettes. These give at least half as much efficiency again as the oblong briquette. They are made in the form of eggs with a passage through the long axis. Under the influence of the heat on the outer surfaces, gases distil as in the oblong blocks, but they flow through the passage in the briquette and, mining with the draught air, are fired as they emerge from the channel. The mixture of air and gas burns with a blue, very hot flame, consuming the free carbon. This is the great advantage possessed over the oblong briquette. But the egg-shaped ones cannot be turned out as rapidly as the solid ones, and are more easily broken. But these disadvantages do not seem beyond the wit of man to remedy, and as a wide use of these egg-briquettes would give the same heating as five per cent. more coal, there are possibilities in this substitute which the householder, wearied with the constant rise in prices, would be disposed to encourage.

German Indoor Games.

Apparently, like ourselves, the German likes to while away the hours indoors, or in a café, with cards or billiards. The favourite game of cards is an intricate form of whist and at this the German loses or wins large sums, Ranging from ten to fifty pfgs. an hour, amid much excited argument and protest. As regards billiards, played on a table without pockets, here he would appear to shine, bringing off with elaborate unconcern impossible cannons and working up breaks of 150 to 200 without any effort. Strangely enough, in German indoor games one seldom sees chess to the fore. This is essentially a German game, but perhaps it has fallen into disuse, and even where the writer has had opportunity of witnessing German chess tournaments the play has been of the most inferior and beyond description.

Milk O!

Anyone who chooses to wait can any evening see a crowd of civilians gathered at the end of Cölnstrasse, each armed with some receptacle, generally a jug but often small buckets. The queue is formed quite early on and is there sometimes for hours. To the Britisher it is reminiscent of soup kitchens, but actually the people wait for the Stadt milk cart, which generally comes between eight and nine o'clock, and the wild dash that ensues when it does arrive plainly shows the shortage of this commodity.

Lesser Echoes.

Units leaving the Army of the Rhine will see that books issued from the Army Central Library are returned to the Depot, Breite Strasse, Cologne, before their departure.

Apropos the discussion as to railway devices a waggish correspondent enquires: I wonder if any of your readers have noticed the three speed gear boxes fitted to some of the Rhine steamers? They are situated on the bridge, just in front of the funnel usually, and give three motions — port, starboard, and straight ahead.

* * *

Sunday last marked Mid-Harvest. The whole country-side is one mass of brown corn, some not yet cut, but most of it standing in the shocks ready for the waggon and team. Although the weather earlier on was not good these hot days of August have done the standing corn much good and have made a better crop than was expected.

* * *

"Londoners may stare at each other, but go to New York for the real, Simon Pure, unadulterated artist," says a correspondent. He could not have seen the German in Cologne who having noticed a small party of Indian soldiers, stopped, placed his left hand on his hip and stared.

* * *

No civilians other than wives and relatives of British Officers, and ladies employed with the Rhine Army, whose position entitles them to officers' travelling accommodation, are allowed to travel in railway carriages reserved for British Officers. When wives or relatives travel in these carriages they will wear the brassard issued to them from the Permit Office.

Prizes for Echoes.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's prizes have been awarded to: Rifleman Adcock, c/o The Military Governor, Monopol Hotel; Sergt. E. Dinkel R. E. Interallied Rlwy Sub-Commission, Eisenbahn-Direktion; and Bomb. Holmes, R.F.A. 257 Area Employment Co. Army of the Rhine.

CAN YOU WRITE?

Contributions for this page may be on any topic likely to interest the Rhine Army; humorous or serious, informative or descriptive, but none should exceed 500 words. Payment will be made for all that appear.

LIEUT. W. ROBERT PATTERSON F.R.G.S.

I wonder if some of us have seriously studied the question of taking prints. Some that I have viewed were decidedly "burnt," that is to say, they had been exposed to a far too brilliant light.

It is a mistake to hurry; it is inadvisable if you desire a good print, to expose your printing-frame to direct sunlight, unless the negative be exceptionally dense.

With a good negative, take care always to print in the shade on a sunny day. Should your negative be weak—i.e. thin, print slowly.

It is well, too, to learn to judge the effect produced by various printing-papers, whether they be 'matt' or 'shiny.'

The former gives more softness in detail. Bromide papers give also soft effects but they require a very short exposure and are developed and fixed in the same manner as plates and films. It is worth while to do one's best in completing pictures since these can be arranged in a series of small albums. A few days ago I was shown a few such records of photographic work, most charmingly arranged by a British officer here. In the space round each "snap" is a short account of its history, all of which gives it value in some other respect, very neatly written in white ink. One can imagine the interest such albums will create in the minds of both the possessor and his friends, old and young, in years to come, but for the purpose of record I prefer the stereo-camera, which is really a double apparatus, fitted with two lenses, both connected with a single shutter. I view my pictures, therefore, in the "solid", by means of a stereoscope. The latter may be had at all prices from about twenty-five marks to two hundred and fifty.

It is advisable to take your positives on plates since they give far better detail than most papers. Another advantage is that such an instrument may be used as two ordinary cameras, merely by obscuring one lens, in which case, only half the plate will be exposed; then by covering the second lens, one may expose the second half of the plate or film as the case may be.

In my own „stereo" I have an additional advantage in that, by shifting the whole front of the camera, I am able to bring one lens only into the centre, thus focussing over the entire plate, giving myself a picture double the dimension of the "stereo" plate. I find that those friends of mine, who have no special interest in single-exposure photography, become quite enthusiastic in "stereo" work.

There is a certain fascination in seeing things stand out badly, trees with their branches spreading towards one and on either side, people with their legs poised in the act of taking a step, buildings giving what I call a "solid" effect to the scene, and so on. For those who can afford it, I strongly recommend a "stereo."

An Omen.—The fact that Captain Guest is with Mr. Lloyd George suggests that Ministerial reconstruction may be in the Brittany agenda.

Club Life.—Business women who used to maintain a modest, independent home of their own are making changes in their mode of living. The communal idea is the most popular.

The Prince's Kiss.—As the Prince of Wales was laying the corner stone of the Navy League building at Halifax a little girl presented him with a rose. He kissed the flower, greatly pleasing the child.

THE LION LEADS in CURING

During the strenuous times of the past few years

has more than maintained its reputation. it has gained increased commendation for its marvellous efficacy in removing pieces of shrapnel, splinters of bone, etc., from old wounds, healing them permanently from underneath.

Nature will always assert itself

is that it will not heal till it has thoroughly cleared away all morbid matter. There is no danger to life in curing a bad leg by this remedy, as it does not throw back humour into the system. It cures without lancing or cutting, bringing all disease to the surface and healing from underneath in all cases of Ulcers, Abscesses, Whitlows, Boils, Carbuncles, Fatty or Cystic Tumours, Piles, Fistula, Polypus, Poisoned Wounds, and all forms of Skin Disease, Eczema, Ringworm, etc.

Unequalled as a General Household Remedy for Cuts, Burns, Stings, &c.

Proof. At 59, Gray's Inn Road, E. BURGESS has a Museum of Extractions, consisting of Tumours, Polypi, and diseased Bone; also numerous Photographs of most serious cases, which have all been cured by the Lion Ointment. E. FOR OFFICERS AND WIVES.

INGENIOUS TITLE FOR NEW HOTEL TO BE OPENED IN COLOGNE.

MARRIED OFFICERS.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES HOTEL FOR COLOGNE.

With post-war needs arise post-war provisions. The latest enterprise for the benefit of, at any rate, a section of our Army is the establishment of a hotel for married officers. The Kaiser Fredericks Hof in the Salier Ring has been taken over by the Authorities and converted into a fully equipped modern hotel to be conducted by the Navy and Army Canteen Board for the benefit of officers of this Army and their wives. It is known as the Marricer Hotel. Why Marricer, you ask? A tabloid of Married and Officer, which faute de mieux seems a suitable indication of the purpose for which the hotel is conducted.

The Marricer Hotel will accommodate 35 couples, and there are a few single rooms which it is intended to use for relatives of the officers of the Army of Occupation.

Extensive alterations have been necessary, which include the provision of bath accommodation.

The hotel will now be found to include as public rooms in addition to dining room, a drawing room lounge, a smoking room, and a card room. The dining room will be open to all officers and British and Allied ladies, and the kitchen is in charge of a chef of established reputation.

Feeding Arrangements.

The tariff has been fixed at the lowest possible price commensurate with the standard of comfort it is intended to maintain. For fifty marks a day an officer will be entitled to a double room with full board, including early tea, breakfast, lunch, afternoon tea and dinner for himself and his wife, and there are no extras of any sort except wine.

Rations will be drawn by the N.A.C.B. for each officer residing at the Hotel, but, of course, not for the wives. The Board intends to provide for roughly 12/6 per day in addition to the equivalent of 2/4 the value of the ration, say 15/- in all, as nearly as circumstances will admit the same amenities as can be enjoyed in the comfortable quiet family hotels in the West End of London.

The Marricer Hotel opens to-morrow and communications with regard to it should be addressed to the Officer in Charge, Marricer Hotel, N.A.C.B. Cologne.

TAXI FARES IN COLOGNE.

The following notice has been issued from the Office of the British Commandant, Cologne:

"TARIFF.

In accordance with the Police Order of June 1st, 1918, passengers have to pay an increased fare.

In future passengers will have to pay four times the amount actually registered on the meter.

Extras, such as for carrying three or more persons at night, for luggage, or dogs, or drives to the suburbs, are excluded from this increase.

By Order,
MANSEL SHEWEN, Brigadier-General.
British Commandant, Cologne.

July 12th, 1919."

Taxi drivers have been ordered to display a copy of this Notice in English and German in a prominent position in their taxis.

No driver is allowed to accept a fare for a destination in Cologne without lowering his flag, and he is only entitled to a fare in accordance with the above regulations.

In the event of a breach of these orders, the driver's name and number of his cab, should be taken, and the matter reported to the A.P.M.

RHINELAND HIGH COMMISSION.

Sir Harold Arthur Stuart has been appointed H gh Commissioner of the Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission.

ANOTHER BANK IN COLOGNE.

Lloyds Bank (France) and National Provincial Bank (France) Ltd. announce that a Branch of the Bank will be opened on 1st September next at 65/67 Heumarkt, Cologne.

ARCHDUKE JOSEPH RETIRES.

Owing to the refusal of the Entente to recognise the Archduke Joseph's régime at Budapest, the Archduke and the Friedrich Government hove retired, and a Coalition Ministry is to be formed.

In a Note explaining their attitude the Supreme Council points out that a Hapsburg cannot be entrusted with the direction of the General Election essential for Hungary, nor can it complete Peace terms with a Government headed by a Hapsburg.

ALLIES AND AUSTRIA.

It is hoped that it will be possible for the draft of the Allies' reply to the Austrian counter-proposals to be laid before the Supreme Council to-day.

It is understood that many of the Austrian counter-proposals to the original Treaty have found acceptance, and that the Treaty in its final form will show considerable modifications.

NURSE CAVELL.

TRIAL OF THE FRENCH TRAITOR, GUYIEN.

A Paris telegram states that the trial is about to commence of Georges Gaston Guyien, the French traitor who denounced Nurse Cavell. The trial will last severa days. There will be sixty witnesses, including many associated with Miss Cavell

Guyien gathered information regarding an organisation for aiding the escape of allied soldiers to Holland. He made the acquaintance of Miss Cavell, who gave him money to escape, but to her great surprise he returned to Brussels, saying he was on a mission for the French military attaché at Hague.

He then revealed the whole of the organisation to the Germans.

"REDS" LOSING.

"PETROGRAD WILL FALL BEFORE OCTOBER."

A Lettish Press Agency states that a whole regiment of Red troops has gone over to the Esthonians, in the Podsevy neighbourhood and that the Bolshevists' leader, who was formerly commander-in-chief of the Red Army in Livonia, surrendered to the Lettish Government and were sent to Riga.

General Balakovitch has expressed the opinion that Petrograd will fall before October. When sufficient war material is forthcoming from the Entente, it is anticipated that half the Reds will seize the opportunity to go over to the other side.

ODESSA OCCUPIED.

From Ukrainian sources comes news that Odessa has been occupied by the Ukrainian troops after heavy fighting, and that the Bolshevist Army on the right bank of the Dnieper is fleeing panic-stricken before General Petlura.

The Polish General Staff announces that the Bolshevists have suffered a crushing defeat by the Poles.

A Stockholm telegram reports M. Gusaff, a member of the Russian Supreme Committee of Defence, as speaking with extreme pessimism of the prospects of Bolshevism. He fears that the constant arrival of new enemies will eventually cause exhaustion, and strongly urges the negotiation of an agreement with the "Entente Imperialists."

"RED" ATROCITIES.

A message from Helsingfors states that a new official account is published dealing with the Bolshevist atrocities in South Russia. Following an order by Trotsky a number of priests were murdered and mutilated, and churches were profaned. The population firmly believes that Trotsky is the Antichrist mentioned in Revelations and are beseeching God's help.

ROUMANIA AND HUNGARY.

M. BRATIANO'S SURPRISE AT MISUNDERSTANDING.

The Bucharest correspondent of "Le Temps" states that in an interview he had with Monsieur Bratiano, with regard to the relationships between Roumania and Hungary, the statesman expressed surprise that the action of his government had involved any misunderstanding, seeing its views conformed with those of the Peace Conference.

When attacked by Bela Kun, Roumania was unable to maintain the position she had won by her victory, owing to the uncertainty of the past year in consequence of the armistice terms imposed upon Hungary being badly conceived and applied.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND MEXICO.

A Washington message states that Mr. Lansing conferred with President Wilson for more than an hour on Friday and it is believed Mexico was discussed. The situation is reported as being strained to breaking point. It is predicted that Mr. Lansing's next reply to the Mexican note will be a refusal to withdraw troops until bandits have been punished.

SIR W.M. ROBERTSON.

SUGGESTED NEW APPOINTMENT.

It is stated that the Government is considering the appointment of Sir William Robertson as commander in chief in Ireland, with the task of discovering how far the military forces there can be reduced.

Damages caused to France by the war amount to 74,429,000 francs personal damage, 126 Million francs damage to property and 113 milliard francs war expenses.

"GOLIATH" FOUND.

DISCOVERED AFTER FORCED LANDING.

Much anxiety will be relieved by the news that the "Goliath" aerobus has been found and that the crew is safe.

The airship had been missing since 16th inst. Vigilant enquiries failed to produce the slightest clue as to its whereabouts.

A telegram just received states that the "Goliath" was forced to land to the north of Dakar on account of the screw having broken.

A second telegram announces that the place of landing was between Saint Louis and Dakar, near a village called Kayor.

The enterprise may be said to have succeeded. The "Goliath" left Versailles on the 11th of the month at midnight, arriving at Casablanca the same day at 6.30. Leaving Casablanca on the 14th, the airship reached Mogador at 3 o'clock. Another start was made on the morning of the 16th when the airship disappeared. 4000 Kilometres was travelled in three days.

WIDNES ELECTION.

MR. HENDERSON CRITICISES HIS CRITICS.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, Labour Candidate for Widnes in an election speech, dealt with the misrepresentations of his war activities which he called "damned lies."

He went to Russia with power to send the ambassador home and to take on the job himself at eight thousand a year. He found that the decision taken in London was on the wrong grounds and he wired back that he would return and the ambassador would remain.

Had he been the mean despicable fellow his opponents said he was he would have remained in Russia and pocketed eight thousand pounds, or, coming home, have said nothing and remained in the Cabinet and covered his scrupies with a napkin.

Voluntary Resignation.

He denied that his resignation was asked for, and said he could not remain secretary and be in the Cabinet.

In a speech after which he was adopted candidate, Mr. Henderson said it would not be his fault if there were not 160 Labour candidates at the next general election.

NEW NAVAL V.C.

HONOURS FOR BALTIC MOTOR-SCOOTER CREW.

Three of the names of "the Youngsters" Crew of four of the motor-scooter which sank the Bolshevik cruiser Oleg near Cronstadt on June 17 are now known. Lieut. Augustine Willington Shelton Agar, R.N., has been awarded the V.C.

The other two, Acting Sub-Lieut. John White Hampsheir, R.N.R., and Chief Motor Mechanic Hugh Beeley, R.N.V.R., are also rewarded, Lieut. Hampsheir receiving the Distinguished Service Cross and Mech. Beeley the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal.

To achieve the object of the attack it was necessary to penetrate a screen of destroyers, and owing to a breakdown Lieutenant Agar was compelled to remain in close proximity to the enemy for 20 minutes while repairs were made. This was an extremely difficult operation owing to the heavy seas.

After the attack Lieutenant Agar succeeded in escaping under heavy fire from the land forts and destroyers.

AIR PASSENGER SERVICE.

LONDON TO PARIS ROUTE COMMENCED.

"The Daily Telegraph" states that the first aeroplane of regular international passengers and goods service between London and Paris started yesterday. All the passengers for the first week were booked in advance. The aircraft Travel and Transport Coy. had to make preparations for more traffic than anticipated. The second company, with Handley Page machines, will operate over the same route and will run a service to Brussels.

The capabilities of the two classes of goods and passengers may be tested and freight may become possible.

IMPUDENT BURGLARS.

HURRIED DRAINPIPE EXIT FROM WEST END HOUSE.

Locking the dressing-room and bedroom doors, in Sir Frederic Painter's house at 8, The Boltons, South Kensington, burglars rifled jewel cases, forced drawers and unlocked cupboards at their leisure. The servants just after ten o'clock heard someone moving about in the dressing-room, but assumed it to be Lady Painter, and it was only when a few minutes later Lady Painter went upstairs and found the doors of her rooms locked that anything wrong was discovered.

It is thought that the thieves were then in the room, for a noise as of a hurried exit through the window was heard, and it was later found that the men in making their escape had torn the drain-pipe from its fastenings.

Diamond pendants, brooches, rings and watches, and other articles, to the value of about £1,000, were stolen.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

SINN FEIN EXECUTIVE TO FLOAT A LOAN.

An official report of a private meeting of the Sinn Fein Executive states that a loan is to be floated by the Sinn Fein Parliament to be allocated to develop industries, pay consuls, and establish a bank to purchase untenanted lands.

A resolution was passed asking the public authorities to state their coal requirements so that coal could be ordered from America.

De Valera's mission is described as having been an enormous success and he has authorised an increase in the amount of the American loan to 25,000,000 dollars. One delegate complained when he only collected £400.

MURDERED BOY SCOUT.

VERDICT: WILFUL MURDER AGAINST UNKNOWN SOLDIERS.

A verdict of Wilful Murder against unknown soldiers was returned yesterday at the inquest on Francis Murphy, 15, the Boy Scout who was shot while reading by the fireside at his father's farmhouse at Ennistymon, Co. Clare.

The murdered boy's sister said she heard several shots and found her brother dead. His hand was to his face, and she took his hand away to see which brother it was. "I knelt down and said a prayer. Shortly afterwards, sitting on my bed, I looked out of the window and saw three fellows moving toward Ennis in single file. They were bareheaded, wearing what looked in the moonlight, like whitish-grey coats. They seemed to have straps on their backs and were young-looking men. To the best of my belief they were military."

Patrick Conole, night watchman on the West Clare Railway, said he saw three soldiers about after the shots.

Military Reply.

The reply of the military to the verdict is a direct denial that the crime was committed by soldiers. It is stated that no troops were near the place on the night of the murder. An officer was with all troops on patrol. Every soldier in the district was accounted for. The military bullets, found in the cottage meant nothing, as many bullets fired at the police huts were of military pattern. British rifles are well known to have been stolen.

TERRIFIED CHILDREN.

LOCKED IN ROOM WITH MURDERED BROTHER.

On a charge of murdering his stepson, aged 7, John George Turnbull, shipyard worker. Sunderland, was yesterday remanded for a week.

The tragedy occurred yesterday morning, when, it is alleged. Turnbull cut the boy's head completely off with a razor in the presence of three other stepchildren, a girl of 13 and two younger boys who were in bed in the same room.

Turnbull went to the police station and told what he had done. He handed the key of the house to the sergeant. When the latter was unlocking the door the three children cried out. "Is that you, mother?" They were in a state of terror and said:

Don't leave us; take us with you. Our daddy has cut little Tommy's head right off. The dead boy's body lay on a mat clad in a nightshirt.

Turnbull some years ago was in an asylum, and once, it is said, attempted suicide. His wife had left the house the evening before the murder, taking refuge with a neighbour owing, she states, to her husband's threats.

'BUS OVERTURNS.

EIGHTEEN INJURED IN A LONDON ACCIDENT.

A motor bus overturned at Willesden last evening. While trying to avoid a motor car, it ran on to the foot path and fell on its side. The passengers on the top were pitched off and those inside cut and bruised.

A police ambulance arrived and eighteen injured were taken to St. Mary's Hospital where three were detained.

MR. ASQUITH AGAIN.

WILL HE SEEK RE-ELECTION?

It is reported that at the earliest possible moment, Mr. Asquith will seek to re-enter Parliament. It is felt that his presence on the opposition benches will have a great effect in the House and in the country, says the "Edinburgh Evening News."

SENTENCE OF DEATH.

At the sitting of the High Court at Ayr William Scott, an ex-soldier, was charged with the murder of Mrs. Corbett, a soldier's wife. The evidence showed that the accused cut the woman's throat with a razor while the parties were seated at the tea table. The woman died almost immediately. A special plea of insanity at the time of the deed was put forward for the defence. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy. Lord Ormidale, the presiding judge, passed sentence of death.

BOGUS MAJOR.

IMPRISONMENT FOR MUCH DECORATED IMPOSTOR.

Ina Irvine Barclay, whose arrest was reported a few days ago, was awarded six weeks imprisonment in the second divison at Bow Street. Barclay pretended to be a R.A.F. Major with the V.C., D.S.O., M.C., Mons Star, 5 chevrons and 2 wound stripes.

The accused had said he attended an Investiture at Buckingham Palace and the V.C. was presented to him by the King. Later he stated that he bought the uniform to save being taunted by his friends about not having been in the army.

He had been rejected four times on medical grounds. The police stated that the prisoner was an unemployed electrician. The accused said that he was very sorry and the magistrate told him he ought to be thoroughly ashomed of himself.

SOVEREIGN'S VALUE.

WHAT NEW YORK BANKERS THINK.

The fall in sterling exchange is affecting the Corn and Cotton markets in New York, in spite of the fact that corn was not formerly affected by the foreign situation and that there is little corn available for export. In the Cotton market the demoralised foreign exchange aroused a good deal of comment, as it is likely to have some effect on the export of the commodity.

The break in foreign exchanges is stated in banking circles to imperil the entire export trade of the United States, and it renders daily more urgent the question of a comprehensive plan for the extension of credit to prospective purchasers in Europe.

UNEXPECTED FIND.

LONDON GAMING RAID REVEALS SURPRISE.

A raid on a supposed gaming house in Great Garden-street, E., by Scotland Yard officers a week ago resulted in the seizure of inflammatory literature circulated by the "I.W.W." (Industrial Workers of the World). Members of this organisation have frequently been prosecuted in the United States for sabotage.

The top floor of the house was found to be the headquarters of the "I.W.W." The literature seized included an eight-page pamphlet called "Fifty Points on Industrial Unionism." One of the 50 points was:—

"One great weapon is sabotage, doing anything on the job to lessen the master's profits or impede his business."

ELECTRICITY STRIKE.

Since Thursday night men employed by Epsom electricity undertaking have been on strike over a week's notice given to one man. The engineer is running the engine and his assistant is acting as stoker; both have their meals at the works and sleep there. With the help of other officials the supply of electricity was maintained until about nine o'clock last night. It was then found that someone had disconnected the town's main feeder boxes. Cinema theatres closed, but about 10 p.m. some of the street lamps were lighted again.

EX-SERVICE MEN ENTERTAINED.

Over three thousand ex-service men were entertained at dinner at Kettering yesterday by the Town. Lord Haig sent a telegram conveying his best wishes and the hope that they would never forget their comradeship in the Great War and that the same spirit and good feeling and sense would bring peace happiness and prosperity to all.

23 HOURS CONFERENCE.

NORTHERN CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES STRIKE SETTLED.

The dispute between the Co-operative Societies and their employers was settled on Sunday at Manchester, at a conference between the parties lasting 23 hours.

The exact terms of the settlement were not disclosed, but it is understood that both sides are satisfied that work will be resumed to-day. At all of the three hundred branches concerned in the dispute, hardship had been caused by many employees ceasing work. It is estimated that nearly two million persons were without their usual supplies. The local food authorities permitted private traders to supply rationed food, and ordered the Societies which had closed to transfer stocks. A general stoppage would have been disastrous.

PRINCE AND CANADA.

The Canadian Great War Veteran Association has sent a telegram greeting the Prince of Wales in the name of the quarter of a million returned soldiers who shared with the Prince service in the Expeditionary Forces in France. The telegram expresses the most cordial welcome to the dominion with the earnest wish for a pleasant visit and a safe return to Blighty.

The Duke of Grafton's Northants tenants refuse to tender for their holdings and ask him to disclose his reserve price. He offers instead to put the figures in a sealed envelope and bargain if the tenant offers more.

BURNED TO DEATH.

EX-NAVAL MAN AND WIFE MEET WITH SAD END.

Mrs. Pollard, wife of Ernest Pollard, a fisherman, lit the lamp in the kitchen of their home, and took the children out, leaving the husband—who was invalided out of the navy and has since been stricken with blindness and paralysis—indoors. When she returned the room was in flames.

Her first thought was for her afflicted husband. She rushed upstairs, through the dense smoke and fire, and got him out of bed to the window, but before a ladder could be brought, both were overpowered by the smoke and heat and fell backwards. Firemen and fishermen worked hard to get the fire under. Afterwards, the bodies of husband and wife were recovered, the latter clasping the husband in her arms.

MOTOR CAR CHASE.

CORPORAL'S SMARTNESS LEADS TO RECOVERY.

Seeing a man drive off from Kenley aerodrome with a six-seater Crossley touring car belonging to the Air Force, Corporal Grigsby R.A.F. got into another car to give chase. On the main Brighton road he picked up a policeman, and they then drove off in the direction of Croydon. Here they overtook the Crossley car, and in the narrow High-street the corporal manoeuvred so that the driver of the stolen car was forced to pull up.

Apparently, on the way from Kenley the man had taken into the car two confederates, for three men jumped out as the corporal drew up and ran up Friends-road. Two of the men managed to scramble over a wall and disappear, but the third, alleged to be the thief, was caught after a chase.

The chase and capture of the man resulted in Henry Edward O'Brien, Stamford St., Blackfriars being charged. The bogus number plates were produced. When caught, O'Brien said, I am unlucky; I was only on a joy ride. What do you think I shall get? The accused was remanded.

PAY CLERK'S LAPSE.

TWO MONTHS HARD LABOUR FOR DISHONESTY.

Charged at Greenwich on Saturday with attempting to obtain money by false pretences, Edward Leeson Mill, a clerk at the Army Pay Office, Blackheath, said he did not mean to do a soldier out of his money and would have given it to him back later.

It was stated that prisoner had to make out drafts, and made out one for a Sheffield soldier named Nixon, but put his own address on it, so that the money would be sent to him. He at first made out a draft for eighteen pounds, but he said his conscience smote him as he thought eighteen pounds was too much to deprive a soldier of.

Prisoner was sentenced to two months hard labour.

BATHING FATALITY.

While bathing in the Glaslyn Estuary, near Portmadoc, Carnarvonshire, yesterday afternoon, Miss Sybil Reese, 30, and Miss Margaret Thomas, 18, both of Portmadoc, were drowned.

There were many visitors on the sands only 50 yards away, but no cries for help were heard, and it was not suspected that anything was wrong until the women were missed and their clothes found.

Their bodies had not been recovered late last night.

Donald Paterson Jones, 15, was drowned while bathing at Barry. Evan Griffiths, another youth, dived fully dressed into the water in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue him.

R 34 HONOURS.

The London Gazette states that the King has conferred honours in connection with the voyage of the R. 34 to America as follows:

C.B.E., Military Division, for Major George Herbert Scott.

Air Force Cross for Col. E.M. Maitland, Capt. G.G.H. Cooke, Lieut. Guy Harris and 2nd Lieut. J.D. Shotter.

Air Force Medal for Flight Sergeants W.R. Gent, W.G. Robinson, R.W. Ripley, N.A. Scull, Sgt. Major H.W.R. Mayes and Sgt. H.M. Watson.

ALLIED VICTORY RIBBON NOT TO BE WORN.

Aldershot Command on Saturday ordered that in the absence of authority and the fact that the allied Victory Medal had not yet been issued, the practice of officers and men wearing the ribbon must cease.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

The death under tragic and mysterious circumstances of a passenger from the Isle of Man occurred at Liverpool yesterday. Mr. Harry Wyatt, licensee of the Ring of Bells Hotel, Warrington, was helped from the steamer and immediately collapsed, and on arrival at hospital was found to be dead.

On his body were several wounds and some blood. Whether death was caused by the wounds has to be determined.

GROWTH OF THE CANTEENS.

At a time when so much interest is directed to the proposals for the allocation of Canteen funds by the Army Committee it is not without interest to trace the growth of the Expeditionary Force canteen which incidentally has grown out of recognition and has been of immense service to officers and men.

The organization was formed early in 1915 and though intended originally for supplying the Forces with canteen facilities, its activities were considerably extended from time to time, notably in the conduct of rest houses and clubs, and in the supply of cinema apparatus, sports equipment, &c.

Commenced on the relatively small scale required for the original forces, it eventually grew to the immense proportions necessary in order to cope with the demands of the huge armies in the field.

It is of interest to note that the initial capital required for the work was provided by a grant of £10,000 from the South African Garrison Institutes Fund; subsequently, additional amounts were obtained from the same source to a total of £37,500. Further sums were required and it became necessary for the organization to be run on a profit basis, sufficient not only to provide for the repayment of loans but also to supply the additional capital which it was recognized would be necessary for the increase in the volume of its trade and the general extension of its activities.

This extension has been brought about and allowing for the repayment of loans it is satisfactory to think that a balance remains for distribution for the benefit of those who have helped to build up the canteen system.

With this, General Sir Julian Byng is concerning himself and has emphasized his determination to ensure the minimum cost of administering the money in order to secure full benefit.

He intends to co-operate with all existing organizations and to work through representative committees of the various organizations. The immediate need is to assist in helping the welfare of ex-Service men by the formation of clubs, based upon non-sectarian and non-political lines—an admirable idea in itself. It will be seen that much benefit will accrue.

ARMY EDUCATION.

In launching its really excellent and comprehensive scheme of education, the Army authorities have done something of the highest possible constructive value. By weaving education into the life of the soldier they have paved the way, and are still paving it, to sending back to civil life not only good soldiers, but good citizens.

It may be of general interest to trace the beginnings of the educational lecture movement. And let me here say at once that the idea of providing Tommy with opportunities for thus improving his mind emanated from the Y.M.C.A.

Even as I write I recall, for example, the royal progress during 1916 of Professor Adkins as he passed from place to place lecturing on "The Tangle of the Balkans," throughout the Second Army. The scene at Bailleul will not quickly fade from my memory.

Thus it came about that the Army, recognizing the value and helpfulness of this voluntary effort on the part of the Y.M.C.A., very wisely decided officially to countenance and encourage, the scheme, and grant it every facility. By 1917 it had grown and developed in all directions, not only in France and Flanders, but in Egypt, Salonica, Russia, Italy, Palestine, and Mesopotamia.

In fact, prior to demobilization more than three million soldiers were not only "men under authority," but men under education, men in the prime of life, eager for knowledge. Can the beneficial effects be over estimated?

Speaking at Oxford in January last, Mr. Fisher alluding to the Army Education Scheme described it as "one of the most important safe guards to the country and one of the best investments that the country had ever made."

We can well believe this. When the education scheme was properly launched it was realized (and still is) that education within the army falls into two different, but naturally related fields of importance.

First, its bearing upon the military efficiency and morale of the troops. Secondly, and even of greater importance, its bearing upon the future, that is to say, upon the mental attitude and practical knowledge with which all ranks, when re-absorbed into the life of the nation, are going to face the social conditions and industrial and economic problems of the post-war era. In my own humble judgment, in the building up of the new world, education is destined to be a factor second to none. B. G. BOURCHIER.

NIX FRATERNITY.

In the pre-peace days, 'ere yet I had been allotted a billet in Cologne, I remember the pained feeling with which I greeted a homily on the evils of fraternizing with the enemy.

I was perfectly certain that, so far as I was concerned, such a warning was quite unnecessary, for I had resolved that even if the entire Rhine Army, from the C-in-C downwards, fraternized, married, or loved, I never would. Then I was provided with a billet.

The frau welcomed me with smiles as if it had ever been her hope and prayer that a British soldier would, one day, honour her abode. Herr Landlord brought forth his best cigars from their bomb-proof dug-out; the fraulein courted a mental breakdown by endeavouring to converse with me in my native tongue; I accepted it all as a matter of course, and transferred my attentions to the remaining member of the family.

He had no intention of fraternizing with the cursed Englander, distrust was apparent in his eyes, and I immediately realised that, so far as it lay in my power, he and I must be friends, so I approached and offered to shake hands. My extended hand was ignored and I retired snubbed.

Since that day my billet frau and family have done much to make my stay in Cologne as pleasant as possible; I feel sure that they burn the midnight oil, swotting the English language, but I ignore their well-meant efforts; supper is ready for me every night—I do not eat supper, cigars are offered many times daily I do not smoke cigars; only the one member of the family, whose friendly advances I would appreciate, stands aloof.

When I rise in the morning and pass the door of his room on my way to the street, I can hear his voice raised in angry tones. No knowledge of his language is necessary to tell me that I am the subject of his threats, and as I hurry away I feel glad that a stout door is between us. In the evening when I return, his watchful eyes follow my every movement, such offerings as chocolate and other edibles he accepts with an air which demonstrates clearly that his sentiments are in no way changed, and the hand which I extend in friendship is still ignored.

Verily it is a most undignified position for a member of His Majesty's Forces, yet I feel more than ever that we must be friends, so I continue to make futile friendly advances, although, only a moment before, I have heard his voice raised in bloodthirsty references to myself.

As time passes, however, I become convinced that the most sensible method is to declare open enmity and poison the brute, for it is obviously useless to endeavour to establish friendship with a dog which is apparently first cousin to a wolf and resolutely refuses to recognise the ratification of the Peace Treaty.

THE WELFARE OF THE NEW ARMY.

Much has been written about the future welfare, educationally and socially of of the demobilised soldier. But what about the future welfare of those men who decide to remain in the Army? Are they to be allowed to drift into the same rut they were in pre-war days?

The old type of soldier proved himself a capable and wonderful fighter when tried, still his occupation was considered to be a blind alley employment, and unless the authorities take the matter into consideration, he will drift down that same blind alley. It is understood that the British Army of the future will be the best paid and most efficient Army of the world. Everything that is possible will be done, in respect to his education, to prevent a man from feeling that when he has finished his work in the Army, he will have some commercial or trade knowledge to assist him to find employment, and take his place in the business world.

What arrangements are being made, apart from education, in order to assist a man of the new Army to take his place in the world as a citizen? It is granted that lectures and classes in Civics will to a certain extent assist, yet there is the most important feature missing, that of personal contact, which is a most important factor if he is to take his place in the social side of the world.

If they are left to the influence of the cinema, the excitement of the boxing ring or the football field, as the only means of respite that a soldier has, their position socially in the world will not be improved.

It is the duty then of the Authorities to fully consider the question on their behalf, just as much as it is a duty to consider it on behalf of the workers in other spheres of labour. It is the right use of leisure that counts in the world. Mr. Arnold Bennet is quite right when he says that it dpes not matter whether a man be millionair eor pauper he only gets 24 hours per day to do therein all that he has to do, he can either make use of it or fritter it away, but he cannot make it either more or less. But it does matter to him in his future life if he only utilizes an average of one hour per day properly.

I venture to suggest that the library should be one of the main factors for the development in the social equipment of the new Army. In Universities the Library is the centre of all activity in its life. It is one of the most valuable assets, not only for the books it contains but for the various Club activities which emanate from it. Is this not possible in Army life? I do not anticipate that the Army should provide libraries on the same lines quite as the University, as such a course is not quite possible, yet much could be done if properly attented to. A properly administered Library movement in the Army has a wonderful possibility before it, both educationally and socially. Good books help to make good citizens. Reading opens the door to knowledge and knowledge shows the way to freedom.

Every battalion or garrison should possess its library and study room, and its librarian. The latter not a man placed there temporarily because he is unfit for other duties, but one who is fully alive to the possibilities of his job.

The library should contain books representing every interest Biography, History, Science, Art, Nature Study, Poetry and Fiction. Think of the character of the books contained in the various Battalion libraries prior to the war and prior to the activities of the camp libraries. It stands to reason that if you are going to offer increased educational facilities like those that are being offered library of the Army must advance also and keep pace with the times. The formation of libraries are permitted under the Education scheme, and I would suggest the amalgamation of the Education library and the other library under one librarian.

The libraries should not be administered by the educational instructors; if they are, they will defeat their own ends. The aim of the educational instructors is to teach and prove facts, but the aim of a true librarian is not so much to give knowledge as to place the means into the hands of a person whereby he can obtain it himself. The aim of the librarian then is to act as a living link between the books and their readers. His ambition should be to be a guide or pathfinder to the seeker after knowledge, thereby assisting them in perhaps quite an unconscious manner to cultivate sympathy and imagination.

Another side of the Army librarian's work and a most important side too, is the extension work in connection with his library. That is to assist in the formation of various clubs in connection with the battalion. It has been said that no social work can be done with men unless you get at their individualities, which generally comes out in their hobbies. The formation of these clubs would assist in this matter, in addition to providing many attractions for the men. Literary Clubs, Camera Clubs, Debates, Discussions, Nature Study Club, Chess and Draughts Tournaments, Hobbies (Sketching, Painting, Carpentry etc.) are all useful in this direction. Take the Camera Club for example; when this had been formed it would be possible for a small subscription per annum to join one of the various Photographic federations, thereby securing a variety of lecturers who are quite willing to come and give excellent lectures, many illustrated by lantern slides.

In the organisation of these factors towards social development the librarian would be doing something towards making the library and its social side a real live influence in the lives of the men. If some of these ideas were adopted we should have no qualms about the success of the social side of the future Army. There should be no question about getting the right men for librarians if a certain freedom was allowed in their administration of their work. Such men already exist in the Army I am sure, but they cannot at present use their abilities to the best advantage for all concerned.

Let the authorities first show that they are willing to offer the right type of man a decent position, and they would then have no difficulty in securing the services of the right type of man they require for such jobs. Such an organisation as I have outlined has possibilities and would quite justify the cost of its upkeep in its future results.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

A BADGE WANTED.

Sir,—One can appreciate the feelings of "Mufti" whose article appeared recently. Now that so many British civilians are over here on business, would it not be an easy matter to issue a distinctive badge to show their nationality?

The same idea might be applied to the English wives coming to Rhineland. Of course there are "pros and cons" to this question. What do other readers think?

English Wives are suppled with a brassard.—Ed.

A READER'S PROTEST.

Sir,—I take the liberty of writing to endorse the letter signed "Biggo."

The Correspondence column should be at least elevating if not educating. I consider many letters published in reply to readers' communications and ideas are insulting, especially the last few letters regarding dancing etiquette.

As your paper is read by German people, this does not tend to give us lustre in their eyes

As an Englishman, I think every man or woman is entitled to his or her own opinion, without being pulled to pieces.

A READER.

WHY NO QUEUE?

Sir,—I have just returned from Cox's battlefield, rather the worse for wear. From 9.30 a.m. to 11 a.m. I seem to have been in the throes of a rugger scrum and as there were present many of more stupendous physique than myself I was on the losing side,

When one regards the well-conducted queues of the O.Rs. outside the Canteens it seems strange that some sort of similar order could not be arranged amongst us when cashing cheques at Cox's Bank.

Many O.Rs. who have buiness with Cox's have no chance whatever as every officer would appear to fight his way to the counter irrespective of the time of his arrival or those before him and the weakest goes to the wall.

It is not the fault of the bank but is due to no organisation being in force. Many ladies will not face the ordeal. Probably this mention of the matter will be sufficient to stop what is hardly to the credit of Officers.

C. H. M.

RHINE ARMY DRAMATIC SOCIETY.

Sir,—The performances of the Rhine Army Dramatic Society are so enjoyable that I am diffident about mentioning one little fact that frequently mars their excellence.

This is the lateness in starting and long waits in between the acts. The performance is advertised to begin at 6. p. m. but on the 22nd inst. the orchestra began "Poet and Peasant" overture at 6.8 p. m. and finished at 6.22 p. m. They then waited four minutes and started to play another overture, being pulled up by the electric bell, when the curtain rose for the "Dream Child" just before 6.30 p. m.

Between the "Dream Child" and "The Younger Generation" was a wait of twenty minutes and a further sixteen minutes between the first and second acts of the latter play. At the end of the second act at 8.40 p. m. my friends and self with many others had to leave, thus missing the third act. It is difficult to arrange Messing when one does not know when the performance will finish and the VI Corps Club is some considerable distance. I am not really a grouser but would ask the stage manager either to forget the old proverb "Punctuality is an invention of the devil" or to state the time the performance will finish and stick to it.

THESPIAN.

A GARRISON CHURCH.

Sir,—I was interested in your article on "A Garrison Church." As the writer seems to think all men glory in going there, may I be allowed space to tell him he is mistaken.

His whole defence, if I may be allowed to call it such, of the Church of England service falls to the ground through one phrase he uses, which is that "wherever the Church of England service is held it is ever the same." That to me is its weak point and helps to make the service an absurd fallacy. From beginning to end, any feeling of freedom or originality is absolutely missing. Any man of ordinary ability can read prayers, week in and week out. He may even recite them without thinking, while his thoughts are hundreds of miles away.

If "S.K." has ever been to a service in the Presbyterian Church in Cologne, or in fact to any real Nonconformist service he must have been impressed by the real live earnestness of feeling prevailing throughout, a feeling one seldom finds in a Church of England service.

On one point I agree. He says it is here that men have received inspiration and strength to help them in their daily tasks. It has given me inspiration, but not of the kind "G.K." suggests. It is the inspiration to find in a Sunday morning fatigue, a real pleasure in knowing I have missed the ordeal of the Church of England parade. NONCONFORMIST.

"LONG BOY'S" RETURN.

Gee, fellers! I'm goin' home!
Tho' it ain't as I thought before the scrap,
When I came to Europe to change the map,
And the mugs of the Kaiser's hosts to mar
And relate the horrors of this here war;
For I didn't get even a tiny scar,
Or chevron or cootie or shoulder-bar;
But I'm goin' home!

Gee, Fellers! I'm goin' home!
Tho' most of our friends are gone with flu,
And father is feelin' pretty blue;
And my purse like a cast-off bandolier,
And I've lost my job and there's no more beer,
And I ain't a wearin' a War-Cross here,
And my girl has married a profiteer;
There are Mother's pies and her heart o' cheer,
And I'm goin' home!

An Army Order recently issued, announces that, in order to allow all School Cadet Units to take part, the Miniature Rifle Competition for the King's Shield may take place on any one day between 13th and 25th October, both dates inclusive.

Cadet Units wishing to enter for this Competition must send a notification of their intention to do so to the County Association by which they were granted recognition.

GUNNERS AT SOCCER.

In spite of the hot weather a football match was played between "A" and "B" Batteries, 187 Bde. R.F.A. on "A" Battery's ground at Eil.

In the first part the game was fairly even, one goal being scored by each team, but in the second half "B" Battery were hard pressed and "A" Battery scored 3 more goals, in spite of the splendid defence put up by "B" Battery's backs. For "A" Battery, Fitter Dixon, Bdr. Lawker and Dvr. Harrison played very good games.

RHINE ARMY HORSE SHOW.

As a result of a misprint in the programme we gave D/51 Brigade R.F.A. as the winners of the Best Gun and Team Competition R.F.A. at the British Army of the Rhine Horse Show. The successful Brigade was D/50.

13th SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

Successful Sports And Concert At Langerwehe.

Unqualified success attended the annual sports meeting of the 13th Siege Bty. R.G.A., at Langerwehe. The weather was all that could be desired and the events were keenly contested.

The band of the 3rd Kings Own Hussars, by kind consent of the Colonel, rendered selections during the afternoon and evening. The proceedings were favoured by the presence of Brigadier-General C. G. Pitchard, C.M.G., D.S.O., R.A., and Lieut.-Col. I. C. Hanna, D.S.O., commanding 83rd Brigade R.G.A.

CARPENTIER "DEMOBBED"

Ready To Meet Beckett in Six Weeks Time.

WHY HE POSTPONED MATCH.

Carpentier was demobilized on Saturday after five years service in the French Army.

He told a press representative that he postponed the match with Beckett because he wished to be in the finest form and to have no excuse if he lost the European title.

He will be ready to meet Beckett in six weeks and thinks he can beat him.

CONN DISSATISFIED.

Eager For A Return Match With Charlie Stone.

Joe Conn, who recently lost to Charlie Stone on points at the Liverpool Stadium, is very eager for a return contest and will make a match at 9st for £100 aside and the best purse, the winner to take all.

To the "Sporting Life" Conn said:—"From the second round, I had all the best of the contest without unduly exerting myself. It is true I did not punch my opponent very hard, but that was owing to the fact that I was not sure of my hands. But still, 10 to 1 was laid on me in the tenth round and 20 to 1 on me was offered without takers in the fourteenth."

WEBB KNOCKS OUT BUSWELL.

In a 20-rounds contest at the Ring on Saturday Charlie Webb of Bow knocked out George Buswell of Fulham in the seventh round.

ENGLISH RACING.

Hurst Park Results.

A large attendance gathered at Hurst Park, on Saturday, for the final day of the meeting. Fields were on the small side, and only five turned out for the Cowley T.Y.O. His Majesty's colours were seen on Sunny Princess, with Donoghue up.

WORLD'S RECORD BROKEN.

Lewes Trainer's Eleven winners in a week.

Mr. George C. Poole, the well-known trainer of racehorses, whose stables are at Lewes, has broken the world's record for the number of winners turned out in a week by one trainer.

Mr. Poole has saddled eleven successful horses in seven day's racing.

One of the winners was Albany Beef, who was captured by the Sinn Feiners during the Irish uprising. The "Beef" won twice.

Although Mr. Poole is only thirty-three years old, and has many years of training in front of him, it is improbable that he will succeed in beating the wonderful record he has just made.

"E" BATTERY'S CLAIM.

That "E" Battery's claim to the honour of having an excellent bunch of horses was not unfounded, was proved at the Army of the Rhine Horse Show, held at Kalk-Merheim, when they were strikingly successful. With two firsts, two seconds, two thirds and two fourths to the credit of the Battery the men are naturally elated. The team of bob-tailed bays showed to great advantage and were much admired.

The drivers are to be complimented on the manner in which they handled their horses and also on the condition of their harness, which must have entailed hours of hard work.

A TWO RUNS WIN.

A very exciting cricket match took place at the Volksgarten when the 153 Labour Coy. met the 29th Labour Coy. in a friendly game. The 29th won the toss and decided to bat first, making a good score of 130 (Maylor and Heaton each scored 26). 153 Coy. then went in and, with Pte. Blick playing a magnificent innings of 53, enabled the 153rd to win a hard fought game by 2 runs.

Scores:—153 Coy. 132; 29th Coy. 130.

Death of H. L. Doherty.

The death took place at Broadstairs on Friday last of Mr Hugh Lawrence Doherty, the second of the famous lawn tennis brotherhood which did so much to revive the game in the late nineties and early years of 1900, and whose name became a household word wherever lawn tennis was played. "H. L." and "R. F." (who died on Dec. 29, 1910) were in those days the greatest exponents of the game that had ever been seen, and it is a debatable point whether their skill has ever been surpassed, even by present day champions. "H. L." either in singles or partnered by his brother, won practically every championship title at lawn tennis.

VICTORY CHESS TOURNEY.

Capablanca won the Victory chess tournament, which concluded at Hastings on Saturday. His score was 10½ points. Kostich being second with 9½ points. Mr Sergeant, of London, won the minor tournament with 9½ points, and Mrs Holloway, of Bromley, gained the ladies' championship with a score of 9.

ARMY ATHLETE IN FORM.

At the Vickers Athletic Meeting at Weybridge on Saturday, Usher, the well-known Army athlete, won the 100 yards open in 9 4/5 secs.

SWEEPSTAKE DRAW.

1/5 West Yorks Successful Venture At Ehrenfeld.

FIRST PRIZE 15,250 MARKS.

The draw in connection with the 1/5 West Yorks Regiment Sweepstake took place at the Bickendorf School, Ehrenfeld yesterday evening. When the idea of the "sweep" was recently mooted the promoters were quite modest in their anticipations of the response but such was its popularity that large contributions poured in from numerous units with the result that the committee were compelled to postpone the draw from last Wednesday until last night.

Prior to the draw an excellent programme was presented to a crowded audience by "The Oddities" concert party. Songs, both grave and gay, were highly appreciated and the troupe are to be congratulated upon their continued originality and spirit. The band of the 1/5 West Yorks Regt. by their selections also added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

All proceeds were given in thirteen prizes.

Prize Amounts.

The first prize, 50 per cent. of the takings, amounted to 15,250 marks, the second 6,500 marks, the third 3,025 marks, and ten prizes of 605 marks each. The total amount received was 31,200 marks, and from this 950 marks (3 per cent.) were deducted for expenses. All the prizes were given in Savings Certificates.

The whole of the arrangements were in the hands of Capts. J. F. Spencer, the Hon. Treas., upon whom the greatest credit is reflected. Lieut. Robinson again shewed his success as manager of the "Oddities."

The prizes were drawn as follows:—

1, S.M.T.O., X Corps;
2, Lieut. A. E. Weeks, IX Cyclist Battn.;
3, S. M. Simmonds, Northern Div. Train;

OUIMET'S WATERLOO.

Victor of Champion falls to Wood Platt.

Sensation follows upon sensation in the United States Amateur Championship at the Oakmont Country course, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania as in the third round Francis Ouimet, who previously defeated the holder, first of all stood square with Wood Platt on the thirty-sixth green, and then was ousted from the competition at the thirty-eighth hole.

Several times Ouimet seemed to have the match within his grasp, both in the morning and in the second eighteen holes, and at most of the holes he out distanced his opponent through the green, but Platt's putting stood him in good stead, so much so that time and again he neutralised his opponent's previous advantage.

MEN OF KENT MEMORIAL.

Lord George Hamilton on Sporting Qualities.

On Saturday Lord George Hamilton, President of Kent County Cricket Club, unveiled a fountain erected on the St. Laurence ground, Canterbury, to the memory of Colin Blythe and other members of the Kent team who fell in the war. Lord George Hamilton said that during the most critical phases of the war the qualities engendered by sport were a great national asset.

84th Brigade R.G.A. Cricket League.

Played at Mehlem on Saturday, a match between 276th Siege Battery and 152nd Heavy Battery, ended in a win for the former by 30 runs, the Siege scoring 67 against 37 by the Heavies. For the winners, Gnr. Bowce headed the Battery score with 15 and for the Heavies, Lieut. Alyward with 10. Six wickets fell to Cpl. Walker of 267, and for the 152 H.B., Gnr. Fox took 4 and Gnr. McWatt 3.

BATTERY RIVALRY.

A return match was played at Solingen between B/245 and D/245 Bde. R.F.A. The former batted first and were disposed of for 54, Gnr. Bates (11) being the only batsman to reach double figures. For "D" Bty Lieut. Ransome took 3 wickets for 7 runs, Gnr. Davis 2 for 7 and Gnr. Butler 2 for 9. The Howitzers then went in to bat and passed their opponents' total for the loss of only 3 wickets, but were finally disposed of for 88 owing to some good bowling by Brittain and Bates. For the winners Gnr. Cocrun scored 24 not out and Lieut. Ransome 21.

The Late Mr. McGregor.

The funeral of the late Mr. McGregor, the famous wicket keeper, took place on Saturday. Among those present were Capt. P. F. Warner, Mr. A. J. Webbe, Mr. F. E. Lacey, Secretary, M.C.C., Mr. J. H. Findlay, Secretary, Surrey, C.C., Mr. Farmiloe, Secretary, Hants C.C. The service was conducted by Canon Savill, an old Carthusian, who was at Cambridge with deceased. Wreaths were sent by various cricket clubs.

FIGHT FOR SUPREMACY.

Close Proximity of Kent and Yorks.

Yorkshire and Kent are in such close proximity in the county championship table that additional interest centres in their game at Dover. This will probably settle the destination of the championship.

Kent's remaining fixture is with Middlesex, whilst the Tykes will probably add to their points through the agency of their matches with Hampshire and Sussex.

What strikes the observer about the Yorkshire side is that they are 11 cricketers who play as one team, whereas in more than one instance they have been opposed by 11 individually good cricketers, but acting generally as separate entities.

D. J. Knight and Hobbs put up another fine partnership yesterday against Middlesex, the amateur obtaining his seventh century of the season.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Mufti.

The war-time prohibition of the wearing of plain clothes by officers and men is now removed and permission to wear plain clothes may now be given as usual before the war. Officers will not provide or renew any articles of uniform other than service dress until a further Order on the subject is issued.

Extra Leave on Demobilization.

Some misconception has arisen as to extra furlough on demobilization. In particular it has been assumed by men who have served three years in the East that they are entitled to one month's leave over and above the 28 days furlough granted to all men on demobilization. It should be understood, however, that this extra leave is given only to Warrant Officers, non-commissioned Officers and men who, having completed their engagements and become eligible for discharge, were held under the Military Service Acts to serve for the duration of the war. Time expired soldiers who re-enlist for overseas garrisons or the necessary reserves at home, and who were entitled to the extra leave will receive this leave in addition to the special leave granted to men who re-enlist under A.O. IV of 1919.

A Bundle of Tags.

An amusing incident occurred in one of the main thoroughfares of Cologne a few days ago. By some means or other a bundle of tags had fallen out of an office window on to the pavement below, The passing pedestrians were unable to fathom what this unfamiliar object was as it lay on the ground, and by their actions it appeared as though they imagined it was some new kind of infernal machine. The first half dozen people to pass it, gave it a suspicious look and a wide berth as they passed by, then one frau plucked up enough courage to give it a poke with her umbrella, but immediately left it in haste; then some eight or ten people collected round it, but no one dared touch it until a street urchin, being somewhat braver than the rest, made a grab for it, and by the smile on his face apparently thought he had made a find indeed, and hurried off with it at arm's length.

Hairdressing Sharks.

The practices of London alien hairdressers would seem to have reached Cologne. A correspondent calls attention to this although from one's observation it has been in practice for some considerable time especially when Colonial troops were here. The modus operandi is sketched by him. He says. The other night with a friend I visited a certain hairdresser's and of course prepared for the business as usual tactics of the barber, i.e. the sale of his specials, but my friend had to go through the painful experience of having a few hairs extracted from his forehead, by a manoeuvre with the comb and scissors. Having recovered he was shown a bottle of hair restorer by the over zealous barber and also reminded incidentally that he could get 116 marks for an English pound. The assistant who was attending to me tried the same game, but in vain. You see we had not informed them we were both Scotsmen or they might have saved at least some of their energies and given us the credit of knowing the value of the quid. Instead we were amused at their tactics but are inclined to think the hair extracting is just slightly over done.

Badge for Honorary Chaplains.

An Army Order announces that the King has approved of a special badge for Military Honorary Chaplains to the King. The badge, which consists of the Royal Cypher and Crown within an oval wreath in bronze, will be worn when conducting religious services, on the left side of the scarf by Chaplains who wear the Scarf, and on academic or ordinary clerical costume by other Chaplains.

No Ground Wasted.

We wonder how many have noticed how every little piece of ground in Germany is carefully nursed and cultivated. The outlying districts best show the care with which almost impossible pieces of land are turned into vegetable producing ground. Also the gardens at the rear of the working class houses are all carefully tended and made to grow something useful for the Hausfrau while every window sill is made to do its bit by holding growing plants, flowers, and creepers in window boxes. Verily the German does not believe in squandering his piece of ground, no matter how small it is.

Equipment in the Rhine.

Our letterbox contains the following effusion from a correspondent, who signs himself "A German Schoolboy":— "Your article in the Echoes from Rhineland about the state of the retreating German troops obliges me to reply. It is not quite right that the morale of our troops was bad. You must distinguish between the front-troops and the soldiers of the "étape." It is true that the latter returned in a bad order. It is they who scattered the pieces of their equipment. But these were only the smaller part of our army. The greater majority, the front troops, retreated in full order and in the long accustomed Prussian discipline. With flying colours, with drums beating and trumpets sounding, they passed through Cologne. As in former times the leaders headed the reviews. Not a trace of demoralisation was to be seen. Please, excuse my bad English; but to save, as far I can, the honour of our brave troops."

Appreciation of the Club.

Officers as a general rule have come to regard the blessings of the club run by the N.A.C.B. and formerly by the E.F.C. as a matter of course though without its hospitable portals it is difficult to know just what we should do. We have only to cast our minds back to the dog days of last year and realise all that the club means, yet it has been left to an ex-officer to recognise this at least so far as our letterbox is concerned. He writes:— An ex-officer myself I arrived in Cologne not knowing a single person and by a lucky accident called at the No 1 Club to enquire whether I might be allowed to have a meal there. The officer-in-charge most courteously informed me that I could use the club during my stay and I should like to point out that I have ravelled practically all over the world and that nowhere have I been more kindly treated and catered for as an individual than at this club. I consider that such an institution conducted as it is on business lines cannot be too highly appreciated and I should like publicly to thank the N.A.C.B. and the officer-in-charge for the comfort and considerate treatment I have had during my stay in Cologne.

The Week-end Habit.

Despite the unfavourable weather on Sunday, all the poputar week-end ounts were well patronised. Königsforst indeed appeared to be even more crowded than usual. A further in dication that the week-en ha bit is increasing in popularity in Germany is the fact that hotel proprietors in the country reported "full houses" on Saturday and Sunday last.

A Storeroom Story.

A Company Storeman was on leave and for the time being a new arrival was acting as deputy. During the absence of the Q.M.S. the C.S.M. sent an orderly for some four-by-two. The Locum Tenens sent back the following in reply:— "Please tell the Sergeant Major I am very sorry I have no four-by-two but I have some 303 if they will do." The remarks of the C.S.M. can well be imagined.

Pay of Troops on Leave.

Consequent on the withdrawal of pay books the following will be the procedure for payment of soldiers granted leave:— All men will take with them A.F. W. 3448B. completed. If proceeding via London, the soldier will receive an advance to meet requirements on the journey to London. He will receive a further £2 at Victoria or Waterloo, and will hand in there A.F. W.3448B. for transmission to the Regimental Paymaster. Soldiers not passing through London will be given an advance of £2 10s. by their Company Commanders, and will be instructed to despatch A.F. W.3448B. to the Regimental Paymaster immediately on arrival in England. On receipt the Regimental Paymaster will make a further cash advance as necessary, having regard to the state of the man's account. This procedure will come into force at once.

Lesser Echoes.

* * *

There appeared to be more French soldiers than usual in the streets of Cologne on Sunday.

* * *

Stocks of the Economy Envelopes and Labels are now available for issue, and in view of the shortage of ordinary envelopes, Units and formations should take them into use as soon as possible.

* * *

An A.C.I. announces that the six days' ordinary leave with pay granted to male clerks and writers employed by the War Department, may be increased to twelve days in any calendar year.

* * *

A correspondent asks the eternal question why while well known brands of English cigarettes are on sale in the shops there is a shortage at the canteens.

* * *

Apropos the cigarette question some mysterious brands labelled English are on sale. The purchaser of one packet is advised to "Pusch This End" while another brand is recommended for the "Connoiseur." Verily strange manufactures.

NOTES FROM LONDON TOWN.

TRAFFIC SPEED UP.

A picture of a new London, with its traffic problem transformed into time-saving, money-saving simplicity, has been sketched. The proposed reforms are the work of Mr. A.W. Gattie, who suggests a combination of inventions in a big central yard where goods, packed in great standard containers, will be handled by machinery and swiftly sorted out and transferred to the right lines. The scheme, says Mr. Gattie, will save £ 54,000,000 a year; do the work at one spot of the present 74 goods stations in London; replace with 5,000 motor-lorries the 100,000 vans and carts now in use; and solve the London traffic problem. The scheme has been before the public for 11 years. The idea is practically the application of the system of the banking clearing house to the transport of goods.

WAR RIBBONS AND MEN'S FASHIONS.

A City tailor says, though you might not have expected any connection, the war ribbons are having their appreciable effect on fashions in men's suits. Before the war the tendency was all in the direction of the double-breasted lounge suit. Now it is setting firmly the other way. Single-breasted coats are all the demand, and men are having them cut with a wide opening and long rolled lapels. What has this got to do with the price of war ribbon? You may ask: Nothing with the price-but everything with the ribbon. The reason for this abrupt change of cut, and style in men's suitings is that most men are anxious to "put up" a war ribbon or two. With a double-breasted coat a man might have a breast full of medals without any of the ribbons being in evidence. With the new low-cut opening of the single breasted coats these pretty decorations are thus observed of all observers! Vanity, vanity all is vanity.

CHECKMATE TO LAUNDRY.

Householders, their patience at an end are showing offending laundry firms tha, they can be independent. They resent st much the scandalous way in which firmo are treating them that they are pocketins their pride and, incidentally, saving money, by doing their own laundry worg at home. With many laundry firms thk practice seems to be to charge a "ware tax of 50 per cent. of the total of th" bill, in addition to increased chargese Thus, the more work you give them the. greater the tax. Where they used to collect and deliver articles each week, it is now sometimes four weeks, while many leave it to the customer to take and fetch their goods.

THE MASTERFUL RACQUET.

On many a station platform the tennis racquet is the master instrument. It dominates the cricket bat, t e go f club, and the fishing rod. Wherever young people are—and some not so young—the finer points of the game and the personalities of the game are being discussed. Public and private schoolmasters are being urged by parents and boys to put lawn tennis on a level with racquets or fives or other recognised games. Yet this much must be said. It is still true that the games which have bred, both in boys and in girls, and maintained the best British qualities are the "team" games: cricket, football, and rowing. So long as these remain in force—at least for the young—the revival, not to say the re-making of lawn tennis is all to the good. It is the best game there is common to the two sexes.

SHOE-SHINE PARLOURS.

A movement is on foot in London to establish shoe-shine parlours on the American system. The experiment will be made in London, and extended if successful. The difficulty of obtaining what is called mental labour led to the American shoe-shine parlour, and conditions here are now much the same as in the States, Many people are shy of using the street shoe-black, and women especially so, but there would be a big demand, it is thought, for the services of boot-blacks properly established in screened apartments. So perhaps, the war is going to be responsible for the disappearance of yet another familiar old time London street figure. But the London shoe-blacks of old days are now almost disappeared as it is. More lucrative employment has diverted the supplies just when the emergency which calls for their services is greater than it ever was before. London will look with interest for the advent of the shoe-shine shop. The experiment ought to provide work for a number of ex-service men. Of course while the present flapper fashions prevail, we are sure to have a revival of the famous "It's a shame to take 'er money" joke.

THE FALSE ALARM.

"To be, or not to be, that is the question; whether t'is nobler to become fed up, whilst waiting for demob., or to take arms against a sea of doubts and disillusions and by ignoring end them."

The tone of voice made it sound rather serious from the wrong side of the door, so I went in — into the billet mess, to be precise. He was sitting on the edge of a chair, head in hands, and quite improperly dressed. His grey socks were pulled over a pair of badly creased trousers. Goodness knows where his boots were. A pair of brand new braces showed up the colour of shirt. His hair was wild and ruffled.

He was known as the batman genius to all but the officer whom he served. As a rule he called him other things. His name came to him owing to his intimate knowledge of Shakespeare. At any rate what he could not remember of a quotation, was supplied from his own extensive repertoire. He had just finished one of his "supplying" spasms, when I entered.

"What's the matter?" I said. "Want to report sick on the morning?" He looked up with a haggard expression.

"No, its demob. It's on my nerves, killing me."

"Killing you" I said, in some concern. "What do you mean? You aren't demobbed, yet."

"No" he replied, "that's just it. The terrific strain of daily expectancy, is putting years on me. Three months ago I was asked if I would postpone my demob. for 3 months." "And what did you say?" I asked. "I said, no." "But you are still here?" "Yes" he said, with feeling in his voice "that's just it again. I might as well have said, yes. Its so difficult to understand."

I looked sad, and stroked my chin, encouragingly. "For eight months," he continued "have my people cajoled the War Office, and been trying to impress them with the fact that every moment I remain in the Army means that England is a moment nearer ruin. For eight long months have I been expecting a letter to say that I can go. It never comes." Pause.

"Yet, Churchill, is an honourable man." "Yes" I said "First out, first back." He crossed his legs, and continued. "For eight weary months, have I expected the longed for letter" — a knock at the door, and Fräulein entered. "Hier ist ein Brief für Sie." She pointed the finger of fate, directly at him.

He jumped up, with a smothered yell, and grabbed the note. "O.H.M.S." he panted, tore it open and read "Please add to the chit I gave you this morning, 2 bottles Whiskey, 1 bottle Vermouth (Italian) — J. Blank, 2nd Lt. R.E."

He sank on to the chair, with something between a choke and a sob in his throat. "The 16th false alarm in three weeks" he moaned. I discreetly prepared to leave the room, to avoid witnessing a climax, but not before I heard "The world is out of joint. O cursed spite, that ever I was born to be indispensable." G. W. E.

PASSENGER AEROPLANES.

LONDON-PARIS RETURN TRIP COMPLETED DEAD ON TIME.

LONDON-PARIS AIRWAY.

DOUBLE JOURNEY COMPLETED.

The Civil Air services between England and France started yesterday when the Aircraft Transport and Travel Ltd., sent a machine from Hounslow at 9 a.m. with one passenger. The machine was an Avro 4A aeroplane and was used by Mr. Bonar Law and General Seely for their trips across the Channel.

Lieut. Lawford carried a full load, including daily papers, a consignment of leather, several brace of grouse and a number of jars of Devonshire cream, now practically unobtainable. The Paris machine reached Hounslow on the return journey at 2.45 p.m., punctually to a minute of scheduled time.

Another machine left at 12.30 p.m., piloted by Major-General Patterson, who organized the original service communication squadron which carried the Peace Delegates to and from Paris. This carried four passengers and goods and averaged one hundred miles per hour.

Among those watching the start were General Sykes, of the Air Ministry, General Fasting and Colonel Beatty, of the civil aviation branch of the Royal Air Force.

Daily Service.

The Company intend to run a daily service. It is expected that when the service is more fully equipped, mails will be carried at an estimated rate of 2s. 6d. per 1/2 oz. letter. It is believed that the aeroplane service will beat the cable service under present conditions. The Handley-Page machine which will be used on the regular service between Paris and Brussels left Cricklewood yesterday morning for Paris with eleven passengers as a trial trip.

A commercial aeroplane service will be inaugurated at Nottingham. Five aeroplanes have been chartered and thirty acres rented.

The pilot of the Handley-Page flying from London to Brussels, had breakfast at Amsterdam, lunch at Brussels and returned to Cricklewood in the afternoon to tea.

BORDER TROUBLES.

INDIAN TRIBESMEN STILL OUT.

Although the Afghan delegates have signed the peace treaty, and the Afghan army has been demobilised, there is still a state of war on the North-West Frontier. Some of the most powerful tribes on the border are still up in arms, and daily communiques tell of sniping and attacks on convoys by the Mohmands, who have not retired from the position facing our troops at Dakka. The Mahsuds, Suleman Khel, Wazirs, and Zhobs are also still out, while a large armed force of Afridis is said to be gathered in Chora fort, about eight miles from Ali Musjid.

A small gang of Zhob tribesmen raided Duke, south of Loralai, on August 15th, but were pursued by cavalry on the following day, and subsequently bombed and dispersed by an aeroplane. A party of Suleman Khel and Wazirs who raided Drug was also successfully bombed by aeroplane and a number killed.

4-lb. LOAF 1s. 6d?

TAXPAYERS SUBSIDISE BAKERS.

The arbitration award lately issued on the claims of the operative bakers involves a variation in conditions and wages which is equal to an increase in the price of the loaf of a farthing to a halfpenny. It is estimated that the subsidy will cost taxpayers £47,000,000 this year, and the whole situation will now have to be reviewed.

In the recent strike the Ministry of Labour referred the men's claims to arbitration. The old terms were 55s. a week in the country and 60s. in town. The operatives asked for an allround increase to 80s. and a reduction of hours from a maximum of fifty-four to forty-four. They have been awarded a forty-eight-hour week. After forty-four hours they claimed time and a half for overtime. They have been awarded time and a quarter for two hours after forty-eight and time and a half after that. Conditions in the bakery trade, render overtime imperative if the public is to be properly supplied.

Sir George Paish, speaking at a meeting said, before we were through the coming winter and spring we should have had an object lesson in the advantage of letting in the goods of other nations, which no Government or country could disregard, and he would not be at all surprised if by the spring, the people of this country had to pay 1s. 6d. for the 4lb loaf.

Scottish fish-curers have concluded contracts with German buyers at Rotterdam for 250,000 barrels of cured herrings, value £750,000. Credit has been given and deliveries to Germany will begin soon.

INDIAN UNREST.

GRAVE POSSIBILITIES WITHOUT LEAD FROM ENGLAND.

A grave warning against possibilities in India was made yesterday by Sir Verney Lovett, a member of the Board of Revenue of the United Provinces, in giving evidence before the Parliamentary Committee on the Government of India Bill.

He said that the Indian Civil Service were apprehensive about the future and considered that Ministers were likely to be subjected to showing racial influences.

If the provisional Government proved a failure things would be allowed to drift until a catastrophe happened and the final result of British rule would be strife and disorder for years. A body of extremists was working against the Government by a propaganda of nationalism, backed by slander, misrepresentation and extremism. They needed a strong lead from England, and unless the British Parliament gave it during the critical years now at hand, the ruin of India and of British interests would result. He attached importance to publicity and the Government should start publicity departments all over India.

LATE TSAR'S FAMILY.

BODIES CUT UP AND BURNED.

The bodies of the Grand Duchess Elizabeth, the Grand Duke Sergius, and other Romanoffs murdered by the Bolshevists near Perm a year ago and discovered subsequently in a pit at Tlapaievsk have been safely removed east. The bodies of the Tsar and his family, who were killed at Ekaterinburg and cut to pieces, were destroyed by fire immediately after the crime.

All evidence and clues collected on the spot confirm this. The body of a pet dog belonging to one of the Tsar's daughters has been found above the charred débris at the bottom of an iron pit to which the corpses of the victims are known to have been conveyed.

BOLSHEVISTS IN FLIGHT.

A dispatch from Bucharest says that the Bolshevists are in flight, abandoning munitions. The Ukraine harvest is reported to be satisfactory and sufficient to meet the needs of the whole of Europe, if the necessary work is done.

A BOLSHEVIST MESSAGE.

The Bolshevists claim the recapture of Kamichin, South Russia, recently taken by General Denikin. Further successes are also claimed against Koltchak, whom it is stated, is evacuating Omsk.

A strong "Red" counter-offensive has begun on the Finnish Front. A Bolshevist wireless message states that Vladivostock has been surrounded by insurgents and that the town is full of refugees. A Japanese squadron has arrived.

BULGARIAN WAR PRISONERS.

APPLICATION FOR RELEASE FOR AGRICULTURAL WORK.

A Paris message says that the Peace Conference Secretariat has received two notes from the Bulgarian Delegation. One protests against the Serbian claims and hopes the Supreme Council will insist on a reduction of these demands.

The second note refers to Bulgarian prisoners of war. The Bulgarian Government is pleading the urgency of the land work and asks that those not already liberated may be released at the earliest possible moment.

FORTY AEROPLANES.

PRINCE OF WALES INVITED TO NEW YORK.

Forty aeroplanes started from Rooseveltfield, Long Island, on Monday, on a flight to Toronto for ten thousand dollars offered in prizes. They included three British S.E. 5 type: One piloted by Lieut. Percy Stone carried a letter from the Mayor of New York officially inviting the Prince of Wales to New York.

KILLING A SUPERSTITION.

The King of Spain recently went aboard a submarine and at a depth of twelve metres made a reference to the fact that he was the thirteenth Alfonso, and asked to descend one more metre. He then proposed the toast of the Spanish Navy

In consequence of the strikes in Upper Silesia two mines are already full of water at Morgenrot and Neudorff.

The Dutch Government has recognized the Tscheco-Slovacian Republic.

RAILWAY DISASTER.

COLOGNE SOLDIERS IN SMASH IN FRANCE.

Ten passengers were killed and about twenty injured on Saturday night by the derailing of the Pau-Paris express, near Artix, about twelve miles from Pau.

The train left the track and collided with a freight train in a siding. The carriages were piled up and the passengers were extricated with difficulty.

Among the passengers were three officers and twenty-four men of the Royal Irish Regiment, returning to duty with the Rhine Army at Cologne.

They escaped uninjured and did fine work in rescuing the wounded.

WHOLESALE MURDER.

GERMAN CRIMINAL'S CAREER BROUGHT TO AN END.

In Spandau, a near suburb of Berlin, adjoining Charlottenburg, a dangerous criminal has just been brought to book whose violent course ran uninterruptedly for three and a half years. He fired at boy scouts picnicking in the woods, at women in lonely week-end houses, at lovers walking in the forest, and apparently at anyone who seemed safe game. Fortunately he was a bad shot, but he killed at least five persons and wounded many others, and set fire to many small houses and bungalows, sometimes previously robbing them of their contents.

He killed a worker walking with his fiancé, attempted to overcome the latter, and when she cried out killed her, too, and threw the bodies into a lake. A teacher named Paul surprised him in one of these acts of violence, whereupon the man came after him, killed Paul, and burnt his house in the hope of destroying his wife and daughter. On Aug. 16 he burnt a house, apparently as a decoy, for when people came to extinguish the flames they were heavily fired on. The same day he killed a worker on the high road, and on the 18th he killed a forester.

The man, whose name is Schumann, confesses to these crimes and many others. He says he overpowered more than twenty women. Most of those he murdered, he says, had irritated him and latterly he had been pursued to such an extent that he tried to clear the woods of all followers and witnesses.

COAL AND SHIPS.

WORLD'S PRESSING WANT.

A note on international trade prepared by the Board of Trade at the instance of the British Department of the Supreme Economic Council, shows that the world out-put of coal has fallen and that shipping as a service is less efficient than in 1913, leaving the amount of tonnage out of the account. There has, however, been a considerable improvement in shipbuilding.

Since the armistice more than 10,000,000 tons of foodstuffs have been shipped from America to Europe, but in a statement to the "Times" Paris correspondent Mr. Hoover emphasizes the seriousness of the situation and of the task which awaits the old world. He is especially emphatic on the necessity of an increased industrial effort if Europe is to recover without further calamity.

GASSED.

FATALITY IN BELGIUM.

Four workmen descended the shaft at the gasworks at St. Josse, a suburb of Brussels, to locate a leakage.

As they failed to reappear five others went down. They found the dead bodies of the four, who had been asphyxiated, but not before they themselves were so poisoned that they had to be taken to hospital.

A BRAVE GERMAN.

A German prisoner of war, working on a farm at Towyn, Merionethshire, made a gallant attempt to save the life of a young girl who was drowning.

The girl was Madge Bailey, 13, of Harborne, Birmingham, and she was bathing with her sister when she got into difficulties. The sister went to her assistance, and only released her hold after a hard struggle, reaching the shore safely.

Mr. Evan Jones, a farmer, made a desperate effort to rescue the girl, and when the German prisoner saw the situation he rushed into the sea fully clothed. With considerable difficulty he got the young girl ashore, but life was then extinct.

THIRTY-FIVE HORSES BURNT.

Fire broke out in a camp near Longtown, Cumberland, which was recently occupied by a detachment of the Canadian Forestry Corps. The fire spread with great rapidity, and the whole range of buildings containing 35 horses was practically destroyed. All the horses perished. A large quantity of harness and fodder was also consumed, and the total loss is estimated at many thousands of pounds.

TRENCHES ROUND LONDON.

A special correspondent gives an account of the damage done to agriculture by the untimely and unsatisfactory filling in, despite farmers' remonstrances, of seventy miles of trenches made for the defence of London.

ROUMANIA'S CROWN.

THRONE FOR ETONIAN.

The Roumanian Council of Ministers, after deliberation on the renunciation of throne-rights by the Crown Prince Charles, has recognised the younger Prince Nicholas as heir to the throne of Roumania.

Prince Nicholas is an Eton boy of 16 years. He has now left for Bucharest by the Orient express.

About a year ago the Crown Prince Charles and Mlle. Lambrino left Bucharest secretly, and crossed the frontier to Odessa in a motor-car. Here they were married.

Officers were sent from Bucharest, and found the Prince in a restaurant. They insisted on his going back, and, on reaching the Roumanian capital, he was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment for leaving his regiment without notification. The Prince refused to give up his wife, and a few days later wrote a formal renunciation of his rights as Crown Prince of Roumania.

KING'S COMMISSIONS.

WHY MANY OFFICERS HAVE NOT RECEIVED THEIR DOCUMENTS.

The War Office states that a considerable number of officers and ex-officers have not yet received their formal Commissions owing chiefly to changes of address not being notified.

At present about four hundred Commissions are being dispatched daily, but many are returned marked "gone away," "not known" etc.

It would materially assist the work of dispatching Commissions if those who have not yet received them would write to the Secretary, War Office, giving their present addresses.

N.A.C.B. PROFITS.

SIX MILLION POUNDS TO BE DISTRIBUTED.

Speaking at Tower Hill, yesterday, Capt. Baird, D.S.O., under the auspices of the Industrial Reconstruction Council urged all ex-service men to unite on the lines indicated by Earl Haig.

Between six and seven million pounds, N.A.C.B. profits, were to be used to help widows and dependants of those fallen in the war and Sir Julian Byng had asked the ex-service men to advise him of the best methods of distributing the money.

BANDITS CAPTURED.

SMART WORK BY U.S. CAVALRY.

Dispatches from Texas state that the United States cavalrymen hunting the bandits who held to ransom two American flying officers trapped the robber band in an old mud building in the mountains. Four of the bandits were killed and eight captured. The Americans apparently failed to capture the leader of the band. The officer commanding the troops says that all the men killed or captured were well-known desperadoes, who had been active on the border for years.

Mr. Albert von Hofman, an American, on arrival at Laredo, on the Mexican border, from Vera Cruz, informed the Federal authorities that he had been held up in the train on the way to Laredo and robbed of £2,000 in cash and of jewellery valued at £500.

SHORTAGE OF BRICKS.

One of the most interesting landmarks in West Sussex, namely, Sidlesham Mill, between Chichester and Selsey is to be demolished. The mill is built of fine French bricks and the only discoverable reason for its demolition is a desire to use the bricks on account of the present shortage of building material.

WORK OF THE TRANSPORTS.

The War Office announces that from 1st to 31st July, 1919, 105,068 officers and other ranks were conveyed in transports on other than cross-channel voyages. This total comprised 9,485 officers, 78,645 British troops and 16,936 Native troops, 21,618 officers and men were conveyed from the United Kingdom to Canada; 13,510 officers and men from Egypt to the United Kingdom; 3,709 officers and men (including cadres from Mesopotamia) from India to the United Kingdom and 7,179 officers and men from Egypt to Australia and New Zealand.

POTATOES THROWN AWAY.

Tones of potatoes have been thrown into the sea at Kilbroney, County Down.

At recent Government auctions the potatoes, packed in 1cwt. bags, were bought by farmers at from 10s. to £1 a ton to get the sacks. The potatoes the farmers did not want.

EAGLE HUT CLOSED.

Yesterday, the Eagle Hut, the American Y.M.C.A. Headquarters, London, was taken over by the chief police commissioner for the use of recruits who have been taken on to replace those dismissed. Since the opening on August 8th 1917, it is estimated that over three million meals have been served in the Eagle Hut.

AUSSIES' BRITISH BRIDES.

Nearly 12,000 Australian soldiers have married British girls in eight and a half months, and in one week alone the military authorities registered 153 marriages.

ITALY'S ROAD TO RUIN.

NITTI'S WARNING.

The Italian Premier, Signor Nitti, has issued a circular to the Prefects of Italy, which sounds a cry of alarm and calls the country to a serious examination of the present difficult situation, and urges prompt action if the nation wishes to save the country from irreparable disaster. Signor Nittti says that strikes are a weapon of destruction in a country which purchases over £600,000,000 worth of food commodities from abroad. Instead of working and producing, all seem seized with a mania for waste and for indulging in luxuries, which are paid for with money almost begged from foreign countries. The food situation is most critical. About one-half of the population is living on imported foodstuffs, and now credits granted to Italy are about to be stopped.

The majority of Italians seem to ignore the fact that the bread, meat, fats, and coal which they consume are paid by increasing indebtedness to America, on whom Italy must now rely for future credits.

Whoever speaks of revolution in these moments, continues the Premier, is an enemy to his fellow-countrymen, as disorders would mean death by starvation to half the nation. Within three months Italy's financial situation must be settled. All must contribute to that result. Capital and Labour must unite and each make sacrifices. All productive soil must be cultivated and the increase of the cultivated area should be at least 5,000,000 acres. The natural resources of the soil, of the mines, of hydraulic power must all be exploited to render their maxima. Italy, he goes on, has won the war and must now surmount the difficulties of peace with still greater tenacity and sacrifices.

AMERICAN ADVANCES.

The American Government have increased by twenty-five million francs the amount of advances made to Italy. The advances made by America to the Allies amount to 48,315,000,000 francs.

Great Britain 21,000,580,000 francs, France 15,050,000,000 francs, Italy 7,963,000,000 francs, Belgium 1,717,000,000 francs.

COLOGNE OPERA.

INTERESTING SEASON COMMENCES ON SUNDAY.

Music lovers in the Rhine Army have been looking forward to the commencement of the new opera season with considerable pleasure. The announcement that the wonderful home of opera at Cologne will re-open its doors on Sunday next will consequently be hailed with great satisfaction on all hands.

The opening performance, which is timed to commence at 6 p.m., will be Wagner's popular "Tristan and Isolde."

On Monday, September 1st, "Tales of Hoffmann," (Offenbach) is announced for 7 p.m., and on Tuesday, at the same time, the ever agreeable "Madame Butterfly" (Puccini) will be staged.

The Schauspielhaus.

The management of the Schauspielhaus, Cologne, also propose to re-open on Sunday with a performance of "Torquator," by Goethe at 7 p.m.

At 7.30 p.m. on Monday, "Gespenster" Phantoms (Ibsen) will be the attraction.

£150,000,000 FOR IRISH HOUSING.

A letter reported to have been sent from London by Alderman J. Kelly, of the Dublin Corporation, to Alderman Thomas Kelly, chairman of the Corporation Housing Committee, states that an arrangement has been completed with a large trust composed of Americans and Scotsmen for the advance of 150 millions for purposes of housing in Ireland. The money will be repayable from the rates at 5 per cent. per annum within 50 years. Alderman Kelly has also obtained a sum of two millions for the development of Irish shipping.

FINSBURY PARK MURDER.

When the Finsbury Park murder case was before the magistrate on Tuesday Henry Ball, the occupier of the house where Lucy Nightingale was found gagged and strangled, was discharged on a charge of being an accessory after the fact, and Harold Horatio Morgan, 19, took his place in the dock on a coroner's warrant, charged with being an accessory before the fact. With him is associated Frank George Warren, charged with the murder.

Ball entered the witness-box and said he was too drunk to know what happened at the house. The next thing he saw was the deceased lying on her back upstairs in the front room.

Olive Parton, the woman who came from Cardiff with Warren and Morgan, was recalled and identified Morgan.

The hearing was adjourned.

ULSTER CAMPAIGN.

The new Ulster Unionist campaign to defeat the Home Rule conspiracy will begin on September 2, when the Ulster Unionist Council will meet in Belfast to consider the new situation. Sir E. Carson will be present, and will afterwards make a tour of the Province.

TAKING IT EASY.

BRITISH SHRINKING COAL OUTPUT.

While all authorities continue to urge greater production if Great Britain and Europe are to escape calamity, the output of coal at home continues to fall. Over 7,600,000 hours were lost in the South Wales coalfield during the 12 months ended July 12 last.

The statement is made by Mr. F. A. Gibson, secretary of the Monmouthshire and South Wales Coal Owners' Association. The statement relates to persons employed underground, and Mr. Gibson states that the maximum number of attendances possible during the 12 months was just over 53,000,000, and it is out of this total that the 7,600,000 hours were lost.

Strikes and Absenteeism.

The output per attendance, the coalowners' secretary says, has also steadily declined, and the tendency towards diminished output per person has increased as the number of persons employed has grown.

The output lost owing to strikes and avoidable absenteeism has, Mr. Gibson says, steadily increased each quarter in the last 12 months from 1,103,339 tons to 1,464,870 tons.

There are, however signs of an awakening sense of responsibility. At a meeting of the Welsh Anthracite Miners Association, at Swansea, on Saturday, 13,000 men being represented, the need for the maintenance of coal output was impressed upon the meeting, and it was pointed out that a further reduction of working hours would be impossible.

FRENCH COAL PROBLEM.

The coal problem is still more serious in France than it is in England, and threatens to come to a head even before the winter.

The electric power stations have been obliged to limit the power produced, and certain electricity works have even informed a number of factories in the Paris region that they may only be able to supply the necessary amount of electric energy between certain fixed hours. It is not only a question of a scanty coal supply, but also of bad coal.

The strictest public economy in light and heating will be necessary. The underground railway trains are running at a reduced speed, and occasionally provide such halting means of transport that they merit the definition, lately given to the underground service by a Paris newspaper, of "a perpetual breakdown."

TRAMWAY WORKERS' DEMANDS.

Trouble in connection with the tramways is threatened, the Transport Workers' Federation having made financial demands, which the employers have practically refused. The dispute affects all the tramway undertakings of the country, including those of the London County Council.

The Co-operative dispute has been settled, a compromise having, it is stated, been agreed to.

WARNING TO LABOUR.

The Management Committee of the General Federation of Trade Unions have issued a warning to workers, in which they state the months from November to May next will be tragic unless sanity returns and production increases.

FATAL LANDSLIDE.

By the falling in of the side of a granite quarry at St. Sampson's, Guernsey, the garden and outhouses of a dwelling were engulfed, and an old woman of 84 was killed.

Mrs. Martin the victim, while walking in the garden, waiting for her husband, was caugth in the landslide and buried. There seems to be no possibility of reaching her body in the debris, as some of the slabs of granite weigh hundreds of tons.

It is estimated that the slide, which covers an area 300ft. long by 70ft. wide, weighed 10,000 tons, and will take two years to clear.

TROOPS FOR ULSTER.

The "IrishNews" states that it is intended shortly to send to Ulster 15,000 to 20,000 additional troops, the reason assigned being that the men are to be trained there. The paper understands, however, that they will consist largely of trained troops from other parts of Ireland who will be replaced by troops from England and Scotland.

EXTRADITION.

In the next two months a number of officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers, accused of cruelties in Luxemburg, will have to appear before a Court-martial at Nancy. Amongst them is the Crown-Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria.

STATE SUGAR.

It is announced that the Imperial Government have purchased 175,000 tons of sugar from Mauritius at £51 per ton. This is double the price of South African sugar and nearly four times as much as the pre-war rate.

On receipt of the Allies reply to the Austrian counter-proposals, Dr. Renner will leave Paris to submit a reply to the Austrian Government and a party of leaders of the National Assembly. The interview will take place at Feldkirch, half way to Vienna.

OPPORTUNITY.

There is a famous statue in Greece, a relic of her past glory, which represents a youth with winged sandals, and a head devoid of hair, except for one tuft in the centre of his forehead. This strange figure is the wonderful creation of an old Greek sculptor in representation of Opportunity.

Opportunity is like a youth with the speed of the wind; at the same time, being quite similar also to the old impersonation in that while that Greek youth was alleged to be vulnerable to attack only by some one seizing him by the hair, so, that hair being in the front, it was only possible for a would-be obstructor to catch him by meeting him in the front.

An opportunity can only be met once; to take advantage of it, one must be quick and alert, so that it does not pass by.

We judge a man by his ability to make full use of every opportunity. We do not gauge a soldier by his knowledge of Infantry Training Rgs., but by his resourcefulness and alertness to grasp every opportunity afforded him when in action.

The boxer who wins the fight is not always the man who can hit hardest, but rather he who can see at a glance every possible opening, and use his knowledge to the full extent.

We are in the Army, and many are often inclined to "grouse" at the fact. There are, certainly, little discomforts and annoyances, but every day brings with it many opportunities which we, in our blind fits of discontent, may be missing, and allowing to pass unnoticed.

There are many who have not yet realized the opportunity placed in their way of seeing some of the most beautiful country in Europe. They do not realise that they are in a land about which Byron wrote in his "Childe Harolde," and which owns the most romantic collection of ruined castles and legends connected with them, in the world. Even if they did realize the fact, some people would fail to be impressed. The opportunity confronts us of visiting and seeing some of the most wonderful places in the world, and those who neglect to avail themselves of it will surely regret it.

Another opportunity which confronts us is of self improvement. Though we do not realize it, we have illimitable spare time in the Army, and every opportunity of using it to the best advantage. Many of us will not have that time when we return to civil life, and so we each want to make the best of the present advantages.

The greatest reason after all for grasping these opportunities of self improvement is not merely to pack one's head with miscellaneous knowledge. Is it not, indeed, to give us a new interest in life? A well organised mind can conquer any environment, just as the old lines read:—

"The mind is its own place, and of itself.
Can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven."

We do not know what circumstances we may have to pass through in the days to come, but by seizing every opportunity, however small, of improving ourselves, we are strenghthening our moral and mental capacities, and are ensuring for ourselves more successful careers in the future.

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

IX. TREVES.

Treves, which the Germans call Trier, is four hours in the train from Cologne, but the scenery all the way makes the journey one of the objects of the excursion. On a line which winds like a scenic railway the train meanders through the lovely valleys and gorges of the volcanic Eifel, past pretty little towns like Gerolstein (where the Grand Duchess came from) and absurd robber castles perched theatrically on their crags, and the River Kyll which accompanies you grows bigger and more boisterous until it loses itself in the calm largeness of the Moselle.

Treves is altogether a delightful town, with none of the disagreeable efficiency of most German cities. There is a pleasant air of rest and slatternliness about the old streets which reminds one of France, and the people on the whole have an easy-going and civilised appearance. And that brings me to the Roman remains.

At the back of a Roman's mind was always the thought that humanity, the little sunlit patch around the Mediterranean, might any day be overwhelmed by the dim masses of barbarians swarming in the middle of Europe. Roman armies made France safe, and Germany up to the Rhine. Roman roads spread over the new country as railways do now, trade followed, cities and camps and farms were built, demobbed soldiers settled on the land, and native Gauls and Germans took to Roman ways. You can see the life of these people on their gravestones in the museums of Treves, Mayence and Cologne—banquets, a school, a kitchen, a lady at her toilet, tenants paying rent, and barges laden with barrels of Moselle wine. But beyond the Rhine and the bridgeheads (Deutz was one) which protected all this peaceful activity there remained the unconquered German tribes.

At the centre of roads leading to Metz and Rheims and Mayence and Cologne, with the river to Coblentz, Treves soon became a great place. Far away from the front line you could feel as safe as in Italy, and the streets spread beyond the crumbling earth rampart, and there were country houses all along the comfortable hillsides of the Moselle, and the town was full of public buildings and baths and theatres, and at last became the capital of the Roman Provinces of Germany and France.

You can still see two of the huge bath establishments. The great brick masses of the one which is wrongly called the Palace of the Caesars (Kaiserpalast) give some idea of the size of the building, but you must imagine it covered with marble and grey stone and fairly bristling with statues. Of the baths by the river only the foundations remain, but each room has been labelled with a letter indicating its purpose.

A good deal is left of the amphitheatre, where circuses and shows of gladiators and wild beasts took place. Underneath are the cellars from which the lions and scenic effects and so on were hoisted into the middle of the arena through a trap-door. The present Protestant church is an old Roman building, with the original brick walls and round-arched windows and a bit of marble floor. It may have been a church all along, for the Roman Empire was Christian when it was built, or it may have started, like the basilicas from which our churches originated, as a public hall or market with a round apse at the end where judgments were given. Parts of the Cathedral are also Roman. The piers of the Moselle bridge are Roman; until the coming of the railways this and the Roman bridge at Coblentz were the only bridges on the Moselle in German territory.

But the Germans on the other side of the Rhine were beginning to stir; already bands of raiders came up the Moselle towards Treves and there had been an unpleasant occasion when the population had had to take refuge in the amphitheatre. Towards 300 A.D. walls were built around the city, and the famous Porta Nigra was set up, the black North Gate, looking down the valley roads by which the enemy might come.

It is a sternly practical building (the carvings inside were done centuries later when the Gate was used as a church) built on the usual plan: if the enemy got through the outer door he found himself caught in a narrow space with another door in front of him and Romans pouring hot painful fluids on his head from the windows above. The town walls were joined to the old amphitheatre, so that it could be used as a gate if necessary, one door being left inside the circuit and the other outside.

But all these defences were useless in the end. The danger grew more instant, the government left the town and was set up in Arles, away in the south of France, and at last the numberless hordes came pouring over the Rhine and over the cities of Rhineland and over all the Western world. AGRIPPA.

AT THE SIGN OF THE THISTLE.

It is not an inn although before our Army of Occupation arrived in Cologne much sparkling beer and wine flowed there. It was then a hotel and restaurant now the Scottish flag—Saint Andrew's Cross—flies over the main entrance.

The Jocks love it for to them it is a little bit of bonnie Scotland, but all the boys, whatever their nation or religion, are welcomed there.

Its official title is "The Scottish Churches Soldiers' Club"; its number is 84, and its locality Schildergasse. How fitting it is that the flag of old Scotland should proudly float in the very heart of the capital of Rhineland, where the busy, teeming multitudes can see it every day!

The Jocks were great fighters during the campaign and now they walk about as if Cologne and Rhineland belonged to them, but that is as it should be for they scorned every discomfort and hardship in the old days and did their bit to bring victory.

The building itself is not so elaborate or beautiful in architecture as some of its sister institutions, but it throbs with life. How loving is the welcome you receive! How kind are the six ministering angels who attend to your needs!

Whether they are all of the land of the thistle I know not, but this I know, they are as sweet as the heather and as beautiful as the Scotch bluebell. You can see them toiling there from morn till night seven days a week, and through many weary war years they have served in hospital and hut, and earned the undying gratitude of countless numbers of weary homesick men.

Come with me and have a peep inside the portals of this home from home! On the ground floor is a big restaurant with little round tables and numerous chairs. It is generally crowded with men. There is also a well-stocked canteen. At the back is a little room for the workers where the daughter of a former Lord Mayor of London keeps the pot boiling and sees to it that her household is well provided for.

Upstairs you have the reading and writing room, where paper is provided and men read of love and write love letters of extra special sweetness.

Then there is the well stocked library and the quiet room where men can study and meet the chaplains. Here many chaplains used to gather for a conference each week and get up steam for the Sunday and likewise have a time of good fellowship. Many brilliant and thoughtful addresses have been listened to in this room. Then there in the hall where popular services are held on Sunday evenings. How the men love to attend! The old hymns are sung with great fervour and go echoing down the busy street. I shall never forget hearing these men sing "Lead Kindly Light" one evening. It was a benediction.

On Sunday afternoons too a Welsh Service is held which is a novel feature and greatly appreciated. There is also a mid-week service on Thursdays. The genial and warm-hearted superintendent, the life and soul of this club is the Rev. F. A. Lendrum, who hails from Glasgow. He is a man who loves to feel the throb of the world's great heart and ever ready to help our men in every way.

In addition to the Cologne Club there are eight others in Rhineland; Godesberg, Düren, Zons, Dormagen, Widdershoven, Buir, Stommeln and Bedburg. All these are centres of real usefulness and under the direction of one of Scotland's famous men whose Headquarters are at Lindenthal — Mr. George McAlpine, Secretary of the Young Men's Guild of the Church of Scotland. We salute the flag of Scotland and these warm-hearted representatives of a great country.

THE PHOTOGRAPHER.

Vic was asleep. That, in itself, was not surprising as he usually is in a state of somnolent inactivity. As, however, I wanted his advice, I awakened him by tapping him gently on the head with a boot. He was annoyed. Candidly, he was more; he was downright rude.

"Cease your senseless moaning" said I, "Listen to the words of your uncle who wants to acquire fame and get into the papers. The trouble is I don't know what to write about."

"You're more likely to acquire brickbats and get into hospital," he said roughly, "but as you're such an expert photographer, why not write 'em a few Hints and Tips?"

I was on the point of "dispersing" him, but remembering how useful he is in carrying me home on Peace-nights, desisted. To come to the point; it all happened in the following manner. I'd walked into the camera-merchants' and said in a casual sort of way;—"Fräulein ich möchte gerne eine Kamera kaufen." The resulting flood made me think I'd got my sentences mixed and had asked her for a loan by mistake. However, we made it up and I walked out with a beautiful camera complete with lens and all the necessary levers and knobs.

"Vic" I said, proudly exhibiting my purchase, "I'm going to take photos of all the curiosities in these parts, and you, being a suitable 'object,' I'll make you No. 1." I took his picture; in fact I took many more. I also took the camera home on leave with me, and during the fortnight, went about the country recklessly snapping everything that wasn't quick enough to get away. Connie was most enthusiastic about it and said she would get the films developed at a good place where they wouldn't be spoilt.

Soon after my return to duty, a package arrived and a letter. Eagerly I opened the letter and as I read the lines, I had that funny, sinking sensation one gets in moments of stress. "I love the snaps Jan" wrote Connie, "they're dears; but why on earth did you take five dozen pictures of that one particular fog?"

"60 pictures of a fog" grinned Vic; "better sell the "obscura" and start collecting cherry-hogs . . .

I walked into the mess that evening with assumed cheerfulness. "Anybody want to buy a camera?" I asked in my most salesman-like manner. Stony silence greeted my offer, the only sound being a subdued gurgle from Vic; and as it dawned on me that the remainder of the mess were amateurs I absently fingered a beer-bottle intent on reproving him. But he'd already disappeared. The camera, however, will not escape; I'll send it home to young Peter (aged 10). Its ultimate fate will then be assured. E. J.

Sir,—Re grants' for Universities for soldiers, can any of your readers give me information on the following: (a) What are the qualifications for such grants? (b) What is the amount of the grant? (c) Can a soldier still serving apply for a grant or must he wait until he is demobbed? L.A.K.

THE "TOTE."

Sir,—If "Habitual Racegoer" would take the trouble to inspect the sheets posted up by the Totalizator near the paddock at the Cologne Racecourse he could see for himself the exact way in which the Totalizator is worked and also the amount deducted (10%). ASTOUNDED.

Sir,—For the information of "Habitual Racegoer" and speaking for the Cologne Races at Merheim only, may I point out that at the meetings on July 10th and 12th, 16 2/3 per cent. was deducted from the stake money; at the Cavalry Division Races on August 2nd and 5th, 10 per cent., and at the meeting, August 23rd, 10 per cent. Next Saturday 10 per cent. will again be deducted.

WHAT A LADY THINKS.

Sir,—I cannot resist telling you how much I enjoy and appreciate your interesting little paper, of which I am a constant reader. And especially admire your Tommies, who seem, even nowadays, healthy and clear minded enough to find pleasure in wholesome and innocent amusements.

That they are not too narrow to frankly and candidly praise and appreciate things worthy, even in the enemies' country, is so refreshing.

Hoping your paper may long continue to flourish, I am.

"CEREMONIES OF THE GERMAN CHURCH."

Sir,—The paragraph under the above heading is full of curious ideas. The ceremony mentioned is one used by the Catholic Church, which is universal throughout the world, while I would point out that the German Church is Lutheran in character.

The "choirboy" was nothing of the kind, but simply and solely an attendant to the priest. The lantern and bell were used so that the faithful might duly venerate the Host as the priest carried it by in the pyx or silver vessel.

The last Sacrament is thus carried to the dying in all countries, and the same ceremony may be seen in England.

B.M.C.

OFFER TO PLAYGOERS.

Sir,—I was pleased to read "N.C.O.'s" letter of appreciation. It is particularly gratifying as it is our chief aim to interest and entertain other ranks.

I quite agree with him and further letters would be most welcome especially if the writers would put forth suggestions as to any play they would wish us to produce or revive. I will, as far as possible, fall in with the requests of the majority.

For obvious reasons we cannot do many plays demanding a big cast and if I am to produce "Abraham Lincoln," the greatest achievement of the present London season and, in my opinion, the most remarkable play since the war, I must forgo the production of "Strife," Galsworthy's great strike play. Playgoers of the British Rhine Army which is it to be "Abraham Lincoln" or "Strife."?

Providing we are here long enough I wish to give an Elizabethan, an old English comedy, or a Restoration play. Either "The Merry Wives of Windsor," "Twelfth Night," "The Merchant of Venice," "School for Scandal," "The Critic," "She stoops to Conquer," or "The Way of the World." This is where a plebiscite, as it were, would be a desirable course to adopt.

"Julius Caesar," I fear I cannot contemplate doing as I, at first intended, for an adequate production of such a play would create too big a vacuum in the audience. Generous and appreciative patrons our true intent is all for your delight.

S. L. PERCY
LIEUT. O i/c B.R.A.D.C.

CABARET OR — —?

Sir,—The concensus of opinion seems to run so strongly in favour of open-air drinking that it is refreshing to find someone with originality enough to hold a different opinion and courage enough to declare it.

I cannot altogether agree with "Private Bar," however. He confuses the issue somewhat. His argument is not so much concerned with open-air drinking as with the difference between public drinking and privacy, which is largely a matter of humour. Mood would be a better word. In this hot weather, a snug would be stuffy and uncomfortable; and one could ensure privacy outside just as well by merely moving one's table away from the others. But the idea of privacy is not common to the majority. Man is mostly a gregarious animal.

In my opinion, there can be no question that the open-air beer-garden is far pleasanter and healthier than a bar or public drinking-room, with its stuffy and smoke-laden atmosphere.

As to the question of music, that too is a matter of taste. It is certainly sheer torture for a musical ear to listen to "Good-bye, my Bluebell," "By the side of the Zuyder Zee," and similar ancient ballads ground out by alleged violinists or a blaring electric organ. Still, they suit the majority and for the more fastidious ear there are plenty of other places with quite decent orchestras.

I must say that "Private Bar's" attitude seems a little bearish. If he cannot have the music he wants, he does'nt want any. If he cannot surround himself with an armour of aloofness, undisturbed by the common herd, he would prefer to stay at home. I should have thought this last few years amongst races of freer and more open manners, would have relaxed some of his insular stiffness. That has been the effect on most of us who have been any length of time on the Continent. It has, at least, on R.G.A.

ENGLISH FOOTBALL.

Soccer Season Commences On Saturday First.

PLENTY OF GOOD SPORT.

The "Peace" football season opens on Saturday when the opening games for the big clubs should supply plenty of good sport, especially for London. Newcastle United will be on view at Highbury next Saturday, whilst Sunderland visit Chelsea on September 1. There could be no better exponents of the game to introduce the season, and both the Arsenal (despite the extensive alterations for the benefit of their supporters) and the Chelsea grounds should be taxed to the utmost as regards accommodation.

In the Second Division, Londoners will have the opportunity of seeing one of the newly-elected League clubs on the opening day, namely South Shields, who are the opponents of Fulham and are keenly bent on promotion. West Ham will entertain Lincoln City; but the Hotspur partisans will have to wait until the following week to welcome their team, when they are due to try conclusions with Leicester City. This will be the first game on the White Hart Lane enclosure.

NORTHERN UNION MATCHES.

The opening of the Northern Union programme earlier than in pre-war days found twenty-four teams engaged, and the majority were very little behind pre-war standard strength, though, with hardly any serious football during the last four years, it was evident that it will be some time before players find their real form.

Next Saturday's Northern Union matches are as follows:—Barrow v. Salford, Batley v. Warrington, Wakefield Trinity v. Bramley, St. Helens Recreation v. Bradford Northern, Broughton Rangers v. Wigan, Leeds v. Dewsbury, Hull v. Huddersfield, York v. Hull Kingston Rovers, Widnes v. Halifax, Swinton v. Hunslet, Leigh v. St. Helens, Oldham v. Rochdale Hornets.

"FOOTER" FRIENDLIES.

"B" Siege Park Workshops v R.A.S.C. attached 63rd Bde R.G.A.

This match was played on the Workshop's ground at Mulheim. The Brigade soon took the play into their opponent's half but nothing developed. Great enthusiasm prevailed among the large number of spectators and inspired by their support the teams played extremely well, despite the great heat. The Workshops made a number of attempts to break down the defence of the Brigade but L/Cpl Dean and Cpl Light were impregnable and Griffen in goal had an easy time.

The Brigade were showing good form and kept up a constant pressure on the Workshops but their efforts were frustrated time after time by the excellent play of the goalie, Pte. G. Brown. At length the Brigade scored through Bedford and shortly afterwards the Workshops equalised as a result of clever play on the part of Calderbank, their outside left.

The Brigade continued to press but the Workshop "keeper" was not to be beaten and the whistle went, a very clean and exciting game ending in a draw of one goal each.

"B" Siege Park Workshops v 13th M.A.C.

Played on the Workshop's Ground on Monday evening. The M.A.C. won the toss and decided to let the Workshops play against the light. They started off at a great pace and kept up considerable pressure the whole of the first half. The Workshop team fell to pieces under the assault so that the M.A.C. made quick scoring and netted four before the whistle blew. The M.A.C. forwards were very smart on the ball and had, in addition, a very good defence.

When play resumed, the lead was taken by the Workshops who considerably hustled their opponents. Bradburn, who had made many attempts to score, at last had his opportunity. He ran through and cleverly beat the M.A.C. backs. He shot at close range giving the goalie no chance. Shortly after, Gunner Hart at outside right ran the ball down the field and placed a splendid centre, Calderbank neatly heading into the net.

Excitement was now very high; the Workshops had considerably stiffened. The M.A.C. tried several runaways, but the referee—Lt. Barker—had to pull up most attempts due to a tendency of the forwards to get offside. Towards the end of the match M.S.M. Phipps, for the Workshops booted a ball just inside his opponent's penalty area. It was pounced on by several of each side and in the scrimmage that resulted, Darling, playing centre forward for the shops, rescued the ball and placed it in the net.

No additional score resulted, although both sides made great efforts. The M.A.C. ran out winners by five goals to three.

Married v Single.

A football match between the married and single R.A.M.C., resulted in a draw and the match is to be replayed at a later date.

South Wales Hockey.

At the annual meeting of the South Wales Hockey Association at Cardiff, Sir J. T. D. Llewellyn, Bart., was re-elected president, Mr. A. L. Goldsworthy hon. treasurer, Mr. P. J. Adams, (Barry) hon. secretary. The following representatives were elected on the International Selection Committee: The Rev. H. L. James (Swansea), Messrs. F. A. Thomas, T. Hellier, L. Goldsworthy, and J. R. Williams. The question of reduced fares for players was discussed.

London Swimming Tourney.

The annual Port of London swimming tournament will this year take place at the Old Kent-road Baths on Monday, September 15. The programme will include a 75yds. open handicap, the first prize being a canteen of cutlery value £5. A similar event for seamen and river workers carries four cash prizes and four others. There is also a 50yds ladies' handicap and 50 yds scratch race for boys under 16, and a team race.

COUNTING OF POINTS.

Questionable Improvement In New Championship Method.

Writing on the subject of the new method of counting points in the English County Cricket Championship, "Tristram" in the "Referee" says:—

I am not at all sure, that the new method of counting points in the Championship is much of an improvement. Five points are to be given for a win outright; two points to the side leading on the first innings in an unfinished match; honours to be reckoned on the percentage of the results obtained to the points obtainable. The margin of points for a win remains a good bait, but I fail to see the justice of awarding two points for a lead on the first innings in a drawn game and ignoring altogether the claim of the other side. I have no use for moral victories. In a drawn game the performances of both teams may be of equal merit, and as the prime objective is a win the obvious alternative is to divide the points.

There also again arises an inducement to make a half-way house in the Championship and to minimise the importance of a win. There is, of course, some merit in a first-innings lead, but the game is at that stage only half over, and a team is no more entitled to two points for leading then than that a punter should expect a bookmaker to pay a proportion of the odds because a horse happens to be leading at Tattenham Corner. In a boxing match a verdict on points is right enough, because the referee has all the facts of the entire contest before him. In cricket every possible inducement should be offered to obtain a finished match, and, to my way of thinking, it might be better to ignore drawn games altogether.

CRICKET PROFESSIONALS' PAY.

At a meeting of the County Cricket Advisory Committee this week a resolution was passed stating a decision was desirable as to a standard rate of pay for professionals for first-class matches in 1920.

Caledonians Club Revived.

Owing chiefly to the energy and enthusiasm of Andrew T. Ralston, the popular London Caledonians Club has been revived, and will open their thirty-fourth season next Saturday week in an Isthmian League match against the Casuals at Tufnell Park, with very encouraging prospects of a successful year.

ARMY ATHLETES.

A.G.S. Members In Tip-Top Form At Byfleet.

KEY TO PERENNIAL YOUTH.

At the Vickers (Weybridge) A.C. Meeting (briefly reported yesterday), two Army athletes, S. Usher and A.E. Heaver both of the A.G.S. did remarkably well.

The pride of the running world appeared on the track, and during the meeting Sir John Alcock, the hero of Atlantic flight, judged the women's tug-of-war.

It goes almost without saying the chief interest gathered round the 100 yards open handicap, and in this event the sprint champion, W. A. Hill, running with a grand, workmanlike action, got second from scratch to the Army man, S. Usher, This versatile performer, receiving four yards, won by half a yard in 9 4-5 seconds. Either the course or the time keeping appeared to be somewhat at fault in this event, for Hill had won his heat easing up in ten seconds dead.

Always Fit.

Usher is a wonderful athlete, who has seen years of service, but who, like many another member of the Army Gymnastic Staff, is always fit. The number of men approaching the veteran stage in the A.G.S. who maintain tip-top form points to the military system of physical training being the key to perennial youth.

Another striking example is the case of A.E. Heaver (A.G.S.), who is running as well as ever, and who carried off the quarter mile open handicap, with a start of 26 yards, in 47 1-5 seconds.

THE CESAREWITCH.

Will Manton Furnish The Ultimate Favourite.

Those enterprising bookmakers who are already laying tempting prices for the double event of the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire have done a thriving business. They have had very little "dead meat" so far, as nearly all the horses which were picked for the autumn handicaps before the appearance of the weights have been nominated. Quotations are now appearing for the two big handicaps, and on a list which I have before me the favourites for the Cesarewitch are Air Raid, Buckthorn, He, King John, Silver Bullet, and Warwick. All these are marked at 20 to 1. The next batch comprises Chuette, Furore, Golden Fleece, Gay Lord, Good Night, Langdon Hills, Queen's Square, Silonyx, Tangiers, and Trestle at 25 to 1.

For my part I can see nothing particularly fascinating in these prices writes Tattersall in the "Sunday Express." It is always delightful to beat the market, but with a few exceptions we ought to be able to get good prices about the horses I have named, up to within a few days of the race. He is a very clever man who can foretell the ultimate favourite for the Cesarewitch before the weights are compiled, but we all have our individual ideas on the subject, and my own notion is that Manton is as likely as any stable to provide the best backed horse on the day of the big long-distance handicap.

FRESH DRIVING RECORDS.

Further Achievements By Mr. Walter Winans at Barking.

At Barking on Monday, Mr. W. Buckley's Jerry M., driven by the owner, was opposed by Mr. Lincoln Reed in a 100 yards race, standing start. The horse was off the mark as quickly as his opponent and won by 10 yards in 9 4/5 secs.

At the same place Mr. Walter Winans created fresh British-bred driving records of 40 seconds for ¼ mile and 2 mins 43 secs for the mile with his pacer, The Elf; also a mile trotting record (with speed wagon) of 2 mins 52 secs with Discord.

U.S. AMATEUR GOLF.

Mr. S. Davidson Herron, of the Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, won the United States Amateur Golf Championship by defeating Mr. Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, by 5 up and 4 to play in the final round of the championship match at the Oakmont Country Club. Herron won mostly by superior putting.

4,878 Pigeons in Swindon Race.

Something like 1,500 fanciers competed in the homing pigeon national race flown from Swindon last week-end, and 4,878 birds were race-marked for the event.

Fanciers supported the race in no half-hearted manner, and the result was a sum of £1,350 in prizes, which is a record for any young-bird pigeon race.

And

174 Siege Battery v. Lowland Div. M.T. Coy. at Kalk (93rd Bde. R.G.A. ground).

Matches will commence at 14.00 hours. Umpires will be chosen by Sports Editor, Cologne Post.

77 SIEGE BTY. (54) v. 73 BDE. R.G.A. (39) at Godesberg. For the winners Mills played a fine innings for 22 not out and Bdr. Telling 13. Capt. Brettell was top scorer for the Bde. team with 19 to his credit. Fenton took 4 wickets for 4 runs and Garmonsway 5 for 23. Hardwick took 4 wickets for 18, Birtwistle 4 for 22 and Copley 2 for 8 for the Bde.

HAMPSHIRE REGT. (58 for 2) v. 51st ROYAL WARWICK REGT. (54). For the Hamps Sergt. Hampton (20 not out) and 2/Lieut. H.C. Bridger (19) were the chief scorers. R.S.M. Baldwin, and Sergt. Rowe bowled unchanged and Sergt. Griffiths (19) of the Warwicks was the only batsman to resist.

52 BN. ROYAL WARWICKS (46) v. 53 ROYAL WARWICKS (39). The scoring was very poor: Pte. Speed for the 52nd took 5 wickets for 7 runs and Lieut. Rowe also bowled well.

OTHER RESULTS.

53rd Northumberland Fus. 140; 2nd Bde R.A.F. 51.

Maps 4 F.S. Bn. were, in error, shown as sixth in the Cologne Northern League. Their record is: P 23 W 48 L 5 D 0 = 36 points. This places Maps F.S. Bn. third in conjunction with London Div. M.T. Coy, and taking into consideration that they are much below strength this is a very creditable performance.

Dumplings and Rugger.

The handling code in Devonshire during the coming season promises to be as popular as in pre-war days, and the opening on Sept. 6 is being awaited with optimism. At Plymouth a great revival is confidently anticipated, for although, owing to ground difficulty, Devonport Albion have found it impossible to continue, a Plymouth club has been formed quite capable of maintaining the Devonport club's fine traditions, and in addition two other first-class clubs will be found in the United Services and R.N. Barracks.

10,000 MILE TEST "RUN."

The Automobile Association announces that a standard 16 h.p. Sunbeam has been selected for the 10,000 mile "national" benzole test. A start will be made from London on Friday, and the following towns will be visited:—Leeds, Edinburgh, Inverness, Glasgow, Harrogate, Darlington, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Newport, Cardiff, Gloucester, Northampton, Bedford, Newmarket, Norwich, Peterborough, Coventry, Newport, Chester, Oxford, Salisbury, Brighton, Chichester, Basingstoke, Guildford, Tunbridge Wells and Exeter. The engine will be examined both before and after the test by Capt. Arter and the Engineering Dept. of the Automobile Association.

IDEALLY MATCHED.

Beckett or McGoorty?; Factors which will decide.

"BOXING SKILL."

As September 2nd approaches interest in the giant boxing programme being staged by Mr. C.B. Cochran is becoming intensified, the Joe Beckett and Eddie McGoorty fight naturally claiming the major portion of the attention of the boxing world.

This is not merely because the two men are very largely in the public eye at the moment, but also because opinion is so evenly divided as to their merits and their chances of victory. Really these boxers are ideally matched; physically, indeed, it would be difficult to find two big men who bear such close comparison in height, weight, and general build.

The deciding factors in such cases as this are courage, boxing skill, power of hitting, and generalship, though the last two more accurately come under the head of "boxing skill" rather than exist as distinct qualities. It is, for example, very largely a matter of skill in timing, and in judgment of distance and position, which make hitting deadly instead of comparatively ineffective. Men like Beckett and McGoorty do not pick up their punches from the floor when they deliver a knock-out; their blows travel six inches or less, but because of the skill which directs them they are far more to be dreaded than those huge swings which travel yards before they land.

EUROPEAN "WELTER" TITLE.

Honour Held by Albert Badoud of Switzerland.

When a champion of England meets a holder of a French boxing title at the weight at which each excels in his own country, the European championship is usually at issue, but the contest in which Johnny Basham and Francis Charles are to figure on September 2 at Olympia will not decide who is Europe's premier welterweight, as the man who proved himself to stand in that position is still in the game and ready to defend the title he won by decisively beating Basham. His name is Albert Badoud, and he is the only boxer Switzerland can put in the field as a legitimate claimant to fistic honours. Prior to overcoming Basham, Badoud suffered several defeats—two or three at the hands of the English "welter" champion—but it is the result of his last meeting with Basham that counts and the winner of the latter v. Charles will have to beat Badoud to capture the European title.

DEMPSEY CHALLENGED.

Robert E. Martin (heavy-weight champion of the American E.F.) is out with a challenge to Dempsey. Martin (says the "World") has been discharged from the Army, and is now conferring with his manager, James Bronson, of New York, respecting a challenge to fight Jack Dempsey. Martin won the title on July 4 last by defeating Pte. Fay Kaiser, a prominent Army heavy-weight. He also won the Inter-Allied Championship, defeating Capt. Coghill, the Australian champion, by knocking him out in 50 seconds in the first round. Martin also won in a preliminary match from the French Army champion, Journee. He is 21 years old, stands 6ft 2in in his stockings, and weighs 190lb. He was born in Ohio, but enlisted with the National Guard of West Virginia from Erre Alto. He served in France with the 38th and 83rd Divisions.

ANTI-BOXING "PUSSYFOOTS."

Llanelly Free Church Council up in Arms.

Following an appeal by the Llanelly Free Church Council asking the public to refrain from attending the boxing contest which was held on Monday night, a prayer meeting was conducted on Sunday evening, when the ministers declared the good name of the town was imperilled by boxing contests.

One speaker said the craze, which had gripped the country, to see men knocking each other about was deplorable.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

Band-Concert.

On Saturday the band of the 52nd South Wales Borderers gave an enjoyable concert in the grounds of the 42nd Stationary Hospital. Their programme consisted of popular airs and other selections which were much appreciated by the patients who attended in large numbers.

"The Fancies" Farewell.

On Saturday evening the popular Midland Division concert party, "The Fancies" gave their farewell show, prior to departure for England. A most delightful programme was contributed, the artists, without exception, being at their best. Those who have had the pleasure of being entertained by "The Fancies," while regretting their departure, will join in wishing them the every best of everything for the future.

The "Fragments" Again.

The many friends of this concert party will be glad to know that they are again on tour. Demobilization of nine-tenths of the party placed them "hors de combat" for nearly a month but nothing daunted, Sergt. Cavanagh set about reforming at once and he is to be congratulated on the fine show they are now putting up. At present they are touring the Southern Divisional area and paying visits to the outlying villages where they are showing to crowded houses nightly. Delbrück, Burg, Altenberg, Opladen, and Burscheid will be visited during the coming week and the first and second weeks of September will be spent in the London and Lancs Division areas.

Well selected Programme.

The programme consists of well selected variety turns, interspersed with burlesques and sketches. Sid Crossley, the inimitable comedian of Blighty fame, causes roars of laughter every time he appears, and is especially good as the "Mummy." Pte. Greenwood sings "The dear little Shamrock" and Love's garden of Roses" in finished style, while Pte. Welling is very dainty as a servant maid and a red cross nurse. Gnr. Huxter is seen at his best as a coon acrobat and in the comic turn of "Exits," the leading part of which is well sustained by Sergt. Cavanagh. The whole performance of some two hours in length is lively, witty, and humorous throughout and is ably supported by the orchestra of six or seven performers who render up-to-date music in a style worthy of commendation.

Rhine Army Choral Society.

A very pleasant little event took place at the British Empire Leave Club on Saturday evening, when a complimentary dinner was given by the members of the Society to their conductor, Capt. G. Sykes R.G.A. Besides the members of the Society, there were present Rev. F.I. Anderson, C.M.G. A.C.G. of the Rhine Army, Major Greenlees, Scots Guards, Miss Elsa West, Rev. A. Buxton, and Rev. R. French. After dinner and the drinking of the toast to "The King" the A.C.G. in a very happy speech proposed the health of Capt. G. Sykes which was accorded with full musical honours. The Secretary of the Society, L/Cpl. Smith, then presented Capt. Sykes with a bronze reproduction of the "Discus Thrower" and a small sum of money for the purchase of such music as he might like.

Tribute To Choir.

Capt. Sykes in replying, spoke of the work of the Society during the eight months he had been its conductor and said that during the whole of his experience extending over many years he had never trained a keener, more punctual and more pains-taking choir. He strongly recommended all those present, several of whom were going home in the course of a few days, to start similar societies in the towns and villages to which they belonged. A number of part songs were rendered by the choir and the gathering broke up at 10 o'clock.

In Few Words.

The next weekly dance at the Düren Officers Club will be held on Friday, 29th inst. instead of Thursday, the 28th.

JACQUES.

A YACHTING WEEK.

Burnham-on-Crouch Regatta opens successfully.

The Burnham-on-Crouch Regatta, which opened successfully on Saturday bids fair to be one of the must successful events of its kind held this year.

There is to be a week of yacht racing and it is probable that there will be more boats competing than at any of the previous fixtures.

In the ordinary course the western regattas—Weymouth, Plymouth, Torquay and Dartmouth—would have followed the Solent season, which concluded on Friday last week, but as these fixtures were abandoned, all those owners desirous of getting as much racing as possible have come round to the East Coast for the Burnham Week.

Another point of interest is that among the bigger vessels that are competing are those that were taking part in the principal events at Cowes. With one or two exceptions, all the bigger craft that sailed at Cowes were East Coast boats, without which the Solent regattas would have been very tame.

MILE SWIMMING CHAMPION.

In connection with the Valentine Swimming Club a gala was held in Valentine's Park, Ilford, in the presence of a large number of spectators from all parts of the metropolis. The chief event of the afternoon was the mile swimming championship of England under the auspices of the Southern Counties A.S.A. There were five starters. At the outset Frank P. Giles, of the City of London Police, took the lead from R. Murray, of the Amateur Swimming Club, and these two fought it out in very game fashion. Giles led to the half-mile, when he was overtaken by Murray. Giles recovered the lead again, however, and won by 25 yards. His time was 27 min. 8 1/5 sec., Murray's being 27 min. 36 ces.

Army Girl and Sport.

Boxing, wrestling, and football were all introduced to the Army girl, but enjoyed only a short-lived popularity, because the girls had good sense enough to see that although they were quite capable of figuring well at such games, they were unfitted to play them both mentally and anatomically. — F. ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Overheard in a Cologne Cafe.

Two Jocks enter and summoning the waiter one of them said: "Sprecken zie English" "Yah! a leetle" exclaimed the waiter. "A' weel then" said Jock, "Gie's twa aiple tairts, an' twa bottles a' ale an' be quick aboot it!" The look of dismay accompanied by an appealing glance on that waiter's face was a comical study and created much amusement.

Incongruous.

Visitors to the Divisional Cinema in Solingen have often been highly amused by the selections of music played by the German orchestra during the pictures. This remark applies specially during the showing of comic pictures, when generally speaking, heavy plaintive melodies are rendered. The limit was reached the other night, when during the showing of a "Mutt and Jeff" comedy, the orchestra gravely played — the "Dead March!" to the undisguised amusement of the men.

Savings Certificates and Postal Orders.

Pending further instructions, you may not purchase more than twelve £1 War Savings Certificates at any Post Office with the Rhine Army in any one week, unless the certificates are paid for in British currency or by means of a cheque drawn in British currency. The supply of certificates to committees will continue as at present, but the secretaries of such committees will satisfy themselves that not more than twelve certificates are issued through their Associations to any officer or man during one week. This restriction does not apply in cases where British money or cheques drawn in sterling are tendered in payment for certificates. Similarly as regards Postal Orders, noone may purchase an amount exceeding £5 in value in any one day. Issues above £1 may only be made on the certificate of an O.C. Unit.

Sarcastic.

Why is it that in spite of large and prominently displayed notices announcing that "No Cigarettes" can be had, some men will waste their time and that of canteen workers also by asking if there are any to be had. Evidently the workers of the Solingen Y.M.C.A. have had to put up with this type of individual, for yesterday could be seen a huge board announcing "No cigs. to-day. This notice means exactly what it says?"

Donations Thankfully Received.

A party of young guards and Americans were paying a visit to a Cologne church some days ago, and were on the point of leaving when a man beckoned to them, and having got together a small party of interested soldiers, volunteered to show them a few historic relics. He pointed out a few tombs, apparently of dignatories of bygone days, explaining in very unintelligible English the history of each one. At the last one he stopped, and turning to his now rather bored audience exclaimed (in very intelligible English this time), "Allow me to tell you that it is the custom for visitors here to give a small donation to me personally." Evidently another type of war profiteer.

Lesser Echoes.

"D" Coy., 51st Batt. The King's Liverpool Regiment has a pay parade strength of 110 and 107 of these have joined War Savings Association. In four consecutive weeks the sum of £578 3s. 9d was put in (over 46,000 marks).

A correspondent emphasises the difficulty sentries have in recognising the rank of officers, who favour stars and crowns of non-regulation size. He suggests that in fairness to men the insignia of rank should be clearly displayed.

"Nix Schokolade Tommy?"

Tommy — Schokolade! — And your ol' man tryin' ter chivvy us for the last four years.

Commissions to Non-Regulars.

Many enquiries are being received from non-regular officers as to the success of their applications for permanent commissions in the Regular Army. The Army Council regret delay and fully appreciate the difficult position in which many applicants are placed as regards their future careers. It is, however, impossible to make any announcement as to how many commissions will be granted, until future establishment has been definitely decided. At the present moment, the number of officers holding regular permanent commissions is in excess of requirements, but every endeavour is being made to ascertain how many of these officers are desirous of retiring, resigning their commissions, etc., and the Army Council hope, at an early date, to be able to state how many permanent regular commissions can be granted to non-regular officers. The demobilization of an officer will in no way prejudice his subsequent chance of selection, but at the same time, should any officer find that he is no longer desirous of such appointment, the Army Council would be glad if he would notify the War Office to this effect.

For the guidance of officers, the commercial rate of exchange of the day fixed by the Deutsche Bank at 9 o'clock will be posted up in the offices of Field Cashiers. This quotation is for English currency only, and may fluctuate during the day, and is only intended as a guide as to what may be expected from bankers cashing cheques. It must not in any way be compared with the official rate of exchange.

Apropos the "Echo" suggesting trips by motor lorry this has drawn letters of protest from men of the M.T. section of the R.A.S.C. One correspondent puts forward the suggestion that as we are an Army of Occupation, why not utilise German train and tram services to meet the requirements of these trips? and thus give drivers more leisure than at present.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's prizes have been awarded to:—Sgt. H. Warner c/o D.V.S., G.H.Q. Rhine Army; Sig. SPEECHLESS MARRIAGES.

A message from Archangel states that nine soldiers of the American Expeditionary Force in Northern Russia have married Russian women. A singular point to be noticed is that the American soldiers do not speak Russian and their Russian wives have so far found the English language too difficult to learn.

"Daily Press."

I was aimlessly scanning a newspaper and my eye caught the above paragraph. I began to think of those American soldiers married to those Russian women and wondered what kind of married lives they were living. Could they be happy and contented, without being able to communicate to each other their innermost feelings?

I suppose they could talk together and make intelligent observations on food, and weather. They must at least have reached the "par bon, nix forstein" stage. And perhaps after all there is no Russian equivalent for "You are a topping kiddy" or "Darling old thing," and other such terms of affection where intensity of feeling is not governed by what you say, but how you say it.

Such ejaculations could easily be considered superfluous and bordering upon sickly sentiment. After all, actions do speak louder than words. But I came to the conclusion that these marriages must have been based upon physical fascination rather than mental and intellectual understanding.

As my thoughts wandered it struck me that such speechless unions have distinct advantages. If little pieces of isinglass did appear in the matrimonial caviare each party would naturally attribute it to language inefficiency instead of deficiency of affection. What a panacea for all nuptial differences!

The idea reminded me of a fellow I met out East, where it was a crime against British Rule to strike a native. This successful administrator of native labour meted out necessary punishment and yet kept within the law, by giving the offender a sound box on the ear and then roaring with laughter. The blow would undoubtedly hurt and in the ordinary way the native would probably lodge a complaint with the authorities, but when he saw his chief shaking with laughter, he thought it a white man's idea of a joke and laughed too.

How many husbands have raked their brains crooked—the latest Government Reconstruction Pamphlet shows total energy expended—in involving an original excuse for a late night in town? How many have quaked at their spouse's vociferous demand for a lucid explanation as to their recent whereabouts?

These American soldiers will be saved such inquisitions. They can banely reply with the equivalent in the Russian vernacular for "pas compre." What woman would fiendishly continue to wound her husband's pride by making him appear ignorant? She would heave a sigh of resignation, inwardly curse the Tower of Babel, and let the matter drop.

The natural outcome of these international marriages will probably be children and it is regrettable that upon these mites will fall considerable difficulties, demanding more than usual infantile intelligence. Just imagine a promising youth of three years trying to make known its wants in Russian to its mother, and in American to its father.

If one of the parents were only English the child would at least have one articulate language of speech. Of course, there is Esperanto, but unfortunately this dead language is only studied by learned men who never leave their native shores.

In summing up, the speechless Russian-American alliance has advantages of unlimited possibilities, but—I don't think I shall volunteer for Archangel.

THE CORPORAL'S EDUCATION.

Ostensibly I was deep in the pages of "The Cologne Post"; in reality I was eavesdropping. I couldn't help it, conversation attracted me.

"Pater was awfully bucked to hear I had been promoted," the young lance-corporal was saying, "Said he was sure a fellow with my education wouldn't remain long in the ranks. Pater's a doctor you know, — bally clever too; diplomas all over the house, — and he was fearfully cut up when I enlisted, as a private; but I thought it would be an experience to mix with the common soldier. What? Awfully annoying though having to join the army; it does interfere with one's education. Daresay you can sympathize with me old man!"

"I can," replied the thoughtful-looking corporal, "because my own education was also interfered with. You see my father was a gardener, — bally clever too; I remember the little parlour at home was chock full of certificates he had won for growing grapes and onions and things; he was master of his profession and was remunerated to the extent of a guinea a week, cottage and vegetables, and so, when I was twelve years old, my education was interrupted and I had to go to work. For twenty years I worked, and then I joined the army and resumed my education."

"Ha! ha! jolly good joke!" laughed the younger man stupidly.

"Not at all," said the other, "I am serious. My four years' experience on the continent has been a wonderful education to me. I have seen quite a lot of Belgium and France, including Ypres, Arras and Rheims. I have been on the Riviera, picked oranges at Nice; witnessed the glory of a Mediterranean sunset; eaten ice-cream in Genoa; was in Padua the night the cathedral was bombed; and was snowed up at Bussoleno. Now here I am in Germany learning the romantic legends of the Rhine at first hand."

"But apart from having had a long and interesting geography lesson and obtaining a fairly good knowledge of French and German I have made the most of my opportunities to study character and human nature. I have learnt a lot about my countrymen, know a man when I see one, and am more tolerant of fools for, taking a broader outlook on life I realize how little we all know. Yes, I resumed my education when I joined the army and I have been taught by experience that my need is no less the nation's need — education"

"I am convinced that all the turmoil at home is the fruit from the poison tree of ignorance. Feed the brain of the nation and a strong and satisfied people will develop."

"When I go back home I intend to see that my kiddies have that which was denied me for I have concluded that the only way to the palace of patriotism is through the corridor of education."

EX-SERVICE MAN CHARGED.

COMPLICATED EVENTS IN AFTER WAR LIFE OF FORMER C.Q.M.S.

EX-C.Q.M.S. ARRESTED

DISCHARGED IN ERROR, THEN CHARGED AS ABSENTEE.

There was an extraordinary case before the Penge Magistrates yesterday, when an ex-Army Quarter-Master-Sergeant, who was under the impression that he ceased to be a soldier in May, was charged with being an absentee.

The defendant was ex-Company-Quarter-Master-Sergeant Liversedge, of Upper-Norwood, who served in the R.A.S.C. and, in the course of the evidence, an unusual story was told.

The military authorities at Grove Park, it was stated, ordered the Gipsy Hill police to arrest the accused, but they found that he had a protection certificate. Acting upon poli e advice, Liversedge paid repeated visits to Grove Park, but failed to see a superior officer.

Later the police received a telegram from the Records Office at Woolwich, stating that the protection certificate had been issued in error, and that defendant was a re-enlisted soldier. The defendant's solicitor said that after four year's service in France, Liversedge was sent to Mesopotamia, where he offered himself for re-enlistment. He was given to understand that he could not then be definitely accepted and came home on leave and was demobilized at the Crystal Palace in May.

Since then, he had been ordered to return Army Form Z 12, which had been given him, and then Army Form Z 11 had been issued to him. The military authorities had been notified of the case being fixed for hearing added the solicitor, but no representative was present.

Defendant Goes Free.

An hour later the military arrived, just as the chairman of the Bench was on the point of making a ruling in defendant's favour. The officer read a letter which, he said, had been sent by defendant, showing he was on furlough.

In reply to this, the defendant's solicitor said his client had not been paid a penny by the army since May 28th, and had gone into business on his own account. He contended that if the man was on furlough, he would have been receiving pay.

A police inspector complained that they had been made a convenience of by the military authorities and he would refuse to arrest a man again.

The magistrate's clerk pointed out that the trouble had arisen because the Army had discharged the defendant before accepting him for re-enlistment.

When told that the court would refuse to hand the defendant over to the military escort, the officer said he had instructions to take him back. The clerk said that if he did, no doubt the case would be taken to the high court for habeas corpus.

Liversedge then left the court and was not arrested by the military.

BULGARIA'S PEACE.

QUESTION OF SEA OUTLET.

The completion of the Bulgarian Peace Treaty now depends almost exclusively on the lot to be assigned to the former Bulgarian territories bordering the Aegean Sea. Certain Allied Powers favour the handing of the whole over to Greece but the U.S.A. insist that this would be a bad move and would deprive Bulgaria of all outlets to the Mediterranean. A possible solution may be reached by a compromise.

Between Bulgaria as it is coasted before 1913 and the Aegean Sea it is proposed to estcblish an independent state with the port of Dedeagatch. The state is to be under the protection of the League of Nations. It is believed that Greece would have no serious objection.

DENMARK WANTS COAL.

OUR MINERS TO SEE FOR THEMSELVES.

It is learned from Copenhagen that a party of coal miners from Yorkshire, Durham and Northumberland will shortly visit Denmark to satisfy themselves that the export of coal to Denmark must be kept up if the import of Danish agricultural produce into England is to be maintained.

BOMB EXPLOSION IN ITALY.

As the result of the explosion of a bomb store near Brescia, Italy, several soldiers, two children and a civilian were killed and a large number injured.

SIR F.H. SYKES.

The "London Gazette" last night announced that the G.B.E. had been conferred upon Maj.-General Sir F.H. Sykes, late of the Royal Air Force and now on the retired list, for distinguished services to aviation, and invaluable work as Chief of the Air Staff.

BOLSHEVIKS FAIL.

GENERAL DENIKIN MEETS WITH NO OPPOSITION.

On General Denikin's Western Front, the advance is continuing with great rapidity all along the line. It is now confirmed that Odessa was captured by a detachment of Volunteers who after two days bombardment from the Black Sea landed and drove the Bolsheviks out of the town; the latter were forced to retreat in a north-westerly direction towards Balta.

Along both banks of the Dnieper the Volunteer advance towards Kiev is making rapid progress. The Bolsheviks now admit having been forced to retire to Borispol, just over 20 miles south-east of that city, which they are evacuating with great haste.

Denikin's armoured trains, reconnoitring far ahead of his cavalry, are meeting with no opposition and can find no trace of enemy organisation for defence. At the same time, the advanced troops of Petliura, the Ukraine General, have captured Faltov, just over 40 miles south-west of Kiev, the fate of which now appears to be sealed.

Reliable reports state that the Bolsheviks in the whole of the Ukraine are completely demoralized, and it is also stated that the peasantry of the Ukraine hove now lost interest in their national independence and are waiting with eagerness the arrival of the Volunteer Army so that order may be restored, together with such settled conditions as may allow of a resumption of internal and external trade on which depends the prosperity of South Russia.

BELGIUM AND HOLLAND.

SCHELDT FRONTIER WILL BE CASUS BELLI.

The dispute between the Dutch and Belgian delegates, at a sitting of the Commission dealing with the revision of the Treaty of 1839, became so sharp that the Belgians decided to return to Brussels, but at the last moment the French Foreign Office dissuaded them, pending a report from the Dutch Minister in London. This report accuses the Belgians of constantly violating Dutch rights in the Scheldt, and says that Holland will not grant territorial concessions to Belgium and will never permit the Scheldt to become the Dutch-Belgian frontier, because the present frontiers are an outcome of the development of Holland's positive right. Answering the Belgian demands, Holland says that any attempt to enforce the new boundaries by Belgium will be regarded as a casus belli.

At the request of M. Clemenceau, M. Hymans has gone to Paris and conferred with M. Clemenceau, Pichon and Bertholet on the disagreement between Belgium and Holland. The Dutch delegates have left for The Hague in order to confer with their Government.

OIL ON THE WATERS.

SMOOTHING FRANCO-ITALIAN RELATIONS.

The Supreme Council has considered the report of the Inter-Allied Commission at Fiume. It is understood that the report is impartially framed and clearly shows the responsibility for certain incidents. Its publication will improve the relations between France and Italy and will remove all traces of misunderstanding.

U.S.A. AND JAPAN.

The "Petit Marseillais" asserts that President Wilson concluded, two years ago, an agreement with Japan, which has not been published, relative to China. It presents striking analogies to the former Franco-German agreement regarding Morocco. The Japanese and American Governments undertake to promote between their subjects a close economical and financial collaboration in China, whose territorial integrity and independence are guaranteed by the contracting parties.

BERLIN DEMONSTRATIONS.

Four meetings of disabled soldiers were held at Berlin after which a big procession of war invalids was formed to march through the streets. The military authorities having strengthened the guards at the Imperial Chancellery and cordoned off the entrances to the Wilhelmstrasse, the procession proceeded to the palace of the ex-Kaiser, where one of the leaders made a speech accusing the Government of leaving war victims in the lurch. There were tumultuous scenes at the corner of the Charlottenstrasse and Unter den Linden, the troops being hard pressed by the demonstrators, who bore banners inscribed "Brothers, don't shoot." As it was feared that there would be collisions, the military commanders ordered the street to be cleared, whereupon everyone sought cover in the house entrances.

STATE ECONOMY.

ADMIRALTY MEASURES FOR REDUCING EXPENSES.

In connection with the Government's policy of cutting down national expenditure it is announced that every warship of every class on the slips, not actually ready or near readiness for launching, is being considered by the Admiralty and the position from the financial standpoint, is being overhauled.

The Admiralty Financial Secretary, Dr. Macnamara, is conferring with shipyard experts as to whether it is more economical to break up vessels on the slips or complete and launch them. It is believed that, as a result of this policy, very great economies in expenditure will be effected by the Admiralty. Work at Queensferry and all producing factories outside Woolwich has been stopped, also work at the state shipyards at Chepstow, Beachley and Porthbury.

PREMIER WANTS REPORT.

Mr. Lloyd George has addressed a letter to the spending departments, strongly enforcing economy, and asking for a report to be furnished before Parliament reassembles as to the steps taken to that end. A finance committee with Mr. Lloyd George as chairman has been appointed to secure economy, and it is said that enormous results are being achieved.

SPEECH IN SMALL HOURS.

INCIDENT OF THE PRINCE OF WALES' TOUR.

When the Prince of Wales arrived at Toronto he received a tremendous welcome. Despite the long journey he did not seem fatigued and was in splendid spirits. At Government House and the City Hall he received addresses to which he made brief but eloquent replies, emphasizing the part played by the men of Ontario in the war.

For the first time since his arrival in Canada the Prince changed his naval uniform for that of the Grenadier Guards. As he drove through the streets to open the Toronto exhibition thousands of people lined the streets and cheered lustily.

A pleasing incident illustrating the Prince's democratic character, occurred during the journey. While the train was waiting at the small town of Smith's Falls for the engine to be changed, a large crowd gathered round calling for the Prince. It was two o'clock in the morning, and the staff hesitated to break his rest, but he insisted on getting up, and to the great delight of the people appeared on the platform and made a short speech in reply to an address of welcome.

TWO INCIDENTS.

There were two incidents during the public reception of the Prince at Toronto. The first occurred when a small boy in a bathing suit dodged past the policemen and went towards the Prince with extended hands. The police were about to remove the youngster when the Prince, with considerable amusement, said to the boy: "That's a nice cool costume for a warm job."

The second was when two shell-shocked soldiers who had just shaken hands with him fainted. The Prince declined to leave the building until he had visited the two men and assured himself that they were being properly looked after. During the day he enjoyed a sail on Lake Ontario.

AUSTRIAN TREATY.

DELIBERATIONS OF THE SUPREME COUNCIL.

The Supreme Council has continued to examine the terms of the Austrian Treaty. The financial clauses were adopted but the deliberations on reparations were not concluded, various amendments being presented. It is evident that the authorities are trying to be as indulgent as possible in dealing with Austria, but the rights of the neighbouring nations are so strong that the territorial modifications obtained by Austria are few and unimportant. The financial gains, however, are considerable.

The Council did not resume consideration of the proposal for inserting in the Treaty the stipulation binding the Austrian Republic to take precautions to prevent German annexationist propaganda in Austria.

HEIR TO ROUMANIAN THRONE.

The Roumanian Council of Ministers after deliberating upon the act of renunciation made by Prince Charles, decided to recognise Prince Nicholas, his younger brother, as heir to the throne. Prince Nicholas, who was in London, returned at once to Bucharest by the Orient express. He is very popular with the Roumanian army.

BILL FOR ROUMANIA.

The Supreme Council has decided to ask the Roumanian Government to keep an exact account of all the requisitions and forced deliveries of goods carried out in Hungary in order that the amount of these requisitions, etc., may be deducted from the total sum which Hungary will have to pay Roumania by the terms of the treaty which is about to be put in force.

USE FOR ZEPPELINS.

NEW PASSENGER SERVICE IN GERMANY.

The German Aerial Navigation Company, Limited, announces the opening of a daily service between Berlin and Friedrichshafen, on Lake Constance. For this service a special small type of Zeppelin has been constructed. It is about 400 ft. long, has a capacity of 20,000 cubic mètres, and can carry from ten to twelve tons. This type is easily handled, and requires only a small crew. It is provided with four motors, developing about 1,100 horse-power, and giving the airship a speed of 77 miles per hour.

The cabin for passengers can accommodate altogether 25 persons. Plate glass windows permit an undisturbed view in all directions.

At first the passenger Zeppelin will fly from Friedrichshafen to Berlin one day and back to Friedrichshafen the next day, without making an intermediate landing, and 373 miles are to be covered in seven hours. From September 5 the Zeppelins will land at Munich each day. The fare from Berlin to Friedrichshafen or from Friedrichshafen to Berlin is fixed at 400 marks, and from Berlin to Munich or Munich to Berlin 350 marks while in all cases each passenger may have 30 pounds of luggage carried free.

UNLESS SANITY RETURNS.

MR. APPLETON'S WARNING TO LABOUR.

The quarterly report of the General Federation of Trade Unions contains a warning by the Management Committee, signed by Mr. W.A. Appleton. It says: "November, 1919, to May, 1920, will be fateful months: unless sanity returns and production increases they will be tragic months." It points out that the home affairs of the general federation require careful handling. Strikes have been precipitated which might have been avoided. Union funds have been needlessly dissipated.

The report adds: "Some of the strikes have had a distinctly political origin. Political strikes must either fail or end in revolution. They are not against the capitalist, but against the community. It is not the capitalist who suffers, but the people. Against such strikes the Government must protect the people or it must surrender its functions".

"The effect of such strikes is to decrease production and increase the price of all commodities. In view of the national situation and the possibility of a grave shortage, it is imperative that trade unionists should face the facts. The outstanding ones are that the war is over; that competitive laws as between nations are now forcefully operating; that food and raw materials required for the sustenance of the men and women of Britain must be bought from countries over whose merchants our Government has no control: and that these commodities must be paid for with goods, and not paper".

NO MORE SUMMARY SHOOTINGS.

The Germans at a meeting of the Polish-German Commission have agreed that no more summary shootings shall take place in Upper Silesia.

POLITICAL TALKS.

Lord Robert Cecil, who is touring his constituency in North Herts, is engaged in informal chats on the present political problems with workers in factories and in the harvest field, thus ignoring the programme of set speeches. In political talks during the week-end he said, he was afraid he could not prophesy smooth things for the future. The next few months might be very trying, but with patience and forbearance he thought it would be possible to weather the storms we were likely to encounter.

MR. ASQUITH'S FUTURE.

In Scottish Liberal circles it is understood that Mr. Asquith is now ready to re-enter the House of Commons. There is no question of waiting for a vacancy in any Scottish constituency, but it is believed that any suitable seat which falls vacant will be contested by him.

BARON E. DE ROTHSCHILD'S GIFT.

Baron Edmond de Rothschild has informed the Academie des Beaux Arts that he has purchased a residence in London, to be placed at its disposal for the accommodation not only of artists, but of all young people engaged in literary and scientific work. The Academie, in thanking the generous donor, declared that his gift would draw still closer together the bonds of friendship uniting the two countries.

MAGISTRATE'S EXTRAORDINARY CONDUCT.

Thomas Henry Todd, ex-R.M.L.I., who, with his wife and children were turned into the street at Benfleet, has found a temporary refuge. He occupied a four-roomed cottage which the landlord, a farmer, wanted possession of and the magistrates made an ejectment order. When Todd applied to remain a little longer the magistrates refused and told him he could go into the workhouse. Todd took part in the early Ostend landing and in the defence of Antwerp. He served in Gallipoli and afterwards joined an armed merchantman.

ALLEGED FALSE PRETENCES.

EX-OFFICER WANTED TO MANAGE CONCERT PARTY.

At Bow-street, yesterday, another charge was brought against Basil Reginald Jarvis, who is charged with obtaining money by false pretences by offers respecting the managment of concert parties, similar to "The Barnstormers," who entertained the troops.

Arthur Edward Dunmall, of Maidstone, said that in response to andadvertisement for demobilized officers to manage concert parties, he had an interview with the defendant, who said he originated "The Barnstormers" in Egypt. Believing this statem to be true, he agreed to invest £ 50 and received an appointment as acting manager at Yarmouth, at a weekly salary of £ 5.

The agreement provided that his capital should be returned at the end of the season with fifteen per cent profit. He did not go to Yarmouth, as the show was not ready, but was sent to Tynemouth, were no proper arrangements had been made. He got no reply to letters and so returned to London where, failing to find the defendant, he gave information to the police. The hearing was adjourned.

BRIGHTON FRACAS.

FATALITY FOLLOWS AN ALTERCATION.

Late one night, at Brighton, an altercation arose between a number of fishermen and boatmen congregated at the junction of West-street and King's-road. Two of the men were engaged in a desperate fight, and the wife of one of the combatants endeavoured to separate them. Another man engaged in the brawl was dressed as an ordinary sailor. His identity has not been clearly established, but it is believed that he was one of a boat's crew on leave in the town. When the disturbance had subsided the police were informed that two sailors had been seen to throw another man over the cliff rails. The beach was searched, and a man named Alfred Roles, aged about 30, and said to be the son of a fish salesman living in William-street, was discovered lying in a pool of blood. His clothes were torn, and he appeared to have been very roughly handled. A doctor was summoned, but he could only pronounce that Roles was dead. The man's skull was fractured.

The police instituted a vigorous search throughout the night, and this morning succeeded in finding most of the sailors who were staying in the town on leave, but so far no arrest has been made.

GERMANY'S COAL FAMINE.

The "Vorwärts" declares that the alarmist reports of Germany's approaching coal famine are not the whole truth.

At present in the coal districts, despite the greatly diminished amount of work, more coal is obtained than can be transported. In Upper Silesia, owing to the shortage of railway trucks, there has not been for years so much coal piled up about the pits as now.

NOT A GILT-EDGED SECURITY.

The Sinn Fein loan prospectus, an advance copy of which has just been issued states that the issue will be registered certificates to £250,000 with five per cent interest, but not payable until six months after the Irish Republic has received recognition and England has evacuated Ireland. Bondholders will redeem the premium at five per cent within twenty years of the recognition of the Irish Republic. The proceeds of the loan will be used for propagating the Irish cause all over the world, establishing consular services fostering Irish industries, and generally for national purposes.

BISHOP IN MOTOR ACCIDENT.

The Bishop of Liverpool and his wife met with a serious accident on their journey from the North to Liverpool. Close to Low-wood Hotel, Windermere, three motor-cars, one of which was the Bishop's, met, and owing to a skid a collision took place, which smashed the bonnet of the Bishop's car and broke off one of the wheels.

The Bishop and Mrs. Chavasse were flung forward, were much cut about the face and hands, and suffered severe shock and bruising. Fortunately a car belonging to Mr. Hedley was passing at the time, and in it they were taken straight to the Ethel Hedley Hospital at Calgarth, where they were attended to. They were able to go home to Liverpool on Saturday.

SCIENCE CONGRESS.

The annual meeting of the British Association, which opens on September 9th, will be this year remarkable for the variety of the subjects to be discussed, and will be a proof of British scientists' close touch with the practical questions of the day. Many war inventions till now kept secret will be made public and the industrial question and the production of the country will also be debated.

There will also be three papers dealing with archaeological research in distant theatres of war. Two of these deal with Mesopotamia, and the archaeology of the Salonica front will also be treated. It is stated that air photographs have solved many archaeological questions by revealing contours of old towns which had never been located on the ground.

FRUIT CANNING.

WOMAN'S EXPERIMENT AT FARNHAM.

As an example of what can be done with enterprise and a comparatively small amount of capital in the establishment of a fruit canning business in this country, the Board of Agriculture cites the case of a woman living at Farnham Royal (Bucks), who after a course of instruction at the Board's canning kitchen decided to start an establishment, says "The Times." Having collected a capital of £300 she began work in a converted cowshed.

At first she proposed merely to preserve the fruit grown on her three acres of land; but so brisk was the demand for fruit that, in addition to planting two additional acres with fruit, she found it necessary to buy large quantities from elsewhere to keep the depot fully employed. The works have now extended from the original cowshed to seven Army huts, and will shortly be further increased. Last year, after the payment of all expenses, including salaries, of £300 and £200 to the manager and sub-manager, bonus, grant to sinking fund, and allowance for depreciation, the profit was £500.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

SUGGESTED CHANGE OF SEAT FROM GENEVA TO BRUSSELS.

It is reported that the seat of the League of Nations is to be transferred from Geneva to Brussels.

At the Belgian Legation no knowledge is professed of the change, and it is pointed out that no Power has taken any steps to have the choice of Geneva set aside. It is stated, however, that this report is not without foundation and beyond doubt the choice of Brussels would be heartily welcomed in France and approved in Great Britain says "The Times." Both nations have all along considered that this honour justly belongs to the Belgians.

PRICE OF TREASON.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST PARISIAN JOURNALIST.

The "Petit Parisien" has caused a great sensation by publishing a telegram from von Jagow, sent in December 1914 to von der Laucken, the High Commissioner at Brussels, expressing a desire to secure for propaganda purposes the services of Judet, a Paris journalist who had gone to Switzerland. Judet demanded 2,000,000 francs and von Jagow added that for that sum he would put all his strength at their disposal. He asked von der Laucken's opinion.

NURSE CAVELL.

ALLEGED BETRAYER BEFORE COURT-MARTIAL.

At the trial by Court-martial in Paris, of Gaston Quien, accused of betraying Nurse Cavell, attention was paid to prisoner's stay in Brussels. Quien said he was not in need of money and he even helped some of the prisoners escaping with him in the cost of their passage from Belgium to Holland.

He carried out several missions over the whole of Belgium for the benefit of France and he alluded to his services to Colonel Sesprez at Hague.

The president of the Court remarked that for such employment prisoner's stay in Brussels should have been short and full of activity, whereas he stayed there longer than those who were helping him to escape.

The Court was adjourned.

LORD LONSDALE IN MOTOR ACCIDENT.

Travelling yesterday from Lowther Castle, Cumberland to Doncaster, Lord Lonsdale's car collided with a motor char-a-banc at Brough Hill.

Lord Lonsdale's chaffeur turned the car on to the side walk, but could not avoid a collision. The car window was broken and Lord Lonsdale sustained cuts on the hands and head. Happily, however, he was able to continue his journey.

U.S.A. RIOTS.

Three persons are reported to have been killed and fourteen wounded in rioting at Charlottem North Carolina, following a strike of mill operatives.

The city is now under Martial-law and is being patrolled by troops helped by the citizens.

STABLE LADS WANT MORE.

Epsom racing stable lads have held a meeting to discuss whether they should strike. The wages they are receiving were described as scandalous and it was reported that the trainers ignored their demands and refused to meet them. It was decided to approach the Labour Ministry with a view to seeing whether conditions could be improved.

FRATEL OUT ON BAIL.

THE CHURCH ARMY AND YPRES.

The decision to erect a permanent memorial to our glorious dead at Ypres will be commended by all who know that hallowed spot. For ever this ruined city of the salient will have for the English race all the sanctity of a national shrine.

Here, nearly a quarter of a million British soldiers, some from the Mother Country, some from the Dominions, fell fighting gloriously at the call of duty in the Great War.

No other portion of the Western Front claimed such a toll of noble life; no other can have more sacred memories wherever the English tongue is heard.

The City of Ypres and the shell-torn ground of the semi-circle that projects from the Yser marshland to the high ground of Passchendaele and Messines, will stand for all time as a symbol of British heroism, British self-sacrifice, British devotion to a high ideal.

This is a memory that will be an imperishable heirloom of our race. The men who made the supreme sacrifice in order to give the Empire such a memory will have a place for ever in our hearts.

We welcome then the decision to perpetuate their sacrifice in the form of a church and hostel. The work of organisation could not be better undertaken than by the Church Army for during the years of war it planted in this tortured area many huts and institutes, with their accompanying chapels, both above grouud and below, for the use of the men. All will acknowledge the value of these centres of home influence in keeping up the morale of our men in those terrible days. There is, therefore, a special fitness in the same society organising this work of piety and gratitude.

THE INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE.

No one will deny the great strides being made by Esperanto as a universal language. Its study and use is becoming more and more apparent every day. Germans have already made use of it in a very practical manner.

We find in and about Cologne a large number of Germans who are enthusiastically propagating and spreading the knowledge of this language. seeing in it a ready means of promoting international relations both from a commercial and social point of view.

The simplicity of its grammar, the entire absence of dialect, the facility with which it is mastered and the fluency with which it is spoken, are facts, remarkable as they are substantial, which the Germans appreciate and of which apparently they intend to make the fullest use.

Not content with merely agreeing that the idea is a good one, they have made a study of it, recognising its utility, and seeing in it great possibilities.

That it is international and world-wide, used by many well-known firms, and that it also has a growing literature, is well-known by all who have followed its progress during the last twenty years.

Many are inclined, we know, to pass unfavourable judgment, or condemn the language as being impracticable, without first going into the subject and learning it. Without this, one's criticism cannot be fair, nor one's judgment impartial. It is a striking fact that many of its bitterest opponents, having put Esperanto to the test have become its most ardent supporters. Further it is claimed that Frenchmen, Belgians, Germans, and Russians use it, with little variation of accent, and with the same facility except for certain exterior characteristics, while Orientals use the language with equal facility.

It may be argued that such a language stifles patriotism, but this is not so, rather in many cases it has had the reverse effect, producing a better knowledge and a greater love for one's own tongue.

THE KAISER AND BETHMANN HOLLWEG.

SKETCH PORTRAITS.

Von Tirpitz's memoirs extending over 526 pages, form very interesting reading. We have already briefly reviewed the book. It reveals the characters of the Kaiser, Bethmann Hollweg and Tirpitz himself in a new light. Thus von Tirpitz gives us his views on England, his own share in the conduct of the war, and the Kaiser's policy. He writes on Bethmann Hollweg as follows:—28th August, 1915:

"To-day I had an hour's conversation with Bethmann Hollweg and Jagow. I did all I could to infuse some courage into them. Then lunch with the Kaiser, who seemed very satisfied with recent events at the front. Afterwards went for a walk for two hours and talked matters over. I did everything I could to calm him. This time it was not so necessary. His insight and views are correct. If only he had not had Bethmann Hollweg the last few years everything would have gone on better. However, I did not speak against Bethmann Hollweg because I am convinced he is aware of Bethmann Hollweg's shortcomings."

On August 29th, 1914, after criticising the tactics which led to the loss of the "Magdeburg" and the "Mainz," light cruisers, in the Heligoland Bight action, Tirpitz goes on to say — "I cannot convince the Kaiser on these points. Probably he is incensed against me and in these matters especially I have the impression that there is more understanding in my nose than in Admiral Pohl's whole skull. Bethmann Hollweg is working incessantly with Pohl, in order not lose the fleet. This would mean its death after the war. He and the whole of the diplomatic crew wish to sell the fleet after the war to the British. That is the whole secret. I am afraid that the Imperial Chancellor and his entourage are not equal to these great times . . . . . ."

"This war," he writes later, "is the greatest piece of stupidity ever perpetrated by the white race. One nation rains blows upon another on the Continent merely that England may profit thereby, and then she exhibits us to all the world as the guilty party. Naturally we are not altogether guiltless . . . . . If we consider the enormous exertions and capacity for work of the German people one might almost believe it unconquerable. Only the silent pressure of the British fleet is the seriously disquieting side of the matter."

On October 20th, 1914, he writes—"I saw the Kaiser yesterday — he is still the same as ever. It was quite impossible to talk seriously to him." Speaking of Zeppelin attacks on London, Tirpitz remarked that he was wholly against occasional bombing as it merely evoked hate. Only if London were set in flames at 30 different points would hate give way to fear.

On November 20th, 1914, he writes:—"Lunched with His Majesty to-day. I took the opportunity to say that we must reconcile ourselves to the fact that Great Britain would adopt no half-measures, and that we must do likewise. That means the U. Boat blockade. H. M. shared this opinion. By the Constitution the Chancellor is responsible for policy. That renders me practically helpless except in departmental matters. But these do not exist in war time. The General Staff and the Admiralty are entrusted with the conduct of the war and are directly responsible to the Kaiser."

On January 1st, 1915, Tirpitz writes:—"The Kaiser is surrounded by a strong rampart which I cannot penetrate. It is a peculiarity of the Kaiser never to wish to take decisions or to bear responsibilities. On various occasions he stated to Admiral Müller — 'The fleet really must do something at last.' But it is impossible to get him to take a decision. He avoids me although I try to get speech with him wherever and whenever I can."

January 19th, 1915. "Saw the Kaiser yesterday on the U. Boat question. Treutler and Valentini were opposed to this step at first, and asserted that Italy would make it an excuse for declaring war. I advanced the view that neutrals would lose their regard for Germany if she did not attack England. According to the Kaiser's view as well, peace, even a bad peace, was necessary, and he asserted that the strongest nerves would gain the victory. The longer I see policy and leadership of the people in the Kaiser's and the Chancellor's hands, the lower my hopes sink. Nothing but my sense of patriotism keeps me from offering my resignation. After the war I naturally shall do so."

THE R.A.D.C.

A TRIBUTE.

I cannot help thinking that when Addison wrote "'Tis not in mortals to command success, but we, Lempronius, will do more, deserve it," he realized that one day there should arise so brilliant an example that it should cause his "Cato" to be remembered even if it had almost suffered extinction. That example was born some months ago, in Cologne, through the agency of the British Army of the Rhine and lives to-day as "The Rhine Army Dramatic Club."

Jacques has played his part well and encouraged the orchid with tender care from the first, but I think the time has now come when a special tribute is due to this exotic flower of art — and I am, I believe, voicing the general opinion in what I have to say.

First of all I do not think in all quarters it is quite realized what has happened. Has it occurred to everyone that a true repertory movement has been made, that must, and will, educate the playgoers to love the best in art?

One must learn to walk before running is indulged in, and so Lt. Percy, their excellent producer, wisely commenced by presenting a good class of play that attracted his audience, and he, even now is essaying a further step forward.

"The New Sin" brought the people who were out to see a show. It was good, and so they determined to come again, "Candida," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "The Title," all marked progression and still retaining our interest, but for fear that there might be a few laggards on the educational path he marked time for the moment to give them a helping hand, with "General Post." Off we go again with "The Younger Generation," to be followed by "Helen with The High Hand," and "Damaged Goods" — and be it whispered that after that we hear a rumour of "Abraham Lincoln."

I wonder whether the Army knows that in this little company they have their most compelling educational force. Every unit's educational officer should insist on his class attending these productions — what subjects for essays after!

And the company itself. — Well, of course one had heard of Esme Percy as one of the coming actors produced by the Manchester school, and to-day he only awaits his return to London to arrive really and truly. We are indeed lucky to have his services, not only as producer but also as actor, for in himself, he is a tower of strength to the movement. Miss Inez Bensusan adds immeasurably to the success, whilst both Miss Gabrielle Paul and Miss Shirley King are our very own actresses with whom we would not part for anything. We are waiting to welcome Miss Frances Chisholm. The remaining members are too numerous to name individually but nevertheless we thank them for their excellent work.

How often have we heard: — "Repertory, my dear boy, will never pay. It is far above the heads of the British people. They will never support it. — Besides think of all the rehearsals and arrangements for the different productions!"

And this work of the R. A. D. C. is all done in spare time — and making us the only army in history who has possessed its own repertory theatre.

Their new departure in presenting a one act play by one of their own members is well in keeping with their progressive policy. We thank them for their past work, — Good luck to their future.

LIEUT. W. ROBERT PATTERSON F.R.G.S.

This week I desire to warn amateurs against certain dangers with which I have become acquainted.

(1) Avoid, as far as possible, any contact between your fingers and the solutions you use. Some of them not only rot one's nails but also cause peeling of the skin from the finger tips. This might become serious by developing complications should any finger bear a graze or even a slight cut. There exist plenty of appliances and "gadgets" for lifting plates and films from their "baths," and it is far better to purchase these than to run the risk of local poisoning or possibly something more serious still.

(2) Never place a wet plate or film to dry in the sun in summer-time, or the collodion will melt and run. As I suggested in the case of prints last week, it is advisable never to be impatient if you desire a good photograph. Patience is as much a virtue in photography as in everything else.

(3) Before you take a print, flick or rub the surface of your negative gently with a clean handkerchief and remove all stains from the glass or film surface at the back. This will avoid "patchy" prints.

(4) Do not attempt to print from a negative until you are quite sure that it is perfectly dry, or the film-surface will peel off with the paper.

(5) If you suspect your dark-room to be dusty rub your plates as in (3) before placing them in their sheathes; by so doing you lessen the danger of "bubbles" appearing whilst the plate is in the developer. Film-packs, of course, require no such treatment.

(6) Be careful how you dry both plates and films! In this case, also, dust must be avoided. Plates should be set in racks —which are cheap enough—and films should be suspended from a horizontal cord by means of clips.

(7) If you desire the best possible results, and it is convenient to you, use plates rather than films; the definition will be clearer.

(8) Remember that, in summer, your solution should be cool and, in winter, tepid.

(9) Change your washing water frequently, since by leaving plates or films in still water, you may find a formation of minute crystals upon their surfaces; these may prove harmful to detail.

(10) It will not be necessary for you to cut off the edges of your prints if you use paper of slightly smaller dimensions than your negative; it is also a more economical method. You may secure almost any size of paper in Rhineland.

(11) Be economical! Do not throw away your hypo until it can no longer serve its purpose, but return it to the bottle.

(12) Keep your paraphernalia scrupulously clean.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

BANDS ON THE RHINE.

Sir,—In reply to "West Yorks" if he only knew a little of what some Army of the Rhine Bands are doing he would be astounded to think he has lived with the Rhine Army and had not heard more British music than he has.

Every day there are at least two or three bands playing somewhere. So my advice to your correspondent is look and listen and he will find out there is a lot more going on in Cologne than he is aware of.

A BANDSMAN.

SUNDAY CONCERTS WANTED.

Sir,—May I as a lover of music suggest that a series of Sunday concerts, conducted on the same system as those held in London, be instituted in Cologne.

There must be many members of the Rhine Army who find themselves at a loss as to what to do on Sunday afternoons, and I am sure that a series of orchestral concerts would be highly appreciated by many officers and men.

CONCERT-GOER.

COPPERPLATE HANDWRITING.

Sir,—"F.K.D." who is apparently a school teacher, and knows what he is talking about, is correct in his criticism of my previous remarks, in reply to his.

I do not think, however, that the elaborate copperplate letterings can be accomplished without proper instruction in penmanship, which, if not received at school, where else?

If he visited "Oliver Whitby's" school, at which school I was taught to write, he could be convinced that the copperplate style is not alone in its beauty.

"Freedom" should remember that a typewritten message is not valid without a handwritten signature, which ought to be, but very often is not, decipherable.

OLD CHICHESTER BOY.

COLOGNE BOTANICAL GARDENS.

Sir,—In a recent issue an article is published under the heading: "Horticulture in Rhineland," wherein the Botanical Gardens of Cologne are mentioned. Evidently your correspondent "R.F.G." has not visited these, but the adjacent gardens of the "Flora," which have not yet been brought under the supervision of the management of the Botanical Gardens of the town.

Some years before the war our grounds were visited by the gardener of the Cambridge University botanical gardens, who expressed his admiration for all he had been shown. Our botanical gardens have been models for a good many others in Germany and abroad.

Your correspondent mentions the charming plant called "Nertrera Depressa" as unknown to him. It will be of interest to him to know, that Dr. Esser, managing director of the gardens, brought this plant over from England, 15 years ago where he had often found it in botanical gardens.

If the author of the article will visit the gardens at Riehl, which can be got at through a side door from the Flora, I am sure he will soon alter his opinion in a more favorable sense.

MORE ON READING.

Sir, — As a lover of literature, and as one who has noticed from time to time the works of historical fiction and romance that find favour with our troops, may I be permitted to add to the lists in your columns, the names of S.R. Crockett and G.J. Whyte-Melville?

I feel sure that those who have read any of their works will agree with me that each of these authors sets forth a good story with a charm of his own. In addition to "The White Plumes of Navarre," Crockett wrote many fine romances of his own country; among which are "The Raiders," "The Grey Man," and "The Black Douglas"; in the last of which he describes most admirably the downfall of one of the greatest houses in the History of Scotland, and what followed,

Two of Whyte-Melville's best novels are "The Queen's Maries'" and "Holmby House," even if their author was over-partial to the Stuarts in each case, while in "The Gladiators," the picture we have of Rome in the days of the Empire is worthy in every respect of "Quo Vadis" or "The Last Days of Pompeii."

ROMANCE ENTHUSIAST.

A PLAYGOER'S CRITICISM.

Sir,—In continuation of N.C.O.'s appreciation of the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, may I be allowed to mingle my praise of Lieut. Percy and his company with a little wholesome criticism?

I refer first to the extremely long waits, both at the beginning of the performance, which rarely starts before 6.20 although announced to start at 6, and in the intervals. The length of these latter cannot in every case be necessitated by changes of scenery and dress, since on more than one occasion the impatient spectator has been exasperated to find, after a desolating wait of more than twenty minutes, that the curtain rises on the same scene and that the actors have not changed their clothes.

To inflict upon an audience the quite unnecessary boredom of such waits is to trade upon their generosity.

Next, I would ask Lieut. Percy if it is really necessary or wise to make a speech at the end of every performance. On each of my visits to the theatre during the last four or five productions I have come in for one of these, and I am credibly informed that, during the run of "The Younger Generation," a speech has been made on every single night. Why is this?

The company needs no advertising. It has long been an established success, supplying admirably a much felt want, and with the waits already referred to this last delay at the end of the evening, followed, as it invariably is, by a perfunctory rendering of the first bars of the National Anthem, cannot fail to take the edge off the real and keen pleasure which we have derived from the play.

3 MILES A MINUTE.

What Motor-Car Manufacturers Could Do To-day.

WAR LESSONS.

(By H. Massac Buist.)

Though the Germans asked for and obtained an armistice in November, in Europe there has been no long-distance national or international racing for cars this year, but in America, where road tests were abandoned for track competitions a few years ago, the series of races has been interrupted once only on account of the campaign. The yearly Grand Prix race, renamed the Liberty Stakes, was duly run at Indianapolis.

For British motorists the interest in the event is to be found in the fact that, as a result of the showing, the American car racing authorities have decided that it shall be the last under the old engine category of approximately 4½ litres cylinder volume, such as was the classification for the French Grand Prix Races before the war, and that henceforth the classification shall be by engine limitation to 3 litres, otherwise 183 cubic inches, which the American Motor Press apparently announces "is the same as for the French Grand Prix."

Passing of Big Racing Car.

The fact, of course, is not so, the 3 litre category having been evolved for "Coupe de L'Auto" ananal event in France as distinct from the Automobile Club de France's Grand Prix Road Race, which has never been run for cars of less than 4½ litres engine volume, though, had these been necessary, we should have had an event for smaller engines. Of course, if we go back to the days when the Grand Prix Race rules stipulated no limitation of engine volume, we find that in the finest performance, there has ever been, when the event was a two day competition over a 947 mile course such as really tested reliability and when there were over two score starters chiefly composed of teams, only one firm, Sunbeam, got a team home and those were three litre cars that were competing for the Coupe de L'Auto event of limited engine capacity as well as in the major event of unlimited engine capacity.

A Peugeot of more than three times the engine volume came in first in the major event, and a Fiat of five times the engine volume second, with the Sunbeams third, fourth and fifth at only three and a fraction miles slower on the whole two days racing, showing reliability and standardisation of high efficiency in a manner which has never been achieved before or since because the Automobile Club de France has never dared to hold an equally severe test of reliability, all the subsequent French Grand Prix Races having been one day events only. That one on the Dieppe circuit in 1912 enabled Britain to sound the death knell of the monster racing car which had become useless for furthering the evolution of the motor carriage.

Limitation Essential Henceforth.

At the war's end we find by demonstration in America the other day that the march towards ever increasing engine efficiency has rendered a limitation of even 4½ litres excessive for racing on a square track such as that at Indianapolis which, in some senses, is as unsuitable for the purpose as any that could be conceived; for it is square with four corners, and there is no attempt at parabolic banking. You pay the highest price for the seats at the corners because that is where the accidents are expected to happen and generally do, for the American sporting public is out for blood every time. This year they duly succeeded in killing some competitors, some of them being burned to death.

From the point of view of the progress and the science of car evolution it falls to be observed, firstly, that we have not had time to build in Europe cars embodying the result of five years war experience in the evolution of liquid fuel internal combustion engines of all sorts and, secondly, that when we are able to do so, even such a scientifically constructed track as that which is now being put in order by the authorities at Brooklands, with a view to the resumption of competitions in September or October, will be found absolutely unsuitable for the fastest cars which it is now possible to build. At the time this pioneer track was built, two miles a minute seemed a rate of travel which we should not attain for a great number of years, whereas before the war over short stretches of the track along the straight, a car had travelled at well over 140 miles an hour.

New Means to Unlimited Power.

Provided cars could be made to stand it, I am satisfied that it is possible, not for one, but for several makers to-day to design and build cars which can travel on straight, level surfaces at three miles a minute or 180 miles an hour. But it would be practically suicide on the part of the drivers, whose safety would depend entirely on the behaviour of the tyres. Even at two-thirds that speed, racing on any track, such as Brooklands, is unjustifiable gambling with human life in face of the fact that, while we have in aircraft the means for working engines of unlimited capacity and power, there is no useful purpose to be served in the quest of unlimited engine capacity.

When we reflect that to-day there are produced in the world aircraft engines of 700 and even 800 horse power each, and that some of even 1000 horse power are going to be standardised, we perceive the futility of applying such machinery to a vehicle for propulsion along the road or track as a means of demonstrating such propositions. The mere quest of power must be left now to those who are doing a legitimate thing in pursuing it, namely the aircraft engineers. On the other hand, the motor car engineer must stick to his job, which is the evolution of the engine as applicable to vehicular service. On a car the main thing is to furnish all the power necessary in as conveniently small a form as possible, because the object is not that the chassis and passengers should accommodate an engine, but that an engine and chassis should accommodate passengers.

War Lessons For Car Service.

Therefore it behoves the organisers of our international, as well as our national motor competitions henceforth to put something of a premium on the reduction in volume of the prime mover because, given equal power, the smaller engine of two provides the opportunity of giving the ampler accommodation for coachwork on a chassis of equal size. Moreover, it must be bad in mind that, especially since we have learned much concerning aircraft engines during the war, nowadays high power output is possible in conjunction with economy of fuel and of lubricant.

We have learned no more valuable lesson during the war concerning liquid fuel internal combustion engines than in the matter of piston detail designs, whereby it is now possible to put up the oil pressure to any desired extent and to keep an absolutely clean engine head, which was one of the great problems until we were well on with the campaign. This big increase of lubricating oil pressure evolved for aircraft engine practice is directly applicable to every standard car on grounds of increased wearing life alone, without increase of Constructional cost; a crankshaft, for example, can now be floated on a constantly renewed film of oil with the result that there is no metal to metal contact, therefore there is both freer functioning and a practically indefinite wearing life to the bearings, a thing utterly impossible in standard cars as we have experienced them to date.

SOLDIER VICTORS AT REDHILL

Half-Mile Open Race Falls To a Guardsman.

The Redhill, Reigate and District Trades and Labour Council ran a very successful sports meeting at Redhill. A. Burrow, Liverpool Regt., with 19 yrds. start, cleverly won the 220 yds. open handicap, and the 880 yds. open to members of H. M. Forces in the district was an easy thing for Guardsman J. O'Donoghue, Guards Depot, Caterham. Results:—

220 yds. (open)—Heat winners: H. J. Coombes, Queen's Park H., 21 yds.; T. D. Scanlan, Highgate H., 16; A. G. Want, Brighton Railway A.C., 18; A. Burrow, King's Liverpool Regt., 19, A. J. Rowe, East Grinstead C. and A.A., 16; H. W. Jacobs, Brighton Railway A.C., 20; Final: Burrow 1, Want 2, Scanlan 3; yd., inches: 23 sec.

880 yds. Scratch (open to H. M. Forces in the district)—Gdsn. J. O'Donoghue, Guards' Depot, 1; Cpl. W. Wilkins, R.G.A., 2; Gnr. Baker, R.G.A., 3; easily, bad third; 2 min. 14 sec.

"Beckett 'stones' better than ever before".

GOING "GREAT".

Earlier this year McGoorty would have been held justified of the opinion that he was Beckett's master, but since the Southampton man gave way to the dictates of nature, and, boxing as a heavy-weight, knocked out first Bombardier Wells and then Frank Goddard, he has come on almost immeasurably. He is "stones" a better man than ever before as a boxer as well as in strength and physique, for he has now two good hands instead of one. His left was always a good one and nearly always a match winner, but now he has a right hand that is even better than the other, as those who saw him defeat Goddard will testify. Beckett, having reached the top of the tree, has gained a new incentive to keep on boxing and to train, as he must always train if he is to do himself justice, and it is good news, therefore, to learn that for his contest with McGoorty he is having the kind of strenuous preparation that sent him into the ring at the full height of his powers when he knocked out Goddard. According to the confident and enthusiastic reports of those who have seen him in the gymnasium (says "Straight Left" in "Sporting Life"), Beckett is going "great," and will be seen to greater advantage even than before.

BOY BOXING BANNED.

Drastic Action Taken By Police At Paris.

The Prefecture of Police at Paris has issued orders forbidding boxing exhibitions in booths at French Fairs. The Fédération Française de Boxe held that the appearance of ill-trained and unfit youths in booths would lead to accidents which would injure boxing, and circularised Police Chiefs asking that no boxing in public should be allowed between boys under sixteen years of age. They further recommended the medical examination of combatants before each fight. The Prefect took the drastic measure indicated.

R.34 STOWAWAY AS BOXER.

Billy Ballantyne, the famous stowaway of the R.34, made his appearance in the ring at St. James' Hall, Newcastle in a 10 round bout with Fred Harris, of Jarrow; but Ballantyne, though plucky, was outclassed, and his seconds threw in the towel in the second round.

AFTER SIX YEARS.

Revival of City of London Athletics and Swimming.

After an interval of six years the City of London Athletic and Swimming Association held its annual athletic championships at Lee Green. There was a good attendance, and the entries must be considered satisfactory in view of the fact that the majority of the clubs have not yet got into full working order. In the athletic events, however, Ravensbourne, despite their wonderful contribution to the forces during the war, proved to be quite up to pre-war strength and won almost everything, while Gresham won the senior cricket and lawn tennis.

VETERAN WALKER'S WIN.

E. C. Horton, holder of the twelve hours' walking record, was third from scratch in the Surrey Walking Club's 11¾ miles road handicap from South Croydon to Banstead and back, on Saturday, his time being 1h 41min 5sec. The winner was the veteran J. K. Kempton, who, with a start of 25min, had a handicap time of 1h 38min 51⅕sec, which enabled him to beat the second man, G. Stocks (17½min start) by a minute.

OSTEND £4,000 PRIZE.

The race for the Ostend Grand Prize of £4,00 resulted as follows:—

Marmouset 1, Aynsley 2, Laurentian 3. Won by two lengths. There were seven starters.

The pari-mutuel prices were:—Winner 11 francs, for place 6.50 francs; Aynsley 7 francs for a place; Laurentian 9 francs for a place.

185th S. BATTERY'S SUCCESS.

IX Corps "Light" And "Heavy" Tug-of-war Champions.

By virtue of their success in the IX Corps H.A. Sports, when both heavy and light weight teams won by two pulls to nil, the 185th Siege Battery R.G.A. now hold the championships of the IX Corps in both weights.

This distinction has only been attained after a great deal of strenuous work and hard training.

FOOTBALL SPLIT.

Southern League to Submit to Arbitration.

MR. J. C. CLEGG AS UMPIRE.

The Southern Football League have accepted the suggestion to submit their case regarding the split with the Football League to the arbitration of Mr. J. C. Clegg.

The dispute arose out of West Ham's action in getting admitted to the Football League after promising loyalty to the Southern League.

The Southern League have simplified their rules regarding the transfer of amateur players who may now be transferred by the mutual consent of players and club any time during the season, or by the Management Committee if they are satisfied the players' abilities are not being utilised or by notice from players before March 31st. No amateur is to be placed upon the transfer list, unless he changes his status. If he turns professional the rules governing the transfer of professionals shall apply.

£1000 FOR HARRY KING.

Well-known Centre Forward Secured By Woolwich Arsenal.

The manager of Woolwich Arsenal has obtained the signature of Harry King, the well-known pre-war centre forward, for whom they paid one thousand pounds transfer fee to Northampton. King has only recently been demobilized.

Football Arrangements By B Siege Park.

A general meeting of the B Siege Park Sports Committee was held on Tuesday evening to select a captain and vice-captain for the Park Football team. M.S.M. Phipps, D.C.M. was elected captain and Cpl. Ladley to the vice-captaincy. A selection committee was formed, comprising the Secretary, Lieut. Barker, Sergt. Clark, and Pte. Snelling.

Amateur Football Official Killed.

London amateur footballers and others will hear with regret of the sudden death of Lieut. W. L. Rowland, hon. sec., Div. III., L.F.A., who was killed as the result of a motor-car accident in France a day or two ago.

The deceased was attached to the Chinese Labour Corps, and was expecting to be demobilized in a day or two, and had, in fact, accepted one or two refereeing engagements.

"Footer" Matches Wanted.

"C" Battery 187 Brigade R.F.A., 41st Division, are willing to arrange football matches with any club (home and away) within the radius of Ostheim and Cologne. Medium strength. Ground 2 minutes walk from tram halt.

200 MILES SEAPLANE RACE.

Handsome Prizes For International Competition.

An International Seaplane Race will be held at Bournemouth on Sept. 10. The start will be from the pier with a circuit of 20 nautical miles, the full length of the course being 200 nautical miles.

The race has been organised by the Royal Aero Club and a prize of 25,000 francs, with a trophy valued at the same has been presented by M. Jacques Schneider, the French gunmaker.

The British competitors include H. G. Hawker, Squadron-Commander Hobbs, D.S.O., D.F.C., Capt. Hammersley, and Lieut.-Col. Vincent Nicholl, D.S.O., while among the French competitors are Maard and Casale and Sadi Lecomte. The Italian Junelly has also entered.

CAPABLANCA'S CHESS.

Wins 27 out of 35 Simultaneous Games.

After the distribution by the Mayoress of Hastings, of the prizes won in the Chess Congress Senor Capablanca gave a simultaneous exhibition against 35 players, including the new woman champion, five of the competitors in the Victory Minor Tourney, and eight in the first-class tournaments.

Four hours play resulted in 27 wins, 7 drawn games against Dr. Oskam, Mr. Gibson, Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Miller, Mr. Osborn, Mr. J. N. Smith, and Mr. Youngman, and one loss to Mr. W. H. Watts—a magnificent performance. Mr. Watts cleverly won a piece and forced Senor Capablanca into a mating net.

INTER-SERVICES SPORTS.

Notable Talent Available For Stamford Bridge.

ATHLETIC CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Considerable interest is being taken in the Inter-Services Athletic Championships, which are being held at 3 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 4, at Stamford Bridge Athletic Grounds. The final selection of teams has not yet been made, but there is no doubt that, from the talent available, one can count on seeing a gathering of notable performers.

The Royal Navy have the call on Cpl. McQuade for the sprints, Officers' Steward Bryant for the mile, Lieut. Mereweather for the hurdles, and many other well-known naval and marine athletes.

Fierce Competition.

Competition for inclusion in the Army team is fierce, as in the eliminating trials at Aldershot on the 28th and 29th men with world-wide reputations, such as Sgts. W. R. Applegarth, E. Carter, A.I.F., J. Lindsay, N.Z. Forces, and Major E. G. W. W. Harrison, the Rugby three-quarter, compete in the 100 and 220. Sgt. J. H. R. Wilton, Sgt.-Maj. Usher, Sgt. H. Phillips. Canadian Headquarters, in the 440; Sgts. Mason, New Zealand, H. Phillips, Canada, Signaller T. Frazer, A.I.F., and Lieut. G. L. Morgan, 1st Manchesters, in the half; Sgt. C. G. Manley, A.I.F., in the mile; and Ptes H. F. Thomas and H. Briton in the three miles.

The hurdles should be exceptionally good, as Lieut. H. E. Wilson, the amateur champion, Lieut. A. C. Straker, the Cambridge Blue, and Lieut. A. C. Wilkinson, the Oxford Blue, are probables. A number of Indian native troops are taking part at Aldershot, and there is much speculation as to whether they can gain places in the Army team.

It is probable that the Royal Air Force will include Capt. A. P. Mitchell, the old London University and South London Harrier man, for the quarter, Sgt.-Majors Mawby and Miller—old Army champions—for the 220 and high jump respectively; Lieut. T. Frazer in the long jump, and Capt. H. C. Irwin, the Irish champion, in the three miles.

A DESPERATE STRUGGLE.

County Championship Rivals Meet At Dover.

The fact that Yorkshire and Kent lead the County Championship table made their match at Dover on Monday and Tuesday of first class importance. Batting first Yorkshire declared with 375 for 8 and at the close of the day Kent's score stood at 50 for 1. On Tuesday the remainder of the Kentish players were dismissed for the comparatively modest score of 168, and following on, the game developed into a desperate struggle against time. The result was a drawn game.

English Cricket Results.

Kent 168 and 78 for 2; Yorkshire 375 for 8 declared. (Match drawn).

Gloster 158; Essex 141 for 80 (match drawn, rain preventing it being finished).

Hants 216 and 200 for 7 (declared); Sussex 176 and 231 for 5. (Match drawn).

Notts 158 for 5 (declared); Derbyshire 53 for 6. (Rain stopped play).

Surrey Young Professionals 303 and 03 for 4 (declared); Young Amateurs 210 and 107 for 6. (Match drawn).

Navy and Army v. Major H. D. G. Leveson-Gowers XI.

A three days cricket match between the Army and Navy and Major H. D. G. Leveson-Gowers XI commenced at Lord's on Tuesday. The Navy and Army scored 139 for 5, Capt. Tasker contributing 36, Commander Cowan 32, and Major D. C. Robinson 48. Rain eventually stopped play.

OLD ETONIANS v OLD HARROVIANS

Proposed Cricket Match At Lindenthal.

It is proposed to have an Old Etonian v Old Harrovian cricket match shortly at Lindenthal.

Any Old Etonians who would like to play are asked to send their names and addresses as soon as possible to Capt. R. St. L. Fowler, 17th Lancers, Cologne.

Scottish Mile Champion Wins.

W. B. Ross, the Scottish mile champion, competed in an open mile handicap run at Craiglockhart, Edinburgh, the other day, in connection with the Edinburgh and District Inter-Works sports. He won easily in 4 min. 42⅘ sec.

THE "GOLF MYSTERY."

Why High Physical Development Is Unessential.

EXPLANATION OFFERED.

Under the heading of "Golf Mystery" the following paragraph appeared in a recent issue of "The Cologne Post":—

That one player of only equal skill and of less physical power than another should be able to hit the ball further is one of the mysteries of golf.

In the following paragraph "J.W." endeavours to explain the mystery. He says:—

The quality of the drive in golf depends entirely on the swing of the club. A strong man, aiming to give the ball a tremendous blow, nearly always fails to reach as great a distance as a man of less strength who swings his club easily and gently. The ball obtains its momentum from the club head and its initial velocity can therefore be increased by increasing the velocity of the club head at the moment of impact, provided always that this is done without destroying the accuracy of the stroke.

Now if we consider the player and his club to be a system capable of oscillation we shall see that this system has a natural and definite period of swing under gravity about any given axis. In the case of the golfer the axis of swing coincides roughly with the spine. The actual magnitude of the natural period depends on the inertia of the parts of the oscillating system, i.e. the players club and body. A system of great inertia swings more slowly than one of small inertia. Hence, apart from frictional resistances which probably do not vary much in different players, the strong man of heavy muscular development has a naturally slower swing than a man of less physical strength. Therefore, in pressing for a long drive he has to compel his system to depart to a greater extent from its natural period of swing and his long drives are made, in consequence, with more relative inconvenience. His stroke accordingly suffers more in accuracy and the drive suffers too; for unless the momentum of the club head is correctly applied to the ball, the best possible drive cannot result. A certain amount of physical development is, of course, necessary for good golf, but it appears that there is an optimum of development, which is somewhat less than the maximum of physical development of the human being.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

The Starlights.

I dropped in at the Palace Theatre to see "The Starlights" the other evening. Every seat was occupied. The entire performance went with a swing and there were no weary waits or even a dull moment. From opera burlesque to ragtime, from heavy comedy to serious monologue, not to speak of trickfiddling the party have a particularly extensive range. I should imagine that "The Starlights" is one of the biggest attractions seen at the Herzog Strasse house. The orchestra of the party was very good.

Comedy and Dancing.

The outstanding feature of their variety programme was the acrobatic dancing of T. Cottham. W. P. Wentley, the Scotch character comedian, and A. Humphreys, the soubrette, provided much of the amusement. The trick-fiddler, T. Lord, gave a show that was at once unique and clever; his playing two violins at the same time quite tickled the boys. D. Scott's character study of the New York hobo, in Robt. W. Service's "New Year's Eve," was also fine. The performance concluded with a burlesque in which, among others, A. Leggett and T. Bowman appeared to advantage.

Prongs Concert Party.

A most enjoyable evening was spent at the Leave Club on Tuesday night where the Prongs Concert Party showed to a crowded house. They certainly are a most talented troupe and our interest was never allowed to flag for a moment, in fact we were kept in roars of laughter all the way through. Charles Castles' "Over There" was loudly encored and the song "Liza" was much applauded, while J. Robinson's performances were decidedly popular. I must also congratulate Arthene on his sympathetic accompaniments throughout and his excellent studies of Charles Dickens characters. I only wish the programme had been longer.

In Few Words.

I am asked to announce that the Saturday dances at the Sports Club, Lindenthal, are now discontinued.

JACQUES.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Equality of Opportunity for English Athletes.

The executive of the Northern Counties Athletic Association at a meeting at the Crown Hotel, Manchester, discussed the new championship scheme proposed by Mr H. G. Brockman, of the Amateur Athletic Association.

This was the desirability of considering the question of instituting English championships open only to athletes of British birth or persons resident in England over a minimum period of twelve months prior to the championship taking place. Following the decision of these championships on the first Saturday in July it was proposed two or three weeks afterwards to hold a big championship meeting, open to all comers, in which foreigners and representatives from the Dominions would be allowed to compete with the representatives of Great Britain.

Without exception the Northern Counties representatives were convinced of the fairness of the scheme, and a resolution was passed giving it their entire support.

Southern Counties C.C.

The chief item at the "Championships" meeting arranged by the Southern Counties Cycling Union for next Saturday at Herne Hill is the 50 Miles National Cyclists' Union Championship.

Reading's Trial.

Reading played their second trial match before a large company, and a good game was witnessed. The new centre-forward, Hastie, showed great promise, and scored a clever goal.

Carpentier's Sorrow.

In the course of an interview with Geo. Carpentier at Dieppe the French champion expressed his sorrow for the fuss made in the English newspapers about the postponment of his match with Beckett.

G. Colling.

Unlike most apprentices who have forfeited the apprentice allowance, G. Colling finds his services in great demand. He was engaged to ride Flying Squadron in the Duke of York Stakes.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Burst Ball.

The ball was burst in the Dewsbury-Bradford match, where Lyman showed fine form for Bradford.

Training at Northampton.

Walden, the "Spurs'" international outside right and Northamptonshire cricketer, is to train at Northampton, where he has a taxi-cab business.

A Wonderful Season.

Deauville is enjoying a wonderful season, which is now at its height. On Grand Prix day the pari-mutuel takings amounted to over £100,000, a record except in the case of the Paris Grand Prix.

P. O'Hara Wood.

P. O'Hara Wood, the Australian, was successful in three finals at the Scarborough lawn tennis tournament. He won the North of England singles championship, beating the young South African, B.I.C. Norton (4—6, 6—2, 6—1, 10—8) after a great game.

Saucy Sally.

The autumn racing season on the Thames opened with a match for the A class under Boat Sailing Association rules, given by the Thames Sailing Club, at Surbiton. Mr. C.P. Gosnell's Saucy Sally won fairly easily from Mr. W.H. Wheeler's Carina, while Mr. S.J. Mitchell's Delicia was third.

N.U. "Gates."

In the Northern Union matches at the week-end there was an aggregate attendance of 100,000, the largest attendance being at Halifax, namely, 15,000.

Memorable Match.

The Knavesmire at York is as rich in Turf history as any course in England. It was here that Flying Dutchman and Voltigeur ran their memorable match.

Trial Game.

Clapton Orient had 3,500 spectators for their trial game, in which Croal (forward), Carrington (goal), Forrest, Dalrymple, Smith, Bowyer, and Ives excelled.

Remarkable Exhibition.

At a demonstration of artificial limbs and mechanical appliances at the Cardiff Empire, an exhibition of boxing was given by ex-Seaman Williams, who had lost both legs while in the Merchant Service. Fitted with artificial legs, he gave a remarkable exhibition against a normal athlete.

Model Ditch.

I am informed that the Stewards of the National Hunt Committee are so well satisfied with the new open ditch which has been erected at Hurst Park in view of the next steeplechasing season that they have recommended all other executives to copy it.—"Hotspur" in "Daily Telegraph."

Progressing Well.

J. Burns, the Ayr apprentice, who was so badly injured at Catterick Bridge, is progressing satisfactorily. Burns was unconscious for eleven days.

Harlequins Leader.

The Harlequins, it is feared, will not enjoy the assistance until the middle of the winter at the earliest, of their famous leader, Captain A.D. Stoop, M.C., who is still serving with his regiment in India.

Max Decugis III.

Max Decugis is unwell, and his place in the French lawn tennis team which opposes Great Britain in the Davis Cup competition at Deauville will probably be taken by Robert Laurentz.

West Ham Trial Match.

West Ham United's first trial match, which was played at Upton Park, served its purpose well, for it brought into notice many young aspirants to fame who performed so well that they will certainly be heard of again.

One Great Weakness.

Mr. "Chic" Evans, who was last week deposed from the title of American Amateur Champion by M. Ouimet, who in turn created a sensation by being beaten on the following day, has one great weakness in his game, and that is his putting.

10th Century.

Staff-Sergeant S. Wheatley, of the Australian Headquarters, obtained his tenth century this season when he scored 105 (not out) against Cuaco on Saturday.

Sport with the Mackerel.

Visitors fishing from boats in South Bay, Scarborough, are having fine sport with the mackerel. Two anglers caught 50 as the result of 3 hours' fishing.

Starter's Powers.

The Elton Plate at Stockton furnished another instance—like that of Bludera at Goodwood—of the necessity of the starter being given discretionary power to recall the field.

Golfing Coincidence.

Mr. James Rothschild is gradually improving after the accident which cost him an eye on a French golf course. It is somewhat of a coincidence that within a few days there should have been a similar accident in England.

Youthful Golfers.

Apropos of young Jones's American performance, it is interesting to recall that Mr. John Ball, the famous English amateur, at the age of 15 years finished sixth in the Open Championship at Prestwick in 1878, his score for the 36 holes being 165, 8 behind "Jamie" Anderson, the winner.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

The Economic War.

Many German newspapers, great national dailies, are refusing to accept advertisements of British manufacturing houses, on the plea that it is inimical to the best interests of German trade. Evidently the great economic war is now in full swing. On the other hand American newspapers are mostly willing to accept German advertising. The "Sammies" are out for business and are not inclined towards artificial barriers.

Camaraderie.

The camaraderie which distinguishes all branches of the British Army is once again borne out. Two weeks ago Ptes. E.J. Richardson and H.W. Knight of "B" Siege Park were drowned in the Rhine while bathing. They were both artificers, and on Tuesday a sum of approximately two thousand marks was handed to the C.O. for the benefit of their next of kin. This money had been collected by their comrades in the workshops. It is proposed to use a small percentage of this amount to commemorate their association with the Siege Park.

A Photographic Tip.

Dabbling in photography here has brought to light the fact that some of the German cameras have part of the interior left bright instead of being painted over dead black. After spoiling about two dozen films which all had a streak of fog of varying magnitude in much the same spot on each negative, the fault was eventually remedied by sticking a piece of black paper (film backing) over the bright portion, and since then there has been no cause for use of those lurid adjectives for which the Tommy is noted. It would be interesting to know if others have met the same difficulty, and possibly this tip may be of use to some who have made a mess of their snaps.

What To Read.

It may be a coincidence but at least one German bookseller is making a speciality in his show case of the books which several of our readers have put forward as those which can be read with advantage. Acquaintance with our "Letterbox" column will disclose just what books correspondents think should be read and the mere fact that a German trader should have selected many of these for prominence in his display suggests that he is conversant with writings which emanate from this office. As a matter of fact the "Cologne Post" is read by many Germans and several have testified to the pleasure they derive from its columns. That this should be so is a source of great pleasure to us.

Crowding on Cars.

It has often been remarked that one of the differences between the English and German tramcar is the crowding of the conductors' and drivers' platforms. The English conductor will not allow any passenger to ride on the platform of his car, unless the car was overcrowded, and even then very seldom. A passenger may not travel on the driver's platform of an English tramcar. With the German cars, whether the inside be full or empty, the conductor's platform is invariably crowded, as well as the driver's platform. The hanging straps inside are apparently for ornament, for they are seldom, if ever, used. Another point is that the German driver is always willing to accommodate luggage on the front of the car, while his courtesy as well as that of the conductor is always very marked. Some tramway officials at home might take a lesson from them.

The Starting Jerk.

Attention has been called to the easy gliding motion with which the trains in Germany start after intermediate stops. Altough it is a fact, that an improvement in this direction is distinctly noticeable, in comparison to trains at home, it is not on account of any "clutch" arrangement fitted into the mechanism of the engine of the locomotive. Clutches are, of course, fitted to engines of high speed revolutions, such as used on motor cars etc. but certainly not to the powerful railway locomotive, whose action is direct from cylinder to driving wheels, or driving axle, as the case may be. The intermittent "puffs" are not in any way connected with the motive power of the engine, but is a distinct bit of mechanism for creating the power for the quick acting continuous brake which operates throughout the train, similar to the Westinghouse brake used in England. As to the class of brake in use in England, most railway companies use what is commonly known as the vacuum brake, others use the Westinghouse type, amongst the latter being the Great-Eastern, London, Brighton and South Coast and several Scotch companies.

The Reason.

All Companies have a few locomotives, as well as a portion of their rolling stock, fitted with both patterns of brake connections. These are called "Dual-fitted" vehicles, and of course care must be used when loading traffic for conveyance by passenger train, in through vehicles, for, or to pass over, those lines where the different pattern brake is in use, otherwise, it would necessitate the transfer of loads to vehicles so fitted, and thereby cause delay and extra labour at junction points. Reverting to the cause of the jerkey or tugging motion when starting, this is brought about by a variety of causes, such as slack couplings, or weak draw-bar springs, or the countinuous brake may be applied more effectively on some of the vehicles forming the train, than on others, through no fault of the driver, but owing to worn brake-blocks etc. The latter causes the buffers to become depressed, or couplings strained, when the train is being pulled up at a station, and a tug or jerk is bound to follow, when the slightest forward movement is made. Again, faulty starting is generally more noticeable with trains formed of what is technically known as "loose" stock, that is, trains which are being continually altered in formation. In "Set" trains, the formation of which is rarely altered, and which are largely used in Germany, and becoming more common in England, the defects which have been mentioned, are obviated. Therefore the tugging motion when starting is practically eliminated.

In Exchange.

In Cologne, during the war, much business was done by means of exchange of goods, especially eatables, without any passing of money at all. One wholesale distributor of merchandise did quite a large business with the country folk from the outlying districts receiving for his goods vegetables and fruit of all kinds. As one of the commodities he himself handled was sugar he and his family managed to rub along without having such a bad time.

Camouflaged.

The ingenuity displayed by soldiers in devising costumes, in some cases from very meagre materials, at the fancy dress balls held in the British Empire Leave Club is amazing. Cowboys may be seen tangoing with milk maids and pierettes with Red Indians. The wonder is as to where the costumes come from, and the degree of success with which some of the young guards "don the motley" on these occasions amply proves the old adage that, "Where there's a will there's a way."

Warm Hospitality.

It was the hottest night of the heat-wave. In his billet, panting upon his bed lay an Intelligence Officer. Everything that could cause or suggest warmth he had thrown, one by one, on the floor, leaving the bed shamelessly bare. The feather bed had gone and lay beside the bedstead, inert and shapeless, Upon it, the quilt, the blanket, the sheet, in successive strata testified to repeated attempts at coolness. In vain: sleepless, gasping, sweating. the unhappy one discarded his pyjamas and, as a last desperate offering to the fates, cast them upon the huddled pile of bedclothes. All was useless. The heat seemed to increase as night wore on, and restless, languid tossings took the place of the desired slumber.

The Explanation.

Surely, even for this weather, it was incredibly hot, unaccountably sultry! But there was nothing to do but to bear it, until morning brought the welcome relief of work at the office, with the day seeming far cooler than the tropic night. At midday, the wearied one had occasion to return to his billet. He was met by his hostess, who asked if he had found the night unusually warm. Had the Herr Hauptmann been able to sleep? "No? Well, I fear I was perhaps to blame. You see, we have just put in a new radiator installation. We were trying it yesterday — and I forgot to turn off the one in the Herr Hauptmann's room!"

Personal Advertising.

An advertisement to be seen in some hotels round here boldly claims "So and so's Bitterbier — Besser wie So-and-so's." To British advertisers this is in singularly bad taste. Can you imagine an "ad."— "Allsopp's Ale — Better than Worthington's" or "Cadbury's Cocoa — Better than Rowntree's?" In Britain each advertiser claims and endeavours to prove that his goods are the best, but usually infers that they stand unrivalled. An advertisement would certainly never pay if it made an individious personal comparison. A good story is told of a tailor who put outside his shop a notice: "The best tailor in the world." — A rival, a few doors away then displayed a placard: "The best tailor in the town," but a third fellow-tradesman close by beat them both with his sign: "The best tailor in this street." The honour of this is that in thus narrowing it down, he comes perilously near the border-line of personality which to the German advertiser does not appear to exist.

The Church Army and Ypres.

Ypres, or "Wipers" as Tommy called it is to have its permanent memorial to the men who fell in its defence. No more fitting tribute could be paid to our glorious dead. A happy choice has been made in deciding that this shall take the form of a Church and hostel and in no more capable hands could the scheme have been placed than in those of the Church Army for we are all aware of just what the Church Army means to Tommy. The memorial must not fail to be worthy of the cause, and an appeal is being made for the sum of £25,000. Cologne is being invited to assist in raising this sum and towards this end the offertory at the Military Church, Schildergasse, on Sunday was devoted. Doubtless many who were not present, and who are relatives and friends of those who fell in the salient will be anxious to secure by their offerings that the memorial shall be really worthy of its object. For this reason, further contributions are invited, and a generous response from the Rhine Army is hoped for. Donations should be addressed so the Assistant Chaplain General, Rhine Army, or, enclosed in envelopes endorsed "Ypres Memorial," placed in the offertory on Sunday next.

Euskirchen Reading Circle.

The Euskirchen Y.M.C.A. Reading Circle has held its final meeting, Pte. J. K. Douglas was the speaker and his subject — "A Shakespearian Flower Garden." It was not merely a collection of blooms, gathered willy-nilly from Shakespearian drama, but a widely embracing colour scheme with an appropriate setting. The trellises were interwoven with vines, honeysuckle and ivy: the hedge of willow, toothwort, furze and may. One part of the garden was given over to flowers that grow wild-oxlip, musk-roses, eglantine, cuckoo-buds and humbler plants, as the nettle, thistle, and knot-grass, with the oak, pine, hazel, crab-apple and sweet-scented cedar. In the flower garden were to be planted roses of all hues, lilies, cowslips, pea-blossoms, and the little Western Flower: Love-in-Idleness, not forgetting the weeds which will come to gardens be they ever so well tended, such as mallow and dock. A pleasant discussion followed the essay, and an appreciative reference was made to the Rev. J. D. Carnegie, the founder and enthusiastic supporter of the Circle now disbanded. We regret the passing of the circle.

Prizes for Echoes.

Each day we are prepared to give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." In view, however, of the shortage of contributions to-day we withhold the prizes. This should encourage those who have not won a prize to forward contributions. These must be topical.

EXPERIENCES OF WAR.

TOLD IN THE BAR-PARLOUR.

"—And we'd hardly got down to kip when a bomb dropped night between our tent and theirs—blew the tents to smithereens and us all over the place. How any of us weren't knocked out of mess I can't make out. Talk about wind-up!"

As the speaker finished he swung his glass to his lips, and from the perfect manner in which he did so and the quick and even way the liquor vanished it was evident that the aforementioned bomb had left no ill-effects as regards bar-parlour performances.

By now all those present had settled down to the inevitable Army experiences. In the corner there sat a young fellow who looked a trifle—well, bemused. The Army flavour in the conversation made him feel rather "out of it" (he had helped to smash the Bosch with a four-inch lathe), and as he couldn't negotiate his way to the door he determined to stick it. Every telling point brought a knowing look to his eyes, and sometimes he ventured on a vigorous head-shake. The bomb incident having been digested, a tough-looking habitué of the bar-parlour drew attention.

"To my way of thinking," he said, "it ain't so bad when there's other blokes with you to get the wind-up. It's when you're on your ownio—that's when you can get the breeze up properly. I remember one pitch-black night at Monchy a party of us went over the top to do some wiring—a pretty big gap where a minny had dropped had to be filled in. How the heck it comes about I can't rightly say, but anyway, I soon lost touch with the others. 'This won't do,' I says to meself, and set out to find 'em. No good! I soon found I was lost and started to find my way back."

"Well, after about half-an-hour of shell-holes and barbed wire and suchlike doin's I was about dead beat. After a bit of a rest I went on again and then just pulled meself up in time. Right ahead of me I could hear some Jerries parleeing. I'd blundered on to their line. You can bet I about-turned."

"I hadn't got very far when blow me if I didn't find meself among a wiring party—and it wasn't one of ours, neither! Well, I got away O.K. I can tell you it was h—l being on me lonesome. It wasn't till it got a bit light I managed to get back to our crowd—and then only by the skin of me false teeth. Here, fill it up again"—and a perspiring barmaid hearkened unto the S.O.S.

"The biggest shock I ever had, was the day I saw the R.E.'s going over the top," observed a gentleman with a prominent red nose. A loud burst of laughter and much clattering of pots and glasses greeted this sally, and in the midst of the hubbub a fierce individual sporting an R.E. badge was seen to be removing his coat. The gentleman with the prominent red nose was much gratified by the appreciation shown, and was preparing to cap his remark with another of a more caustic nature when he suddenly perceived the ex-R.E., (who was now laying his waistcoat on his neighbour's glass of stout) giving a cough and a glance at his watch, the red-nosed gentleman, with a hasty "Well, good-night all," made his way out—followed by the ex-R.E., muttering dark threats.

Everyone, was now in good humour, and fully enjoyed an old M.T.-er's story of the nerve-jolt he had received when told off to fetch the first party of W.A.A.C.'s that reachod France. At this point a grave-faced man left the bar and placing his glass on the table, sat down in the seat vacated by the ex-R.E. he filled and lit his pipe, and then spoke.

"Talking of shocks," he began casually —and the hum of conversation died down. "Talking of shocks," he repeated "the biggest I ever had was not in the line at all—or anyway near it. The armistice had just been signed and I'd clicked for leave. P'rhaps some of you went on leave about that time and'll remember what it was like. We had plenty of rations and weren't crowded in the van—there wasn't more than thirty of us. There was a fire going at first, but some of the chaps objected, so we chucked it out. However, it was never much below freezing point. And we did the trip down to Bullong pretty quick—just over three days, if I remember rightly. I did hear afterwards that the R.O.D. driver had a Madermozel in the town. That may have bucked up the speed."

"Well, all things considered, we weren't feeling so bad when we got out. But what with the march up the hill—you all know that ruddy hill, I'll bet—and a night at the Rest Camp, I can't say we were exactly up to the mark next morning. A nasty drizzle had begun to come down, and after about fifty or so wind-ups we did start out for the boat. Although I was in the first section on the parade-ground, blow me if I wasn't in the last batch to get down to the quay. And what with cussin', and dashing about in the slush, and that march down with all me blooming kit, I was absodamlutely fed-up to the eyes and no mistake. Altogether, I was in no condition for getting shocks. Yet, it was then that I got the worst shock of the war."

Here the speaker paused, quite conscious that he had reached the climax of his story and determined to exact the full dramatic value. Noticing that one of his audience more impatient than the others, was preparing to make a remark, he held out his pipe with an arresting gesture.

"Oh. no," he said scornfully, "oh lord no! I know what you're going to say. But you're wrong. We weren't turned back. Just as our mob turned down on to the quayside, who should we meet but a redcap,—and a big, hefty sort of bloke he was, too. Course, soon as we saw him we began to turn over our stock of cuss-words. And then he spoke. I couldn't believe me ears. Such a nice, gentle kind of voice he had—I nearly burst into tears when I heard it. I felt just like I did the day I lost a fifty-franc note. All weak and fit to cry, you knows."

"At first I couldn't for the life of me make out what he was saying. I was down-and-out enough to start with, and then that heavenly voice had about dazed me. Just as I got on a level with the redcap he spoke again, and this time I couldn't help hearing what he said. I stopped dead on the spot. For a second or two I thought I was going to drop, and I'll bet me heart lost a couple o'beats. It was what he said that'd done it! What did he say, you ask? Just these simple words—"Pass along this way—please!"

Amid an intense silence the grave-faced man drained his glass, and, wiping his lips, passed out into the twilight. Doubt and unbelief were visible on nearly every face. The storm left untouched the young fellow in the corner. The bar-parlour grew more and more noisy, and he more and more moody. Last to leave was that young fellow. For a moment he clung to the landlord, striving to utter a question. At last he drifted into the street, and a few minutes later you might have seen him grasping a friendly lamp-post and plaintively demanding—"Wha' wozzee gettin' at, eh? Wha' wozzee gettin' at!"

DEATH OF GENERAL BOTHA.

FAMOUS SOUTH AFRICAN DIES SUDDENLY FROM INFLUENZA.

DEATH OF GENERAL BOTHA.

ROMANTIC CAREER OF A GREAT SOLDIER.

A Reuter message from Pretoria dated yesterday states that General Botha died suddenly at midnight of influenza. News of his sudden death will produce great grief throughout the whole empire. Not only was he a great soldier, in his own particular kind of fighting, he was also a great statesmen and perhaps the most powerful reconciling force in the Empire.

His personal story was one of the romances of our history. Less than twenty years ago, he was in arms against ourselves as Commander in Chief of the Boer Forces, and yet he became by force of circumstances, and by his own great genius, the means of developing a great and loyal colony, whose constancy has been tried by the strongest tests.

A Fine Spirit.

We can scarcely estimate to-day, how much we owe to the man who at the close of the Boer war accepted the consequences in so fine a spirit, and linked his own fortunes and those of the people he had led so bravely with those of the British Empire.

Once having set his seal to the treaty of peace, he grasped to the full the possibilities of a larger life for the people of South Africa, which it opened up. He set himself to the uniting of the peoples of South Africa, and the building up out there of a noble and proud colony. Botha's qualities were well tested in the recent war and his conquest of German South West Africa was a triumph of organisation and a masterpiece of rapidity and efficiency. In every aspect of the struggle he bore himself as the great man he was. He laid deep and strong foundations upon which are built and will be built a nobler African Empire of the future.

Soldier-Statesman.

Botha has been compared to Robert Lee, the greatest soldier and the finest character in the history of the American civil war, and it is fortunate that he was spared, as Lee was not, to guide his people through the difficult years of reconstruction. This task has been almost completed during Botha's lifetime, and as a soldier-statesman he holds high honour amongst the Sons of the Empire.

The life of this generous hearted man within the British Empire was also, in considerable measure, a tribute to the generous policy of Britain towards South Africa, the fine consequences of which are probably unparalleled in history The Rt. Hon. Louis Botha was a Privy Councillor, an Honorary General in the British Army, and was granted the LL.D. of Edinburgh, Oxford and Cambridge Universities. He was also Honorary Colonel of the Natal and Orange Free State Regiment of the South African Light Infantry. (British Wireless.)

LABOUR IN SPAIN.

25,000 OUT AT BARCELONA.

Labour unrest prevails in Catalonia, the most important industrial province of Spain, and a general lock-out affecting 25,000 masons and carpenters has begun in Barcelona.

No disorders have so far occurred, but both employers and workmen show a dangerously stubborn temper.

Another cause of trouble is the opposition to the eight-hour day decreed by the Government. The cotton spinners and their factory hands cannot in many towns come to terms regarding the arrangement of new shifts. The difficulties of the manufacturers may be easily realized when one considers that in some places, such as Vich, an 11-hour day is the rule.

The strike of the captains, mates, and engineers of the Trans-Mediterranean Navigation Company is preventing ships at several Spanish ports from leaving. These men have a recognized grievance, and the Government has promised to satisfy them as far as possible.

UNPOPULAR BELA KUN.

Bela Kun, who was interned by the Austrian Government at Heidelmuhle, near Roab, had to be transferred. The inhabitants of the neighbouring villages, chiefly peasants, were so exasperated at the presence of the notorious Hungarian Bolshevist dictator that they held a meeting of protest, and threatened to commit violence. The Austrian Peasants' League and the officials of the district also made representations at Vienna, and the Government considered it wise to remove the objectionable prisoner. Bela Kun without warning transferred to another habitat, and the locality is kept secret.

MEAT AS MANURE.

While £7,266 was spent last year at the City of London markets on the inspection and condemnation of meat unfit for human food, £4,519 was recovered by the sale of the condemned meat for manure.

IMPERIAL MASSACRE.

FATE OF RUSSIAN ROYAL FAMILY.

Out of the welter of conflicting stories as to the fate of the late Tsar's family comes at last a report which is said to be authentic. It was drawn up by a French officer employed in an official French capacity in South Russia. The report is based upon information supplied by one of the detachment of soldiers detailed to guard the "Dom Ipatieff," at Ekaterinburg, in which the Royal family was detained, under the orders of a Jewish Commissary named Jourovsky.

A little after midnight on July 17, 1918, the Tsar, the Empress Alexandrovna, the Tsarevitch, the Grand Duchesses Olga, Anastasia, and Tatiana, and the Grand Duchess Xenia, with the Court physician, Dr. Botkine, and three servants, were taken into an underground room of the house. There was not even the formality of an examination or interrogatory. All the members of the party were perfectly calm, and the Emperor carried his son, who was unable to walk through illness, in his arms.

When all were assembled in the room Jourovsky, with another Bolshevist leader and nine Lettish soldiers, threw themselves upon their victims and massacred them with revolver shots. The French officers' informant who was on sentry duty in the street before the house, where he had been specially stationed by Jourovsky to note to what extent the noise of the murder was audible outside, immediately rushed down to the scene of the massacre, where he saw the eleven bodies lying in a tumbled mass on the floor, covered in blood.

Only the Tsarevitch was still alive, and one of the murderers finished him with a revolver shot at point-blank range.

PEACE CONFERENCE.

PROPOSED ADJOURNMENT.

Home calls are pressing the statesmen at the Peace Conference. Signor Tittoni leaves for Rome on Monday. Mr. Balfour has announced his intention of taking a vacation as soon as possible, while M. Venizelos is anxious to return to Greece to attend to domestic problems. In view of these facts, determined efforts are being made to secure an adjournment of the Peace Conference as soon as the Austrian Treaty is settled. The reply to the Austrian counter-proposals will be handed to the Austrians at the end of this week.

BEHIND CLERK'S BACK.

DARING BOOKING OFFICE ROBBED.

A daring robbery was committed at the Redhill railway station booking office during the temporary absence of the booking clerk.

A sum of £50 in Treasury notes, tied up in bundles of ten, lying on a desk at the back of the office, was stolen.

A small window that faces on to a side road had been raised, and it is supposed that the thief used a long stick with some adhesive substance on the end of it to abstract the notes.

The clerk was only away about four or five minutes, and noticed that the notes were missing, and the window open, immediately upon his return.

SEVEN SOLDIERS.

FIGHTING FAMILY HOME.

One of the most remarkable records of war service is that of the seven sons of Mr. and Mrs. Butcher, of the little village of Harlow, in Essex. During the war these seven young men volunteered for service in the Army, and they all served in the trenches.

In ancient days the number seven was held to have a mystical or symbolic significance. However that may be, Mr. and Mrs. Butcher are now proud and happy in the knowledge that not only have their seven sons come safely through the fighting, but have now all returned to their native village.

SHAH TO VISIT ENGLAND.

The Shah of Persia on leaving Constantinople will proceed to Italy, Switzerland and France and then sail for America. He will visit England on his return journey.

The Shah's predecessor visited London about fifteen years ago, and the story is told that when he went to the Crystal Palace, he was invited to make a trip in the topsy-turvy railway. He declined, but ordered one of his suit to go. It is said that the Shah appeared to be disappointed when the courtier returned alive.

TOLSTOI'S PROPERTY

SOVIET'S OFFER TO AUTHOR'S FAMILY.

A Helsingfors message to Copenhagen yesterday states that the Soviet Government has nationalised Tolstoi's property at Gasnaja Poljana, which will be taken over and preserved in remembrance of the author. The Government has invited Tolstoi's family to enter their service in which event they would be allowed to live in the castle, and, for a suitable salary, would be able to manage the institutions for the enlightenment of the people which the Government intend to establish there.

SIR ARTHUR LAWLEY'S VISIT.

INSPECTION OF BRITISH EMPIRE LEAVE CLUB.

During the past week one of the distinguished visitors to Cologne has been Col. the Hon. Sir Arthur Lawley G.C.S.I. who came over to inspect among other things the British Empire Leave Club, of whose Committee of Trustees he is the Hon. Treasurer. Before leaving he addressed a meeting of the lady members and congratulated them on the success of their efforts, especially mentioning Miss Decima Moore, to whose untiring organising energy the Club owes so much, and Miss Adeline Bourne, who has never spared herself or her staff in providing entertainments for the men. The Committee hoped to carry on the Club so long as it was required by the Army of Occupation and he knew he could rely on the lady workers assisting them by every means in their power to keep it going to a successful conclusion. Sir Arthur, who was in the 10th Hussars, has had a varied career. Among his activities he has been Administrator of Matabeleland, Governor of Western Australia, Lt.-Governor of the Transvaal and Governor of Madras.

PUBLIC-HOUSE CONTROL.

GOVERNMENT'S INTENTIONS.

It is stated that the Government policy in regard to the future control of the liquor trade has now been settled, and that the bill embodying it is to be introduced directly Parliament reassembles in October. It is believed to be the intention of the Government to give to the new Commission they propose to ask Parliament to sanction such powers only as will enable them to continue those restrictions on sales, supply, and consumption which the consensus of public opinion is in favour of retaining in peace time.

There is likely to be nothing in the nature of a general amendment of the licensing law, without which it is said to be impossible to compel owners to improve public-houses and thus make provision for better service and accommodation to meet the present-day requirements of the public.

AYRSHIRE'S DRY SEASON.

It is generally admitted that this has been the driest season during the last 50 years, so far as Ayrshire is concerned. The hay crop is an average one, while the oat crop will be of a very varied character. In the north of the county oats will be a full average, but on a number of farms, both in the north and south, the oat crop will be under the average. The general opinion is that both wheat and barley will be the best crops of the season. This year turnips have been a comparative failure in large parts of Ayrshire. The potato crop along the Ayrshire seaboard has been a very good one to both buyers and sellers. Very little butter is being made in Ayrshire, owing to the good prices given for milk and to other causes.

FRANCE AS SHIELD.

The U.S. Senate Judiciary Sub-Committee reports that the proposed Franco-American Treaty under which the United States agrees to go to the aid of France in the event of an unprovoked attack by Germany, is "within the constitutional powers of the treaty-making bodies of this Government," and also that it is to the interest of the United States that France should be allowed to recuperate and recover her old-time vigour, as she will then be "a great shield and protection against any future German attack upon the United States."

UPPER SILESIA.

The "Vossische Zeitung," commenting on the probability of an Allied occupation of Upper Silesia, says that Germany will invoke the peace conditions, according to which an occupation to protect the plebiscitum shall take place after the ratification. Upper Silesia is still German territory. Poland, it is stated, may not interfere with the interior affairs of Germany. The Polish effort to reach a decision by arms will be repulsed by arms

IRONWORKER'S £800 A YEAR.

At Southampton when summoned for non-payment of £26 income-tax, Albert Edward Andrews, a Woolston ironworker, said he had more vital expenses to meet. It was stated that his earnings for six months amounted to £403. He was committed for six weeks in default of payment within seven days.

SILESIAN SITUATION.

A TALE OF TYRANNY.

The situation in Upper Silesia continues to improve now that the German Government has taken firm measures to ensure safety and order. The search for concealed arms continues, and the Polish and other agitators are treated with severity. At Minden the police have arrested three persons for trying to sell 60,000 army rifles to the Poles. The Polish authorities had offered 6,000,000 marks for them. Work in the Silesian mines has not yet been fully resumed; many willing workers are held back by fear of the Spartacists.

Stories of the alleged persecution of the Polish population of Upper Silesia are being received. M. Stanislas Plodowski, a member of the Silesian Delegation, which has recently arrived in Warsaw, has described how the educated class in Silesia had impressed upon the people the necessity of enduring with patience the impositions of the "Grenzschutz" (German military police). The Germans, however, by degrees imprisoned or deported to Germany almost the whole of the educated class of Poles in Silesia, under the impression that, with the lack of their guidance and influence, the working people could be more easily persuaded to vote for Germany when the plebiscite was taken. Finding, however, that these working classes remained loyal in their attachment to Poland, the Germans began to imprison and deport them also, and as a result many cases occurred in which arrest was resisted and people were killed and wounded.

Fugitives from Upper Silesia began to flee across the frontier into the border towns of Poland proper, while those who could not leave, hid themselves in the galleries of disused mines and were fed by their wives and families, who, if caught by the "Grenzschutz" soldiery, were forced to disclose the hiding-places of their husbands or fathers.

Such a condition of affairs, which went on for many months, could no longer be endured, and the people at last rose up against their oppressors. Should the Germans rush up regular troops as reinforcements, the Silesian insurgents, he declared, would certainly be massacred wholesale, and it was for this reason that the Silesian Delegation had come to Warsaw to implore the help of the Polish Government on behalf of the Silesian people, who, deprived of their leaders, and themselves ignorant of diplomacy, had risen up against the Germans, and now turned to Poland for succour in their hour of need.

DICTAPHONE DETECTIVES.

A private New York detective agency says that it has been able to instal a dozen dictaphones in various large New York residences, and is now rapidly accumulating evidence which, when disclosed, will result in a "sensational social scandal." The agency refuses to say just the sort of evidence it is securing. They claim that the dictaphones are hidden in such a skilful manner that the minutest search would not disclose them, has caused many of New York's wealthy to search their consciences instead of their rooms to ascertain whether they are living strictly within the law, and to urge extreme caution regarding what is said and done in their establishments. The evidence has already been obtained against nearly 100 men and women, say the detectives.

BATHING ACCIDENTS.

Reginald George Fogg, the 15-year-old son of Mr. Harry George Fogg, Doncaster, was drowned at Whitby. There was a nasty ground swell and Mr. and Mrs. Fogg watched their son swim out, but seeing friends of other bathers beckoning the bathers to come ashore, Mr. Fogg also signalled, but his son apparently did not see the warning signs and proceeded to swim outwards. He was lost to sight and when other bathers reached the shore young Fogg was missing. Shortly after the body was washed ashore.

Wallis Reginald Poll, a clerk at Barclay's Bank, Lowestoft, who was on a visit to Jersey, was drowned while bathing at Marine Pool.

Miss Doris Isabel Parry, aged 21, daughter of Dr. Thomas Wilson Parry, of Belmont, Crouch End, died from syncope while bathing at Crackington Haven, near Bude, North Cornwall.

BUS V. LORRY.

Yesterday at Blackheath, an omnibus on the Croydon-Plumstead service was run into by a heavy lorry and upset. The driver made a big swerve to try to clear the lorry, which caught the rear of the bus and swung it over. All twelve passengers were injured and nine were detained at Blackheath Cottage Hospital. The injured included Lieut.-Col. William Clayon, and Lieut. A. Lees of Woolwich.

NO WATER, NO WORK.

All the tinplate works at Llanelly are closed on account of the great scarcity of water. Many thousands of workmen are involved. The Corporation has decided to ration water for trade purposes, and it is hoped to keep the works partially going in this way while the present serious state of affairs exists.

RANGERS' TRAINER FINED.

Described as the trainer of Queen's Park Rangers, F. C. William Draper of Harlesden, was, with Cpl. Dingle, R.A.S.C., fined £3 at Marylebone, on Wednesday, for unlawful possession of Government hemp rope said to have come from Marylebone where Cpl. Dingle was on duty.

TUNNEL MYSTERY.

GUNNER DOYLE DISCHARGED.

Yesterday, at Chippenham, Gunner Edwin Doyle, 29th Bde. Royal Field Artillery was charged on remand with being concerned in the death of Gunner White, R.F.A., whom he was alleged to have thrown out of a railway carriage in Box tunnel on July 25th last.

White, who was on leave from the Rhine, boarded the ten o'clock night train from Paddington for the West. When the train reached Plymouth an official found a soldier's equipment in a carriage but no owner. The carriage door was shut when the train reached the station. At the inquest the jury intended to return an open verdict until a relative suggested foul play. There was no kind of evidence as to White's death and the inquest was adjourned for further inquiry.

On July 31st Doyle was arrested at Woolwich and charged at Chippenham. Yesterday, after many remands, it was stated that the Public Prosecutor would not proceed with the case, since there was nothing to show that White was on the train with Doyle. Doyle was discharged.

As a matter of fact Doyle was on his way from Euston to Birmingham that night. No light has been thrown on the mystery of White's death and the question remains, was he murdered? If so, by whom, and if he was not murdered, who closed the carriage door behind him?

MEDIATIONS.

AT PEACE TREATY TABLE.

The members of the German Peace Delegation who are still at Versailles having expressed the wish to visit the château, permission was granted, and two groups of them were conducted in succession round the château by Lieutenant Renaudin. The Germans remained a considerable time in the Galérie des Glaces, and expressed great astonishment at not finding the little table on which the treaty was signed, and which they were particularly anxious to see. They were therefore shown the table where it now stands, in the Salle du Grand Convent. They gazed at it for a long time, then approached it and fingered it, but all without uttering a single word.

CHECKWEIGHING ACT.

In accordance with the Checkweighing in Various Industries Act, 1919, the Home Secretary has prescribed that when the workmen or a majority of them desire that the capacity of the moulds in which the iron or steel is cast should be tested a requisition for the purpose shall be made by serving on the employer a notice in writing signed by or on behalf of the workmen affected or a majority of them specifying the moulds which they require to be tested. Regulations are also laid down for the appointment of a checkweigher or other representative of the workers.

STOWAWAY'S SPRINT.

There was an exciting scene at Liverpool docks on the arrival of the liner "Orduna." Two days after the vessel left New York a stowaway named Samuel Stake was found and placed under an armed guard.

In the confusion of docking he managed to give the guard the slip, but was seen and followed. He refused to stop and after a warning, the guard fired at him and he was shot in the thigh. He then fell or jumped into the dock but was rescued, and taken to hospital seriously hurt.

MARQUIS OF LONDONDERRY.

The freedom of the City of Belfast is to be conferred on the Marquis of Londonderry in recognition of his military services during the war, and of his association with the province of Ulster.

In celebration of peace the Marquis of Londonderry, on Saturday, entertained the workers from his Durham collieries in the grounds of Seaham Hall. Some 10,000 invitations were sent out. During the proceedings the Marquis presented to several of his ex-soldier employees war decorations awarded for gallantry in the field.

INFANT WELFARE.

Opening a fête at Walmer in aid of a day nursery, Earl Beauchamp emphasised the vital importance of infant welfare to the nation. He said there were those who thought this kind of work was not necessary for, and should not be used to assist, well-to-do people, but the two occasions on which he had known such work to be most urgently needed were in two of the richest homes with which he had ever come into contact.

LIMBS SET IN MID-AIR.

Caught in the winding gear of an outside lift, in London, Frank Childs had an exciting time suspended some 70ft. from the ground. He sustained a broken leg and arm. First aid men scaled a ladder and succeeded in putting the injured limbs in splints. A stretcher was then brought up, the man put in it, and lowered by means of four ropes, safely to the ground.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

An Archangel telegram states that Lord Settrington, son of the Earl of March, who was wounded in the chest on August 10th, died from his injuries on August 23rd.

THAT 1s. 6d. LOAF.

NO SUCH RISE LIKELY.

The sensational rise in the price of the loaf predicted in some quarters is not likely to take place.

"The Ministry of Food," said an official of that body, "are unable to conjecture on what figures Sir George Paish bases his estimate that the 4lb. loaf may cost 1s. 6d. in the spring.

Even if the Government withdrew its £50,000,000 subsidy—and so far as is known there is no intention on the part of the Government to do so—the 4lb. loaf would not rise above 1s. 1d. The latter is an over-generous figure, and it is only to be assumed that Sir George concludes that this country will be dependent entirely on American supplies and on a further depreciated currency arising therefrom.

"As a matter of fact, the American market is not the only source of supply."

ATTEMPTED JEWEL ROBBERY.

Another attempt at jewel robbery was thwarted by a young girl who was in charge of a Paris shop. Three men entered the shop, which is situated in the Avenue Nil, near the Etoile. One of them asked her if his scarf-pin could be repaired, and while she was examining it a second fastened the door. She looked up to find a revolver pointed at her by the third man. The girl screamed loudly, thus giving the alarm. The three men decided that they had better get away. They rushed out. A burly workman coming up promptly knocked down the man with the scarf-pin. His companions escaped. His story is that he had been promised £10 to engage the girl in conversation while his accomplices took all they could lay their hands on.

BOLSHEVIST CLAIMS.

The Bolshevist wireless message yesterday claimed an advance against Denikin on the whole of the Southern front except the right Ukrainian angle. They say that they have recaptured Kamishin and advanced on Tsaritsin and that General Mamantoff's cavalry is surrounded.

No confirmation of the recapture of Kamishin comes from any other source, and the claim is in direct contradiction to the latest War Office statement, that Denikin's advance is being rapidly continued all along the line.

The message also says that the Bolshevists have recaptured Pskov, which Pitlura is stated to have occupied. On Kolchak's front it is claimed that the troops have reached Retsk near Orenburg and continue their advance.

ALLIED COMMISSION.

General Dupont, Chief of the French Mission, is not accompanying the Commission, which consists of two British, two French, two Italian and one Japanese officers under the leadership of one of the British officers, Colonel Tidbury. It will inquire into the causes of the recent disturbances and suggest means of government by which similar troubles may be avoided in future.

The Commission, which is being sent from the Allied Military Missions in Berlin, says "The Times," must not be confused with the Inter-Allied Coal Commission proceeding to Moravian Ostrau.

VICAR HAS TO QUIT.

Owing to house shortage a difficult position has been created in the village of Snibstone, Leicestershire, for the vicar, the Rev. F.W. Atkins, who has received notice to quit, the new owner having bought the house for his own occupation.

A new church was built in the parish a few years ago, and the erection of a vicarage was proposed, but this was held up through the war.

Not another house is to be had, and the vicar has called a meeting of the parishioners for their advice.

NEW JERUSALEM.

Mr. Patrick Geddes, professor of botany at St Andrews University has been engaged by the International Zionist Commission to plan a new Jerusalem and proposed university. He will work with Dr. Weizmann, head of the British Zionist Commission and will leave immediately for Palestine to visit Haifa, Jaffa and Jerusalem and submit a report. While in Palestine he will organise a department for sociology and civics for Bombay university and carry out Indian town planning work.

"DEBT WE OWE."

Fifteen hundred discharged and demobilized soldiers were entertained at a "Debt We Owe" dinner by the citizens of Peterborough. Former officers and men sat together at the meal, which was provided by the local butchers, bakers, brewers, and other tradesmen. The voluntary waiters and helpers included Colonel Lord Exeter, Brigadier-General Strong, C.B., Sir Richard Winfrey, M.P., and the Mayor of Peterborough.

GOLD RESERVES AND PAPER MONEY.

An article in the Paris "Matin" of August 14th based on French official figures corrected up to July 15th shows the ratio between gold reserves and paper issues and incidentally establishes the favourable position of Great Britain. The values are, of course, calculated at par and have no reference to current and fluctuating rates of exchange. The comparatively small volume of paper in circulation will, no doubt, surprise those who did not bear in mind that the whole tribe of "Bradburys" was merely a substitute for coined gold and that trade had been carried on, not by means of coined gold but by cheques and bills of exchange, and that these are used since 1914 just as before. The figures are:

	Gold Reserve.	Notes in circulation.
United States	$ 181,000,000	$ 899,840,000
France	„ 222,240,000	„ 1399,080,000
Great Britain	„ 88,720,000	„ 78,880,000
Japan	„ 140,920,000	„ 171,280,000
Italy	„ 32,360,000	„ 372,320,000
Russia	„ 360,000,000	„ 18,013,280,000
Germany	„ 55,720,000	„ 1490,880,000
Spain	„ 91,600,000	„ 143,360,000
Holland	„ 54,720,000	„ 84,880,000
Switzerland	„ 18,720,000	„ 35,720,000

The figures concerning Russia are obviously doubtful. What is clear about this unfortunate country is that at the opening of the war it held the largest stock of gold in the world, while to-day it is responsible for the largest issue of paper money.

Leaving Russia out of account, France now has the largest holding of gold in its banks, followed closely by the United States, with Japan third, Spain fourth and Great Britain fifth.

But when we turn to the ratio between the official holding of gold and the notes in circulation the figures wear an entirely different complexion. Great Britain stands at the head and holds more gold than it has notes in circulation! Japan is a rather bad second with a holding of 81% of gold for paper. Spain is third. The United States is covered to the extent of about 20%.

Another point of interest is this. Some countries have obviously profited by the war. Thus the United States has more than quadrupled its gold reserve since June 1914, the Spanish holding has grown from 21 millions in July 1914 to about 91 millions at the present time, Switzerland has doubled and Holland increased its holding by over 50%.

FROM SMALL BEGINNINGS

So much has been written about army education, and so great has been the praise lavished upon it, that one has lost sight of the chaotic state of its humble beginnings. Consequently, the great fact that so orderly a scheme has arisen out of such chaos has hardly been recognised. An article in the "Fortnightly Review" described, with touching and compelling detail, how education was carried on in a battery previous to the cessation of hostilities. Probably much that was written was true.

It is interesting to recall its inception, how vast quantities of material poured from the various headquarters, and eventually came to rest in unit offices.

The magic word "education" flew from lip to lip. Section commanders of artillery, platoon commanders of infantry, and anyone who commanded anything lower that a battery or company, with feverish haste harangued the rank and file upon the benefits of education. The value of courses was emphasized. They were told how noble hearted experts at various bases yearned to initiate the novice into the mysteries of internal combustion, and how self-sacrificing professors itched to expound dynamics, circular functions, etc. The men were interested. Perhaps after months of active service, they were in no mood to resist. Anyhow section commanders emerged, exhausted but triumphant, with bulky nominal rolls, as the foundation of the many excellent schools we now find on the Rhine.

There was a state of patient expectancy. Occasionally men disappeared from their usual haunts. One was claimed for a farriery course. Another departed with a desire to acquire knowledge and dexterity as a "turner." These two cases were excellent, but isolated. Interest displaced indifference and a real desire to learn was manifest. Tact on the part of instructors helped considerably and drew scholastic recruits from quite unexpected quarters.

With the final disposition of the troops, education raised itself from the depths in which it had lain for several months, and "compulsion" formed the keynote of the revised system. As in all phases of life, out of chaos ultimately came order until one now sees Corps and Divisional Schools, Technical Colleges, and training shops on all hands, a striking comparison with the vague and incomplete educational arrangements formulated at the end of last year. One now realises that educational training is a definite and serious thing. The growth of the scheme, the re-ordering of all previous arrangements, the untiring energy of the instructors' training centres, (Newmarket and Oxford) are all indications of the magnitude of the scheme, and a proof that education will remain as part of a soldier's training.

AT THE SIGN OF THE RED SHIELD.

It is Saturday night and Hohestrasse is packed with a surging crowd of people. Soldiers of all the Allied armies, and civilians of all descriptions are passing to and fro. It is difficult to move and the heat is stifling. The shops are doing a roaring trade, the cabarets are filled with a careless laughing throng of young and old. There is, perhaps, no other sight to equal it in the world, it is the hub of this capital of Rhineland. Feasting and revelry, music and dancing, is in full swing.

It is just in a place like this where the flag of the Salvation Army is to be seen. The followers of General Booth prefer Whitechapel in London and Hohestrasse in Cologne, to the suburbs of these cities for in these places men are face to face with temptations in many forms and this great evangelical philantrophic organization wishes to help them.

At the sign of the Red Shield in Hohestrasse, and Obenmarspforten, which leads just off it you, will find the ever open door through which crowds of our soldiers are constantly passing to enjoy the warmhearted unfailing hospitality which is given to them.

Make your way to No 13 Hohestrasse, known by the name of the Storch Hotel and there Staff-Captain Hush, the energetic, genial General Superintendent of the Salvation Army work in Rhineland or Adjutant Gladden, who ably seconds him will show you round.

Over the doorway written in large letters is the word "Welcome!" You enter the large restaurant decorated with stags' heads and mirrors and find it crowded with men enjoying a splendid repast of tarts, fruit and other good things. Here also is a well stocked canteen and underneath in the huge cellar you will find vast stores of biscuits and other comforts under the capable charge of Captain Noble. There are also all kinds of recreation and writing rooms.

Climb the staircase and you will enter a long corridor. On either side are comfortable bedrooms, and beds to the number of 47. This is a unique feature of the work for Tommy can have one of these rooms to himself from 7 p.m. to 9 a.m. and rest in peace. In the morning a good breakfast awaits him and the total charge is a little over a shilling.

These rooms are always occupied and there is a big rush for them for the week-ends.

One remarkable feature of this club, which is unique in Rhineland, is a splendid brass band of thirty-three men under the conductorship of Captain Durman. All the men are Salvation Army soldiers with the Rhine Army and they are proud of this honour. The band has won fame in our occupied area and occasionally goes on tour playing for various units.

On Sundays and during the week there are splendid religious services; the one on Sunday evenings being immensely popular with our men, who crowd the big hall and sing with great fervour. There are other such centres of work in Rhineland carried out by this organization. In Bonn, there are two in charge of Captain Broughton and Ensign and Mrs. Boyd. In Gymnich, Ensign Brown holds the fort; at Horrem, Captain Buttelle; Düren, Captain and Mrs. Hill; Solingen, Captain and Mrs. Johnson. The one at Obenmarspforten, Cologne, is in charge of two excellent officers, Commandant Arthur and Captain Kimpter.

The greatest in our land have gratefully acknowledged the wonderful work of the Salvation Army for our boys during the war, and we in the Rhine Army pay our tribute. The "Sign of the Red Shield" stands for a real living practical christianity. G. K.

THE OFFICER'S CLUB IN COLOGNE.

BY A SENIOR OFFICER.

When the time arrives—and it is rapidly drawing near—for us to look back upon our stay with the Army of Occupation, and to renew our memory of these times, there will, I think, be one place to which our minds will often turn with especial pleasure. I mean the Officers' Club in the city. Here, surely, is a place which has meant more than most others to the British Officer during his stay in Cologne or the immediate neighbourhood.

What a list might be made of the many happy unions or re-unions which have taken place within those hospitable walls, which throughout those months have been made to enclose so much that is reminiscent of home and of British life at its best, where social intercourse, good fellowship and happiness have abounded.

It all seems so natural and so ready to hand that perhaps we hardly concern ourselves at all with the immense amount of organization and detailed work that goes to bring about the comfort and social pleasure that we so easily enjoy in the Club. But it would be ungrateful not to give a thought and a word of appreciation to those who have laboured to secure our comfort and enjoyment.

Those mystic letters, "N.A.C.B." stand and have stood for much throughout the war, and still they are full of meaning in these days of peace. For it is to the vast organization which these letters connote that we owe very much of our comfort and enjoyment. Of course, it is an offical organization. Granted, but our experience must have been limited if we have not yet found that official Boards and what they accomplish can either be good, bad or indifferent, according to the spirit which lies behind their working. It is when the spirit is right that the results are satisfactory. So then a word of congratulation for our own Club and all that it is doing and will yet do.

The difficulties of running such a Club in a foreign country, largely with native service, and with a financial rate of exchange which varies from day to day might well appal the most experienced Secretary of a West End London Club.

Yet here in Cologne these difficulties have been met and largely overcome, as the thousands of officers who use the Club can testify. For the Club is no small institution, but deals with large numbers, thousands of officers passing through it for longer or shorter periods every week. The mere matter of the food consumed within it every week, would, I fancy, startle the ordinary host or hostess. Yet all goes smoothly, and the complaints on this score must be few indeed, though its members know something of London Clubs and their amenities.

So then the Officers Club—here as in any another part of the area of occupation—may surely be counted as one of those things which has been tried and not found wanting. To-day it is giving comfort and pleasure to officers innumerable, not a few of whom will in the days that are to come look back with pleasure to the happiness they experienced in it, and perhaps think gratefully, too, of those, who by their consideration and thoughtful management have done and are still doing so much to make it a place of welcome and comfort.

BRIDGES.

The more accustomed to anything we become, the less significance it has for us. To most of us, the objects we see every day in our lives, become commonplace. We are apt, through our trait of taking things for granted, to lose or let pass unnoticed, some of the finer and more delicate shades of sentiment that lie hidden in almost everything. And sentiment makes life worth living.

How often do we give a real thought to the bridge that we cross so many times in a day's journey. Do we ever stop for a moment to think of a bridge as anything other than a public way? How many tragedies has the bridge witnessed. How many comedies has it seen. If only it could speak of scenes enacted upon it. What a tale it could tell of the intricacies weaved in the two spheres it connects.

A bridge is like a link in the great chain of the public highway. It may connect two ordinary thoroughfares, two towns, two counties or perhaps even two countries; but it is the only possible way over the gulf it spans. It is absolutely neutral, just as ready to give access to one side as to the other. A bridge is never unfair. It never refuses to one what it gives to another, yet it is a thing of vast importance, zealously guarded, if need be by the armed might of a nation.

From the early ages it has been, no matter where situated, a point of stragegical importance in war. After the greatest war in the world's history, the victors elect to hold the bridges.

Let us glance at the pageant that passes over the bridge. The average business man hurrying along to the office, thankful that there are no shops on the bridge where idlers might pause and so obstruct his path. The woman with a sad look upon her face, carrying a bundle, struggling cruelly it would seem against a hard world. The young maiden tripping gaily over the bridge to what? We do not know.

What of the battalion of soldiers that we see pass over in war time? Passing over may be to the great unknown, going happily along with never a thought as to whether they will ever recross the the bridge. Perhaps it's as well that they do not realise how symbolical is a bridge—the gateway for them to a greater world.

The bridge seems to impart a sense of security. An antidote for the wavering mind, a stimulus to the weak by its appearance of strength. One can scarcely realise it is the work of mere man.

It is a favourite meeting and parting place. How often has the faithful lover hurried to the bridge to meet the lady of his heart. They meet and depart together. Some hours later they return—the evening spent in each other's company—to say good bye. They linger a moment—and embrace, and they part. One over the bridge, the other stays for a moment, with a feeling that his companion has gone into another world.

With a sigh and one last look at the bridge, he turns homeward. S. V. B.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

A BADGE WANTED.

Sir,—I have just read a letter over the initials "G.A." pleading for a distinctive badge to be worn by British civilians trading in Rhineland.

Has he not managed to gain any badge in the late war which he can wear to show his nationality? J. R. D.

BANDS IN OPEN SPACES.

Sir,—I do not agree with two of your correspondents on the subject of "Military Bands" playing before the public in Cologne.

The band of which I am a member, works very hard and plays every night, apart from Sunday.

One question, Sir, is it to be a paying engagement, or a voluntary one?

BAND SERGT.

RISE AND FALL.

Sir,—No one, who has seen the Cologne Suspension Bridge, can have failed to notice the ingenious method adopted by the German engineers in order to compensate for the stresses set up in the structure by changes of temperature. I refer to the knuckle joints between the piers and the supporting towers.

When crossing the bridge, I noticed the camber of the roadway appeared to be higher than normal. Assuming that this might be due to an optical illusion, I proceeded to the Hohenzollern Bridge, when I noticed that the towers supporting the chains were about 5 degrees from the vertical; the one on the Deutz side leaning to the East, and the one on the Cologne side to the West.

The bearings were taking by using two of the vertical stanchions of the Hohenzollern Bridge as sights. Two photographs of the Suspension Bridge both taken from a carefully marked position on the Hohenzollern Bridge—one being exposed in the early morning, and the other in the heat of the day—do not coincide when superimposed, and the difference is quite astonishing.

The writer would be interested to learn the maximum deviation observed by some less rough-and-ready method than the one adopted by

"PONTUS."

THE R.A.D.C.

Sir,—Referring to "Thespian's" letter everyone will agree that punctuality is, at all times an excellent asset but no doubt in this particular instance there are difficulties of which we have no knowledge.

Personally, I find an evening's entertainment such as this Company gives us, food enough in itself. N. C. O.

THE FUTURE OF THE OFFICER.

Sir,—I have read a great deal from time to time about demobilization, but never a word from an officer of the Rhine Army asking what is going to become of him under the new reduction scheme.

I have spoken to a large number on the subject and not one has a plan of campaign for the time when he will inevitably be informed that his services as an officer are no longer required.

Is there any opening for the young officer who has great military ambitions? I am not an egotist but I do feel that my profession is soldiering. I do not want to be demobilized, and there are many thousands who do not either because they have nothing to look forward to. Are they ashamed to speak up?

ERASMUS.

WHAT BOOKS TO READ.

Sir,—Like your correspondent "Commercial Teacher" I have been interested in the selections of books given, and I also cannot understand why modern authors appear to be so neglected. However, I cannot agree that he gives a representative selection. To my mind, it is a far cry from Oscar Wilde to Ralph Connor, for instance.

A better average list, in my opinion, would be "The Angel of Pain," "Paul" and "Sheaves," E. F. Benson "The Hill," H. A. Vachell "Four Feathers," A. E. W. Mason "The Dop Doctor," "The Man of Iron," Richard Dehan "The Call of the Blood," "Garden of Allah," R. S. Hichens "Broad Highway", "Amateur Gentleman," Jeffrey Farnol and "Sinister Street," Compton Mackenzie. F. W. E.

AN APPEAL FOR HARMONY.

Sir,—It was with regret that I read "Nonconformist's" letter, as it seems so unnecessary that one interested in public worship as he appears to be should trouble to write a criticism of that nature.

As our preference for a liturgical or non-liturgical service may largely be produced by temperament, education, upbringing and other circumstances of life, if we must print our views would it not be better to write on points of harmony and agreement?

While those worshipping in the Garrison Church are happy in their service, they undoubtedly would be pleased to know that their Nonconformist comrades are happy in theirs and would prefer to think that the views expressed by "Nonconformist" are his personal views, and not those of the whole body of their Nonconformist friends.

SANS CIGARETTE.

When work is o'er and we have leisure.
Turn our thoughts to things of pleasure.
A glass of wine, a yarn well said.
A chat perhaps on books you've read.
An evening with a fair coquette,
But now, alas, sans cigarette.

Perhaps you're tired and sore and galled,
The route march halt is not yet called.
Another mile, or two, or three
And then hurrah! we shall be free
And off with pack and down we'll get
And smoke — in dreams — sans cigarette.

A time will come, I hope quite soon,
When we can purchase of the boon
Sir Walter Raleigh brought to light,
That gave to man such huge delight.
Our Canteen Stores will stock them yet.
My Siren sweet — my cigarette.

"R. B.'s" MEMORABLE DAY.

Combined Brigade Celebration of Regimental Birthday.

ATHLETIC SPORTS.

The 25th August is the most memorable day in the history of the Rifle Brigade, for, since 1800, this date has been recognised and observed as the "Regimental-Birthday." Fortunately for the 51st, 52nd, and 53rd Battalion, which compose the 3rd Light Brigade, it was possible to organise a combined celebration of this year's anniversary, and favoured by brilliant weather and other pleasing conditions, the occasion was marked by unqualified success.

A sports-programme as comprehensive as it was interesting was organised and carried through in an excellent manner, thanks to the efforts of the committee and officials who were untiring in their efforts to promote the success of the occasion. That these efforts were keenly appreciated by both competitors and spectators was evidenced by the enthusiasm and applause which marked the various events. Every item in the lengthy programme was productive of good sport, while mirth was by no means lacking.

It was truly a Rifleman's holiday, carried out in the real spirit of the 95th Regiment.

A "Red Letter Day."

Excellent music was rendered by the band; meals were served al fresco, and everything combined to make the day a red letter one to those who participated in the proceedings.

The proceedings were graced by the presence of a considerable number of guests representing all branches and arms of the service, noticeable amongst whom was Lieut.-General Sir C. W. Jacob, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Commanding II Corps. At the conclusion of the programme Mrs. Kennedy, wife of Brig.-General H. B. Kennedy, C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding 3rd Light Brigade, kindly presented the prizes to the successful competitors.

The whole of the arrangements was in the experienced hands of the following committee and officials:—

TO-MORROW'S RACES.

"I Know's" Selections for Cologne, 2nd August Meeting.

THE DAY'S BEST THING.

We publish below the comments and selections of a correspondent for the Cologne 2nd August race meeting, taking place at Merheim, to-morrow. He says:—

Kilbay

ran very well when he was a good second to John Cording at the recent Cavalry Division meeting, "Late Report" and "Naboth" finishing behind him. Now that "Uffly" has lost his maiden certificate and therefore cannot run, his change amongst the poor lot entered for the 1st Division Maiden Steeplechase is obvious.

Double Ruff

engaged in the 2nd Division Maiden Steeplechase, was up against some hot stuff when finishing third to "Ugly" and "Remember Me" last Saturday, and, as the latter waits for her engagement at Crefeld on Sunday, I strongly recommend the support of my selected.

Girl o' Girls.

The distance (5 furlongs) of the 1st Division of the Moderate Plate will just suit this speedy pony. She was well there at this distance last Saturday, when she failed to stay the 7 furlongs with "Polly Dear" and "Dark Prince." At the previous meeting, August 5th, she put up a good enough performance to win this race, when finishing third in a big field to "Pop" and "Sprint" in the Niehl Stakes. I take "Byron" as the danger and good for a place.

Dark Prince

in the 2nd Div. of the Moderate Plate must have a great chance after his good second to "Polly Dear" last Saturday, and as "Girl o' Girls" finished about four lengths behind him, readers will be able to judge for themselves after he has run in the 1st Div. of this race. The danger is "Polly Dear" who will be giving "Dark Prince" 12lbs.

Iron Gate

in the International Steeplechase has certainly been treated very nicely by the Handicappers, and such animals as "Rednal" "Naboth," "Firefly II," "Yes Uncle," "Phreya," "Clutha," and "Lady Betty" might as well remain in their stables, for all the chance they have of beating him. I look upon this as the best thing of the day, the only danger being "Golden Sunset" if a strong jockey is up.

Mascot

who will put up 211bs for his successes looks to even then have the Merheim Stakes at his mercy. I can see no danger to this good horse.

Winamere

is more suited to obstacles than flat, and looks to have a great chance in the Allied Hurdles. With "Remember Me" and "Ugly" out of the way he should win.

Sahib

in the Rhine St. Leger is one of our best stayers, and he will find some of the better class horses declining this contest; "Boy o' Boys," "Patrick," "Winamere," "Phreya," and "Geraldine" are also not likely to compete, having more tempting engagements. I therefore expect him to win this race, and take "Digby Grand" for a place.

"I KNOW"

"A" BATTERY FAREWELL.

Lieut. W. W. Brown Feted: A Popular Officer.

By kind permission of the O.C., Major C. R. Rickeard, R.F.A., who together with Lieut.-Col. G. L. Walker R.F.A., the Brigade Commander, acted as judges, a race meeting was held on Monday at Kirchherten by "A" Battery, 51st Brigade R.F.A., in honour of Lieut. W. W. Brown, M.C., R.F.A., who is shortly returning to civil life.

This was followed by an excellent concert, the Battery talent being ably augmented by Capt. Harvey of the Lowland Div. Sig. Coy. R.E., Lieut. A. Rawson, M.C., and Lieut. Murchie, M.C., of the 3rd Lowland T.M. Bde., and Lieut. Hill and Sergt. Hayter of the Lowland D.A.C.

Lieut. Brown has been with A/51 since January 1918, and has won the esteem of both officers and men, not only by reason of his excellent qualities as an officer, but also by his untiring efforts in organising sports and amusements for the Battery during the time he has been with them.

The well merited popularity which he enjoys was amply expressed by the vociferous applause which greeted his appearance on the stage when Major C. R. Rickeard presented him, on behalf of the officers and men of the Battery, with a handsome gold watch as a token of their appreciation, and in a few well chosen words assured him of the heart felt wishes of all for his future success.

DEAUVILLE DAVIS CUP.

British Representatives In Poor Form On Opening Days.

The whole of fashionable Deauville flocked to the lawn tennis courts to witness the opening match of the Davis Cup on hard courts between France and England. The eager spectators were fully rewarded by an exhibition of clever play when Mr. P. M. Davson, the British covered courts champion, met M. André Gobert, champion of the world on hard courts, in the first match.

The first set was limited to long duels from the base line and ultimately fell to M. Gobert at 7—5. In the second set Mr. Davson started brilliantly, capturing the first two games, but he was soon overtaken by M. Gobert, who obtained a lead of 5—3. M. Gobert successfully killed Mr. Davson's lobs and was serving and volleying magnificently. He won the second at 6—4.

In the third set Mr. Davson played very carefully and cleverly, making some splendid passing shots, and won 6—4.

Davis Lawn Tennis Cup.—Singles: M. Gobert (France) beat Mr. P. M. Davson (British Isles), 7—5, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4.

British Doubles Defeat.

On the second day the British Isles team showed no improvement. In the first set the Frenchmen won 6-love, a feature of the play being Gobert's excellent service. The set lasted only a quarter of an hour. The British pair succeeded in winning the first game of the second set, but it was the only game to fall to them, the French team winning by 6—1 without effort. The third set was more evenly contested, but again the French won by 12—10. The British were represented by Barrett and Turnbull, while Gobert and Laurentz played for France. Barrett played well but received little support from his partner.

There was a larger attendance than on the previous day but the weather was not favourable; rain delayed the match for three quarters of an hour and it was very windy.

SERGEANTS' SPOON SHOOT.

The members of G.H.Q. No. 1 Sergeants Mess Rifle Club held their second spoon shoot on the Merheim Ranges on Saturday last. After an exciting competition, the spoon was won by Sergt.-Major Coop, Loyal North Lancs., of the School of Cookery.

The next spoon shoot will take place on Saturday next, and a bus will leave No. 1 G.H.Q. Sergeants Mess at 1.30 p.m. prompt. Tea will be provided on the Ranges. The Club will welcome any sergeants or higher ranks stationed in Cologne to join them, and those intending to compete should notify the secretary not later than 2 p.m. on Friday.

POLO TOURNAMENT.

Owing to the scratching of the Dragoon Bde. team in the Handicap Tournament, the matches to-day will be as follows:—

3 p.m.:—Final Inter-Regt. Tournament, 17th Lancers v Royal Dragoons.

A Boxing Challenge.

L/Cpl. Corbett of No. 3 Coy. R.A.S.C., Lancashire Divisional Train, is open to box anyone in the Rhine Army at 10st. 10lbs. If this challenge is not accepted by October 1st., Corbett will claim the 10st. 10lbs. Rhine Army championship.

NARROW VICTORY.

12th R.I.R.'s Win 2nd Light Bde. Sports Cup.

C.O. CHAIRED.

The exciting struggle for the possession of the 2nd Light Brigade Sports Cup, presented for competition by Brig.-General R.A.M. Currie, C.M.G., D.S.O., was concluded last week when the 12th Batn Royal Irish Rifles won the trophy by the narrow margin of 4½ points.

The boxing contests took place at on open air ring at Haan on the 18th inst., and were witnessed by a large crowd, who lined the slopes of the natural amphitheatre.

The officials were as follows:—

At the conclusion of the boxing, Brig.-Gen. R. A. M. Currie, C.M.G., D.S.O., in a fitting speech thanked the officials for their services and then presented medals to the successful competitors.

The final stages were reached on the 20th inst., when the basket ball matches and the cross country run were decided. It should be stated that the athletic events had been run off a week earlier as previously reported in "The Cologne Post."

The venue for these events was the sports ground at Wald.

The Basket Ball.

The basket ball matches played in the morning proved very interesting.

The results were:—

12th R.I.R. beat 9th London Regt. 4 pts.—2 pts.

12th R.I.R. beat 6th London Regt. 7 pts.—2 pts.

9th London Regt. beat 6th London Regt. 4 pts.—2 pts.

The order of merit thus was:—

1. 12th R.I.R.
2. 9th London Regt.
3. 6th London Regt.

The cross country run took place in the evening over a very hard course of 4¼ miles. Each Battalion placed 20 starters in the field and points were awarded for first men home and also for a team of fifteen starters according to the time within which they finished. Sergt. Green of the 9th London Regt. was first man home, having run a beautiful race. He was closely followed by L/Cpl. Cotmore of the 12th R.I.R. The points gained by the teams were:—

9th London Regt.	5 points
12th R.I.R.	2 points
6th London Regt.	1 point.

By 4½ points.

At the conclusion the officials retired to summarise the events and there was an atmosphere of suppressed excitement when they returned to the score board. When the final figures were disclosed they showed that the 12th R.I.R. had won the Cup by the narrow margin of 4½ points, the figures being:—

12th R.I.R.	72 points
9th London Regt.	67½ points
6th London Regt.	43 points.

Brig.-General R. A. M. Currie, C. M. G., D.S.O., after bestowing praise on all units for making the competition such a pronounced success, then presented the Cup to Lieut.-Col. W. R. Goodwin, C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding the 12th R.I.R., who was "chaired" from the enclosure, amidst great enthusiasm and vociferous cheering.

In conclusion mention should be made of the untiring energy of the Committee, and especially of Capt. G. Whittuck, M.C., Brigade-Major, for making the competition such an unprecedented success.

KEERIL'S "HAT TRICK."

Cav. Div. H.Q. v. 1st Field Sq., R.E.

The above friendly match was played at Quadrath, on Wednesday, and resulted in a win for Cav. Div. H.Q. by 39 runs. For the winners Cpl. Adams played a fine innings of 40 runs and also took 4 wickets for 15 runs. Sergt. Keeril took 6 wickets for 16 runs, 4 with successive balls. For the losers, Spr. Smith played a merry innings of 19 runs.

This was the Cav. Div. H.Q.'s last match and they thus end a highly successful season having won 25 matches, drawn 1, and lost 7.

MAGNIFICENT FINISH.

Race Rock Wins The Ebor Handicap.

YORK DETAILS.

The feature of the York Meeting on Wednesday was the Ebor Handicap.

John Jacket's jockey had orders to force the pace and he tried to make all the running. Queen's Square kept within hail until half the distance was covered when weight began to tell and it was soon apparent she would not win. John Jacket increased his lead, but Race Rock and Wildwood challenged and one of the most magnificent finishes in the history of the race was seen, three fighting out a head to head finish. Race Rock got the best of it by a short head from Wildwood. John Jacket was beaten by a head for the second place.

Results:—

Falmouth Handicap:—1, Laugh (2—1); 2, Fairy Lantern (20—1); 3, Lady Craigie (5—1).

A PLUCKY LOSER.

Attwood (Canada) defeats Carter (America) on Points.

At the Ring, Joe Attwood, of Canada, met Kid Carter, of America. Attwood secured the verdict at the end of twenty rounds. Carter was the more accurate and the faster at long range early on, but close in the Canadian was the stronger and more effective. Carter was very properly spoken to for holding with the left early in the third session, and later executed a splendidly forceful "corkscrew" left to the short ribs that made Attwood wince, though the last-named was fighting fast and scoring well at the bell. Carter fell back into the habit of thrusting his left under his adversary's right armpit, putting himself at a disadvantage thereby against an aggressive two-handed inside fighter, and well punished for his transgression in the fourth bout, was showing colour at the mouth at the end of the sixth. The American travelled better from the seventh call, but by the tenth meeting Attwood was getting the right over nicely, and half-way held a decided lead. Carter's mouth was in bad shape from the twelfth round, but he went the distance and kept Attwood working hard. There was a deal of clinching, especially during the concluding sessions, but the crowd voiced its appreciation of the loser's pluck and endurance in very hearty fashion.

A TAIL THAT FAILED.

Eight Wickets Fall For Five Runs At Bonn.

On the Hofgarten, Bonn on Saturday, the 121st Heavy Battery R.G.A. played a remarkable game with 10th Corps Hqrs. Batting first, the Heavies lost 8 wickets for 55 runs but the tail wagged merrily and the total reached 152. Dvr. Eyre hit freely for 46 not out while Gnr. Gadsden (22) and Bdr. Harfield (14) helped considerably. Corps. Hqrs started brilliantly, the first wicket falling at 62, Pte. Hargreaves (31) and Sergt. Watkins (29) being well set, when Capt. Deacon bowled the latter with a good ball. The remainder of the side collapsed badly, eight batsmen only scoring 5 runs between them, Staff-Sergt. Davidge (34) being the only other player to reach double figures. His innings was the best of the day. The side was dismissed for 101, the Heavies thus winning comfortably.

"ONE TOO MANY."

Following on this success "One too many" as the Bty. are nicknamed, played the rest of 29th Brigade R.G.A. on Monday at the Hofgarten. Batting first again on a beautiful pitch, runs came freely and with the score at 155 for 5 wickets the innings was declared closed. Bdr. Whiteley (35) and Dvr. Eyre (29) were top scores. The rest were disposed of for 69, Bdr. Harfield (3 for 23) and Sergt. Banks (6 for 31) bowling unchanged.

GOLF—LADIES V. GENTLEMEN.

The following side will play for the Ladies against the Gentlemen at Stoke Poges on September 30:—

Miss Cecil Leitch, Mrs. Temple Dobell, Mrs. Alan Macbeth, Miss Janet Jackson, Mrs. O. Hambro, Miss May Leitch, Miss L. Barry, and Miss D. Chambers.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

The "Crumps" Comedian.

Cpl. Billy Coole, the comedian of the "Crumps" concert party, well known on the variety stage as "Billie Owen" is shortly being "demobbed". There are many who have enjoyed his spontaneous wit and humour, and will be sorry to lose this genuine fun-maker.

A Fine Ventriloquist.

I hear that Bdr. W. Pawson the ventriloquist of the "Owlers," the concert party of the 79th Bde. R.G.A., intends to return to the boards when he gets to England. During the war he was the "bhoy" of 217 Siege Bty., R.G.A., and on the termination of hostilities he became the leading turn in the "Bundhooks," the III Corps Heavy Artillery Concert Party. While with them in January of this year he made a distinct hit in Brussels when he appeared at the Gaiety Theatre, and showed something of his capabilities under really favourable circumstances. Since Pawson has been in Rhineland he has easily sustained the splendid reputation previously established. At any rate, all "old boys" of 217 Siege Bty. will always be ready to give him a hearty cheer wherever he may appear.

Good Bye "The Owlers."

Many will regret to learn that "The Owlers," the concert party of the 79th Bde. R.G.A. is breaking up, and after next week will be no more. They gave what is likely to be their last show as a party at Stotzheim on Monday evening before a packed house. During their brief existence they have been most successful and have probably made the biggest tour of any party in Rhineland, as well as having raised several thousands of marks for the sports and recreational funds of the 79th Brigade. The party has worked very hard and has been able to put in very varied programmes, as is evidenced by the fact that their published repertoire contains somewhere about 200 different items. The members of the party are Messrs B. Broome (baritone). G. Corner (elocutionist), Harry Davison (comedian), Gus. Evans (pianist), F. Litchfield (character actor), A. Nelson ("Alice"), E. A. Oxberry (vocalist), G. T. Palin ("Esme"), A. Panter (pianist), W. Pawson (ventriloquist), J. Tatcher (speciality dancer) and O. Walker (tenor).

Brilliant Fancy Dress Function.

The fancy dress dance of the season at the B.E.L.C. started on Wednesday night in broad daylight and the costume were more brilliant and varied than one could possibly imagine, even in an Arabian Night's Dream. It was an international affair and one might have suspected "fraternization." One saw Red Indians, Chinese, Spaniards, Japs and German officials and civilians. The latter were very true to life but the speech was entirely "Englisch." Apologising to a handsomely dressed lady, because she trod on my toes, I was surprised at being greeted, in an obviously masculine voice, with "all right Cocky"; it was all excellent and one wonders how, away from London, the remarkably good costumes could be obtained. The stage was quite dazzling with the masqued Jazz Band arrayed in all the colours of the Allied flags. Their special programme of music was encored again and again — the "hee haw" of the donkey and the shrill note of the torpedo-pleifer with an occasional cock-a-doodle-doo from the cock were amongst the most entrancing of the jazz effects, which were much appreciated by the whirling dancers. As the daylight waned, red glow worms shone from the roof, and as the night grew darker, the scene in the hall became more and more brilliant until the hall was flooded with streams of rosy light.

Many humourous characters.

Amongst the most amusing of the many humorous characters was the blind beggar with his organ, who played in the middle of the floor and was showered with pennies and "backsheesh" from the packed gallery. Two Charlie Chaplins vied with each other in keeping the hall amused — the real Charlie Chaplin was excellent with mannerisms complete and hailed from near the neutral zone. Other costumes worthy of note were the Crusader who must have stepped straight out of Scott's "Ivanhoe," and Chanticleer fresh from Rostand's poetic play. "Black and White" took the palm for the most finished costume, the medial division being made with mathematical accuracy. There were cowboys, Red Indians and pierrots in profusion, while it was difficult to judge among the ladies of the W.R.A.F's who had the best dress. Last but not least we must mention the M.C's., Corporal Heather in a charming jester's costume, while Bombardier Taylor was a graceful figure in XVIII Century dress, and Sgt. Major Felgate wore present day dress. The only regret was that so many men were unable to see the brilliant spectacle as the space of the gallery was inadequate for the number of those who came to look on.

JACQUES.

U.S. TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP.

Britisher's Success: Australian's Patriotic Action.

In the preliminary round of the Singles Lawn Tennis Championship of the United States on Tuesday, Major Harran, Great Britain, defeated Mr. Richey. R. Lycett and G. L. Patterson, both Australia, were drawn to play each other, but Lycett scratched rather than prevent a fellow countryman from competing for the championship.

CREFELD RACES.

Ideal Sport Promised For Sunday's Meeting.

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the Crefeld July meeting will need no persuasion to visit the well-known German racecourse on Sunday for the Inter-Allied Hunting Races. There is every promise of racing of a very high standard and sport even excelling in character that of the last meeting is anticipated.

From Crefeld 8.06 p.m. arr. Aachen 11.29 p.m.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

107 Winning Mounts.

Donoghue has ridden 107 winning mounts this season. Carslake is second on the list with 73.

Olympia Advance Sales.

For Olympia on Sept. 2 the advance sales were £1,000 in excess of those for the Wilde-Moore match.

Hill the Sprinter.

It seems to have escaped notice that W.A. Hill, the well-known sprint champion, played for Crystal Palace during the war. He will assist Bromley.

G. Gunn For S. Africa.

George Gunn, of Notts, has accepted a winter engagement at Cape Town. Hobbs was offered the post, but owing to business could not accept it.

Roman Bachelor.

The smart Irish two-year-old, Roman Bachelor, the property of Mr. N. Baring, has joined Linton's team at Newmarket to be trained. The colt is engaged in the Palatine Nursery, to be run at Manchester next week.

Benefit for James Seymour.

The Kent County Cricket Club Committee have decided to allot one of the matches in next season's Canterbury week as a benefit to James Seymour, who since 1902 has been one of their leading professional batsmen.

Great Expectations.

Great things are expected of Newport County, who enter the First Division of the Southern League for the first time.

Hole in One.

Mrs. J.E. Roberts, playing in a four-ball golf match at Heswall, did the third hole (158 yards) in one stroke.

Lot Jones Moving.

Lot Jones, the famous Manchester United forward, has signed on for Southend United.

Two Styles.

In building up his highest score in county cricket, Sutcliffe showed two distinct styles. At times he was slow; at others he lashed out like a Jessop.

After 18 Years.

Eighteen years have elapsed since county cricket was last played on the Clifton College ground—the scene of so many Gloucestershire triumphs in the '70's and '80's.

International Shooting.

The American Small-bore Rifle Team, shooting at Caldwell (New Jersey) defeated a British team, shooting in England, by 7,617 points against 7,523, the twenty men of the British team averaging 376 points out of a possible 400, as against the American average of 380.

Kent XI Dinner.

Polytechnic's New Players.

The Polytechnic Club have already elected 100 members for this football season. Ninety-five of this number are new men.

Death of Mr. H. Turner.

The death occurred this week of Mr. Henry Turner, the secretary of the Notts County Cricket Club. He was seventy-six years of age and had held the post for more than twenty years.

Newcastle's Forwards.

The new forward line of Newcastle United will probably include three dark horses—Robinson, of Scotswood. Hagan, of Washington, and Wilson, of Leadgate. The experiment may be a success, but what a change for a side that has always been noted for star performers!

Golf "Skyers."

I believe in hitting the ball up. You can control that shot, and it is interesting to learn that Master Jones believes in it. The only other American amateur of note I have seen who practises it is Mr. "Chick" Evans, and he is the best player from the States that we have seen so far in Britain.—Harry Vardon.

Notts Fast Bowler.

Barratt, the Notts fast bowler, has accepted an engagement with Rawtenstall, Lancashire League club, for next season.

Like Nursery Rhyme Girl.

York is a delightful meeting in fine weather and vice versa. It may be compared to the girl in the nursery rhyme who was either very good or horrid.

Bat and Ball Groundman.

George Collins, the fast bowler who has played this season for Kent, has been appointed groundman at the Bat and Ball ground, Gravesend.

Polo in Ireland.

As the Irish county polo clubs have not restarted play yet there will be no contest this season for the Irish County Cup, of which County Kildare are the holders.

South of England v. "Aussies."

The following side has been selected to represent the South of England against the Australians at Portsmouth on September 4, 5, and 6: Hon. L.H. Tennyson (Hampshire) (captain), J.C. White (Somerset), N.J. Holloway (Sussex), G.C. Harrison (Hampshire), T.O. Jameson (Hampshire), Woolley (Kent), Lee (Middlesex), Strudwick (Surrey), Relf (A. E.) (Sussex), Mead (Hampshire), and Brown (Hampshire).

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

A Concession.

The wives and families of officers and other ranks of the Army of the Rhine may purchase goods from all retail canteens of N.A.C.B. The "Coupon Book" authorising the issue of rations on repayment will be produced for inspection when making purchases, and the transaction will be limited to the quantities actually required for consumption of the family concerned. This concession is made subject to the supply for the troops remaining unaffected.

Their Chance.

Many more or less obscure commercial hotels and wine houses in Cologne have made little fortunes for their proprietors during the war. In the good old peace days one would not see more than half a dozen commercial travellers sitting in the places — and then they drank wine by the glass, not the bottle, in spite of the extraordinarily low price of pre-war wine. Business men, however, soon found that these quiet restaurants were the only places where a good meal could be obtained and thereby acquired the eating-out habit that also became a war cult in England.

A Courageous Act.

The Commander-in Chief has expressed his appreciation of the following act of courage:— On August 3rd, a pair-horse wagon in charge of Pte. C. G. Mitchell, R.A.M.C., was standing at Heumar Railhead, when an incoming train caused the horses to take fright and bolt. Pte. Mitchell seized hold of their heads, and held on at great risk to himself. Pte. S. J. Newton, 23rd Royal Fusiliers, sprang towards the horses when they were galloping and held on to the neck of one for a distance of 500 yards. At the time of this occurrence there was other transport on the road, and an accident was averted through the pluck and coolness of the two men.

Why not Queue?

The protest of an officer at the unseemly scramble for a place at the counter at Messrs. Cox's bank has drawn much correspondence on similar lines from officers and men. With the rise in the value of the mark there is naturally not the volume of business as was the case last week, but there is still the necessity for a queue on Saturday mornings in particular, or on those days when there is some attraction in Cologne, which draws officers from the neighbourhood into the town. Why not queue? It is the only way of dealing with a situation which does no one credit. A similar state of affairs obtained at the officers clothing department until a protest in these columns led to the institution of order and a system which ensures fairness to staff and customer alike. It is unreasonable that a late comer with more self-assurance than courtesy should be allowed to elbow his way through an already waiting crowd. With the queue system in operation he has no alternative but to fall in at the rear.

A Batman's Experience.

The situation at Messrs. Cox's premises is well described by a batman who armed with the necessary authority was sent to cash a cheque. "I was soon completely wedged in among the crowd," he writes. "I could neither move forward nor backward. It was one confused medley of Staff majors, captains, subalterns and other ranks, pushing and elbowing each other to get to the counter, no attempt at forming a queue being made. When eventually I did manage to reach the counter I was kicked, addled, bruised and quite unfit to fight my way out again. I was jammed against the counter which threatened to give way under the strain. I was quite unable to turn round. A considerate officer who observed my frantic endeavour to get out, pressed back and after a strenuous minute or two I found myself outside the crush minus two tunic buttons, which had been torn off in the melee. Why can't they form a queue? It would be much better for all concerned and would save much time and energy."

Teaching The Young Idea.

One of the largest printing and publishing firms in Cologne maintains a house school where the young apprentices usefully employ their spare evenings in classes for commercial designing, the art of composition and typography, de luxe book-binding and all the arts and crafts associated with their business. They pay nothing for expert instruction by their foremen and experts belonging to the house and the firm willingly meet all the expenses as they find it means better work and a greater interest in the quality and standard of production by the employees. Much dormant talent is discovered and the youngsters have an opportunity of seeing their 'prentice efforts given the finishing expert touch and put to practical use. Is is an idea that might very usefully be adopted in some of our home printing production establishments.

Ping Pong.

It is strange how the game of ping pong has crept into favour since our appearance on the Rhine. Many messes boast of the apparatus and many strenuous struggles for superiority of skill in handling the elusive ball have been seen. At "B" Siege Park however the game has won such popularity that during the last two weeks a tournament has been played off by the officers and men. The entries numbered sixty-four and included the C.O. A number of exciting games have been played and the semi-finals were reached on Tuesday night. In the semi-finals Pte. Bradburn easily beat Pte. Davis by winning two games—21 to 7 and 21 to 6. Pte Snelling had a desperate encounter with Pte. Darling and ultimately won after playing three hard games with scores, 16 to 21, 21 to 18, and 21 to 15. In the final game Pte. Snelling beat Pte. Bradburn in the first round with a score of 21 to 14. This roused Bradburn who bustled things and drove the game to 20 all. An additional five points had to be played and these ran out in Bradburn's favour at 5 to 3. Each man now had one game to his credit and excitement ran very high. Bradburn was evidently suffering from nerves and after a hard fought game Snelling won the set by 21 to 18.

Who is Your Favourite Author?

Few of us have not an author more favoured than another. Varied tastes naturally lead to variety in the selection of works, as is borne out by the lists submitted as the most interesting in the discussion which is going on in our columns. To arrive at a conclusion as to which are the most popular books, we have decided to promote a competition and readers of all ranks are invited to submit selections. Each book selected will be considered as receiving one vote each time it figures in the lists sent in and the competitor whose list, according to the books in it, embraces the highest aggregate of votes will receive a prize of fifty marks. Selections of ten books must be addressed to "Books" c/o The Editor "Cologne Post" by Saturday, Sept. 6th. Be your favourite writer Marie Corelli or Gene Stratton Porter, Arnold Bennett or Rider Haggard, make a selection of the ten works you consider best and send it along.

Old Scouts Corner.

The Old Scouts circle held its last meeting at the VI Corps Y.M.C.A., Lindenthal, when an interesting agenda was gone through, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis of the Y.M.C.A., for the invaluable support they have given the Corner. Time was devoted to patrol work, and an enjoyable evening was finished up with a "sing song." On Saturday next the Scouts are meeting at the Amusements Board, Cologne Main-Station at 2.30. The programme is open, but all may be sure of a pleasant time.

Painting the Rhine.

A new institution which has come into being in the Rhine Army is an informal sketching club whose members, drawn from all ranks and various branches of the services were seen on the banks of the Rhine recently, completely equipped with blocks and paints and some with easels. The originator of the club, whoever he is, is to be commended, as there could be no more fascinating sketching grounds than many parts of the Rhine valley. Quite near Cologne there are beauty spots which provide excellent subjects for the artist, and apart from the pleasure of painting and sketching as a pastime, the resulting pictures have a much greater value to the executor than those which the much more mechanical process of photography produces. Could not an exhibition of sketches and paintings by members of the Army of Occupation be arranged? Many officers and other ranks who are interested in art might be brought into touch in this way.

Prizes for Echoes.

Each day we are prepared to give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." In view, however, of the shortage of contributions to-day, we withhold the prizes. This should encourage those who have not won a prize to forward contributions. These must be topical.

THE PRIDE OF LIFE.

It was the first time he had driven me. We had seventy-five miles of road before us, and we started in the fresh, vigorous air of a sunlit morning that promised a hot day. We would cover the same seventy-five miles in the afternoon, but I promised myself a slight variation of route upon the return journey.

The joy of life was around us and within us as we sped through the Rhineland hills now winding up cool wooded valleys, through quaint and ancient villages, and again skirting the wide stretches of forests, where even the dark pines caught the joy of the sunlight, and made the sky seem a more sparkling one. The saddest cynic must surrender to the joy of life when the sombre pine trees break into song. We talked of many things—what fronts we had seen, the hottest bits of the line, life in Cologne, the other fellows who had got "demobbed." We talked of home but between us there was a gulf fixed—even then. He was a good sort. He had been home on leave, had only just returned. I had not long arrived.

"How did you find England?" I asked him.

"First class, sir."

"In spite of the strikes, and the tube crushes, and all the rest of it."

"I was at home, sir. That was enough for me."

"So you are married then. I thought you were, by the way you spoke of the leave."

"Yes, Sir, I was married before the war. I have three boys, the eldest six."

"The devil you have!" He looked such a boy. "The best of luck to you and the boys."

He rattled on merrily, and told me all about the youngsters, how wonderfully good they were, how he took them into the country, where they were happy all day long without even a toy to keep them amused, how they welcomed him home, what a difference they made to a fellow's leave.

"Toys," I said, "toys are artificial things, right in the town, but a poor substitute for the flowers, and the trees, and the birds, and the cows, and the sheep. Take them into the country, my boys, it's the life of the kiddies."

Then while I looked at their picture, all three in a jolly group, the six-year old, with the sun in his eyes making him scowl roguishly, I noticed him glance again towards the pool in the river bed.

"I had them out with me fishing the other day," he said, "and the eldest caught two himself; little ones, not more than so big—"

"Splendid! Never mind the weight," I chipped in.

"He landed them all by himself, sir; I only told him when to pull in."

"He is a rare little sport. You will be proud of that boy of yours some day."

He glanced at me, and his eyes belied the "some day."

BOLSHEVISTS FALLING BACK.

GENERAL DENIKIN'S GREAT PROGRESS IN SOUTH RUSSIA.

RUSSIAN EVENTS.

60 KILLED AND MISSING IN MONITOR EXPLOSION.

A British monitor which has been operating in Russian waters has been badly damaged as the result of an explosion which has caused the loss of many lives. It is stated that the ship can be made seaworthy.

It is unofficially reported that the monitor was tied to an ammunition barge which blew up. It is estimated that twenty were killed, and forty are missing.

It is reported from Archangel that Bolshevist propaganda has been captured making offers to British officers. It promised them that if they would desert they could have any job they wished and their choice of the female population.

According to an Omsk telegram, the Bolshevists have suffered a severe defeat in Siberia. A Soviet regiment was destroyed and fourteen thousand prisoners taken besides guns, wagons and other material. The total strength of the Bolshevist forces on the Eastern front is estimated at 133 thousand. This is therefore a serious blow to the Soviet.

Interviewed by a Swedish newspaper on Tuesday, a French journalist, just returned from Russia, said there were were no more Bolshevists in Russia and there was no enthusiasm for Bolshevism. The general public opinion was not behind Trotsky's name. Intellectual Russia, he added, wanted a liberal monarchy.

"HIGHLY SATISFACTORY."

BUT NOT TO BOLSHEVISTS IN RECENT FIGHTING.

Despite the big Bolshevist claims, official circles in London consider that the situation in Russia is highly satisfactory to the anti-Bolshevist cause, and Bolshevist messages should be read with caution. Their claim to have captured a large of General Denikin's cavalry, is not borne out by known facts, as the mounted troops have broken through the Bolshevist line in South Russia and are in communication with the Commander-in-Chief.

In West Russia the Poles are continuing operations successfully. Their left wing is advancing on Divinsk and further to the East they have pressed to the Dvina near Polotsk, thus imperilling the Bolshevist line which will possibly have to be withdrawn to the North bank of the river.

In South Russia General Denikin is making great progress. A party of volunteers landed at Odessa on August 23rd and captured the coast batteries South of the town, the Red troops being driven off by gunfire from ships. The German colonists and the population rose en masse and joined the invaders, and the Bolshevists fled from the town along the railway towards Balta. On August 25th the British fleet anchored in the harbour and found everything in good order.

Denikin is now directing his main effort to clearing the country between himself and the Roumanians and Ukrainians, and to expel the Bolshevists from the remainder of the Ukraine frontier country. There is evidence that he is on the point of doing so but it must be remembered that his main objective is to attack the Soviet Government at Moscow.

POLISH POGROM.

The Zionist Central Office has received a telegram from its Copenhagen Bureau announcing that after the flight of the Bolsheviks, a terrible Jewish pogrom took place at Minsk. Thirty-one Jews, including women and children, were killed and hundreds of Jewish shops and houses were plundered. General Jadwin, a member of the American Commission of Investigation, was a witness of the excesses, and stated that 95 per cent. of the looted property belonged to Jews. The Polish military authorities have taken steps to suppress the disorders.

GERMAN ARMY THEFTS.

The Spandau police recently arrested a second-hand dealer who was discovered receiving enormous quantities of Army property—saddles, harness, and leatherwork. His arrest led to the discovery of a well-organized scheme by which large numbers of lorries and drays delivered goods nightly from the Ordnance Depôt at Spandau.

An examination of the depôt books proved that the thefts dated as far back as the November revolution. The whole of the Workmen's Council employed at the depôt have been arrested. That large sums were amassed by the thieves may be gauged from the fact that they have bought shops in Spandau and Berlin.

PRIVATES 12s A DAY.

Canada is to have the best-paid Army in the world. Instead of 6s. a day privates are to have 12s. Recruiting is in progress for "Princess Pat's" and Lord Strathcona's Horse. The right men are earning 12s. to £2 a day at mechanical trades.

U.S. AND MEXICO.

COMMITTED TO INTERVENTION.

According to a Washington dispatch to the New York Sun, the United States is already committed to intervention in Mexico.

Although the policy of the Government towards Carranza is officially described as unchanged, it may be stated positively that developments of the first magnitude are soon to take place south of the Rio Grande.

The United States must intervene in Mexico and take over the control of affairs from the Mexicans, as she did in the case of Cuba. The fact of the coming intervention is now recognized. The time may be fixed for six months or less, though this is an uncertain factor. The reason for intervention is not Carranza's arrogance, the bandit raids, or the sporadic infringement of American rights, but because the country has gone to pieces beyond recall, and no other possible solution looms up.

According to the same dispatch, preliminary arrangements for the use of the land and sea forces of the United States have been completed.

WILSON AND STRIKES.

WILL FIRM ACTION SUCCEED?

President Wilson has rejected the demands of the American railway shopmen for advances of wages equivalent in most cases to 13d. an hour, and allows them a flat increase equivalent to 2d. This is to place them on the same basis as other railway employees by giving them for eight hours' work the amount of pay they have been receiving for a 10-hour day.

This action of the President represents a decided stand in an attempt to check the strike contagion that has spread to every conceivable occupation, from that of the actor to that of the gravedigger.

Some of the increases asked are, exorbitant and often impossible. Drivers of milk wagons, for instance, want £10 a week and commission and a six-hour day; window cleaners ask £8 a week; bricklayers £2 a day, and so on. The high cost of living is made the basis of these demands.

The President's reply to the railway shopmen is intended, as a matter of fact, also for all the railway brotherhoods, whose aggregate demands, involving an increase of £160,000,000 a year, would entail a corresponding increase in freight and passenger rates.

It is reported that the American railroad shopmen have replied to the Washington Government that they cannot accept a settlement of their demands on the basis recommended by President Wilson and that a strike vote will be taken immediately.

Mr. Gompers has reached New York to take charge of the industrial situation, which is such as has never before been experienced in America. Over 1,000,000 people are effected by the strikes, the number actually involved being 350,000. The strikes hanging in the balance would involve another 900,000.

Mr. Gompers has promised the help of the American Federation of Labour to actors on strike.

BRITISH AIR RAID.

Details are now published of an air raid on Kabul a few months ago. The raid was carried out by Capt. Halley in a Handley-Page machine with Lieut. Williers as observer.

The flight was from Risalpur, a distance of about 400 miles. The machine flew straight to Kabul, which was reached early in the morning and was over the city for ten minutes during which time it dropped bombs causing panic and much damage. The whole flight lasted six hours.

BATTLEFIELD MEMORIALS.

The War Office last night stated that the Battle Exploits Memorials Committee, consisting of Senior officers, appointed to consider the claims of units to erect on the battlefields permanent memorials of exploits, reminds units that September 1st is the last day for claims, and asks army units desiring such a memorial to communicate with the secretary as soon as possible.

ALCOHOL IN ENGLAND.

Speaking at Carlisle, yesterday, Lord D'abernon, Chairman of the Central Liquor Control Board, urged the speedy transfer of power to the new authority.

Drunkenness, he said, had decreased but profits from liquor sales were greater than at any period in the trade's history, notwithstanding the increased taxation. If required the revenue from alcohol could easily be brought up to two hundred millions a year.

New Belgian postage stamps have been ordered from a Dutch firm.

SILESIAN AFFAIRS.

AMERICAN TROOPS AS POLICE.

The occupation of Silesia by Allied troops is considered inevitable. The Germans are not speaking the truth when they say that order has been restored there. All evidence is to the contrary.

According to the Paris edition of the "Chicago Tribune" Mr. Baker, the U.S. War Secretary, states that the American Brigade at Coblenz may be used to police Upper Silesia and prevent further clashes between Poles and Germans. The Allies will control the district during the taking of the plebiscite.

At present 200,000 workmen are on strike in Upper Silesia, and it is understood that notwithstanding the German Government's optimistic reports there is little improvement in the situation. At present the whole south-eastern corner of the province is in a state of armed revolt while a rising has taken place in the neighbourhood of Gleiwitz.

The Polish Government is acting with great forbearance under provocation from the Germans and has restrained its troops from crossing the frontier to help their comrades. The feeling in Poland, however, is against any delay in sending Allied representatives. The whole situation gives cause for great anxiety.

BALKAN TURMOIL.

SERBS ADOPTING STRONG MEASURES TO REPRESS RISING.

The situation in the Balkans is still very unsatisfactory. Fighting has broken out in Montenegro, the whole country being in a state of revolution.

The Serbs are trying to repress the rising by strong measures, but have not met with great success.

The Montenegrians have cut the railway between Virbatzar and Antivari, both places being in serious danger. The Serbs are reinforcing their troops in the country but their policy appears to be inflaming Montenegrian national feeling and there is increasing bitter hate of the Serbs in Turkey.

There are still many political clouds and there is much intriguing by the Committee of Union and Progress.

BOY'S BAD START.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY AT 15.

A boy's precocious attempt at painting the town red was described in the Juvenile Court at Tower Bridge, when Henry William Gavin, aged 15, of Bermondsay, was summoned for having been drunk and disorderly at Rodney-road, Walworth, and for assaulting Police-constable Paradine.

The constable stated that at 10 p.m. he saw the defendant, with two other lads and three girls, behaving in a disorderly manner, pushing pedestrians off the pavement. When spoken to the others ceased, but the defendant, who was intoxicated, used bad language. On being arrested the defendant said, "What can they do to us?" and dealt him a blow.

Mr. Hay Halkett, describing Gavin's conduct as disgraceful, imposed penalties amounting to 32s.

BLANKETS AS ROPES.

ACROBATIC ESCAPES AT FIRE.

Over 100 people were staying at the premises, which has 120 bedrooms. The outbreak starting in the kitchen, involved the whole building, which soon resembled a furnace. The occupants, some with only a coat over their night clothes, escaped as best they could, and many of them abandoned their belongings,

Three young women found their retreat cut off through a doorway, and their only escape lay through a window and over a verandah. To this they tied blankets, and, encouraged by the crowd below, safely reached the ground.

A more difficult rescue was that of two men from the top storey. The police managed to get them down by means of ladders leading from one verandah to another. One of the men was a soldier with a wooden leg.

The visitors were clothed through the kindness of the townspeople, who readily lent them coats and costumes and provided them with breakfast at a restaurant.

IN LEVIATHAN'S TOW.

After an exciting adventure a motor-boat party captured a whale weighing more than half a ton near Alloa, in the higher reaches of the Forth.

The monster was sighted lying on a sandbank, and after four shots had been fired at it, a rope was attached to its tail in the belief that it was dead. It immediately recovered and dragged the boat some distance.

The party were in danger of being swamped, but succeeded in killing the whale and bringing it ashore.

EBERT'S MOVEMENTS.

Ebert, President of the German Republic, and Noske, Minister of National Defence, travelling through Germany arrived yesterday at Stuttgart coming from Munich.

AIR DERBY.

THREE FINISH COURSE.

The American Aerial Derby, from Toronto to Mincola, New York, ended in the arrival of only three competitors. These were Coombs, Rholfs, and Schroeder—all Americans.

Coombs, the winner, stopped at Buffalo, Syracuse, and Albany, covering the total distance of about 500 miles in six hours 21 minutes. Rholfs arrived 11 minutes behind him. Coombs states that his flying time was 215 minutes.

PROSPEROUS IRELAND.

Speaking at a meeting in Dublin Lord Midleton said those who gave advice to Great Britain on the assumption that Ireland was poor and downtrodden were absolutely ignorant of the condition of the country. While Mr. de Valera was cadging for a loan of £1,000,000 in America the Irish national revenue had risen during the war from £12,000,000 to £30,000,000 and she had increased her deposits in the banks from £64,000,000 to £116,000,000, or nearly fifty per cent. No combatant in Europe had lost less in men, money or material than Ireland during the war, and her reconstruction would be more rapid than that of any other country. Sinn Fein home rule would bring them nearer to the condition of Russia than to that of the United States.

MORE MERCHANT SHIPS.

The opening now made for mercantile construction by reason of the stopping of Admiralty work on large number of warships was warmly welcomed in shipping circles in the City without prejudice to other questions. Business men were glad it should now be considered practicable for the Admiralty to cut down expenditure on warship construction. Many building ways will now be available for mercantile work. During the war large numbers of men who had previously been building mercantile vessels had to adapt themselves to warship construction and in turning now to mercantile work they will really be reverting to their original trade. As for others it would be archaic to maintain that men can be too highly trained to build mercantile vessels in the light of the adaptability of craftsmen shown during hostilities. Compared with the success achieved by America when she turned her attention to the great increase in shipbuilding made necessary, the adaptability now required in British yards from men hitherto engaged on naval work must be a small thing.

THE LION'S MOUTH.

BITES UNWARY GERMAN'S HEAD.

At the Guildhall, London a German named Albert Kunisch, an importer and exporter of Aldermanbury, was fined £5 and costs for failing to disclose his nationality when sending a business letter.

He wrote to the Controller-General of Overseas Trade and did not state his true nationality, merely putting in a corner of the letter a rubber stamp impression, inferring that he was an accepted and naturalised British subject. His business, said the prosecution, was under control during the war and he was anxious to open up again but must do so properly.

The magistrate said that in sending such a letter to the Board of Trade defendant was putting his head into the lion's mouth.

LONDON MOTOR THEFTS.

Astonishing confessions were made at the Westminster Police Court by the convict Sidney Meredith, in charges of receiving stolen motorcars made against William George Stephenson, a motor repairer.

Meredith alleged that he got a Studebaker car according to order. As Stephenson said he wanted three cars for a trip to Cornwall he got another. He kept a Studebaker under observation for two weeks and he had a book in which he kept records of the cars he watched.

CHECKING IMMIGRATION.

The Uruguayan Minister for Foreign Affairs has received a favourable official reply from Brazil regarding the proposed joint legislation by Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, and Paraguay for the stricter regulation of European immigration into those countries. A preliminary meeting is to be held immediately to formulate definite plans for giving effect to the scheme.

SEDAN-DAY CELEBRATIONS SUSPENDED.

The Prussian Minister of the Interior has decided that in future there shall be no more festivities on Sedan-day in commemoration of the German victory in 187.

SHAKESPEARE IN GERMANY.

"Midsummer Nights Dream" and "Hamlet" will be played next winter at the Schauspielhaus of Cologne. "Catharina," of Bernhard Shaw, is also on the programme.

HAMBURG EXPLOSION.

A big explosion took place at Hamburg in a benzoline depot. Of the many persons missing, five dead bodies have been recovered. The damages amount to several million of marks.

TRADE REVIVAL.

POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Sir Auckland Geddes, President of the Board of Trade, has outlined the plans which the Government have in hand to resuscitate the trade of Great Britain and to help the commerce of other parts of the world.

His panacea for the economic evils with which the country is confronted may be summed up in the words: "Export, more export, and yet more export, until we reach an export worth £100,000,000 a month."

"The only way of increasing our means" said Sir Auckland Geddes," is to increase our trade. There are at the present time two great problems before me to get production and to find markets. Europe which used to be one of the greatest of our markets is disorganised and impoverished by war, and in parts in a state of impending or even actual economic collapse. We are starting a scheme which holds the promise of getting trade to begin from our end — a scheme under which we will get our exports going, and in the stimulating of those exports we hope that production in Europe will start. We are establishing a Government organisation for a system of export credits in order to facilitate the resumption of export trade to the disorganized parts of Eastern Europe. We are trying to see what can be done to get raw materials for the manufactures of Europe sent to countries whose mills and factories are standing idle. We are doing everything in our power to let them have such coal as we can spare and in this way we hope that before many months have passed the flow of trade will have been resumed where stagnation now reigns. To help in this we are completely remodelling strengthening and developing the consular and commercial diplomatic services. But Europe is not our only market. We are taking what steps we can to foster trade within the Empire. We are studying what can be done to improve imperial intercommunication and we are strengthening our trade representatives throughout the Empire and so with all the countries of the world."

Position of America.

"I am told" added Sir Auckland "that America suffered little by the war, that she will flood our markets with goods and that she will capture the markets of Europe. Oh no! America is so placed that she is like all the rest of us; she is in great difficulties with regard to the future of her trade. During the war she has developed on a great scale her manufactures and she has increased the industrialism of her population. She is so vast, so wealthy and produces such a mass of raw material that where we are dependent on imports she is wholly independent as she lives upon her production. She is not only a great industrial nation, — not only is she a great exporter of manufactured goods but also she is the greatest exporter of raw material. America is in this unhappy position — that she has so much that there is little she wants and as the result of that the money exchange between New York and London is moved in her favour and every movement of the money exchange in her favour is a movement against her power of export. We have to get from her raw material — at all events, for some years to come — and just because we have to take that raw material it makes it more and more difficult for her to get her manufactured exports across the Atlantic. I am told she is selling great quantities of goods to all European countries. What goods is she taking in exchange? Practically none. If it be true that she has sold these goods to Europe they will have to be paid for in money which will have to cross the London—New York exchange. The only result of that will be that the exchange will tend to move in a money sense more and more in her favour and in an export sense to more and more stability against her. This will mean to Europe that the food which she gets from America will be more costly and the manufactured goods she might get from America will be so dear as to be almost unbuyable. Europe has largely therefore to work out her own salvation. It is no good for anyone to say or for any nation to say: 'We will rely on America to see us through.' Salvation for Europe is to be found in Europe and in Europe only. There is only one way to that economic salvation and that lies through work, hard work, strenuous work, and increased production from mines, field and factories."

LABOUR PARLIAMENT.

BRITISH DELEGATES.

The British Government representatives to the International Labour Conference, which is to meet at Washington in October, will be Mr. G. N. Barnes and Sir Malcolm Delevigne, of the Home Office, while it is expected that Sir Allan Smith, of the National Confederation of Employers' Associations, will represent the employers' side, and Mr. Stuart Bunning, chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress, the Labour side.

Mr. H. B. Butler of the Ministry of Labour, is the provisional general secretary of the conference.

Mr. S. Gompers (president of the American Federation of Labour) will preside over the conference, the agenda of which includes the question of a universal eight-hour day or forty-eight-hour week, the prevention of unemployment, and the conditions of the employment of women and children, especially in regard to what are described as unhealthy industries.

NURSE CAVELL.

QUIEN'S ALLEGED SWINDLE.

The trial of Quien, who is charged with having betrayed Nurse Cavell, continues. The latest interrogation had reference to the swindle Quien is alleged to have perpetrated on his arrival in Paris. It was stated that he went to the house of a Mme. Manes and on the strength of claiming to know her son at Senne-lager camp obtained from her 1,400 francs.

In connection with the trial, a telegram from Baltimore is interesting. This states that the Minority report of the Committee on Military Law of the American Bar Assiciation appointed to investigate the Court-martial proceedings against Nurse Cavell have found that the execution was in accordance with the laws of civilised warfare. The Chairman of the Committee advocates the abolition of the death penalty for woman violators of Military Law.

BRAVE WOMAN REWARDED.

A ceremony at Epsom Police Station last night recalled the attack on the station on June 7th by Canadian soldiers, when Sergeant Green lost his life.

During the attack, Mrs. Pawley, wife of the Station Inspector, displayed remarkable self-possession, supplying refreshment to the besieged policemen and attending to injuries received by them in the fight.

Harry Pawley, her son, armed himself with a poker and kept the attackers at bay for some time.

In recognition of her conduct Mrs. Pawley was last evening presented with a gold watch, subscribed for by the police of "V" Division and Harry Pawley was given a silver watch.

PRODUCE AND SAVE.

LABOUR'S CALL TO LABOUR.

The determination of British Labour to do all in its power to increase production and improve the present position of British trade is made plain in a letter by Mr. Brownlie, chairman of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers to Mr. Bowerman, Secretary of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress.

The letter says: "The national situation is very grave. A considerable amount of misapprehension exists in the minds of Trade Unionists throughout the country in regard to production. Mr. Hoover in his analysis of the economy situation of Europe says: 'Unless productivity can be more rapidly increased there can be nothing but political, moral and economic chaos, finally interpreting itself in loss of life on a scale hitherto undreamed of.' No economic policy will bring food to those stomachs or fuel to those hearths that does not secure a maximum production. There is no use in tears over rising prices; they are to a great degree a visualization of insufficient production. The Trade Union movement is more powerful to-day than at any period of its history. With power comes responsibility and, however much we may respect the criticism of those who are not Trade Unionists, we cannot evade our responsibilities to the community. It appears to me that responsible Trade Union representatives must do something to alleviate the situation on behalf of the workers of the nation. The Parliamentary Committee is now representative of and responsible for the Trade Unionists in the country, therefore I consider it is incumbent upon your Committee to take some action with a view to alleviating the situation.

"The condition precedent in that direction appears to me to be the dissemination of accurate and reliable information. The mere raising of nominal wages without increased production of the necessaries of life is no solution of the difficulty. It is unnecessary for me to say anything further at this juncture as I consider that the members of your Committee are equally alive to the gravity of the situation."

Controlling Spending.

The Finance Committee of the Cabinet which has been formed to bring about economy in Government departments consists of the Prime Minister, Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Lord Milner and Sir Auckland Geddes.

Important changes are announced at the Treasury, which has been re-organised in order that expenditure may be more strictly controlled. Sir Warren Fisher has been appointed Permanent Secretary in place of Sir John Bradbury, who goes to Paris as Chief British Representative on the Reparation Commission, and three new departments have been set up at the Treasury with a controller at the head of each.

CURBING TRUSTS.

Mr. C.A. McCurdy, Parliamentary Secretary of the Food Ministry, has explained the methods by which the profits of any business will be investigated, and said that in the autumn legislation would be introduced to set up permanent machinery for the purpose. Any attempts to establish trusts will be dealt with and the Committee on Trusts will be reconstituted with wider authority and full powers under the Profiteering Act. There will also be an inquiry by experts into the actual costs of staple commodities, which information will be made public.

85 members present in the Belgian Senate voted unanimously in favour of ratifying the Peace Treaty.

THE PASSING OF A GREAT SOLDIER.

The passing of a great soldier and statesman in the magnetic personality of General Louis Botha will be universally regretted. By his death which occurred at midnight on Thursday at the comparatively early age of 56 a unique career full of romance is closed.

Born at Greytown, Natal, in 1863, General Botha was a member of the first Volksraad of the Transvaal, repesenting Vryheid. With the outbreak of the South African war he found himself first as veldt-cornet for his own district and later as Commander-in-Chief of the Boer forces a position in which he succeeded General Joubert, opposed to forces with which in more recent years he was proud to be associated and the leaders of which recognized in him a great soldier.

In this unique capacity, he commanded the Union Forces in South West Africa and achieved signal success in bringing about the complete humiliation of German aspiration in that corner of the earth.

A great and loyal colony owes much to his personal example. Although as we have pointed out, less than twenty years ago he was in arms against the Mother Country he lived to become a driving force in the development of his native land and to set a high standard of patriotic example which few can claim.

It would be difficult to estimate the value of this in the welding together of the interests of the two countries. He accepted the consequences of war in a spirit of which he alone was capable and realising to the full the possibilities of a larger life for his peoples exerted himself to the unifying and building up of a colony which forms so great an integral part of the British Empire to-day.

When the call came he realised in which direction his duty lay and a master of organisation and efficiency undertook the conquest of German South West Africa.

Against his leadership Teuton designs were as naught and within a year ambition in that quarter was nullified. He did not rest here, however. His wise experience and judgment was given unstintingly in other quarters on behalf of the Allied cause: And as he lived so he died — a soldier - statesman holding high honour amongst the Sons of a great Empire.

THE FUTURE OF POLAND.

Now that the flames of passion which threatened to consume the newly reconstituted state of Poland in general conflagration have somewhat subsided it is as well to draw attention to a phase of the quarrel which might be easily overlooked.

Poland is not yet politically stable and it is in the interests of the powers who desire to see a settled Europe to make her so, but the actions of the German officials who remain in the country appear to run counter to any such desire.

The peace conference decreed that a plebescite must be taken in Upper Silesia to decide the ultimate fate of that country but before any action could have taken place the German authorities had commenced to deport workers from that area. The reason assigned for this action was that the deportees were required for the work of reconstruction in France, but as the action was further designed to compromise the result of the plebescite some little doubt may be cast upon German desires to restore their work of devastation, a task which they have displayed little anxiety to undertake.

The allegation that the Polish rising had Bolshevist inspiration has not been proved. The lack of organisation and equipment points rather to a spontaneous outburst and hardly appears to have justified the overwhelming display of force employed to crush it.

It is to be hoped that the allied commission now in the affected area will be able to arrive at the true cause of the émeute and to institute remedial measures. But it is imperative that allied statesmen should be alive to the fact that the Prussian spirit is yet unbroken and has failed to recognise why the allied nations sought to limit its powers of evil.

The admission of Germany to the League of Nations is conditional upon that country displaying signs of repentance and a departure from the disturbing influences of her pre-war policy. The conduct of her affairs does not show that her present government are inclined to follow any other policy than that which distinguished her former statesmen and if she persists in behaving as a bandit nation her treatment by other nations will be in accordance with this line of action.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

NOTES OF A CAMP-FOLLOWER.

Mr. E.W. Hornung is the camp-follower, and his book tells the tale of his experiences and impressions during some months of patriotic service in France.

There must have been many reasons why the author of "Raffles" should have remained in England and continued his devotion to a Muse that had marked him for her own. But there was one reason for his coming and that was all-sufficient—his heart was with the men who fought and suffered and died for England's sake.

There are in this book some pages about letters and men of letters, but Mr. Hornung's chief interest is in the man of war. He has seen him in the Y.M.C.A. Hut—for our author wore the red triangle when he has in France during the winter of 1917,18—he has seen him in the Rest Camp, he has seen him in the line; and he loves the soldier as a man loves his son.

He is too wise to forget that even the uniform of his country does not hide the failings of the men who went out on the great enterprise, but he knew the menace that threatened our Empire and he has warmth of admiration for all who donned the harness of war that they might free their land from war's idolaters. For him the vices of the British soldier lean to virtue's side.

The Jock will hardly know himself when he reads that "in the life school of the war he stands stripped, but never poses; sometimes rugged and unrefined; often massive and majestic in body and mind; always statuesque in his simplicity, always the least self-conscious of Britons." It is only an Englishman who can write of the Scot like this. But Mr. Hornung gives high place to the gunners and the guards. His heart is big enough to love the men of every unit; and his art makes them live before our eyes.

There are many fine bits of descriptive writing in the book, and the author's pluck drew him to such strange scenes and dangerous roads that his description is full of verve and realism. It rings truly, for it has no false notes of meretricious rethoric or easy sentimentalism.

Here is one passage: "The frosty moon was now nearly full, and a grey-mauve sky, wearing just the one transcendent jewel of light, as brilliant in its way as the dense blue of equatorial noon. Upon this noble slate the group of armed men, waiting about in the road above the duckboards, was drawn in shining outline; silvered rifles slung across coppery leathern shoulders; earthenware mugs turned to silver goblets in their hands, and each tilted helmet itself a little fallen moon. A burst of gun-fire, and not a helmet turned; the rat-tat-tat of a machine-gun, but no shining shoulder twinkled with the tiniest shrug. And yet the devil's orchestra might have been tuning up at their feet, under the very stage they trod with culpable unconcern."

Mr. Hornung's love of letters makes him seek the right word and his art helps him to find it. Some may think that his sketches of the soldier and the soldier's life are too idealistic, that the heroism of war lends enchantment to his view; but it was idealism that nourished and nerved England in her sore plight and it will be a recaptured idealism that will lead England to her El Dorado of quiet and prosperous well-being.

More than one historic battle has been gained by the succour of the Camp-followers, and in the campaign that is past our soldiers will be the first to give their tribute to men like Mr. Hornung who came out to cheer and comfort the guardians of their country's honour.

HOME SWEET HOME.

THE CHURCH ARMY.

It is not a little cottage in Blighty that I am writing about but a home from home in Cologne. Association and affection will always find for us some such spot even though we are strangers in a strange land. It is near the Hohenzollern Bridge and is known to the civilians as the Hotel du Nord, but to the Tommy it is home from home in the shape of the Church Army Club.

This organisation was the first of all others of its kind in Cologne and naturally the authorities in charge chose the most central place in the city and their wisdom is justified by the results.

It is a magnificent building with a central court where there is a fountain playing and surrounded by a verandah covered with ivy and creepers.

You enter a room used as a restaurant which, with its decorations and large oil paintings, reminds you of an ancestral hall. In the centre is a platform with piano where the orchestra plays whilst crowds of Tommies enjoy the rich things, tarts, custards, puddings, cake and fruit, provided for them. There is another room sacred to the N.C.O's.

Mrs. Clarke, the Superintendent, who was the first to arrive in Cologne is the life and soul of this home. Her beaming face and warmhearted sympathy ever create an atmosphere of sunshine; you can feel it here, there and everywhere whilst Mrs. Hagan is a splendid second in command. Miss Fowler, the Lady Adviser is too an ideal worker with only one desire, to help the boys in every way.

Mr. E. Phillips the Chief Commissioner of the Church Army in Rhineland is to be found here. He is a great man with a great soul and the men have an intense admiration and affectionate esteem for him.

The Club is to be congratulated on its good staff of orderlies and the canteen. Amongst other features it should be noticed that it is used as a hostel for the ladies engaged with the Church Army in the various parts of Rhineland and this adds to its homely atmosphere and usefulness.

The religious services are held in what is the original chapel of S.P.G. in Cologne. There is another fine Club in the city situated in Antoniter Strasse, under the control and guidance of Mrs. Scott whose devotion and zeal to her work wins the highest praise from all ranks. It was formerly a German Soldiers' Club and is a fine building. Here are excellent recreation, dining, writing and other rooms. The refreshments served are of the highest quality and variety. They specialise in puddings and sweets and the prices work out at under sixpence. A special feature is the little chapel with its altar and appointments.

Throughout the towns and villages of Rhineland, wherever troops are stationed there you will also find the Church Army Hall or Club. What should we have done during the war and our occupation of Germany without this living thriving institution? The Rev. Preb. Carlile, the Founder of this noble organisation is shortly visiting Cologne, and will receive a warm welcome from our Army, who appreciate his great work.

In days to come the most precious memories we have of Rhineland will be those connected with the religious and philanthropic institutions which have always been to us a bit of Blighty and real home and not the least in our affections will be the Church Army and its noble band of workers. G.K.

BILLETING.

Of all the activities necessitated by the existence of an Army of Occupation, few make severer demands on the human faculties than does billeting. One requires a consummate mastery of the vernacular—particularly expletives, high psychological ability, the instinct of the tactician, and (in spite of the expletives) an exceptional suavity of demeanour.

Many and perplexing are the problems to be solved; and one sets out on a billeting expedition, with the feelings of one about to undergo no light ordeal. If you have never tried it, billeting may seem child's play; but actual experience soon dispell such a notion.

To begin with, the civilian population are naturally averse to "Einquartierung"; and are careful, when a unit disappears from their midst, to obliterate all traces of their sojourn, including the tell-tale chalk-mark of the last billeting party. And then they sit awaiting the next one, entrenched behind formidable ramparts of casuistry. The writer, who has had over six months experience of the joys and sorrows of billet-making, recalls amongst scores of others, the following typical cases.

The advent of new troops frequently corresponds, in certain households, with a mysterious visit from the "Enkel" (grandson) who, of course, in spite of his diminutive proportions, requires a separate suite of apartments. One of these juvenile divinities, insisted that there was "keinen Platz" in the house, and that men could not possibly be accommodated there. My German had not yet quite emerged from the stilted grammatical stage, which possibly made my reply all the more majestic and crushing. "Sie haben nicht zu wählen," (It isn't for you to choose) I retorted, whereupon the "Enkel" collapsed.

Another favourite device is to ostensibly "let" the apartments occupied by military, immediately the latter quit; and one has, with superb logic, to dispel the myth of some shadowy "Mieter" or "Mieterin," who will eventually migrate hither from Spartacist-threatened regions.

Then there is the invariable paterfamilias who considers himself excessively afflicted with billeting, and indignantly points to the immunity enjoyed by the "Nachbarn," always, however, with the injunction not to betray the source of information.

Amongst hints which could be offered to novices in the billeting art, the writer selects the one which appears to him to be the most useful, viz: Study the methods of householders, and use their own weapons against them. Hoist them with their own petard. Subtle reasoning, logic, mercurial eloquence—and, at need, a little "frightfulness"—these will win the day.

But, when all is said and done, who would go a 'billeting? H.J.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE.

Sir,—The article on "Esperanto" interested me very much as I realise the possibilities of an international language.

Often I have wished to learn it but could get no information as to where text books of Esperanto could be bought.

Does any reader know of an "Esperanto Society" or of any body who has taken up the language? W.G.D.

BANDS IN OPEN SPACES.

Sir,—With regard to band performances. I think the way in which the bands are playing at present is quite in order i.e., that is playing to their own units. The men in Cologne I think have quite enough music, for instance at the B.E.L.C. you can always find a good band.

It is up to us to have a little music now and again in the outlying villages. S.D.

ANOTHER APPRECIATION.

Sir,—I was pleased to read "N.C.O.'s" letter re the Rhine Army Dramatic Company and I cordially agree with all he says. We have seen this talented company in two plays in Solingen recently, and I am not exaggerating when I say that their excellent performance was thoroughly enjoyed by the troops.

On behalf of many others, let me thank everyone connected with the R.A.D.C. for the pleasure they have given to hundreds of troops. These words inadequately express what I wish to convey, but I think the R.A.D.C. will understand how much their efforts are being appreciated, and they can be assured of a hearty welcome when next they visit Solingen. May it be soon! G.Y.F.

THE CHARM OF MUSIC.

Sir,—Had "Royal Warwick" been in Bonn on Sunday he would have been satisfied with what was, I think, possibly the outcome of his letter in your paper.

There in the Kaiser Platz was a British band playing to the delight of a mixed crowd of Tommies and civilians. One could not help feeling proud in the remembrance of the "old contemptibles" when, in the shadow of the Kaiser statue they struck up "The Great Little Army."

Apart from this, however, I think that the evident interest and appreciation of the crowd showed plainly that this form of concert would be appreciated by Tommy at all times during his stay out here.

52nd ROYAL WARWICK.

WELFARE OF THE NEW ARMY.

Sir,—I read with interest the article under the Heading "Welfare of the New Army." The writer quite rightly says "Good books help to make good citizens. Reading opens the door to knowledge and knowledge shows the way to freedom."

I think no one will disagree with him there but he fails to point out how education may be made more popular. You may lead a horse to water but you cannot make him drink; this I think is the trouble.

The man who means to get on, educates himself to a large extent. This man is ambitious, he realises his ignorance, he requires no spurring and he does not rest after passing an examination or two.

Once education becomes popular I can quite imagine the library being visited daily but at present a football has more attraction than a book.

Proficiency pay at a very high rate should be the scholar's reward and prizes for essays in every battalion should be a feature of army education.

REGULAR.

MR. PERCY'S OFFER.

Sir,—I note a letter from the officer who manages that most excellent band of entertainers known as the Rhine Army Dramatic Society.

In it, he asks for suggestions for future productions, and more especially requests his potential patrons to vote for one of two plays, which he contemplates producing in the near future. The plays in question are "Abraham Lincoln" and "Strife."

I have seen the first named play in town recently and have to confess that I was somewhat disappointed. Apart from the fact that the play is the subject of a war which occurred sixty years ago and about which the average Britisher is splendidly ignorant, the acts are very heavy and somewhat boring.

This, as an expression of opinion, I do not doubt will be looked upon as rank heresy — but I will add, that I think it probable that this is a play which would read better than it will act — at any rate from an English standpoint.

No sir, Galsworthy every time. I've never seen "Strife" but I shall always remember seeing "Justice" and "The Silver Box," fine plays both.

And why not show, "Man and Superman" and "We never can tell" for preference? And for Shakespeare, "The Taming of the Shrew," and "A Midsummer-night's Dream," More modern plays hard to beat I think, are "The Second in Command," and "Lady Windermere's Fan" Oscar Wilde. "Buried Alive" Arnold Bennett "Milestones" the same author and Edward Knoblock.

Mr. Manager, you asked for it and you've got it. F.H.M.

TOMMY TO HIS RIFLE.

They gave you to me first way back in Blighty,
I used to 'ate the sight of you like 'ell.
But when I'd come to understand you rightly,
You seemed a sort of pal to me and — well,
I aint a going to feel too bloomin' 'appy
To give you back now this 'ere job is done.
We've stuck together three long years old chappie,
We've 'ad some rotten times: we've 'ad some fun.

When we've been in a tightish sort of corner,
You've always stuck by me and pulled me through.
And often when I've nearly been a "goner,"
You've proved yourself a trusted friend and true.
In billets when I've made much love to Josie,
You were a most discreet and tactful third,
On leave you didn't say a word to Rosie,
Good Bye! and all the best of luck, old Bird.

DUBLIN HORSE SHOW.

Successful Revival After Lapse Of Five Years.

The opening day of the Dublin Horse Show, a revival of which, after a lapse of five years, is so gratifying, was unfortunately marred to some extent by showery weather, but this did not seriously affect the attendance, which was considerably in excess of what we were accustomed to on the first day in pre-war times. Visitors from England were perhaps more numerous than ever, and as usual included many distinguished people in social and hunting circles, whilst the Continent was also well represented in the throng. His Excellency Field Marshal Lord French brought a large party of his guests at the Vice Regal Lodge, and, a genuine lover of the horse, his lordship took a keen and practical interest in the exhibits. The hunters, which comprise the major portion of the show, were all round a good lot, if not quite up to the old standard, but this, of course, can be attributed to the strain on the source of supply made by the Army Remount Department.

"A MORAL STIMULUS."

East End Clergy Vigorously Defend Boxing.

Although boxing has been vigorously condemned by Free Churchmen at a Llanelly meeting, it has the benediction of well known London clergy.

"It makes for manliness, self-reliance, and, most important of all, for clean living," declared the Rector and Rural Dean of Stepney, the Rev. W.G. Cameron, when asked for his views by a representative of the "Daily Chronicle."

"Boxing is one of the very best exercises, and it certainly encourages temperance. The best parson boxer we had on the staff here—he became a naval chaplain—was extremely popular because of his powers as a boxer, apart from anything else and we had other clergymen on our staff who practised boxing and exercised a tremendous influence for good through doing so.

"Far rather would I see men take up boxing than gambling at street corners; that is box themselves, not watch other people."

A COUNTER ATTRACTION.

Llanelly Nonconformist ministers held prayer meetings as a counter-attraction and protest to the boxing contests at the Market Hall. The hall, however, gained by the advertisement, and at the close of the principal contest the gloves used were sold by auction for 55gs, which was given to a local hospital.

HERNE HILL TO-DAY.

50 Miles National Cyclists' Union Championship.

The chief item at the meeting taking place today at the Herne Hill track is the 50 Miles National Cyclists' Union Championship and valuable "Cycling" trophy. All the best long-distance riders, as well as a Continental crack, have entered. Among the competitors are A. Alden, the 50 miles N.C.U. champion; W. G. Stewart, who has only to win the trophy on this occasion to make it his own property; H.H. Lee, who has one share, all belonging to the Kentish Wheelers. Others include R.H. Clarke, the Polytechnic C.C. crack; W.A. Hills, Catford C.C.; H.W. Henry, North Road C.C.; M.G. Selbach, Unity C.C., both well-known road riders; B. Bragg, Balham C.C., the coming champion; A.E. Aclman, Royal Antwerp B.C., who has put up two good performances in the Brussels road "50."

Y. M. C. A. BILLIARDS.

Schlebusch Score Easy Victory Over Opladen.

An interesting billiard match took place last Wednesday evening at Schlebusch, when teams from the Opladen and Schlebusch branches of the Y.M.C.A. were in opposition. The local team had matters all their own way, however, and without being extended, won easily by the large margin of 255 points.

DRIVER'S SEVEN FIRSTS.

Marvellous Performance At Northern Division A.C. Sports.

INDIANS COMPETE.

The initial sports meeting of the Northern Divisional Ammunition Column was held at Widdersdorf on Friday and Saturday, by kind permission of Major A. M. Richie, R.F.A., Commanding Officer.

There were good attendances on both days, among those present being Brig.-General Ollivant, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., R.A., and Lieut.-Col. Carrington, R.F.A.

The bands of the 1/6 West Yorks and the 9th D.L.I. were present on Friday and Saturday respectively, and added to the pleasures of the function. Roberts, and Farr. Staff, Sgt. Thorn.

There was keen competition throughout. The Section championship went to No. 3 Section, and the individual championship to Dvr. Christenson of No. 3 Section who accomplished a marvellous performance winning no less than seven first prizes. In the turn-outs there was a splendid exhibition of harness and animals. The team belonging to No. 2 Section which recently won first prize at the Rhine Army Horse show was much in evidence at the sport.

At the close of the meeting the prizes were distributed by Mrs. A. M. Richie, wife of Major A. M. Richie, Commanding the Ammunition Column.

TO-DAY'S C.P.C. MATCH.

Lowland Div. M.T. Coy. v 174 Siege Battery.

EXCITING GAME EXPECTED.

Today, at 2 p.m., at the 7th Sq., R.A.F. ground, Exerzierplatz, Mülheim, the Lowland Div. M.T. Coy. meet the 174 Siege Bty. in an eliminating contest for the "Cologne Post" Cricket Cup. There is every prospect of some excellent sport being witnessed. 174 Siege Bty. have an unbeaten record, and the Lowland Div. M.T. Coy. although having lost two matches early on in the season, have got together a really fine side. There should be a big crowd of spectators. To get to the ground take the Berg.-Gladbach car from the Dom which passes within 100 yards of the ground.

EXCELLENT BOWLING.

13th King's L'pool bowler creates Season's Record.

Lieut. Bailey, 13th Kings L'pool Regt., has created a record in the "Cologne Post" Cricket Competition. He has bowled continually through the season and has taken 93 wickets for an average of 2.31 runs. This is even better than the average of Lieut. Fishpool (1/4th Yorks and Lancs) who finished the season with an average of 2.87. Earlier on in the Competition Pte. Carr and Pte. Fulford tied with a bowling average of 2.36. Can anyone beat this? Lieut. Bailey's record is as follows:—

93 wickets 250 runs = Average 2.31.

Cpl. Underwood of the same unit has taken 73 wickets for 319 runs, average 4.37.

CRICKET CHAMPIONSHIP.

More Drawn Games as result of rain.

Owing to the unsettled weather, none of the County Championship matches which have been played this week has produced a definite result. The gap between the two leaders is widened by the present absurd system of calculating percentages, and Somerset take precedence of Notts.

Three more counties in Notts, Gloucestershire, and Derbyshire concluded their Championship programme this week.

ENGLISH CRICKET SCORES.

Following are the scores in the principal English Cricket matches on Thursday:—

LEVERKUSEN CRICKET FRIENDLY.

A cricket friendly played at Leverkusen between II Corps H.Q. and the 51st Batt. Royal Warwickshire Regt. resulted in a win for the former by 78 runs, the respective scores being II Corps H.Q. 107, 51st Warwicks 29. For the winners Lieut. Cooper was top scorer with 39. Lieut.-Col. Larmour (23) and Pte. Evans (16) also batted well. Lieut. Cooper took 7 wickets for 11 runs and Col. Larmour 13 for 160. For the Warwicks Pte. Wills (19) was the only player to reach double figures. Pte. Starmer took 5 wickets for 27 runs and Pte. Wills 2 for 3.

CREFELD RACES.

As a result of the horse he was to have ridden meeting with an accident Lieut. Campbell Russell is at present without a mount in the big steeple-chase at Crefeld tomorrow. He will be pleased to accept a mount from anyone requiring a jockey for that, or any other race.

A CONSIDERATE MULE.

Amusing London D.A.C. Mounted Sports At Westhoven.

FAVOURITE WINS DERBY.

The London D.A.C. held a very successful sports meeting at Westhoven on Wednesday. There was a large attendance of officers and other ranks from units of the Divisional Artillery, including the C.R.A., Brig.-General Oldfield, and a number of ladies. The programme excited the keenest competition amongst the men of the Column, large fields being the rule for every event. The "Mule Derby" attracted thirty runners and was won by an old favourite "Charlie" after a great race. In the handyman's race in which at the last stage the men had to dismount, drink gingerbeer, and eat a bun, Gnr. Allen lost his mule, which bolted some distance, but very considerately returned to him just as he finished his bun, and allowed him to ride home a winner. There was a sweepstake of over a thousand marks on the "Derby" and on this and the majority of the other events a totalizator, organized by Lieut. Young, and very ably worked by Sgt. Clarke, did big business. By permission of their Commanding Officer, the band of the 10th Queens attended and added pleasure to the function. The tea arrangements proved thoroughly efficient. A very successful meeting concluded with the distribution of prizes by Mrs. J. W. P. Wheatley, the wife of the Commanding Officer.

The Results.

The results were as follows:—

Musical chairs:—1, Dvr. Head (No 2 Section).

Tug-of-war (British Mounted):—1, S.A.A. Section.

The Colonel's Cup, awarded to the most successful Section was won by No. 2 Section.

1st LIFE GUARDS' ATHLETICS.

Corporals Share Honours of the Knightsbridge Meeting.

Athletic sport, alternated with military contests and gymkhana events, comprised a lengthy programme for the 1st Life Guards meeting in Hyde Park, opposite Knightsbridge Barracks. In the athletic events the honours of the day were shared by Corpl Robertson and Corpl-of-Horse Russell. The latter, who used to run thirteen years ago as a member of the Horsham Blue Star H.—Alfred Shrubb's original club—ran strongly and pluckily, but being eleven years Robertson's senior, was not so fleet as that opponent. In the 100 Yards Robertson beat Russell for first place by inches, Trooper Watt being third, and in the Furlong the placings were: Robertson, 1; Watt, 2; Russell, 3; the first-named winning by a yard. Robertson also carried off the Obstacle Race, Russell being second, and in Tilting the Bucket Robertson coupled with Corpl Court won first prize.

1st WELSH GUARDS SPORTS.

The 1st Battalion Welsh Guards held an athletic meeting near the Wimbledon Camp. The Prince of Wales's Company were successful in the Company Championship, gaining 95 points, and Drill-Sergt. Roberts won the Individual Championship with 30 points. The crack relay team of the Irish Guards carried off the Relay Race Open to the Brigade of Guards, and the officer commanding the battalion, who were holding the sports, viz.; Lt.-Col. A.G.A. Bore Ruthven, V.C., C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., succeeded in getting third in the 100 Yards Race for Officers.

INTERNATIONAL SWIMMING RACE.

Englishman's fine Performance for Pleasure at Paris.

There has been some uncertainty as to the result of the International Swimming Race through Paris, but now it appears that David Billington, of Bacup, who finished first, in two hours 41 mins 55 secs, against 2 hours 43 mins 37 secs by the next competitor, was not competing in the event but merely taking part for his own pleasure. The result of the race was:—

1; Bacigalupo (Italy), 2; Sacner (Italy), 3; Mademoiselle Wurtz (Belgium), 4; Buschaert (Belgium).

OLYMPIA'S GREAT NIGHT.

The Stars in Training: Fulton's Wonderful Reach.

ADDITIONAL FIGHT.

Advance sales for the first night at Olympia on Sept. 2nd are even better than for the Wilde-Moore fight, and in view of the excellent items on the bill, this is not to be wondered at, though many people interested in boxing may think the promoter is using up too many stars at once. That is his business, however, and boxers at any rate fully appreciate his keen interest in the game.

Francis Charles, the Frenchman selected to oppose the British welter-weight champion, Johnny Basham, is expected to arrive in London this week, and will proceed to Stanmore at once to resume his training. Basham is getting fit at Wrexham, where he has plenty of sparring partners.

Full of Confidence.

Joe Beckett and Arthur Townley are preparing at Southampton for their contests with the Americans, Eddie McGoorty and Fred Fulton respectively. Both Beckett and Townley are progressing favourably and are full of confidence—a valuable asset in the boxing ring.

Mr. Tom O'Rourke, America's veteran trainer, is located at Maidenhead with Fred Fulton, who has the extraordinary reach of eighty-three inches. Under O'Rourke's watchful supervision Fulton should take the square in splendid condition.

A contest of six rounds has been added to the programme owing to the uncertainty which usually surrounds matches between heavy-weights. These rarely travel the scheduled distances, and in order not to curtail the enjoyment of the public, Fred Archer has been selected to meet Jim Skinner.

The programme of Sept. 2 will probably be given in the following order, commencing at 8 p.m.:—

Six rounds.—George Archer (Aldgate) v. Jim Skinner (Chiswick).

Twenty rounds.—Johnny Basham (Wrexham) v. Francis Charles (France).

Twenty rounds.—Joe Beckett (Champion of Great Britain) v. Eddie McGoorty (Oshkosh, U.S.A.).

Ten rounds.—Fred Fulton (Kansas, U.S.A.) v. Arthur Townley (Birkenhead).

Charles Joins McGoorty.

Francis Charles, the French welter-weight who is meeting Johnny Basham for the Welter-Weight Championship of Europe, arrived in London on Tuesday, and proceeded to McGoorty's training quarters at Stanmore.

Beckett The Favourite.

There is heavy wagering on the Beckett—Mc Goorty match. Yesterday at the Café Royal a 500 to 400 wager on Beckett was twice taken.

YORK RACING RESULTS.

Southern's Fine Win in Gimcrack Stakes.

In the Gimcrack Stakes at York on Thursday, the horses could not be seen until half the distance had been completed when Mount Royal led Poltava and Southern. A quarter of a mile from home, Southern drew to the front and won by 1½ lengths.

At the International Athletic competition at Stockholm, on Tuesday, Myrae, a Finn, threw a javelin 216¾ feet thereby establishing a new World's record.

Knight of the Rascals.

This little caricature is an impression of Jack Knight, the comedian of "The Rascals," Cav. Div. M.T. Coy. He is undoubtedly an acquisition to the party, being equally amusing as the broken down waiter or the man about town. Knight is a professional of many years experience. He has toured both in revue and vaudeville, and is well known in the provinces. Few comedians in army theatrical circles have had more to do with the business than he.

JACQUES.

LAWN TENNIS TOURNEY.

Lindenthal Competitions Open to Allies.

What promises to be one of the most attractive lawn tennis tournaments yet held in Rhineland commences on Sept. 6th at the Lindenthal courts. A novel feature, and an exceedingly pleasing one, will be the contests in the Army of the Rhine Championships, for which Americans, French, and Belgians, as well as British aspirants are invited to enter. There are open singles and doubles events for ladies and gentlemen as well as mixed doubles. The events are all open to ladies and officers of the Allied Armies of Occupation. Entries to reach the Secretary, Officers' Sports Club, The Club House, Lindenthal, not later than Tuesday, September 2nd.

TWO-DAY MATCH.

Free Foresters to Play The Rest at Lindenthal.

On Sunday and Monday at Lindenthal an interesting cricket match will be played between the Free Foresters and "The Rest." The former team is being organised by Lieut.-Col. Hartley, whilst Lieut.-Col. Spooner is responsible for the latter. On Sunday the band of the 52nd Northumberland Fusiliers will play selections. The start each day is at 11.30, and the N.A.C.B. are making the luncheon arrangements.

THE DAVIS CUP.

British Team Defeat France In Final Round.

In the Final round of the Davis Cup competition at Deauville on Thursday the British team defeated France by 3 matches to 2, and qualified to meet Australia in the challenge round.

ARTILLERY AT CRICKET.

At interesting match was played at Lindenthal this week by teams representing the Officers of the Northern and Southern Divisional Artilleries respectively.

The N.D.A. batted first and compiled 188 runs, Capt. Emberton 59, Major Turner 32, and Lieut. Champneys 19, being the chief scorers. The S.D.A. were dismissed for 79 in their first innings, (Lieut. Hazell 34, and Brig.-General Kirwan 19), chiefly owing to the deadly bowling of Lieut. Deighton (4 for 8) and Lieut. Champneys (2 for 20).

Going in a second time the S.D.A. were 154 for 7 when stumps were drawn. Lieut. Royle 76, and Brig.-General Kirwan 26, were the biggest scorers in this innings. Major Turner bowled with good effect, taking 2 for 10.

WORLD'S RECORD EQUALLED.

Sun Briar, the four-year-old by Sundridge out of Sweet Briar, equalled world's record time in winning the Champlain Handicap of nine furlongs at the Saratoga (U.S.A.). He covered the distance in 1 min 50 sec, which had previously been accomplished by Vox Populi at Los Angelos in 1908. Brown Prince covered the same distance at Newmarket in 1917 in 1 min 50 2-5 sec.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Practice Games Receipts.

The receipts at Preston North End's three practice games realised £300, which will be handed over to local charities.

First Victory Since 1903.

The victory of the Australians, N.E. Brookes and G. Patterson, in the American national lawn tennis doubles during last week is the first gained in that event by a visiting pair since R.F. and H.L. Doherty won in 1903.

Long and Short.

It will interest those who know Woolley and those who have not seen Freeman, of Kent, but are interested in his size, that when the players stand side by side Freeman's head just tops Woolley's waistline.

Heaviest Team.

Liverpool claim that they have the heaviest team in the First Division of the League. If this is so, it is as well that mere brawn is not everything, otherwise there would be no need to look further for the champions.

Death of a Rowing Blue.

The death is announced of Mr. Robert Taunton Raikes, of Treberfydd, Brecon, who rowed in the winning Oxford crews against Cambridge in 1865 and 1866. For many years he practised as a solicitor in the City. He was 76.

Quicker Than Telegram.

Some of the birds in the Manchester Flying Club's young birds' race reached home from Weymouth before the telegram announcing the time of their liberation.

Right Back Secured.

Leeds City have been successful in securing from Blackpool H. Millership, the right back. Leeds had some anxiety about this position before Millership was signed on.

Victor Murdin.

Victor Murdin, who played for Northampton against Sussex at Brighton, is home on leave from Germany, and expects to be demobilized on his return from leave. He is a fast bowler, with a splendid record in regimental cricket.

The Davis Cup.

When Dwight Davis put up the trophy in 1900 his idea was to accentuate the interest in the matches between the British Isles and America, and the present world-wide support of the competition was never contemplated.

Only 33.

Mr. J. Woodman, Sam Langford's manager, threatens to bring the black boxer to England again. Langford has for some time been put in the veteran class, but has just discovered that he is "only thirty-three years old."

Seaside Bowls.

Southern bowlers are busy at Hastings with the sixth annual tournament. A feature of the first day's play was the defeat of A. Poingdestre (Bromley), Kent champion 1919, who fell before W.G. Freathy (Gillingham) by 21—14.

Golfing Heredity.

The influence of heredity in first-class golf has been apparent since the early days of the game. Skill has always "run in the family," and though the old faces, now familiar, may disappear, many of the old names will continue to crop up in the news for a long time to come.

Changing Caps.

Several of the young school of amateurs playing in county cricket change their caps at least once during a match. This thin disguise might be adopted by fieldsmen who drop an easy catch, since there is no other way of temporarily escaping the unwelcome attention of the crowd.

Fisherman "Goalie."

Manager Arthur Chadwick, of Exeter City, has secured a promising lot of players, and the coming season is full of promise. Pym (the Topsham fisher lad), who has had several tempting offers to leave his first love, will again guard the Exeter goal, and the citadel can be regarded as safe in his keeping.

The Hampshire Hunt.

Mr. A.P. Robinson has been appointed Master of the Hampshire Foxhounds. The Master will hunt hounds himself, having previously hunted staghounds and harriers.

Rapid Scoring.

Sensational as it was the scoring of 96 runs in thirty-two minutes by Hobbs and J.N. Crawford against Kent is nothing like a record. G.L. Jessop hit 191 at Hastings in a hour and a half, and Alletson 189 in the same time at Brighton.

International Fixture.

Mr. Tom Charnley, the Football League secretary, has received word from the Irish League agreeing to the suggestion to alter the date of the international from October 13 to October 6, thus bringing the fixture forward a week to avoid clashing with a Football League meeting on the first-named date.

Suggested Welsh League.

Welsh soccer clubs in the Second Division of the Southern League and in the Birmingham League have the permission of the Welsh F.A. to take part in these competitions for the coming season only, The Welsh F.A. considers the time has arrived when a Welsh league should be formed, and intends to discuss the matter fully later on.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Good Mail News.

The A.P.O. are at present making arrangements to bring the mails up in the Calais-Cologne leave train. This will mean that Units will receive their mails, letters and parcels, the day they arrive instead of the following day.

The M.O. In The Butts.

A certain infantry company was firing a musketry course last week, and owing to the shortage of officers, the medical officer volunteered for duty in the butts. In the heat of the afternoon the markers were signalling the scores rather badly and the firing point officer being rather short tempered rang up the butts, asked for the officer in charge and told him to bustle the markers. He then asked for the score on No 7 Target. The reply soon came back "Two inners, two mags, one excused duty.

Was It Unconscious Humour?

It may be unconscious humour on the part of the man who pastes up the advertisements, or deliberate waggishness, but one of the latest proclamations by the Military Governor has been posted over an old advertisement of a certain revue, completely covering it except for the title, so that after reading through the proclamation one is startled to find at the bottom, the comment "Well, I'm —!" And yet the Germans are supposed to be devoid of a sense of humour!

Pay Book Humour.

As many are aware, all Pay Books were recently called in, as the Pay and Mess Book system came into operation on August 1st. One rather amusing incident comes to notice. In the space provided in the A.B. 64 for particulars regarding the person to whom it was desired to leave credits, personal belongings, etc., in case of death, was inserted the following.— "I leave the sunshine to the flowers"! Evidently the position of the writer's "credit" would not permit of him leaving anything more substantial!

Who is Your Favourite Author?

Few of us have not an author more favoured than another. Varied tastes naturally lead to variety in the selection of works, as is borne out by the lists submitted as the most interesting in the discussion which is going on in our columns. To arrive at a conclusion as to which are the most popular books, we have decided to promote a competition and readers of all ranks are invited to submit selections. Each book selected will be considered as receiving one vote each time it figures in the lists sent in and the competitor whose list, according to the books in it, embraces the highest aggregate of votes will receive a prize of fifty marks. Selections of ten books must be addressed to "Books" c/o The Editor "Cologne Post" by Saturday, Sept. 6th. Be your favourite writer Marie Corelli or Gene Stratton Porter, Arnold Bennett or Rider Haggard, make a selection of the ten works you consider best and send it along.

Position Everything.

What is the meaning of the little red crosses painted on the walls of the auditorium, just beneath the side lights, in some German theatres? Were they meant to serve as a gentle reminder to the pleasure seeking German in war time? If, as our advertising experts tell us, position is everything, they should have served this purpose admirably.

Child Labour in the Rhineland.

In Rhineland there are many things existing which would have formed a fit subject for a caricature for Dickens. A visit to the Fair at the Zoological Garden will reveal the astonishing fact that one of the roundabouts for children is propelled by child labour. About five or six small boys, most of them without boots and stockings, walk round and round a raised narrow platform, pushing, as they go, an iron handle which causes the roundabout to rotate. Yet we used to be astonished at the employment of dogs on the treadmills in France. In England the roundabouts for children are usually propelled by a small horse and not by half-a-dozen urchins.

Railway Automatic Machines.

The average English traveller is always armed with a sheaf of magazines to while away the train-journey, and the scramble round the bookstalls is a common enough sight on any railway station. The German railways avoid this however, for, in addition to the ordinary book counter, on most platforms can be seen an automatic machine containing paper novels, which can be obtained by simply putting 20 pf. in the slot. They are of the noveletie type, supposed to be beloved of servant girls, and after reading, one can only think that the 20 pf. would be far better invested in the chocolate machine, but the fact of them being there is another instance of attention to detail so characteristic of the German.

Soldiers as Servants.

The demand for domestic servants is general, and the supply appears to lie in the ranks of the numbers of soldiers now demobilized, many of whom have no technical training and are anxious to undertake employment of any sort. Inquiries showed that men who were employed formerly in a domestic capacity—as butlers, etc.—were anxious to secure work that would continue the open air life they had led in the Army. On the other hand, officers batmen are quite willing to be servants. While men are not prepared to register themselves as domestic helps, they are willing to undertake the work. In the words of an ex-officer, who has employed his old batman to "do" for him and his wife, he is "a great advance on the women servants we have tried. My wife is delighted with the experiment, and indeed my batman's quiet, unobtrusive, yet singularly effective service is commented on by all our visitors."

Not a German.

A rather amusing incident occurred the other day in the town of Siegburg. A party of four having been to the races, went in search of a café to obtain refreshment. They were partaking of lunch when in walked a civilian, who purchased a doughnut and ate it. When he was leaving one of the party in his best German exclaimed "Vie gehts," to which the civilian did not reply. The Tommy continued "Vie gehts, Sie nichts alberten houtie, ah gestern sie felt drunken, and cann nicht alberten." Imagine the surprise of the party when the civilian remarked, "What do you think I am? A German!" He then left, and as he parted shouted "Cheerio."

Music — English v. German.

It is evident that Englishmen need not be pessimistic on this much-debated subject. In the course of many visits to the chief cafés and places where music is to be heard in Cologne and in neigbouring towns, one finds in few instances that there is a performance worthy of mention. To every performance of well-played, well-selected and enjoyable music, there are at least five or six where one hears nothing but a lot of indifferent trash, indifferently played. Quantity is there indeed, but the quality is not of a high standard. On a comparison, English orchestras, similarly employed in English places of amusement, distinctly shine, both as regards selection and performance. Again, it is evident, some times ludicrously so, that the Germans are out to please their English visitors in respect of their selections. But here, once more, one finds how little they understand us.

Read this!

Apropos the discussion now being waged on "What to read," how many men in the Rhine Army have read "Three men on a Bummel" by Jerome K. Jerome, who is generally considered a humorist of the first water. This book describes, in the writer's usual satirical style, the wanderings of three Britishers in Germany. It is a collection of reflections upon Germany and the German people, not a mere narrative of travels. A "Bummel" appears to be a sort of unconventional ramble with no definite programme and of no definite duration. It may be argued that the book belongs to another generation, but even to-day it is good reading. Jerome could not be considered immaculately truthful, but his exaggerativeness is very palatable to all who appreciate good, clean humour. "Three Men on a Bummel" is procurable at most local book shops in the well-known Tauchnitz edition.

OPINIONS OF THE MOMENT.

THE BIG PROFITEERS.

The moral of the last few weeks is that either profits must be limited in some way by Government action to satisfy the conscience of the community, or the outraged consumers will take the law into their own hands, to the extreme peril of all existing Governments as well as of the profiteers.

MR. C. A. McCURDY, Ministry of Food.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS.

Drinking in moderation is nobody's business save the drinker's. A man or a woman has no more right to stop his or her next door neighbour drinking a glass of beer than to prevent him from smoking a cigarette or eating his roast beef to-day or on any other Sunday.

SIR JOHN REES.

LUCK.

Although it would be idle for me to deny the existence of luck—and sometimes great luck—in boxing; I have come to the conclusion, after 35 years of the game, that the qualities which so often bring success in other walks of life are largely responsible for the making of a first-class boxer. A champion boxer, before he reaches the top of the tree, must possess three great qualities: skill in his craft, courage, and clean living. Substitute for his boxing ability a certain proficiency at another trade or profession and you have the three essentials which make for success in almost anything.

MR. CORRI EUGENE.

IMMODEST DRESSES.

Many girls think that men can be won by the flesh. But men are too sensible, they are not going to marry girls who go about half-naked. I could not set myself up as a judge or a censor of women's dress, for I only know what I see in the streets and in the fashion plates. But what I think is that women do seem to have lost that restraint and modesty and the befitting style of dress which characterised them during the war. Then they denied themselves luxuries, and their dress was simpler and plainer and much more modest and befitting. Now they seem to have gone to the other extreme. The one aim of many girls seems to be to attract men, and that may account for the present styles in dress. A man may flirt with a girl who goes to extremes in these fashions, but he will not marry her.

DR. F. B. MEYER.

DECLINE OF THE SOVEREIGN.

There is no doubt that the depreciated currency is the cause of high prices. If we persist in the fatal delusion that, quite apart from the balance of trade, the depreciation of our currency is not responsible, or responsible only to a trifling extent, for a large proportion of the high prices in this country, we shall produce before many months—perhaps weeks, if stocks are low—a combination of high prices and scarcity which may fill the land from end to end with riot and starvation.

SIR OSWALD STOLL.

SOCIETY MUST PREPARE.

There exists in this nation a substratum of sound common sense which may, and in the long run I think will, resist even the wiles of the professional agitator. The body of labourers are no fools—far from it. They make mistakes, and who does not? But they are the last who, if they understand the matter, would involve themselves and the nation in ruin. If they knew that they were on the direct road to destroy the trade of this country, to kill all native industries, they would pause. There are signs of improvement. Let us hope that they will develop. But let us not be content with this hope. Society must be prepared with the weapon of defence if the weapon of offence is employed against it.

LORD WRENBURY.

LUCKY-BAG LIFE.

Everybody is asking the reason of the sudden fit of spendthrift extravagance which seems to have overtaken almost the whole nation. I think the nouveaux riches are spending partly because they do not know the spending value of money in another class of life, partly because they want to "live up to" their new position, and partly because what is lightly got easily goes. The nouveaux pauvres are spending because they have never learnt not to "do without." They do not know how to economise—and also lots of them do not think it worth while. Also, I am afraid, very much afraid, that many of the middle-class—the people who used to think several times before they "broke into" a five-pound note, who used to save all their lives to give their sons a good start and to leave a few thousands to their daughters—are spending their capital. Whatever the reason, everybody seems to be spending.

LADY ASKWITH, C.B.E.

A TOUCHING YARN.

Private Muggins has an eye for the girls. I well remember whilst we were training how he "fell" to the curly-headed flapper, who owned the small tobacconist's store just opposite the camp.

The first time he entered the store, and she smiled, not the ordinary field gun smile, but a whole battery of heavy artillery stuff, I knew he was hers, especially when he asked for Abdullas instead of Woodbines.

The way his face shone full of triumph, after she told him to call again, reminded me of a German pork butcher who has just discovered a stray dog in his shop, and sausage meat is scarce.

Muggins carried on terribly over the tobacconist girl. He openly bragged that his handsome features and slim grace had captivated the girl's heart.

Now anyone who looks at Muggins, looks quickly, a long look often proves fatal. I fancy if his past, of which he is reticent was revealed, it would show a lost argument with a steam roller, or else a lightning aquaintance with a pugilist's stock in trade. It was perfectly obvious, from the above that beauty was not the rock on which Muggins held the fair one's charms. I well remember a candid friend once telling Muggins that if his face was his fortune, he would never pay income tax.

Muggins' nasal organ had not received that ruddy bloom it bore, without cost. Beer was a necessary commodity, but to get beer you must have money, and it was common knowledge that Muggins was always first "over the top," whenever the canteen was going "wet," so wealth was not the draw.

Well, time went on, Muggins equally divided his spare time and cash, between the canteen and tobacconist's counter, until one day Muggins came in, looking like a man who has just missed pay parade. Something had happened that was evident, and my thoughts immediately sought the reason, the store-girl for sure.

"Anything the matter?" I ventured, "No," replied Muggins.

Next day, rumours began. The major's batman, confidentially told half the company that we were for Russia. By dinner-time, it came out of the Q.M. store, that summer clothing for India was to be issued. By tea-time it was an understood thing, that we should be amongst the Irish colleens in a couple of days time. At last the order came and eventually we reached the Rhine.

Muggins had been pally these days. Nothing further had been mentioned about the tobacconist girl, so I said in a sort of don't care a hang style "How's the girl, Muggins?" He looked at me quickly and then with a resigned air told me the whole yarn.

"Oh, I have finished with her. She already had a civvy hanging behind her at the time she was giving me the glad eye, a sort of artist bloke," he muttered.

"This civvy, all the time I was making eyes at the girl," he went on, "Was painting my blooming face behind the shelter of the parlour door." "Painting your face" I said, trying to keep my features straight," whatever for?"

"Why to sell I suppose to some of these toffs," said Muggins in a vague sort of way.

"I suppose you would be pleased at the honour. Just fancy having your picture hung up in some gentleman's house?"

"Honour be hanged," exploded Muggins. "Why he has called the picture "The Price of Drink.

"What happened?" I remarked.

"Well" said Muggins as a smile settled on his face, "Everything happened. I left the artist bloke sat in the fender, with his head through The Price of Drink' snapped my fingers at the girl and came back to camp."

I thought Muggins would have been well cured after the above experience with a descendant of Eve but not he—But that is another story. S.R.

GERMAN PRISONERS RETURN.

MR. CARNEGIE'S LEGACIES TO BRITISH STATESMEN.

GERMAN PRISONERS.

TO BE REPATRIATED IMMEDIATELY.

The forecast by Herr Ebert that the German Government's efforts on behalf of the war prisoners had been successful, is confirmed by a resolution passed by the Supreme Council as follows:

"In order to diminish as rapidly as possible the sufferings caused by the war the Allied and Associated Powers have determined to anticipate the date of the ratification of the Treaty of Peace with Germany so far as the repatriation of German prisoners is concerned. The process of repatriation will begin immediately and will be conducted under the auspices of an Inter-Allied Commission to which will be added German representatives. As soon as the Treaty comes into force, the Allied and Associated Powers desire to make it clear that the continuance of this benevolent policy from which the German soldiers will so greatly benefit must depend on the full filment by the German Government of all their obligations."

GERMANY AND ALLIES.

TROOPS REFUSE TO LEAVE BALTIC PROVINCES.

A statement comes from Mitau to the effect that the notorious "Iron Division" has refused to obey orders, declining to evacuate territory as ordered by the Allies, and basing their refusal upon certain rights which they allege were conferred upon them by treaty with the Lettish Government.

The question of evacuation therefore is acutely raised between the Allies and the German and Lettish Governments, and is one which will have to be firmly dealt with, for it concerns what is tantamount to an attempt to introduce "Cossackdom" into the Baltic provinces.

The treaty to which the "Iron Division" appeals, is one entered into last year by the Germans and Letts. At that time the Letts were sorely pressed by the Bolshevist forces, and in desperation agreed to confer the rights of citizenship—and, it is asserted, rights of colonization—on Germans who would agree to fight for a period of four weeks.

The troops now find that, as the result of the Allied order to withdraw, these "rights" are to be denied them. Lettish circles in Berlin, assert that the troops are determined to hold the land already in their possession, and to which they have no title.

GUN-RUNNING IN IRELAND.

Unusual police activity has been witnessed at the Extension Quay, Dublin, and it was learned that the authorities had received word that ammunition and rifles for Sinn Feiners were coming in camouflaged as part of the ordinary cargo of a foreign vessel. It is further stated that the identity of the vessel is known to the Customs Authorities and the coastguards received special instructions It is not expected that the cargo can be landed.

The "Irish News" says that sensational rumours are current at Armagh that a large number of rifles and a quantity of ammunition belonging to the Ulster Volunteers have been handed to the police. This is interesting in view of the explicit statement in the House of Commons a year ago by a member of the Government that arms had been handed over then.

QUIEN'S CATEGORY.

The Commissary at St. Quentin said at the resumed trial of Quien, the alleged betrayer of Nurse Cavell, that the accused belonged to the category whom the Germans made their agents before the war.

Mmes. Bodard, and Jacob, who were arrested for facilitating the passage of fugitives from Belgium, said they were convinced that Quien had denounced them.

WILSON'S PLEADINGS.

It is definitely announced that President Wilson will start on his trip to the Pacific Coast probably within a few days. There have been intimations of the President's intention of making a speech-making tour on behalf of the League of Nations and the Peace Treaty.

PLENTY OF PLUM AND APPLE.

Sir Thomas Pink, interviewed by a Press representative, said there was no immediate danger of a jam famine. He thought the manufacturers would have a moderate supply of jam for their customers, probably more plum than anything else, between now and next May. There would be quite a good supply of marmalade. There was a good crop of apples, and therefore he could not see any cause for public alarm as to the supply of jam for the ensuing season.

Big jam-making firms are not reducing their staffs.

MR. CARNEGIE'S WILL.

ANNUITIES FOR MR. GEORGE AND VISCOUNT MORLEY.

The will of the late Mr. Andrew Carnegie, whose estate is estimated at 25 to 30 million pounds, has been published Among the bequests made are the following annuities:

Mr Lloyd George £2,000; Viscount Morley £ 2,000; Mr. John Burns £1,000; Mr. Thos. Burt, M.P. £1,000; Mr. John Wilson, M.P. £1,000; Ex-President Taft £2,000; Mr. Theodore Roosevelt £1,000; Mr. Grover Cleveland £1,000.

Mr. Carnegie further bequeathed to every labourer upon the pay-rolls at Skibo of two years' service or more, 50 dollars; of five years' service or more, 100 dollars.

A sum equal to two years' rent is to be remitted as the rent accrues to each crofter of good standing among his neighbours.

"We are blessed with a fine people upon the Skibo estate," the will continues, "and our factor is directed to grant a third year's rent to the crofters provided it is spent upon their homes, to their improvement, and to the satisfaction of the factor."

Other legacies are:—

5,000 dollars each to Miss Maggie Lauder, Miss Anna Lauder, and Mrs. George Hall, of Dunfermline.

It is said that during his life-time, Mr. Carnegie gave away gifts amounting to 70 million pounds.

STAKING OUT CLAIMS.

ITALIAN PEASANTS SEIZE LAND.

The peasants of the Roman Campagna have taken the Italian Premier (Signor Nitti) at his word that no acre of ground should be uncultivated, and set out by the thousand with their old-fashioned ploughs, oxen, and spades to occupy and cultivate all the deserted lands of the Agrum Romanum. Their movement is followed with great interest in Rome, and is causing some political excitement. At Albano, at three o'clock in the morning, the village tocsin rang out calling together all the villagers to set out and occupy the lands. They all had spades, and assembled at the village of Pialé Piazza, whence they started singing new Socialist songs. Outside the village they numbered about 2,000, and were headed by a band and a leader. Others gathered at Santa Palomba and occupied the lands around Palazza Morgana, staking them out, each peasant claiming a good acre or two. Signposts were fixed in the ground marking each one's claim, and the peasants, before starting to work, listened to the harangues of various leaders. Similar scenes are said to have occurred near other villages, but the movement is very orderly, and the men seem intent on really cultivating the neglected fields.

CHAR-A-BANC OVER CLIFF.

There has been a tragic ending to an excursion to the Grande Chartreuse monastery in France. A party of twenty-one tourists were on their way from Grenoble in a motor char-à-banc, and had passed the convent, when suddenly as the chauffeur was negotiating an awkward bend, just before Saint Pierre de Chartreuse, the car skidded and was thrown off the road. The huge car remained suspended upside down in some trees in mid-air, while the passengers were thrown into a torrent 20ft. below. It was a horrible scene. Four dead bodies were recovered later, and all the other seventeen passengers were seriously injured.

DEFIANT ROUMANIANS.

Up to Wednesday night the Supreme Council had received no reply from Roumania to its latest note. According to the latest dispatch, foodstuffs, arms and munitions for Roumania have been stopped. In open defiance of all threats and warnings from the Supreme Council the Roumanians continue their work of devastating Hungary, thereby not only robbing Hungary but depriving the Entente of the possibility of collecting the war indemnity.

The Archduke Joseph re-appeared on the political stage on Wednesday, and, addressing a deputation, declared that Hungary would rise from the grave and re-occupy her former position. There is a movement in defiance of the Entente.

MARSHAL FOCH'S SON.

SEARCH FOR HIS GRAVE.

The Belgian Minister for the Interior has given instructions for a search to be made for the place where was buried the body of the son of Marshal Foch, who fell during the battle of Virton in the Belgian Ardennes in the early days of the war. The Allied Commander's son is believed to have been buried near the road between Baranzy and Gorcy. The son of René Viviani, who was French Premier at the outbreak of war, was killed in the same neighbourhood.

ANTI-BOLSHEVISM.

PETROGRAD WILL BE TAKEN.

M. Tyakowitch, a member of the Ukraine Special Delegation to Paris, declared in an interview that the struggle against Bolshevism and a definite triumph over the mob whom Lenin rules are the chief matters on which they desired to address the Entente. They must unite with Caucasians, Roumanians, Poles and Lithuanians to create an impassible barrier against the Bolshevist forces, which would be a guarantee for the future, for it would oppose itself firmly against the German-Russian Alliance which the Germans desired. They would know how to defend themselves once their independence was guaranteed by the Entente. If that were granted they would lay open to the Entente the riches of their countries.

Interviewed by a Dutch journalist at Reval, the leader of the British Military Mission in Esthonia said that it was almost certain that Petrograd would be taken this summer.

Reports from Viborg state that a violent bombardment was heard there on Wednesday from the Cronstadt direction. It is supposed that British naval and air forces were in action. Thick clouds of smoke were afterwards observed over Cronstadt.

COAL PROBLEM.

SOMETHING NEW WANTED.

To discover an effective and cheap substitute for coal and thereby to solve the problem of the coal mines is to be first big task of the modern James Watts, who are to be housed in the James Watt School of Research, at Birmingham. The committee of engineers which has undertaken to develop the proposal for the research school has now reached the following preliminary conclusions:

Hitherto research has been frittered away in looking too much into detail, the improvement of something which already exists.

We must get at something new.

There is latent power in nearly everything. The problem is to convert the power to ordinary commercial needs.

We have to go very much further than Watt, who was eminently successful in converting coal, through steam into power.

There is a wonderful future before any nation, or man who can evolve a cheap power from some other source than coal or any source of power not yet tapped.

This can only be done by setting up a school such as the proposed James Watt School of Research, to support people who have the neccessary imagination and who have received the necessary training which enables them to observe very closely all signs and bring them to such a form that they can be grasped by all industry.

All big employers carry big experimental departments.

Therefore the James Watt School of Research should be made a communual institution for the investigation of basic principles of prime movement for the benefit of all British industries, and thus largely assist in removing the difficulties at present facing British world trade.

PROMPT DRIVER.

SAVES DERAILED TRAIN.

With his train travelling at from 40 to 45 miles an hour, Prestwich, driver on a Blackpool to Birmingham express, had to whistle three times to attract the notice of a ganger's party working on the line near Acton Bridge Station, L. and N.W.R. Guessing that something was wrong, he shut off steam and jammed on his vacuum brake. This much reduced the speed of his train, but did not stop it.

The ganger's party were renewing a broken chair at some points, and the work not being finished in time for this train, it was derailed.

At the same time another train was seen about 900 yards away and rapidly approaching on the other line. Prestwich, though badly shaken, ran up the line and stopped this train 50 yards from his own. But for his quick presence of mind on two occasions, this accident on June 16 would have had far more serious results. As it was, 11 passengers suffered minor injuries.

DIPLOMA FOR DOG.

The council of the Dog Owners' Defence Association have awarded their first-class diploma for saving life to a retriever belonging to Mr. Walter Gilbert.

The dog saved Lucy Morris, aged five and Horace Porter, aged seven, from drowning at Rotherham. One child got on its back and the other clung to its tail, and it swam with them to land.

BANKRUPT'S GAMBLING PLEA.

At the first meeting of creditors under a receiving order recently made against John Pryse Howell Loveden Pryse, of Deanery-street, Hyde Park, the debtor estimated his liabilities at £17,000 mainly due to moneylenders, and his assets at £3,500. He attributed his failure to gambling losses amounting this year to £8,000, or £9,000, and last year to £1,200. He said that he was only 22 years old and formerly held a commission in the Glamorgan Yeomanry, but was invalided out in 1917.

A trustee was appointed.

Diplomatic relations between Germany and Portugal will be resumed.

IN CANADA'S CAPITAL

PRINCE'S UNPARALLELED WELCOME.

The Prince of Wales' triumphal progress through Canada continues. On reaching Ottawa, he received a welcome unparalleled in size and enthusiasm in the capital's history. He entered heartily into the spirit of welcome, and, while being driven through the streets to the Governor-General's residence, stood up in the carriage and waved gaily to the cheering crowds.

The cheering crowds at Ottawa were so dense that it took six hours to get from the station to Parliament Buildings, where an address was presented by Sir Robert Borden.

The crowd broke through to hear the Prince's reply. He said he was conscious as the King's heir of the grave and inspiring responsibility resting on him.

As the train was nearing Ottawa it stopped near the village of Manotick, and the Prince went for a walk. A little girl carrying a basket of apples asked him if he was the Prince of Wales and on his replying in the affirmative she asked him to accept the apples. The Prince, highly amused, took the apples and asked the little girl her name, shaking hands with her and thanking her. He took the apples back to the train.

The Prince has accepted an invitiation to visit New York and to have the freedom of the city conferred on him. He expects to be in the United States in November.

HOTEL IN FLAMES.

BIG FIRE AT NEWQUAY.

Edgecumbe Hotel, Newquay, one of the finest buildings at the Cornish seaside resort, has been destroyed by fire. Damage estimated at between £6,000 and £7,000 was done. The outbreak was discovered at about two o'clock in the morning, and soon the whole building was enveloped in flames.

Although, with the 70 visitors and the staff, the occupants of the hotel numbered nearly 100, everybody escaped. Within ten minutes of the alarm everybody was out of the building, although they had to make their escape in night attire. Visitors lost all their personal property, but people in the neighbourhood have helped them as far as clothes were concerned.

One man from Birmingham had a narrow escape, as he did not hear the alarm. When he woke up nearly all the means of escape were cut off by the flames. But he reached a window, and jumped from the fourth storey to a shed a few feet from the ground. He broke his ankle.

Many of the guests owed their escape to the plucky efforts of a barman and two domestics, who, after the discovery of the fire, went from room to room arousing them.

POLICEMAN HANDCUFFED.

BOUND TO HAY-CHOPPING MACHINE.

Overpowered by supposed thieves he had surprised in a stable near the dyeworks of Messrs. Wharton, Saville Town, Dewsbury, a constable was handcuffed to a hay-chopping machine and his ankles bound with his belt to an iron support.

The beat is a very lonely one, and, although he shouted for help, the constable had to wait about four hours before a workman came. The police had to be sent for, as the key of the handcuffs had been taken by the men.

WALWORTH OUTRAGE.

Thomas Pitcher was charged on remand at Lambeth with the attempted murder of Catharine Daley at Walworth.

After the man Fielder, now dead, left the house, the prosecution said that a woman across the road watching the house heard thuds and blows and cries of "mercy." Daley was found on a bed partly unconscious with a wound in the head and is now lying in Southwark Infirmary.

Pitcher said that he saw Fielder standing outside the bedroom door with his coat off and asked him what the noise was about and he knocked him downstairs. After Fielder had gone he looked in the room and saw Daley lying on the bed. The instrument used to cause the injuries was a flat iron.

A doctor from the infirmary said that possibly the woman would recover, but she would never be able to say what happened.

Pitcher was remanded.

NEW HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT.

A wireless message last night states that a new Government has been formed in Hungary. The Government has asked for Allied delegation to control the forthcoming election

No German toys may be imported to Great Britain for five years.

America has made a present to France of all the buildings erected by the American Army during the war.

On Friday morning the new Republic of the Palatinate was proclaimed at Ludwigshafen. The Revolutionaries took possession of the Post Office. It is expected that the workmen will protest by a general strike against this constitutional change.

Ebert and Noske continuing their journey through Germany, arrived at Karlsruhe.

MEDAL RIBBONS.

NEW RIBBONS FOR AIR FORCE DECORATIONS.

The Air Ministry announces that the King has approved the ribbons, as described below, being substituted for those at present in use:

Distinguished Flying Cross.—One inch and a quarter in width; violet and white alternate diagonal stripes, each of 1/8in in width, running at an angle of 45deg.

Air Force Cross.—One inch and a quarter in width; red and white alternate diagonal stripes, each of 1/8in. in width, running at an angle of 45deg.

Distinguished Flying Medal.—The same as that for the D.F.C., except that the diagonal stripes are 1/16in. in width.

Air Force Medal.—The same as that for the A.F.C., except that the diagonal stripes are 1/16in. in width.

The ribbons will be worn one half-inch in depth, the diagonal stripes running downwards from the centre of the tunic towards the left, and will be so arranged that: (1) Distinguished Flying Cross or Air Cross ribbon will show at the top corner nearest to the left arm, and at the bottom corner nearest to the centre of the tunic, triangles of equal dimensions of violet and red, as the case may be; (2) Distinguished Flying Medal and the Air Force Medal ribbon will show at the top corner nearest to the left arm a triangle of white, and at the bottom corner nearest to the centre of the tunic a triangle of equal dimensions of violet or red, as the case may be; (3) the order of precedence will be the same as at present. The new ribbons should be worn as soon as practicable by all officers and airmen awarded these decorations. The ribbons are now available, and a free issue will be made to those entitled to them. In the case of demobilized officers and airmen, application for the ribbon should be made to: (1) Officers—The Secretary, Air Ministry, Kingsway, W.C.2; (2) Airmen—The Officer i/c. Records, Royal Air Force, Blandford, Dorset.

CALLOUS BOYS.

KILL & MAIM 39 LAMBS.

At Newcastle-on-Tyne seven boys, of ages ranging between 9 and 12, were charged with having, at Castle Docks, killed thirty-four black-faced lambs, valued at £46 15s, and maimed five others, value £6 17s 6d, which had to be destroyed.

Mr. Bateson, prosecuting, said the circumstances disclosed unparalleled callousness and utter disregard for the sufferings of the dumb creatures.

Evidence was given that the boys gained access to the sheep lair, where the animals had been placed, rode about on their backs hanging on by the horns, and beating them with sticks. The horns of several were pulled out. On Thursday morning thirty-four lambs were found dead and five others had to be destroyed.

Three of the defendants were discharged, and the others were remanded.

TALES OF GAMBLING.

Huge Liabilities of 22-years-old Man.

The cashier and bookkeeper, Mary Brady (29), who was committed for trial at Manchester on August 7, has been released on bail.

The charge against her is of stealing the proceeds of three cheques for £820, £743, and £550, together with £3,899 cash balances, belonging to her employers, Messrs. Thos. Thoresen, Ltd. ship brokers, of Christiania and Manchester.

Arrested at Brighton and asked how much money she had had, Mary Brady replied: "About £10,000. I have lost it all gambling at cards," she added, "with the exception of what I have spent in dress. There is a fur coat which cost 600 guineas which I have not paid for."

TWINS DEAD IN BATH.

The birth of triplets to Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Wood, of 18, London-road, Romford, has had a sad ending.

The babies were all girls. One died shortly after birth, but the others and the mother seemed to be going on fairly well.

Early in the morning Mrs. Wood called her husband, and saying she had been bathing the children, asked for them. The father could not see them in the house. Going into the yard he found them, both dead, in a bath of rain water. Just after he discovered the children, the mother again asked for them in a perfectly natural way, and appeared ignorant of what had happened.

NO RAIN FOR THREE YEARS.

A Johannesburg wire says that portions of the Cape Midlands have been practically rainless for three years and farmers are reaching the end of their tether. Stock is perishing in thousands. In ordinary times, the effects of such droughts could be mitigated by the purchase of food stuffs, but prices are now prohibitive. The result is that thousands of sheep and goats are killed at birth. The ostrich feather trade is also hit by the lack of lucerne for the birds.

THREE GASSED AT ROSYTH.

A tragic affair is reported from Rosyth Naval Dock. Three men were descending a ladder to make an inspection of ship's stores in the lower part of H. M. S. Tiger when they were overcome by poisonous fumes. Though they were brought to the open air as quickly as possible, all efforts to revive them were unavailing.

TROOPER RULES 15,000.

YOUNG MAN WHO FOUND HIS MARK.

A remarkable story from Palestine goes to prove the inherent governing capacity of the British race. The central figure in the story is Trooper Thorneycroft, of the Royal Gloucester Hussars, the son of a Bristol hotel-keeper.

Young Thorneycroft, who is only twenty-two, was left behind when General Allenby's force was chasing the fleeing Turks through Palestine. He took charge of the town of Safed and sixty surrounding villages, and at once began to act as military governor. He continued in this office until he was relieved by Captain Harrington, Military Governor of Tiberias, a month later.

"I found Trooper Thorneycroft upholding his position with dignity," wrote Captain Harrington, after he had taken supreme control. "He is respected by the people, who still speak of the sense of security which his presence ensured.

"He handled large sums of Turkish money, and administered justice in a rough and ready manner, as the situation demanded.

"The fact that a trooper could administer the district with such success that he secured a respect for the law from 15,000 people proves his capabilities."

Trooper Thorneycroft has been given a commission in recognition of his services. He is still at Safed, having been placed in charge of the police there.

THIEF IN BEDROOM.

DARING DUBLIN JEWEL ROBBERY.

A daring robbery of jewelry, the value of which is stated to be £3,000, has taken place at the Gresham Hotel, Dublin.

Among the visitors to the City for the Horse Show are Major and Mrs. Crawshay, of Wrexham. Major Crawshay belongs to the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Mrs. Crawshay left her bedroom for a few minutes, and on returning found a strange man there. When asked what he was doing, the man said he was a stranger and was trying to find a way out to the street. He carried a Gladstone bag, and almost as soon as he had left Mrs. Crawshay missed her jewels, which had been placed on the dressing table by her maid shortly before. She followed the man, calling after him, but he walked quickly down the stairs and out among the other guests into the street, where he disappeared.

EPSOM RIOT.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS' APPEALS DISMISSED.

The Criminal Appeal Court has considered five appeals by Canadian soldiers against sentences of twelve month's imprisonment for rioting at Epsom on June 17th.

It was stated for the prisoners that some of them had wounds the next morning, possibly caused through missiles being thrown and not necessarily from the policemen's baton. It was submitted that the prosecution had failed to prove that the appellants took part in the rioting.

The appeals were dismissed.

LONDON—PARIS FLIGHT IN HURRICANE.

A remarkable flight in a hurricane was performed yesterday by Airco 4a, one of the flying expresses of the London-Paris air service. Piloted by Lieutenant H. Shaw, the machine, which carried two passengers and a number of parcels, made the journey from Paris to Hounslow in one hour fifty minutes before she was due. The speed works out at 140 miles an hour.

The importance of the feat lies in the fact that the official Air Ministry weather report showed that the wind was blowing at the rate of over 100 miles an hour. A sixty mile an hour wind is reckoned to be a gale, and 100 miles an hour is practically a hurricane. No flight has been previously made by a commercial machine against a wind of anything like this velocity.

VICTIM OF GOSSIP.

A verdict of suicide during a fit of depression was returned at Sheffield on Caroline Scott, otherwise Paisley, 37, who died from the effects of poisoning.

William Paisley stated that when he married Scott, she said she was a widow. Her sister came from Liverpool and told him his wife's first husband was alive, and his wife drank a quantity of poison. A doctor was sent for, but, said Paisley, declined to attend, and there was delay in getting the woman to hospital because a wheel of the ambulance came off on the way.

The coroner expressed the belief that the trouble had arisen through gossip. There was no direct evidence that the woman knew her first husband was alive.

SIR H. HORNE'S NEW TITLE.

General Sir Henry Horne, who was recently created a peer in recognition of his war services, will, it is understood, take the title of Baron Horne of Stirkoke, in the county of Caithness.

The Peace Treaty with Austria cannot be signed before September 10, says a Paris message.

"SOFTLY, SOFTLY, CATCHEE MONKEY!"

This saying, familiar to those who know the West Coast of Africa, is a more picturesque way of expressing the classical "Festina lente." It is a proverb never more necessary than to-day, when the world is suffering from hysteria.

There are great and justifiable changes to be made, imperative improvements for which Labour has waited long, and, on the whole, with surprising patience. But those changes, to be effective and beneficial, must be planned calmly and in detail, not left to be arranged in a chaotic welter of destruction: furthermore, they must be the fruits of constitutional action, the power for which is now within the grasp of Labour; so that the alterations and improvements, which are always found to be required after the first experiments, may be obtained in unquestionable form as a result of reasonable discussion among those who have the power and the knowledge requisite to build wisely.

In a word, the only existing shelters of society must not be pulled down until all is ready for the erection of well considered better ones.

The profound sanity of the British working-classes is, to those who know them, the most reassuring factor in an excited and impatient world. This does not mean that they will not continue to demand, to work for, and eventually to get, better conditions, more responsibility and a clearer recognition of their partnership in industry. Quite the contrary. They will persist and insist.

But already it is evident that they recognise that they have arrived at a point where their very power enables them to use constitutional means, and thus avoid the poverty and loss consequent upon more violent measures,—a poverty and loss which fall first and most heavily on themselves and their dependents.

Extremists and revolutionaries in other countries make the usual mistake of foreigners, who always fail to understand the British character. They take the mouthings of the shrieking minority for the expression of the national mind. They forget that the minority shrieks just because it is a minority. The sober majority has no need to shriek; because, being a majority, it can quietly work its will by sane constitutional methods as soon as it has really made up its mind on any subject.

Thus foreign fanatics are always expecting much from what they hear and read about British troubles — and then are disappointed, and puzzled! No foreign country ever believed Britain either capable of, or willing to make, the gigantic, coherent, and sustained effort which has brought victory and which completely changed the world's opinion of Britain, poor effete, softened, internally-wrangling Britain! Our mentality is different, our ways are our own. Some of us may rant at times; but in the main we soon blow off superfluous steam and settle down steadily and level-headedly to gain our objects, with a sort of shame at having screamed where we might have planned and produced.

Whether or not it is a virtue that we change with difficulty, it is at least an advantage that we have the habit of making necessary changes with deliberation and determination instead of in frantic and unbridled hysteria.

The Englishman is to-day convinced of the imperative necessity of broad changes: but he wants to see that the changes proposed are going to be for the better, before he puts the mighty power of his will into creating and adopting them. Once convinced, nothing will stop him; neither the barbed wire entanglements of political intrigue, the deep trenches of temporary loss, nor the rough ground of the No Man's Land that his new projects must cross. It is not without significance that the Tank was Britain's distinctive contribution to warfare.

The Briton, too, has a natural suspicion of fine phrases and Utopian abstractions. He likes clear, matter-of-fact, definite, and unemotional propositions. And he hates to throw away the plank which supports him in a stormy sea until he is quite assured that the other floating near by will bear him better. Rainbow colours on it will not tempt him.

So I think we may be sure, in spite of extreme "mild men" among us, in spite of the urgent need of dealing with the real and long-borne grievances of Labour, in spite of occasional outbursts, that the strong sound sense of our nation will tackle the pressing problems of the day firmly, resolutely, but with a prudent constitutionalism that will ensure success and avoid loss—to the infinite disappointment of fanatics in other lands!

WHAT TO SEE IN RHINELAND.

EXPLORING THE STREAMS.

How many are there in the Army of the Rhine who are not acquainted with the delightful streams that run through the numerous picturesque valleys and woods in Rhineland? Who can fail to be struck by the glorious effects of deep mystic shades, and clear glittering water, caused by the sun peeping through a canopy of emerald green? In almost any part of Rhineland, these beauty spots are to be found; and can one spend an afternoon more pleasantly than by exploring these stretches of woodland, where nature rules supreme?

Here is a splendid field of enterprise for the photographer, and a paradise for the nature lover. Let me transport you, then, to one of these groves where you can be alone with nature for a while. You are strolling along a winding path through the sweetly smelling woods. On each side of you is a mossy bank, rich in vegetation, with clusters of heather just bursting into bloom.

The path takes a sudden dip, landing you in a valley that might be part of fairyland. Here the wood is broken by an open expanse of green, mingled with patches of dazzling yellow and white. You look about you. A wagtail flits past you with its dipping flight, looking particularly graceful in the sun. You follow its flight until it suddenly disappears, with a downward dart.

Looking in that direction you catch your first glimpse of it! Round the bend of the path you see the glitter of water, and wending your way towards it, you come into view of the most delightful little stream you ever saw. The path leads straight down to it, and you step on to a rustic bridge. Crossing this frail but picturesque structure, you can follow the course of the stream.

It is inclined to be marshy underfoot, but as you enter the wood again, the soft spongy green is replaced by a carpet of leaves, and rich black soil. And as you penetrate the heart of the wood, you catch the full enjoyment of it all. The stream becomes shallower, and trickles with a soft gurgle over a bed of glistening stones and pebbles. The sun peeps through the leaves overhead, imparting wonderful shades of purple and green to the rippling water. The flies skim the surface, and here and there a trout darts from 'neath the bank, and from all round come the joyful notes of the feathered songsters.

Along the bank the wood opens out again, and once more you find yourself in a golden glade of sunshine. Here it seems as though the woods have parted to allow the stream its share of the summer sun. On your right extends a dark irregular stretch of pasture, on which some cattle are peacefully grazing.

Looking ahead you see a narrow winding lane, where the woods give place to fruitful orchards, from the midst of which peep a few black and white cottages. Here you can conclude your wonderful ramble by refreshing yourself with a cool drink, seated in the shady garden of a delightful Gartenwirtschaft.

You return, with the knowledge that the countryside of Germany, though rather different from your own, is indeed beautiful.

BACK HOME.

COLOGNE TO BLIGHTY.

The long creaking line of cattle-trucks lumbers slowly out of the station; the inhabitants of our little village, who have turned out en masse to see us off, wave enthusiastic farewells; the men strike up "Goodbye-ee" to an accompaniment of catcalls and then noises calculated to cause alarm and despondency; and we are off at last, one of the first divisions of the old B. E. F. to go home as a complete unit.

To those that have been long with the Division this move is a big thing, for we have been for so long tied by the leg that we can hardly realise that we are to be once more in England, completely severed from the Continent for the first time since those early days of '16.

It is very thrilling and also very sad, for we cannot help thinking of all those comrades who trained and sweated with us in England, and set out so gaily in those old days "To wind up the watch," but who did not live to see it done. But thoughts like these are only fleeting when we are bound for Blighty with chalked reminders to that effect on every truck and huge bunches of wayside flowers fastened on every bracket and angle.

And so with shout and laughter and song we rattle along in those rackety "Hommes 40" with no springs and apparently square wheels; and as we are near the border we clatter out into the heart of the sunset, leaving the fast-following night to envelop the flying countryside of Germany.

The journey, throughout the night and following day and again the following night — for we are twelve hours late on our 36 hours trip — is the same as any other of these rambles through France in troop trains that we knew so well, with one exception, and that is that at the unofficial halts (every ten minutes or so) the men do not, as is their usual custom, stroll out into the next township to chat with the inhabitants or gather flowers, thus necessitating that ominous and oft-occurring report: — "Two more men left behind at the last halt, sir."

Rather, on the contrary, do they dismount gingerly and stand with one hand on the truck ready to vault in at the first minute, for you must remember they are Blighty bound!

At length we arrive at Calais, and after a hurried meal, spend the afternoon trying to make three persons fit themselves on board the boat into a space meant originally for two. And then the rolling main, and the band, humidly finishing its repertoire before the quams of mal-de-mer can make themselves felt, and at last the white cliffs of Dover.

We wait for hours alongside the quay, while the work of disembarking and entraining and off-loading goes on, and perspiring parties under excited officers or N.C.O.'s rush hurriedly hither and thither, clutching bags of food, the ration for the night. And then we whirl northwards through darkening England to arrive at length on a sunny Sunday morning at Ripon, when as usual we at once commence to grouse at our billets.

UBIQUE.

CIRCUMSTANCES AND CASES.

Cyril Blackmore joined the Forces in 1917. He arrived in France in October of that year, and up to the middle of 1918 his military duties had not taken him farther than ten minutes walk from the leave boat.

These duties, though necessary, were scarcely martial. To be frank, he was engaged in the somewhat unadventurous pastime known as P. A-ing. Occasionally, an error on the part of the registry clerks added a touch of excitement to his otherwise monotonous task, but, for the most part, he was as thoroughly bored as the holes which he punched in the papers passing through his hands.

In December 1917, a certain liveliness was discernible in the quarter which harboured Cyril — liveliness attributable to the arrival of a Medical Board charged with the duty of seeking appropriate material from L. of C. Units for more active service than was procurable at the Base.

Much discussion ensued in Cyril's office, centreing round the blessed word "Indispensable," and Cyril, from regarding his job as a fatigue, began to speak of it with the zeal of a convert to a new religion. He proved, beyond doubt, that the question whether the war was to be won or lost depended upon whether the P. A. Section of the Army — and, more particularly, his P. A. Section — was working smoothly.

He pointed out, with all becoming modesty, that never had a P. A-er punched holes of such exceptional beauty, or filed correspondence with such wonderful dexterity and speed, combined with accuracy, as he had done. In his hands, P. A-ing had been raised to a fine art. If ever a man was indispensible, surely 'twas he

But the powers that be were adamant. Cyril, no less than the rest of the staff, had to go before the Board. As things turned out, he need not have worried to magnify the importance of his job or to exaggerate the efficiency with which he discharged it, as he was classified B. II. and was left to remain at the Base.

* * *

Cyril is now with the Army of Occupation. We met him the other day, and asked him what he was doing. From his reply, it is to be feared that he takes his "art" less seriously than in the old days. Answering our question, he said:

"Usual gag Det. Making holes in scraps of paper. A shame to keep men out here on this job. A girl could do it. Mr. Churchill ought . . ."

We stopped him.—"A girl couldn't have done it in December 17, eh?"

"Things were different, then" he answered, vaguely.

"Yes, of course," we replied, "since the other sex has been given the franchise, a new sense of responsibility has sprung up, with the result that girls can now do many things impossible in the earlier days of the war."

He watched us closely, but as we kept our features "to attention," he suspected no designs on his leg, and replied, simply: "Yes."

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Readers' Varied Views.

MULHEIM RACES.

Sir,—After having seen in your paper the notice forbidding bookmaking on the course, I think it in order on behalf of all lovers of this English sport to protest against the use of the "The Totalizator." My reasons are:—

(1) A great percentage of soldiers do not understand it,

(2) They take a long time paying out,

(3) Germans assist in the concern, and lastly, if racing in the country is to retain its popularity, give the "bookie" his proper rights and allow him on the course.

ENGLISH BOOKMAKER.

MR. PERCY'S OFFER.

Sir,—May I put forward a few suggestions in reply to Mr. Percy's request. If Mr. Percy is going to produce "Strife" let us have the original and not as in the "Younger Generation" brought up to date and to my mind considerably spoilt through an alteration which is quite uncalled for.

As regards plays to be produced may I suggest Galsworthy's "The Silver Box," Masefield's "Nan," "Pronella" and the "Marriage of Columbine." I cannot remember the authors as it is some considerable time since I saw them.

Coming from Manchester, I have seen most of the Gaiety productions which Mr. Percy is reviving for us, and I can assure him that we thank him for giving us such wonderful evenings.

ANOTHER N.C.O.

COLOGNE BOTANICAL GARDEN.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent, Georg Fröhlich, I am certainly under the impression that I visited the official Botanical Gardens, adjacent to the Flora, but will pay another visit to make certain.

I did not intend to depreciate the German high standard of horticulture in my remarks, re the neglect of gardens during war time. Have not our own in England also had to be neglected in a similar manner, and rightly so, too.

As a horticulturalist, I have worked with and in competition with the Germans, and know full well their high standard of efficiency.

In regard to my critic's remarks, re "Nertera Depressa," he misread me. I did not say I did not know this plant. I do know it, and have grown it for many years: and, knowing its eccentricities made me appreciate it all the more in the local shops. I said I had not yet found the local nursery in which it was being grown. I should like to visit it.

R.F.G.

RHINE ARMY DRAMATIC COMPANY.

Sir,—Various letters of late have appeared in praise of the splendid performances of this company. They are as "Thespian" writes, really enjoyable. I am certain this is the opinion of all who have had the pleasure of witnessing their performances.

Re the lateness in starting and the long waits between the acts no doubt the company have good reasons for these. The time however would not appear so long if there was a better orchestra to play during the intervals than the present one consisting of a Violin, two trombones, cornet and piano. Its attempts at rendering good music are completely ignored no doubt owing to the poor playing.

Why not a real good British one which would besides playing excellently, also vary its programme? Surely one gets tired of hearing "Asleep in the deep" and "Moonlight Bay" week after week. Perhaps others will give their views on this?

STACCATO

THE VALUE OF ENGLISH.

Sir,—Reference the article on Esperanto as the International language. I would point out that there is already in existance a first class international language, based, not upon the theoretical fancies of a Polish professor, but upon the every-day-needs of a practical and hard-working matter-of-fact people. The language I have in mind is English.

English today is the mother tongue of the 45 million people who inhabit the British Isles. 110 millions who live in the U.S.A., and seven millions in Canada. It is the official language of the 330 millions of India, besides of the remaining 12 to 15 millions who reside in the other Colonies, possessions, dependencies, etc. of the British Crown.

It is the officially recognised medium of intercourse of the sea-faring people, be they of whatever nationality you will, and lately, as a result of the Peace Conference it has forged its way to the front, so that it now occupies a place with French as the language of diplomacy. It has long been recognised as the principal medium of correspondence in the world of commerce, so far, that in innumerable cases, its words and expressions have been adopted and embodied wholesale into foreign languages.

I think by the foregoing I have made out a fairly strong case for English as the great international language, and whilst we have such an acquisition at our finger ends, I think it is useless to burden our minds acquiring a Spanish-German hot-potch. Rather let us devote our energies to improving the knowledge of our own masses in our priceless inheritance.

"LONG BOY" RE-ENLISTS.

Say, fellers! I'm goin' back!
'Tho I didn't think when I sailed away
That I'd be making so short a stay
In the home town here in the Golden State
But I tell you fellers that soldiering's great
And I'm goin' to reap as sure as fate
Yes, I'm goin' back.

Say, fellers! I'm goin back!
For I miss the durned old bugle. Gee!
How I cursed "Fatigue" and "Reveille"
And expendin' of extra elbow grease,
On scrubbin' floors and kitchen police
And wongerin' when the war would cease
Still hup n' we wouldn't sign for peace
Till we'd grabbed some portion of Heinie's fleece
Now I'm goin' back.

COUNTY HONOURS.

Interesting Position Of Yorkshire And Kent.

The English county cricket matches concluded yesterday will have settled the fate of the County Championship, but at the time of going to press, the results had not been received.

The championship has developed into a neck and neck struggle between Yorkshire and Kent, and according to figures at present available, both teams had a chance of winning, the odds being slightly in favour of the Northern County.

The drawn game at Southampton reduces Yorkshire's percentage.

Should Kent beat Middlesex and Yorkshire fail to beat Sussex, Kent would take first place. If both Kent and Yorkshire win, they will tie with 50 per cent. each. The available figures are:—

	P.	W.	D.	L.	P.	Perc.
Yorkshire...	25	12	10	3	12	48.00
Kent.....	13	6	6	1	6	46.15

ARMY ATHLETICS.

Opening Day of Aldershot Championships.

APPLEGARTH BEATEN.

The Army Championship meeting at Aldershot, openedlon Thursday, when the preliminaries of al the events except the mile, and the finals of the three miles flat and putting the shot, were run off. The meeting is memorable for many reasons, the first, of course, being that it comes after a lapse of six years caused by the greatest of all wars. This Army meeting is, surely, a Victory sports, and the triumph of our arms is personified in that there are teams competing from the Armies of the Rhine and Black Sea, both armies of occupation, from the "clearing up" Army in France and Flanders, and from the Armies in Italy and Egypt. That our men can journey from these distant parts to Aldershot spells victory and the freedom of the seas in the real meaning of the term.

Good Organization.

Then again, the meeting was notable from the standpoint of organization. Thanks to the war, the Army has learned new methods, especially in sport, and however much may be said for making championships open, there is more in making the way to them somewhat difficult in that it prevents nonentities from acquiring cheap notoriety. All those who turn out have gained their spurs in competition with others equally anxious to compete, and although there may, for instance, be a great variation between the standard of men like Applegarth and the rank and file of army sprinters, every man entered has had to show that he can run a bit.

Rhine Army Successes.

In the 100 yards the placed men included Lieut. Godfrey, R.W. Kents, and Pte. Harris (Remounts) from the Army of the Rhine, while Lieut. A.C. Straker, 15th Hussars, also from the Rhine, won the last heat in the hurdles.

The three miles flat was won by H. T. Thomas, M.T., R.A.S.C., from a very fine field of distance runners. The heavy track, soddened by the rain of the morning, was all against fast time, and yet Thomas accomplished 15 min. 40 4/5 sec., well beating the big-striding Sergeant Massey.

In the hundred yards, W. R. Applegarth, the old sprint champion, was beaten in his heat, but qualified for the final by winning the cross heat in 9 4/5 sec. Sergeant Lindsay, of the New Zealand E.F., did the same time in his heat.

Many Indians were among the competitors, but they met with no success, lacking the speed necessary for the short distances.

Among the interested spectators was Viscount Haig.

Details.

Three miles:—

1. H. F. Thomas, M.T., R.A.S.C., 15 min. 40 4/5 sec.
2. Sergt. J. H. Massey, Canadians Witley, 15 min. 43 2/5 sec.

MOODY THE MASTER.

Welsh Middle-weight's Third Victory Over Platts.

Twice victorious in contests which have gone the full fifteen rounds, Frank Moody, of Pontypridd, the Welsh middle-weight champion, gave Gus Platts, Sheffield, another opportunity over twenty rounds, at the Grimsby Gaiety. From the start Moody scored. He was fast, resourceful, and clever, and his footwork was a long way in advance of that of the Yorkshireman. Platts, however, was very game, and though after four rounds he began to look somewhat the worse for wear, he twice got the right home on the side of the jaw.

Master to the end Moody was a good winner on points.

GIRL'S REMARKABLE SWIM.

Miss Marie Gant, a junior member of the Hammersmith Ladies S.C., although only 11½ years, has accomplished a wonderful performance by swimming the long distance championship course from Kew to Putney, a distance of 5 miles 60 yards, despite the fact that the water in places was very cold, in 1 hour 28 min. 27 sec. a performance that creates a world's record for one so young.

Among the guests of Major W. P. Pulton, M. C., and the officers of the Battalion, were the Divisional Commander, General Jeffreys, C.B, C.M.G., Col. McNamara, C.M.G., D.S.O., and Col. VETERAN CRICKETER DEAD.

William Caffyn Dies At The Age Of 91.

William Caffyn, the great cricketer of fifty years ago, died on Friday night at Reigate, aged 91 years. He was one of the first eleven sent to Australia nearly 70 years ago, and on paying a second visit, remained there as coach at Melbourne. Spofforth and other well-known Colonials were coached by him. Returning to England, he played for Surrey, and in the All-England teams, and for years received a pension from the Surrey Club. During the war many Australians visited him and chatted over the day when he coached their fathers at cricket.

ENGLISH FOOTBALL SEASON.

Auspicious Opening of League Games Yesterday.

The football season opened with great promise yesterday with a programme of 38 matches in the English Leagues. It is confidently anticipated that this will be the greatest year in the history of the game. Yesterday the capacity of every leading ground was taxed to the utmost and this despite the extensive preparations to meet largely increased attendances.

153rd SIEGE BATTERY FOOTBALL.

The first match of a series in a Section League competition took place at Hastenrath on Monday, between the Right and Left Sections. The game was very keenly contested and the result, Right Section 5, Left Section 2, by no means represents the play. For the winners, Gleadhill (3) and Gumbley (1) were conspicuous and Donnetty played well for the Left Section.

Forwards Weak.

On Tuesday the Signallers met the Centre Section, the former winning by 2 to 0. Both teams played well, but the Centre were weak in front of goal and failed to score, in spite of valiant efforts by Ellis and White. Both games were well attended, showing a keen inter-section rivalry.

COLOGNE RACES.

Excellent Sport At Last August Meeting Yesterday.

There was excellent sport yesterday when the second day of the last August Cologne Race Meeting attracted a large crowd to the Merheim Race course. Ten minutes before the first race there was a heavy shower of rain, which, fortunately ceased before the commencement of events.

Afterwards, the sky cleared and brilliant sunshine prevailed throughout the afternoon.

Joe Attwood, Halesowen, has obtained his discharge from the Canadian Forces.

Welcome Lad Sold.
Welcome Lad has been purchased privately by Mr. W. A. Capell, and has arrived at Epsom to be trained by C. J. Capell.

Everton's Fortune.
Everton are the holders of the League championship. They won it in 1914-15, finishing up a point in advance of Oldham Athletic.

Wanderers' Attack.
Bolton Wanderers have on paper one of the smartest attacks in the country, and they are likely to get a large number of goals if their own defence keeps them supplied with the ball.

A Big Harvest.
There have been signs of the approach of autumn, yet the batsmen are reaping almost as big a harvest as blackberry-pickers shortly will be doing off our hedges.

Match-Maker and Winner.
McGoorty's record discloses him as a successful match-maker and winner, and after fifteen years of continuous boxing against the best men in the world, he is entitled to think that his own opinion is as good as anyone else's and possibly a trifle better.

Athletic Prospects.
The members of the Charlton Athletic F.C. are looking forward to even greater success this season than has been their lot in the past.

Owner's Purchase.
Mr. J. Deuchar, the owner of Vaulter, winner of the Nunthorpe Plate, has just recently given a quarter of a million for an estate in the North.

An Unfortunate Start.
Liverpool has started with an untoward incident. R. Purcell, the left back, had the misfortune last week to break his arm while engaged in a practice match.

Plymouth Argyle.
Plymouth Argyle Club has secured the signatures of James MacLeary, a centre forward from the Clackmacudden Club, Inverness, and of R. C. Symons, an inside forward of St. Austell, who played for the Salonika Army in the Army championship matches at Aldershot.

Six Changes.
When the new system comes into force next season the method of reckoning in county cricket championship matches will have been changed six times. Originally, from 1873 to 1885, the smallest number of lost matches decided the order of merit!

Banbury Horse Show.
After five years' lapse Banbury Horse Show was revived and attracted many hunting people.

Golly-Eyes Lame.
It transpires that Golly-Eyes pulled up very leg-weary, if not very lame, in the race that Bird's Nest won at Hurst Park.

Jack Doyle's Easy Win.

A Veteran Jockey.
T. Metcalfe, the veteran jockey, whose name is still a household word on the Continent, has turned 80, but he is such an enthusiast that on Monday, in spite of his advanced age, he walked every yard of the York course.

No Excuse for He Goes.
Butters had He Goes looking in splendid condition, and there was not the slightest excuse for the son of Prince Palatine in the Prince of Wales' Plate at York.

Interested Spectators.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Facilitating Trade.

To facilitate trade communications, the post office runs a banking system called Post-Checkverkehr. Everyone can get his money or make his payments through the post office, which opens an account for him under a particular number.

Post Office as Newsagent.

The German post-office also undertakes, free of charge, subscriptions to all newspapers and periodicals of the Empire. The postman gives you your paper every morning without wrapper and without address, as though he were a newsagent. The papers are collected by the post office straight from the publishers, on the same terms as by the shops.

The Woman Street Cleaner.

In some parts of Rhineland even before the war many of the dirtier and more menial tasks were performed by women. The woman street cleaner is armed with a long iron rod which she puts into the grove of the tramrail, and leaning the other end against her shoulder she pushes the rod along and forces out the mud which has collected in the rails. From far away her strange crouching figure can be seen following the shining steel of the tram line.

A Tongue Twister.

More fortunate than the woman mortar mixer, she is officially employed by the municipality, and wears on her little felt hat a municipal badge. As some consolation for her wretched existence she is adorned with the sonorous title of Städtische Elektrische Strassenbahnschienenreinigungsfrau, or, in other words, "the municipal-female-cleaner of electrical-tramway-lines." It takes a German to express so beautiful a thought in so few words.

Battlefield Memorials.

The Battle Exploit Memorials Committee, which is a representative committee appointed to consider claims to erect on battlefields permanent memorials, wishes to remind units that to-morrow is the last day by which claims should be submitted. The Committee are waiting until all claims have been received before adjudicating on them, and any unit desirous of erecting a memorial to its exploits that has not already communicated with the Secretary should do so.

The Cost Of Flats.

Generally speaking, the rents of flats in Germany are far below those in London or Paris. Before the war, for £30 a year, one could have a beautiful flat in a town of, say, 600,000 inhabitants, with four rooms, also a kitchen, bathroom, servant's room, larder, a small box-room, electric light, gas, central heating, hot and cold running water and a lift. Tais rent is also inclusive of rates. At Berlin a similar flat costs about £50 a year. Now, of course, rents have soared upwards with the increase cost of living.

Who is Your Favourite Author?

To arrive at a conclusion as to which are the most popular books, we have decided to promote a competition and readers of all ranks are invited to submit selections. Each book selected will be considered as receiving one vote each time it figures in the lists sent in, and the competitor whose list, according to the books in it, embraces the highest aggregate of votes will receive a prize of fifty marks. Selections of ten books must be addressed to "Books" c/o The Editor "Cologne Post" by Saturday, Sept. 6th. Be your favourite writer Marie Corelli or Gene Stratton Porter, Arnold Bennett or Rider Haggard, make a selection of the ten works you consider best and send it along.

Saving Time.

Any agreement in German in the form of a letter is a binding contract. Scraps of paper bind the private individual as a legal document. If necessary, a verbal agreement is sufficient, provided it is made before witnesses. Perjury in civil law is punishable by imprisonment. Important business deals have been known to have been concluded by telephone with a witness at each receiver. The main thing is to save time. Every unnecessary legal interference is regarded in Germany as a hindrance to business.

Race for Home.

A party of soldiers was passing over London Bridge, on its way to Crystal Palace and demobilization. The men were unmistakably from the Army of Occupation, and seemed not merely fresh, but positively excited. "You see, my dear," a clergyman remarked to his wife, "these men are evidently new to London. Look! the sergeant is pointing to the Tower Bridge. Ah, what a thing is the enthusiasm of youth! What is to us a commonplace spectacle is to their fresh young minds a noble and inspiring sight." Certainly all eyes were turned to the East as they crossed the water. Then came a burst of ironical cheering, and unusual activity was noticed in the rigging of a newly-arrived Batavier liner off Billingsgate. High above the deck a Dutch sailor appeared to be signalling with a red handkerchief.

The Reason.

The reason! We sought enlightenment. "Yus," said one of the alleged provincials, "we've been 'ad orl right. Afore we left Rotterdam at 3 ackhemma we took a bet on for 'arf a dollar wiv that bloke oo's doin' stunts wiv 'is muffler that we'd git 'ere fust. An' so we should if they'd brought us strite 'ome, for we 'ad a decent stawt. But some Brarss 'A fort' we'd like ter finish the trip on the Sarth-Eastern—an' that tore it! Sarge, 'ere's the jolly Jeck Tor for 'is 'arf dollar!" And a perspiring Dutchman, who had just come up, pocketed the stakes with a grin.

Overheard at a Cologne Dance.

He.—Come and split a bottle of champagne with me.

She.—It is one of the tragedies of my life that I don't like champagne.

He.—But why on earth?

She.—Do you know I'm awfully sorry, but it always goes to my legs instead of my head.

Simplicity.

There are only two perfectly simple methods of sending money by post—the registered letter and the card money order. The latter has a perforated slip attached, which is filled in by the sender and serves a receipt, for the addressee merely signs his name, tears it off and sends it back. All the registration and administrative work of the system is done later, after post office hours.

A Driver's disregard of danger.

Early in the month two horses attached to a mess cart got out of control at Eil, when Driver T. Foley, "A" Battery, 187th Brigade, R.F.A., who was passing, ran alongside and seized the reins, and although carried some distance, managed to stop the horses within a few yards of a steam-roller, which it would have been impossible for them to clear in passing. Foley showed an entire disregard of personal safety, and by his courageous action undoubtedly prevented a serious accident. His conduct has been commended.

Sound Argument.

In Germany the municipal gas and electrical light companies never charge for their meters. Why, they argue, should the consumer pay for the installation of an apparatus which acts solely in the interests of the supplier. The confectioner does not charge his customers for the scales he uses. In the same way the telephone, which is used by private house-holder, far more widely than in England, is installed free of charge, and no payment is asked for the apparatus. The annual subscription is determined to include the cost of the apparatus and the connection of the subscriber to the main system. When you move, the post office officials instal your apparatus in your new flat without charge.

Re-echoes.

Wives and families of officers and other ranks in Germany should carry their white passes issued to them by the Provost Marshal, and must present them for inspection when required.

Permission is given for wives of officers of the British Army, on production of the coupon book authorizing the issue of rations, to be served with any meal in Officers' Clubs run by N.A.C.B., provided there is sufficient accommodation.

Prize for Echoes.

Every day we are prepared to give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. Owing to shortage of contributions to-day, we award only one prize, the winner being Sig. C. Thorne, Wireless Section, Rhine Army Signalling Coy.

NEUTRAL FISHING.

Major Smith, of the Army of Occupation, was a keen staff officer, very correct, very thorough. He was also a fisherman.

Now in the Rhineland the streams are full of fish but the angling from a Major Smith's point of view has been utterly spoilt. Unprincipled mess presidents have bent the pin and plied the swagger cane over the waters until the most unsophisticated fish have learned wisdom. Again, those who dwell in Sergeants' messes have wider ideas on the uses of the bomb than most,—from which it will be gathered that the Major's plaint was not without grounds.

The boundaries within which the Forces of the Rhine move may seem confined to those who have passed at will from the Don or Spey to the Norwegian fjords.

Major Smith possessed a black alpaca coat, a panama hat that seemed to have known better days, and a pair of flannel bags his fishing friends he called them.

Brig. Gen. Johnson, ensconced under a bank glanced furtively over his shoulder. Now it is not usual for a general of the British Army to be furtive. The fact that he was fishing in the neutral zone, in full war paint, may or may not have had something to do with it. He moved the basket of trout nearer to his side, and cast again.

"Guten tag, mein Herr! You fish, is it not? Dat is goot!", a voice exclaimed. The gallant general nearly became ungallant, but when one is in neutral territory. . . .

"It is forbidden, mein Herr, to come here, is that not so? You are perhaps an unter-offizier who do not know? But if I report it to ze British Kommandatur he will see that we are not molested?"

The brigadier arose. Was he not a general, and therefore had he not travelled far on the paths of guile? "Funf mark!" said he thrusting the note into the hands of the seedy individual.

"Ah so!" exclaimed the interloper, nodding his head. "Mein friendt", he continued "It is your fish or your rank!".

The general hesitated. To leave the little silvery bodies to the mercies of so shabby a person seemed cruel. But the force of circumstances won and the fish were thrown out on the grass. The general, snorting violently, crept back into his own kingdom, whilst the gentleman in an alpaca coat, a panama hat and flannel bags made up for a bad day's sport.

GORDON BLIGHT

"PEOODIFOL GAY-DEE".

G—g—g—gay—dee, peoodifol Gay—dee.
Yur dee onle g—g—g—geirl dat I adohr;
Und ven dee mon shine ober de gowshett,
I'll be vaiting at der g—g—g—gitchen dohr.

It cannot truthfully be said that the remains of poor little Katie look natural. None of the victims of German frightfulness ever do, and she, alas, is the latest of these. She was indeed to all of us, "the only g—g—g—girl that we adored," and who has been able to resist the charm of the haunting melody through which she became known to all.

Now we must mourn her as a martyr, place her name upon the scroll with the illustrious names of her innumerable sisters, whose fateful way she has gone.

Let us not dwell upon the manner of her fate. It is enough to mention that the mutilated remains which we cannot bear too look upon, were rescued too late from that guttural grinding-mill, the German throat, into the toils of which, through her charms, the ill-fated damsel was doomed to be drawn.

Katie is no more. Who is responsible for her fate? Alas, it is only too evident that we must all share the blame for allowing the poor girl to go forth alone and unguarded. We brought her to Germany; we sang her praises, only to let her fall into the hands of others.

But Katie, like all martyrs, is not dead. She has been exalted to a new sphere of usefulness. We can profit by her noble sacrifice. Katie's sad case is only typical of what is happening every day. Katie's mother tongue, the English language, is suffering continual matyrdom in precisely the same way. We are daily delivering her up and daily is the German profiting thereby. In short we are daily giving to the German something of infinitely greater value to him than the countless things which it is forbidden to allow into his possession, something which places in his hands the power to get all these things, to compete with us in getting them, yes, and more than that, to gain an initial advantage in the competition. Daily, without realising it, we are giving him a sound and thorough training in the English language.

Everywhere in public where English is spoken it is heard by Germans, listened to by Germans, learned by Germans. How many Britishers profit so by the German they hear spoken in public places — in trams, in the street, — everywhere. When British officers and soldiers have occasion to speak to Germans what is the almost invariable rule? The conversation, be it two words or two hours in length, is carried on in English.

The Britisher learns nothing of German. He is no better off, but the German gains by it. He is becoming a bi-linguist, while the Britisher remains still the same old one-horse mono-linguist. The advantages which will accrue to the Germans in the future, through the thorough schooling in idiomatic English which they are now receiving, obviously must be collossal. We all know the way in which the Germans worked their way into the warp and woof of English life prior to the war.

If that was possible with the ordinary opportunities for learning a language how much more will it be possible after millions of Germans have learned our language from Englishmen in their ordinary life. The only way that this menace can be reduced to a minimum is for the British here to learn German and use it exclusively in all conversation with the German people.

Just as the Occupation provides the opportunity for Germans to learn English, so it is our finest opportunity to learn German. It is the clear duty of every British subject in the occupied territory to shake himself free from the inherent apathy of the British race in the matter of foreign language study, and to learn German, both in order to prevent the Germans from gaining advantage through their acquisition of English from him, and also in order to make himself more capable and useful to himself and to his country, through his knowledge of at least one other language.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

While nations rise and fall, while life comes and goes into the vast eternity, while mankind strives after an ideal of wealth and power, the question still rings out from a despairing world — "What is Truth?"

While the human race is plunged into the chaos of war, while a man tries to climb to omnipotence over the writhing bodies of a nation, in the palaces of the great, in the humble abode of the poor, on the bloody field of battle where life is almost forgotten, and the cold shadow of death strikes chill in the hearts of men, still there is that enquiry which is heard with clarion voice — "What is Truth?"

Can truth be found by the reason of man alone, or is faith to be the great guide along the road that will lead humanity to Truth.

A secular paper in a recent review of a book on Caristian Apologetics said: "Christianity depends in the long run upon inspiration and not upon argument. In the face of the present storm of scepticism, the one hope for religion lies neither in polemics, nor investigation, but in God."

Truth which is only found in God must be reached by the Divine Revelation of God, which is Jesus Christ, and that revelation is taught only in Christianity.

While it is true to say that logic cannot beget devotion, or argument make a saint, we must also accept the statement that the extent of man's spiritual mindedness bears no necessary ratio to the standard of his intellectual capacity.

If reason came as a gift to men from God, surely that Divine Gift may help us to grasp the fundamental facts of life, which faith points out to men. Thus reason and revelation to gether can help the seeker after Truth.

Amidst all the chaos and darkness of human existence, as it strives to lift itself out of the rut of despair, man requires some divine Revelation which will assure him of salvation and immortality, and that revelation which the reason of man tells him God would give to him, is Carist.

When the world was looking with mental apathy on the greatest drama ever seen, when Christ the King stood before the Roman Pilate, that serf of Caesar asked the old old question, and asked it from Him who alone could give an answer, which would satisfy all the longings of a human soul, asked the question "What is Truth?" and when he had this he went out.

That opportunity was lost for him, but yet to-day men can ask from Christ, for He said "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life".

THE LION LEADS in CURING

Trade Mark — Established 1847

During the strenuous times of the past few years

has more than maintained its reputation, it has gained increased commendation for its marvellous efficacy in removing pieces of shrapnel, splinters of bone, etc., from old wounds, healing them permanently from underneath.

Nature will always assert itself

It is useless healing a wound until it is thoroughly cleansed; it must break out again worse than before. The great success of

is that it will not heal till it has thoroughly cleared away all morbid matter. There is no danger to life in curing a bad leg by this remedy, as it does not throw back humour into the system. It cures without lancing or cutting, bringing all disease to the surface and healing from underneath in all cases of Ulcers, Abscesses, Whitlows, Boils, Carbuncles, Fatty or Cystic Tumours, Piles, Fistula, Polypus, Poisoned Wounds, and all forms of Skin Disease, Eczema, Ringworm, etc.

Unequalled as a General Household Remedy for Cuts, Burns, Stings, &c.

Proof. At 59, Gray's Inn Road, E. BURGESS has a Museum of Extractions, consisting of Tumours, Polypi, and diseased Bone; also numerous Photographs of most serious cases, which have all been cured by the Lion Ointment. E. AMERICA AND PEACE.

SENATORS' OBJECTIONS TO CLAUSES IN THE PEACE TREATY

FOCH'S THANKS TO BRITAIN.

AMERICA AND PEACE.

SUGGESTED AMENDMENTS OF THE TREATY.

Republican members of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate have prepared a number of reservations and amendments to the Peace Treaty, which they are presenting to President Wilson. The amendments regarding Shantung and the voting power of the United States in the League of Nations assembly have already been mentioned.

It will, however, be convenient to set out the Republican programme in detail. It calls for two straightout textual amendments to the treaty and five reservations on the part of the United States.

The amendments are as follows:—

1—Return of the Shantung peninsula to China.

2—Six votes in the League assembly for the United States, which is the number given in the present covenant to the British Empire.

The reservations are as follows:—

1—An accurate definition and adequate safeguarding of the Monroe Doctrine as a distinctly American policy with which the League shall have nothing whatever to do.

2—The assertion of the right of the United States to withdraw unconditionally from the League at will.

3—Removal of immigration, the tariff and similar domestic questions entirely from the jurisdiction of the League.

4—A specific provision that no action of the League Council seeking to protect the territorial integrity or political independence of any League member, under Article X., shall be binding upon the United States, but that Congress shall act as it sees fit when such a question shall arise.

5—That no vote or other action of any American delegate on the League Council shall be considered as representing the United States unless the appointment of such delegate shall have been confirmed by the United States Senate.

All of these reservations are to be embodied in the resolution of ratification, which will clearly state that the ratification will not be binding upon the United States "unless and until" the other signatories have accepted the reservations.

EXIT ZEPPELINS.

REPETITION OF SCAPA TREACHERY.

A Berlin message to the New York American states that the Germans have destroyed twelve out of sixteen Zeppelins which were to have been handed over to the Allies under the Peace Treaty.

This repetition of the Scapa treachery is stated to be the work of a young naval officer.

The despatch states that the news has caused the utmost consternation at the German Foreign Office, where it is vigorously denied that the Government were cognisant of any plan to destroy the airships.

BELGIAN MANDATE IN EAST AFRICA.

It is understood that the Anglo-Belgian agreement relating to Ruanda and Urandi in German East Africa will require submission to the League of Nations for ratification. Belgium desired a mandate to administer Ruanda and Urandi and the matter was the subject of a conference between Lord Milner and Belgian Ministers. The population of the whole of German East Africa is about 7,500,000 and under the agreement some 3,000,000 would be transferred to the charge of Belgium.

AUSTRIAN TREATY FINISHED.

To-day the Austrian delegation will receive the Peace Treaty for which they have been waiting at St. Germains since May.

Five days, with an extension if the Austrians desire it, will probably be set as the period of time within which the Austrians must accept or refuse the treaty.

The Austrian treaty is printed in French, English and Italian.

HOOVER'S NEW TITLE.

Mr. Hoover, at the request of the Allied Government, and with the concurrence of the American Government, has consented to continue the control and distribution of foodstuffs to Europe. His title will be the High Commissioner for the Feeding of Europe.

GENERAL BOTHA.

KING MOURNS THE LOSS OF A FRIEND.

Messages from all parts of the Empire bear tribute to the worth of the late General Botha. The King has sent the following telegram to Mrs. Botha:

"I am grieved beyond words to hear of your overwhelming sorrow. I regarded General Botha with feelings of personal friendship, and admired his generous sympathy, wide outlook, and nobility of character. The Queen joins with me in assuring you of our most heartfelt sympathy."

To the Governor-General of South Africa his Majesty addressed a message as follows:

"It is with feelings of profound regret that I have learned of the death of General Botha. Not South Africa alone, but the Empire at large will mourn the loss of a loyal citizen, chivalrous soldier and high-minded statesman. From my personal knowledge of and friendship for General Botha, I can realise how you and the Government of South Africa will miss his wise counsel and guidance."

Unexpected Death.

The death of General Botha has caused more public sorrow in South Africa than any event since the death of Cecil Rhodes. Ever since little more than a month ago, when General Botha landed at Capetown, signs of affection had everywhere been showered upon him. During the interval he had visited Pretoria, Johannesburg, Bloemfontein, and other centres, always receiving the same enthusiastic popular welcome.

His death was absolutely unexpected. When welcoming Mr. Hughes, the Australian Prime Minister, at Capetown docks shortly after his own arrival, General Botha spontaneously remarked he had never felt better, and he subsequently declared at Pretoria that his health having improved during his absence in Europe, he was ready to carry on the Premiership as long as the country required him.

The first news of his indisposition was to the effect that he had contracted a chill on his Transvaal farm, which resulted in an attack of influenza. On returning to Pretoria he complained about his throat, and it was found he had a slight temperature. He was put to bed, and subsequent bulletins, though announcing the cancellation of appointments, occasioned no alarm.

On the last day, however, six doctors were in attendance. At 8 o'clock in the evening the Premier's condition suddenly became critical, and he passed away peacefully from heart failure. Mrs. Botha and Captain Louis Botha were at the bedside, and other relatives were telegraphed for, but were unable to arrive in time.

FOCH THANKS BRITAIN.

Mr. Lloyd George has received from Marshal Foch an autograph letter in French expressing thanks for the eulogies passed upon him in both Houses of Parliament on the occasion of the resolution of thanks to the forces of the Crown.

"I do not forget," Marshal Foch says in his letter to the Premier, "that if I was appointed to be Chief of the Allied Armies it was on your initiative and thanks to your confidence. If I was able equally to bring the war to a speedy conclusion it was thanks to the sustained determination of the British Government to reinforce and to keep up, in 1918, sufficient effectives for its armies in France, and also to give powerful assistance in the transport of American divisions to Europe."

SENATOR KNOX'S VIEWS.

A speech which is said to have stupefied public opinion has been made in the Senate by Senator Knox, who was Secretary of State in the Taft Administration. The Senator asked for the rejection of the Versailles Treaty and the conclusion of a separate peace between the U.S.A. and Germany. His view was that the Versailles Treaty crushed Germany and contained the germ of a new war. The United States could not ratify such a document. France's interest was to seek the friendship of Germany.

FIUME PROBLEM.

According to the Petit Journal, the forthcoming interview between Mr. Lloyd George and Signor Tittoni is for the purpose of discussing a proposal to solve the problem of Fiume by ceding the town to Italy and placing the control of the hinterland in the hands of the League of Nations.

BOTHA'S SUCCESSOR.

At the invitation of Lord Buxton, Governor General of South Africa, General Smuts has accepted the premiership rendered vacant by the death of General Botha.

GERMAN PRISONERS.

HOW THEY HAVE BEEN EMPLOYED.

The 84,604 prisoners in Great Britain are, as already announced, about to be sent home. The above total included 2,908 sailors, 4,306 civilians, 170 airmen captured in land operations and 14 airmen taken at sea.

Most of the invalids, the badly wounded and the insane, have already left for Germany, and recently several steamers left Dover and other ports carrying nearly all the remaining cases.

By far the greatest number of those still in this country are engaged in agricultural work. Some 7,000 are employed by the military authorities on the East Coast and elsewhere in filling in trenches and in clearing up camps. For this work they receive the same payment as British soldiers.

There are 200,000 German prisoners in France and Flanders under British control, and to guard these and the 84,000 in this country necessitates the use of between 50,000 and 60,000 British soldiers.

As repatriation necessarily depends upon transport facilities, it is understood that a detailed plan has been drawn up by the Inter-Allied Commission in Paris. This acceleration of repatriation is in no sense due to efforts made in Germany.

The policy is dictated largely, if not wholly, by motives of humanity and economy. The latter is the main factor, coupled as far as it can be with humane considerations, in the resolution arrived at by the Supreme Council. For a long time the War Office has been pressing for repatriation to be speeded up.

Following the decision of the Supreme Council, immediate orders have been issued for the repatriation of German prisoners held by Great Britain in France. The first batch of 1000 was to leave France on Saturday for Germany, this being the largest daily number for which the German authorities have made reception. Our authorities are in a position to despatch 3000 a day at once from France and to increase this number to 6,000 if the German authorities provide the necessary trains. The repatriation of Germans from England will begin as soon as Germany sends the necessary shipping, which under the treaty terms, she must provide.

THIEVES' TALES.

INGENIOUS ROBBERIES IN LONDON

It is reported from North London that many robberies are being committed in which much ingenuity is shown by the thieves. In one case the occupant of a house at Finchley went out for a short walk. Although she was only absent twenty minutes, waiting thieves got over the garden fence, opened the back window, cleared a cabinet containing £300 worth of silver, and tried to open another cabinet in which was other valuable property. The thieves apparently left by the back door as the occupant of the house entered the front.

Not far from the same house, when the tenants of another residence had gone out for a walk, a well-dressed man called, and told the servant that he had to make an inspection for the revision of the fire policies and wished to see over the house. The maid took him over, and he made notes in a book. When shown her mistress's bedroom, where several valuables articles were on the table, he said the book pages were full, and asked her to bring him some writing paper. She was absent several minutes, and on her return he continued making notes.

COTTON SPINNER ELECTROCUTED.

While taking an electric bath at his house at Leigh (Lancs)., Mr. Walter Eckersley, a well-known cotton spinner, was electrocuted.

In attempting to connect a battery and a cable attached to an electric pendant, it is believed that the cable fell into the water. This gave him a severe shock. He became unconscious, and died later.

His chauffeur went to his assistance, but, in wrenching the appliance from his employer, sustained severe electric shocks.

Mr. Eckersley was a director of the Fine Cotton Spinners Association and Leigh Brewery.

POST OFFICE ROBBERS.

A daring attempt was made by two men to hold up the Bath post office on Saturday. They fastened the front door and, holding in a threatening attitude what the postmistress believed was a revolver, one of the men ordered her to be quiet. She screamed and dashed towards a back room. The other man said "Shoot her."

The screams must have alarmed the men, who decamped without securing any booty.

ROYAL ECONOMY.

Queen Alexandra has decided to reduce her staff of police chauffeurs by two-thirds. King Edward was very partial to police drivers, and at least three were taken over by her Majesty after his death.

In view of the need of economy in all ranks of society and the desirability of setting a good example, two of the three men will, it is understood be dispensed with. The chauffeurs will, presumably, resume their ordinary police duties.

INDUSTRIAL HARMONY.

ENGINEERS FEDERATION CLEARS THE GROUND.

The recent decision of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers and the Unions composing the Federation of Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades, which was made after an application for the forty-four hour week, pending a systematic inquiry into the relation between output and hours of work, is a welcome sign and wide interest is being taken in the agreement.

Mr. J. T. Brownlie, the Engineers' leader, considers it to be the most statesmanlike document ever drafted between employers and employed The terms of the inquiry are comprehensive and extensive. British and foreign methods of production are to be investigated and the real facts of foreign competition ascertained. It is presumed the Committee will have power to request the production of any firm's books and the workers will thus be able to acquire full and complete knowledge of the conditions of the industry. Mr. Brownlie considers this knowledge of facts will be of the utmost value in the interests of output and of harmony between capital and labour.

WAR'S AFTERMATH.

U.S. RESPONSIBILITIES.

Trouble is being made in America over the sending of American troops to Silesia, and the agitation to get them out is growing, though this does not mean that the United States is indifferent to the tragic trend of events in Silesia.

A resolution against the use of an American force in Silesia has been introduced in Congress, in consequence of the confirmation by the War Department of the news that a brigade is going to be sent to replace the American troops moved from the Rhine to Silesia. The sense of the resolution is that whereas the Allies ought to have enough troops to police Silesia, and whereas American public opinion is opposed to sending more troops abroad for police work, a protest should be offered by the house against sending troops to Silesia or elsewhere for that purpose.

In regard to Armenia, the American Press seeems to agree that there may be something in the British contention that they simply cannot keep men in Armenia any longer, but the United States cannot be expected to take up the burden. Other responsibilities in regard to the Turkish settlement are also feared.

FINE FEATHERS IN PEWS.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, interviewed in regard to a recent speech, in which he criticised the present-day attitude of the Churches, said, "I feel that a lot of dead wood has to be cut out of our modern church life, which depends a great deal too much upon the Sunday services and cultured sermons and too little on the influence of individual members of the congregation upon the masses.

"Our country must be saved from the low ideals which threaten it. If people will insist upon coming to church in the latest fashions and dressed in their smartest clothes, they are going to make it difficult for people who cannot afford such extravagance to sit with them.

"The working classes are not going to expose themselves to an unfair comparison between themselves and others, and I do feel that, we must try and make the church a common meeting ground for all classes. The church was never intended to be a sort of parade ground for showing off the latest and most absurd fashions."

BONUS FOR W.A.A.C.'S AND OTHERS.

An Army Council instruction announces the grant of the bonus payable from May 1st 1919 to officials and members of the V.A.D., the general service section of the Women's Legion, Female Motor-drivers and W.A.A.C.'s who undertake fresh engagements to serve until April 30th next or who have already undertaken to serve for a longer period. The rate of bonus payable to women other than officials will be 2s. a week.

BARGE MYSTERY.

Mystery surrounds the sinking of the sailing barge Atalanta in the Thames on Thursday, with the loss of all hands. The craft was in ballast and was making Poplar. When off Beckton gasworks she was seen to sink rapidly. A rescue party put out but was only able to save a dog. Three or four men were believed to have been aboard.

DECEMBER WEDS JULY.

The bride at a Registry office marriage at Lichfield on Saturday was a widow of eighty and the bridegroom a blind pedlar aged fifty. Both the parties had to be assisted up the steps of the office. The man apologised to the officials for his bride's infirmity, remarking that she wasn't so nimble as she used to be.

VETERANS' CLUB AND HOME.

The Veterans Association proposes to raise a fund of one million pounds for a war memorial to include a residential club and convalescent home.

BREAD UP.

FOOD MINISTRY TO MAKE ANNOUNCEMENT.

The anticipated rise in the price of bread is about to take place, so Mr. A. W. Last, secretary of the Master Bakers' Association, has declared. No definite details of the proposed increase are available at present, but it is anticipated that an official announcement will be made shortly.

It is understood that the question has been discussed at a conference at the Ministry of Food, when the policy to be adopted was under consideration.

The Master bakers, it is understood, have been in communication with the Ministry of Labour as to the relation of the recent settlement in the baking trade dispute to the price of bread. During the negotiations which paved the way to a termination of the strike it was laid down by the employers that arbitration must be on the line that any award given should not take effect until the Ministry of Food had revised the price of bread or flour.

Under the recent award of a court of arbitration an advance of wages was given of 5s. for a 48 hours week, to take effect from August 19.

CAVELL PLOT DEEPENS.

The evidence at yesterday's sitting of the Quien trial was unfavourable to the accused. The Guard at the prison of St Gilles recalled four persons who alone knew the address of Bellache, viz. Miss Cavell, Madame Bogard, Bock and Quien. All were arrested except Quien. Other evidence showed that when at Sennelager accused was given special treatment.

A former servant of Miss Cavell deposed that Quien made an appointment with her and took her to a café were they met two men to whom he said "Escape. I am tracked."

It appeared from further examination that there was a young servant of Miss Cavell's named Pauline who met an alleged Englishman. She stated that the Englishman needed help to cross the frontier. He had spoken to a French officer who resembled Quien in height and build. Two days afterwards Miss Cavell was arrested by two German policemen accompanied by the alleged Englishman "Maitre d'Armon," who regretted that Pauline was not to be found.

HOLIDAY SAILING FATALITY.

It is feared that three lives have been lost by a boating accident on Belfast Lough on Saturday. Dr. Thomas Huston, a visitor from London, accompanied by his son and nephew, left Carrickfergus in a sailing boat. As they did return, a search was made, which revealed the mast of the boat near Garmoyla lighthouse. No trace of the party was found and they have now been given up as drowned.

SUNDAY GAMES.

Concluding his addresses at St. Martin-in-the Fields the Rev. T. Pym, head of Cambridge House, Camberwell, said that unless men and women were fit to take their places at work on Monday there was something wrong in the way they spent their Sunday.

He could not understand why there should be any prejudice against games on Sunday, particularly for those who could not play during the week-days.

AMERICA'S PARIS BILL.

The expenses of the American Peace Commission in Paris from December 1st, 1918 to December 31st 1919, are estimated at 1,506,796 dollars (£301,350).

President Wilson informs Congress that this estimate is the very best he can make.

MOTOR BUS CRASH.

ONE ACCIDENT CAUSES ANOTHER.

A serious motor-bus accident occurred at Dalston on Sunday afternoon involving the death of a man and injury to seven others. Both the driver and conductor of the conveyance were seriously injured. The accident happened at Dalston-lane.

It appears that the driver of the bus, which was proceeding towards Walthamstow, turned towards the pavement in order to avoid running down a cyclist whose machine had skidded on the tramlines. The bus jumped the kerb and crashed heavily into a wall.

A factory man named Alfred Bonney, of Bethnal Green, who was walking along the pavement at the time, was caught against the wall by the spinning wheel. When extricated he was found to have sustained terrible injuries to the lower part of the body. He died a few minutes after his admission to hospital. Four other persons, George Bird and his wife Annie, John Davis, the conductor, and Charles Ashworth were detained at the hospital for treatment and three others were attended by a local doctor.

THE DOOR TO GOSSIP.

Since the announcement that the Duke of Bedford's houses on the Woburn estate are built without front doors there have been numerous visitors to the villages where what are now known as the anti-gossip cottages are situated.

"Whether the Duke had the banning of gossip in mind or not when he built these houses," said the wife of one tenant, "I have proved that the front door is the main door to gossip. At the front a woman loses all idea of the time in criticising the affairs of others; at the back she sees too much of her own unfinished work to start gossiping."

EBERT CALLS FOR UNITY.

Unless there was an uniform concentration of national effort, said President Ebert at a luncheon given in his honour at Stuttgart, Germany could not bear the terribly heavy burdens the war had laid upon her. The position of Germany in regard to foreign countries was extremely difficult.

"If," he said, "we desire to regain our international standing and obtain what is necessary for our existence, we must stand together, shoulder to shoulder, without distinction of classes, and present one united front to foreigners."

AEROPLANE CRASHES INTO CROWD.

A shocking accident occured at Winschoten on Saturday during a flying demonstration. The machine of an aviator named Hinchcliffe fell among the spectators. A woman and a boy were killed on the spot and several others were injured by the aeroplane, which was itself badly damaged.

63,000 WOMEN OUT OF WORK.

The total number of women in receipt of the out-of-work donation is now 63,110. The total for both sexes on August 15 was 530,523, of whom 359,778 were ex-service men and the rest men, women, boys, and girls.

These figures were given by the Ministry of Labour in reply to a published statement that 500,000 women were now in receipt of the donation.

GOLIATH AVIATORS PLIGHT.

The first telegram from the crew of the Goliath aeroplane was received at Paris last night. Their machine had to descend on a shelving beach at high tide, 1c0 kilometres North of St. Louis, owing to the pins of the propeller breaking. The aviators remained there six days before being rescued, providing themselves with drinking water in the meantime by means of distillaton.

BULGARIAN PEACE TREATY.

It is generally understood that tomorrow the Supreme Allied Council will devote its attention to the conditions of peace with Bulgaria. The principal clauses in the treaty have been prepared by Special Commissions after careful study of the various questions involved, but the important question of the future of Thrace and Bulgaria's access to the Aegean sea still remains undecided.

MORE NEGRO RIOTS.

At Knoxville, Tennesse, general and serious rioting broke out following a determined attempt by a white mob to get a negro out of gaol for the purpose of lynching him. In the course of the disturbance several negroes were killed and it was found necessary to call out the State Militia to restore order.

PETROL DEPOT EXPLODES.

An extensive fire has almost completely destroyed the American camp at La Maladiere, near Dijon. A petrol depot exploded and the resulting fire lasted for several hours. The camp formed an immense sheet of flame and enormous quantities of goods were destroyed. The damage is estimated at more than ten million francs.

A QUESTION OF FINANCE.

The amateurs, and a few experts, of high finance are not a little disturbed at the prospect of the bad position which our sovereign commands in foreign exchange, but there are one or two factors which appear to have been overlooked, and which on contemplation are not without reassurance.

The feature of the exchange which calls for most comment is that in America the English pound has not yet recovered its former value. What then will be the effect of this? Simply that the British merchant will make, as far as is possible, his purchases in those markets where his purchasing power is greatest. This will result, in one of two things. In order to enter into the competition American prices must come down or she must reduce output. Whichever course is adopted is to our advantage.

As to the foreign trade which it is feared America will capture, this must be accompanied by a change in American financial methods. The American trader with his vast home market has never been content to accept the small returns and long credits which invariably accompany this form of trade. The high returns and the short credits which are the factors of home trade are much more attractive and are certain to hold the attention of the trader.

Finally the cost of production in America is bound, by the nature of things to show a continuous upward curve. At present, her valuable natural resources, worked in what strikes the European as a wasteful manner, are easily reached. As these resources become exhausted more capital and more labour must be utilised to produce the less easily reached resources and an enhanced value is immediately created which calls for an increased price.

Finally American trade unionism is only being developed. As soon as the American worker recognises the immense power which united action confers upon him, the same labour difficulties which have caused periodical dislocations of European production will weaken American trade. The American worker in order to receive his higher rate of pay accepts conditions of labour which would create consternation in our British trade unions.

When these facts are borne in mind, it will be seen that, whatever advantages American traders may now enjoy, when the recognition of their responsibilities is grasped by British workmen and a full output is reached, British trade will, in the course of time, regain its lost ground. There is little to be feared from the American handicap if our workers will settle down to the task of restoration.

THE HISTORY OF THE RHINELAND.

In estimating modern political developments in Germany we are apt to lose sight of the historical setting. Lord Acton once quoted a famous saying to the effect that history was nothing but past politics, whilst present politics formed the subject matter for future historians.

Just as modern England is the product of long centuries of political development, so Germany reflects the many sided aspects of her past. Ever since the days of Charles V., Germany has been a prey to political disintegration coupled with religious strife which culminated in the 30 years war. The rise of Prussia during the 18th and 19th centuries furnished the counter poise to the centrifugal tendencies always at work in the German nation. These are seen at their worst during the 30 years war when Swedes and French disputed with each other the mastery of Europe over Germany's prostrate body.

When we come to more modern times we find these centrifugal an centripetal tendencies constantly at work. What Louis XIV had commenced Napoleon consummated. A Frenchman meeting the historian Mommsen at the time of the Peace negotiations at Versailles in 1871, asked him against whom the Germans were still fighting: his reply was "Louis XIV."

By the Peace of Lunéville in 1801 the whole of the German Territory left of the Rhine was annexed to France. The 340 odd States comprising the Germanic system were reduced to about 40. From the ecclesiastical states, free imperial cities, together with the petty states of the minor princes was formed in 1806, the Confederation of the Rhine with Napoleon as Protector. The Elector of Bavaria and the Duke of Würtemberg became kings, and the Margrave of Baden a Grand Duke.

Whilst Napoleon's action in the matter was dictated by purely selfish motives, it ultimately brought great blessings to the German people. It marked the beginning of the regeneration of the German Fatherland. Out of the new German system which Napoleon created was to rise the later German Empire. Not the least amongst the benefits conferred, was the introduction of all the reforms which had regenerated France and made her strong.

Serfdom was abolished where it still lingered: equality of the noble and the non-noble classes before the law was established: and the new French Civil Code was partly put in force. When, after the defeat of Napoleon in 1814-15, Prussia took over the Rhineland, Frederick William III issued a Cabinet Order of 20. 6. 1816 concluding as follows:—"Ich will, dass das Gute überall wo es sich findet, benutzt und das Recht anerkannt werde."

A number of laws, regulations and decrees of the Napoleonic Code were accordingly retained and partly incorporated in the new Civil Code, and traces of this French influence are still to be found in the Prussian legal administration in the Rhineland.

In Roman times the Rhine formed the boundary between Independent Germany and the Roman Province of Gaul. But German aspirations aimed at the realisation of the words "Du Rhein, bleibst deutsch wie meine Brust." It is only when we keep the past history of the Rhineland in mind that we can correctly appreciate the question of its future.

THE OPERA.

TRISTAN AND ISOLDE.

The opera-house reopened on Sunday evening with "Tristan and Isolde" and the enthusiasm at the end, besides being a tribute to the artists and to the work, was also a manifestation of pleasure at the having "the opera" once more with us. The Army of Occupation at Cologne was especially glad, as they had been looking forward all last season to hearing this greatest of all Wagner's music-dramas. No one, who knows the Cologne Opera, needs to be told that the production was a fine one in every respect. The orchestra, under Herr Klemperer, really surpassed itself, nor is it possible to pick out certain bits as more beautifully played than others, so perfect was it throughout. Of the singers, Frau Mimi Werhard-Poensgen, as Isolde, carried off first honours. Her performance was of extreme beauty. She looked Isolde, her acting, gestures and indeed her whole reading of the part was beyond all criticism, while her voice was easily able to satisfy all the claims upon it. Much the same praise could be given to Modest Menzinsky's Tristan, except that vocally he left very much to be desired. The voice was at times quite unable to cope with the music, especially in the death scene, which solely owing to the singer's shortcomings, seemed unduly drawn out. Herr Menzinsky's 'Tristan' ranks below his 'Waltner' and is not to be compared with his very fine 'Siegfried.' Mention must be made of Frau Grimm-Mittelmann's beautiful 'Brangaene.' Nothing could be imagined more lovely than her singing in the second act. Herr Liszewsky as 'Kurwenal' was exactly right, and his singing in the last act was deeply moving.

The stage-production was worthy of the drama. The scene on the ship was extraordinarily beautiful, while the setting for the love-duet could not possibly be improved upon. The dark foliage overhead, the lowering walls of the castle and the stars behind, formed a perfect setting for the highest expression of human passion which has ever been realised by the mind of men. F.

HARVEST IN RHINELAND.

It is the sunset of the year in Rhineland, golden and lingering. Assuredly no greater halo of glory marks the close of any day than that which gathers round each moment of this happy season.

Already autumn tints can be seen in the woods, and the harvest of the field has been gathered in, for it is much earlier than at home. Even the stubble has been turned over by the industrious farmer whose plough followed in the wake of the reaper.

A fresh beauty greets us every newborn day, and even the purple-grey vapours that linger in the evenings by the edge of the wood have their charm. In the heat of the day the brown velvet bees drone ecstatically among the beaded clover in the field. There is the scent of apple hanging about the orchards, and down the narrow lanes leading to the valley are fruited brambles.

In field, garden and orchard the harvest has been bountiful. We see it in the well-filled barns, the golden stacks of wheat, the richly laden stalls of fruit in the streets and market-places of Cologne.

The wanderer who leaves the dusty city for the hills and dales of this fair and fertile countryside drinks deeply of the wine of joy. He hears the ancient song and his heart responds: "Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness. The little hills rejoice on every side. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered with corn, they shout for joy, they also sing."

It is a colour-poem of beauty which lies stretched before our eyes which gives us incomparable compensation for the fret and worry of our complex days. It pours a soothing balm upon the wounds of stress and strife and we feel the tenderness of her touch and rejoice. And yet there is to-day a greyer picture to impress upon the mind and heart, the sadness of contrast.

A year ago—it seems in the dim distant past, an eternity—we were advancing through the shell pitted, shell swept fields of France and Flanders. There amid scenes of fearful desolation the Red Reaper was at work, the harvest was death, and yet we sang, for we could see the dawning of a brighter day, the ending of the long agony of conflict.

We recall the ruined homesteads, the wilderness of trenches, the valley of the shadows, the grim and gaunt no-man's-land.

What of the poor struggling farmer of those regions? When will he reap his harvest? What a task! How keen the disappointment and misery of it all!

This we know, that nature is wonderful in her ways and in due season the wilderness, and solitary place will be glad, the desert will blossom as a rose, the blood red poppies will cast their charm over the fields where our comrades died.

Here in Rhineland there is no desolation. The people have been spared the horrors of devastation, their harvests have never ceased. Are they grateful to us that the old law, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," has not been carried out?

We leave such thoughts and turn to the beauty and glory of life as we feel it to-day in drinking in the sweetness of grand old nature at harvest time. We would not let the grey shadows blot out the golden sunshine of our glad heartedness. We rejoice in the gifts and blessings that are ours and gather strength to toil and labour for the harvests yet to be—a new heaven and a new earth. G.K.

THE PADRE AND THE FIRE.

We have had fires before. Soon after the armistice we had lots and the Inspector of Fires became well known to us. We are now very thorough with our fire precautions. There is not a man in the Brigade who does not know that in the event of a fire he will (1) try and put it out; (2) shout for assistance and (3) call an officer.

Our last fire did not fall quite within the scope of these regulations. It has raised questions. We call it now "The Padre's Fire." It originated next to his bedroom at Brigade H.Q. in the still hours of the night. Rumour says that the Padre had been reading sensational fiction before retiring and for this reason, perhaps, it was not until the smoke prevented his breathing that he really woke up.

Mentally, he recalled the rules as he sprang from his bed, damaging himself in the dark, against the furniture. Without thought for his personal appearance, he dashed to the next room. There was the fire burning merrily. Back he dashed for a jug of water which he hurled into the flames, strictly in accordance with rule 1. A few lusty yells started rule 2 working.

A door burst open and a number of female domestics of the household appeared on the scene. There was a loud shriek which was first attributed to the fire. Afterwards the question was raised as to whether it was not caused by the sight of the Church Militant in pyjamas. However, the reinforcements quickly grasped the situation. Many and various utensils were speedily filled with water and emptied into the flames. In spite of language difficulties, here was a clear demonstration that the personal magnetism of a leader requires no dictionary.

Problems arose over rule 3. Could this be ignored seeing that the Padre was taking a really personal interest in the fire? Should he call another officer? or, considering the reversal of the usual routine for discovering fires, was it the correct thing to call an O. R. This was a knotty point, but while reasoning the matter out in that cold impartial way so well known in the Padre, there was a further development.

A small party of those officers who discuss matters of interest until the small hours of the morning — they are to be found in most messes — about that moment decided to go to bed. Whatever may have been their thoughts when they first caught sight of the Padre and his amateur fire-brigade, they quickly realized that, after all, this was a serious situation, which was being firmly handled. With their additional assistance, more and more water was thrown into the flames and before long the fire was extinguished and the fire-brigade dismissed.

We are trying to decide now (1) whether fire orders are correctly formed to meet the case where a fire is discovered by an officer, and (2) whether pyjama jackets should be worn outside or inside the other part. JERRY.

ESPERANTO STUDY.

A CREFELD EXPERIENCE.

Sir, — May I be allowed to give my experience of the Totalisator at the meeting at Crefeld.

In the Grand Inter-Allied Steeplechase of seven starters, I invested fifty marks on the winner. I backed it for a place also, and was fortunate enough to nominate the second and third horses — four winning bets of fifty marks each. My return from the Totalisator was 261 marks, i. e. I laid 200 to win 61 marks.

In the last race of seven or more runners, I backed a placed horse and had my stake returned—bare. I am still wondering what the price was in this case.
BLUE.

WHY NOT?

Sir,—There is one thing that one cannot help but notice in Cologne nowadays, and that is the apparent unwillingness of officers wives and relations to wear the brassard issued to them from the Permit Office for the express purpose, one would imagine, of serving as a badge of nationality.

It would appear that the brassard is looked upon with disfavour by its fair possessors, for some reason entirely incomprehensible to a mere male who delights in being recognised as a Britisher anywhere.

Do these ladies wish to hide their nationality in the occupied area, where more than anywhere else at the moment, a Britisher should be proud of his or her country. I may add that this letter is not the after effect of a "faux pas" due to the brassard not being worn.
BRASSARD.

AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE.

Sir,—In his article on "Speechless Marriages," "W.J.W." refers to Esperanto as a "dead language only studied by learned men." The facts are quite the reverse.

At the Green Lanes School, Eccles, in April 1919, 350 children sang choir pieces in Esperanto, which is one of the subjects taught in this school. Eighty of the children already correspond with other Esperanto children in distant lands. "W.J.W." will note: Not learned men, but little children of no special ability.

The writer had a board school education, yet has conversed with ease with Esperantists in France, Belgium, and here in Cologne, having learned Esperanto in spare time without a teacher.

Tolstoi says:—The sacrifice of giving up a short time to the study of Esperanto is so small, and the benefits so immense that no person should refuse to make the attempt. W.F.M.

WIVES IN COLOGNE.

Sir,—May I express my appreciation of the announcement that the wives of officers are to be permitted to enjoy the excellent feeding facilities provided by the Clubs controlled by the N.A.C.B. Incidentally may I suggest that similar facilities be provided at organisations like the Y.M.C.A. and the Church Army for the benefit of other ranks.

I notice that a proviso is made that such facilities are granted subject to there being sufficient accommodation available. I would suggest, however, that certain tables be earmarked for their particular use and thus enable wives to become known to one another.

THE GREAT EXAMPLE.

O brother man, fold to thy heart thy brother!
Where pity dwells the peace of God is there.
To worship rightly is to love each other,
Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer.
Follow with reverent steps the great example
Of Him whose holy work was doing good,
So shall this wide earth seem our Father's temple
Each loving life a psalm of gratitude.

REMINISCENCE.

'Tis night, and the shimmering silver beam
Of the moon lights on the peaceful scene.
Not a sound is heard from the hills hard by,
Where to-morrow men will fight and die,
Yes, the moon shines bright—tis a peaceful night,
But to-morrow men will fight and die.

'Tis dawn, and the thunder and crash is nigh
Of the guns that are shelling the hills hard by,
Now the dusty valley's a streak of mud,
Made by a river of rich red blood,
Yes, the guns have fired and the foe retired,
And we march through the river of rich red blood.

CREFELD RACES.

Superiority Of British Horses At Sunday's Meeting.

MASCOT AGAIN.

A huge concourse of Rhineland racing folk gathered at the pretty little race course at Crefeld for the Inter-Allied Races on Sunday, English, American and French armies of occupation being well represented at the Belgian meeting. The sky was overcast during the whole of the afternoon, but, happily, no rain fell.

The outstanding feature of the meeting was the marked superiority of the British horses engaged; they carried everything before them, winning no less than five of the six races in convincing style, and securing, as well, the majority of the places. The French and Belgian mounts were quite outclassed, and only met with success in the second race for which no British horses were entered.

Particularly fine were the performances of Mascot, finely ridden by his owner, Major Gen. Tudor, in the Prix Meldeghem, and Golden Sunset in the grand steeplechase. The latter excellent horse was in splendid fettle and from the commencement had the race well in hand. Eau de Cologne was also at his best in the Prix de Monge and won in a canter.

Details.

The results were as follows:—

LEAGUE FOOTBALL.

Huge Attendance at Opening Day Matches.

YOUTH'S OPPORTUNITY.

With high expectations and the rosiest of prospects, after five years of substitute competitions, the big professional football teams returned once more to League fare on Saturday, and there will be widespread disappointment if the campaign just entered upon is not a record in the history of Association football.

As in every other walk of life the war has exacted a heavy toll from professional football, and only here and there was the personnel of the teams which turned out on Saturday unchanged. Generally speaking there has been a great re-shuffle, faces that were once familiar to all followers of the game were missing, and, in their stead, young ambitious players appeared, eager to take advantage of the golden opportunity to make good and win their spurs. That they will do so is certain; many of them will doubtless win reputations rivalling these previously cherished by the men whom they are re-placing. Huge attendances were a feature of Saturday's matches matches, the results of which were as follows:—

A DAY OF SUCCESS.

127th Heavy Battery R.G.A. Performs "Hat Trick."

Last Wednesday was a red letter day for the 127th H.B. R.G.A. Three splendid successes in one day is a performance that cannot be boasted every day by an individual unit. The first success was scored at Opladen when the Battery tug-of-war team represented the 63rd Bde R.G.A. There were three pulls for the decision, the first and third being won by the 127th H.B. team who were in fine form. The 127th H.B. team is unbeaten. Later in the afternoon, a "soccer" match took place at Dunwald, versus the army troops chosen team. Again the 127th H.B. showed fine form. Gunner Batty, Bombdr. Leigh and Dvr. Holmes played remarkably well, scoring five, four and one goals respectively. The result of the match was 127th H.B. 10 goals, Army Troops nil.

To crown the day the battery concert party, "The Dunwald Knuts" gave a performance in the evening, which proved a "rollicker," great credit being due to all concerned. The humour of the evening was provided by Lieut. Hayward and Sig. Vevers. A pleasing feature of the performance was the pianoforte duets and solos by Bmdr. Dunstan and Sig. Bow who delighted the audience with their talent. Appreciation was also shown to the "sentimentalists."

The chief item of the evening was a comedy concerted number entitled "The Interrupted Glee" with a caste of six, including Lieut. Hayward and Sig. Vivers, who served up original comedy. The number was written and produced by Sig. Vevers.

LINDENTHAL LAWN TENNIS.

A very successful American Lawn Tennis Tournament was held at Lindenthal on Sunday, twenty couples taking part. The tournament was won by Brig-General Tindall-Lucas and Mrs. Chambers, who defeated Major and Mrs. Pleydell-Nott in the final.

For the Officers Sports Club Tournament at Lindenthal commencing Sept. 6th entries close at 18,00 hours to-day. Those wishing to take part should send entries at once to the Hon. Sec. Sports Club, attached VI Corps H.Q.

"FOOTER" FRIENDLY.

A scratch match was played yesterday between 152 H.B. R.G.A. and X Corps H.A. H.Q. at Godesberg. The former pulled off the match with a score of 3 goals against 1. Sgt. Woodcock (2) and Gunner J. Smith (1) were the goal getters for the battery.

DOG MUZZLING AND FOX HUNTING.

With the approach of the fox-hunting season the Board of Agriculture is being urged to authorise relaxation of the restrictions on the movements of dogs in and out of controlled areas in the Home Counties. Provision is already made exempting dogs from being muzzled when used for sporting purposes, and it has been held that hounds when hunting come within the scope of this exemption, but exemption is not recognised in those parts of a controlled district generally known as a dangerous area.

COLOGNE POST CUP.

Decisive Matches in the Eliminating Round.

Lowland Div. M.T. Coy. v. 174 Siege Battery R.G.A.

All the matches in the eliminating round for the C.P.C. have now been played off the semi-finalists being:—

Lowland Div. M.T. Coy.
93rd Bde. R.G.A.
17th Lancers.
29th M.G.C.

Saturday's Match.

At Mulheim on Saturday the Lowlands won the toss and batted first. Cater and Senior who opened for them evidently found the bowling of Graham and Frost difficult for off the first five overs, three of which were maidens, they managed to glean only three runs. The first wickets fell at 10 after 15 minutes play. At 21 three wickets had fallen. The fourth wicket, however, completely changed the aspect of the game as a result of a fine innings of 32 by Senior, the partnership raising 39 runs. The remaining wickets were all down for 69. For the Gunners Frost took 6 wickets for 31 runs and Graham 3 for 25.

The Gunners were much less fortunate, two were l.b.w., one run out and one hit wicket. Whittingham was the only man to reach double figures and he was caught at 14 from a ball that glanced off his hand. For the A.S.C. Biles took 5 wickets for 9 runs and Pocock took 4 for 12. The R.G.A. have been twice beaten in eleven matches. The Siege Battery however were in the unfortunate position of having two of their batsmen on leave in England, two demobilized during the previous week and the team's captain, Gunner Whittingham, while practising the day before dislocated the third finger of his right hand. In spite of this he played, though not in his usual position as wicket keeper. His place there was taken by Lieut. Blyton. They were all out for 38. The scores were as follows:—

Lowland Div. M.T. Coy.

93rd Bde. R.G.A. v. "D" Corps Siege Park.

At Mulheim on Sunday. A splendid batting display by the gunners was spoiled by rain. Ellis and Weight were the opening batsmen. Big things were expected from this pair and they did not disappoint for 78 was the score when Weight was cleverly caught behind the wicket when 46. Ellis continued to bat steadily, but he was bowled when 51. At the tea interval the score was 123 for four. On re-starting, Smythe leathered the bowling, making 75 in quick time. Wilson and Worton gave him nice assistance with 11 and 16 respectively. Seven wickets were down for 228 when Heuchon joined Bloomfield and they added 60 in just on 20 minutes. Heuchon made 35, including a lovely drive for six and Bloomfield got 33, including a six. The innings closed for 301. That was a big score for the M.T. to overtake. Capt. Richie had a merry innings for 20, before Weight bowled him. No one played Weight with confidence; the whole side were out for 65. It was hard luck on the M.T. having to bat in the bad light, but there was no question of the superiority of the gunners. Weight bowled really well, fast, and a splendid length. Scores:—

NEW SOUTH WALES "TOT" PROCEEDS.

From the totalisator during the financial year ended June 30 the New South Wales Treasury received £132,404, as against £82,802 during the previous year, an increase of £49,602. Betting taxes contributed £72,445 to the revenue, compared with £59,402, an increase of £13,043. The grand total derived from these sources was £204,849, as against £142,204, an increase of £62,645. As the totalisator contribution is paid on a 7 per cent. basis, the amount handled by the machines for the year was £1,891,483. But for the influenza epedemic it would have exceeded £2,000,000.

A NOVEL FEATURE.

Women to compete at Inter-Services Championships.

At the Inter-Services athletic championships meeting at the Stamford Bridge grounds, Chelsea, on Thursday, September 4, a novelty will be a relay race between teams from the women's branch of each of the three Services. The distance will be a quarter of a mile, each member of the team of four running 110 yards. Special prizes will be a small silver rose bowl for each member of the winning team and a silver photo frame to each of the second team. This special event is the natural outcome of the training given in the various women's branches of the forces, and many competitors in meetings during the summer have proved themselves clever sprinters.

Many members of the W.R.N.S. have proved themselves runners of exceptional merit, and their team will most probably be chosen from Miss McCulloch, Miss Taylor, Mrs. Gray, Miss Ford, and Miss Winter.

Judging from the ability shown in the R.A.F. championships, the W.R.A.F. should have a capital team, as there is much first rate talent from which to choose.

The Army will be represented by the Q.M.A.A.C., who have a team in training at Bostall Heath Camp, where keen interest is taken in the prospect of their team.

"The Darts" concert party (49th Labour Coy.) gave a farewell show at Stotzheim on Thursday evening. Mrs. Corry kindly sang several songs which were very much appreciated.

Well Known Singer Departs.

Walter J. Clark, the well known singer, of the 52nd Leicesters was unavoidably unable to appear at Euskirchen on Friday night as his battalion is moving to England. Clark's departure will be regretted by many; he has a good voice and is equally at home with sentiment and humour.

The Merry Micks.

This jolly little party of six artists resumed performances last week showing at Cologne, Birkesdorf, Langenfeld, Wiesdorf, Ohligs, Schlicken and Duren. When I say that on four successive occasions McCracken and Weeks (entertainers) and Howarth (Tenor) had to respond to four encores it is sufficient to show that the troupe is in tip-top form. The whole show has been considerably improved and several new members introduced. If, as is presumed, the party goes to England shortly, the Rhine Army will be losing one of the brightest of its concert parties.

The Prongs Tenor.

Edwin J. Batey, the popular tenor of the "Prongs' Concert Party, is another demobilization victim. Late of the "Bundhooks" of Brussels, where he created a reputation as one of the finest tenors in France and Belgium, Batey came to Germany and has since played with the "Prongs." During his stay with the "Prongs" his genius and vesatility has made him extremely popular among music lovers and fellow artists alike. Always genially disposed and ready for any part, his absence will cause deep regret to many. I understand he will be proceeding to England next week and all will join in wishing him the best of everything in his new sphere. He has played his part in the war with the Artillery since 1916, being with the 1st, 68th and 92nd Bde. R.G.A. respectively.

Leave Club Band Conecrt.

An excellent Concert was given at the Leave Club on Sunday by the Band of the 23rd Royal Fusiliers. The bandmaster, A.E. Fox conducted finely and very skillfully played the cornet at the same time. The programme included selections from "William Tell" "Zig Zag" and "Il Trovatore" all of which were greatly appreciated. A cornet solo "Come sing to me" was another very popular item and also the two marches "Light Cavalry" and "Old Comrades" with which the programme opened and closed. The last number had to be repeated, so insistent was the audience. Major Bowen's songs roused much enthusiasm. He sang among other songs "The Deathless Army" and "The Last Call" and the very large audience was very reluctant to let him leave the platform. A pleasing addition to the programme was the beautiful singing of Master Norman Walter, senior chorister of St. Stephens, Westminster. He sang "He shall feed his Flock', and "I know that my Redeemer liveth" accompanied by Dr. Adcock, and the applause of the listeners was tremendous. Miss Ramsay Smith also sang two songs which were very much enjoyed. The concert was the most crowded that the Leave Club as ever known.

Gunners Entertainment.

At Weiden the 74th Bde. R.F.A. gave another first class entertainment in the St. Florian Hall. The Hall was filled long before the hour announced for the commencement of the programme. Lieut. West played "The Policeman's Holiday" to which the troops whistled in their in mitable style. Signaller Marshall sang "Down Honolulu Way" and "Half Past Nine," the choruses being heartily sung by the audience. Bdr. Heyes gave "Parted" and "Heart of a Rose", the applause being loud and prolonged. Bdr. Ives gave several monologues, "The Night Watchman" and "The Caretaker" being especially well rendered. Gnr. Smith, attired in chinese costume, then entertained with a very mystifying twenty minutes of conjuring. Dvr. Marsh sang "Cup of Cocoa" und "I've never been courting before", keeping all the troops in roars of laughter. Dvr. Baldwin sang "Tony the Swiss Mountaineer" and "Cabbarges, Cab-Beans and Car-rots." Signaller Howley produced many original jokes and sang "The Old Dun Cow" being loudly applauded. Lieut. West and Signaller Gray were the accompanists. The costumes and make up were excellent and great credit is due to Signaller Howley for his stage management. He is now on his way to England for demobilization and his going will be a big loss to the concert party whose success depended largely upon him. He has our best wishes for success on the professional stage at home.

JACQUES.

Cricket Feats.

Hobbs is likely to be the only batsman to reach 2,000 runs this season, and the distinction of scoring 1,000 runs and taking 100 wickets is shared between Rhodes and Major J. W. H. T. Douglas

Zam-Buk's "14 Points"

1. Herbal.
The herbal character of Zam-Buk is its most important point. Unlike ordinary ointments, Zam-Buk is free from animal fats, and contains no poisonous mineral drug. Zam-Buk is entirely of vegetable origin and skilfully prepared.

2. Healing.
Zam-Buk first arrested public notice by the wonderful way in which it knits together the edges of a wound, whether a burn, cut or sore. Zam-Buk grows new healthy skin.

3. Soothing.
Zam-Buk instantly allays irritation, reduces inflammation, and drives all pain away.

4. Antiseptic.
The rich essences in Zam-Buk act on the skin and flesh in such a way as to medicinally cleanse the whole of the tissues. Thus Zam-Buk prevents or cures blood-poisoning and opens the path to clean, healthy healing.

5. Purifying.
Frequent dressings of Zam-Buk keep a wound or sore clean and sweet, and draw away the foul matter that would retard the healing process.

6. Germicidal.
Zam-Buk destroys the dangerous germs that make a wound "take bad ways."

7. Stimulating.
Zam-Buk stimulates the tissues and thus hastens Nature's building-up process.

8. Curative.
The remarkable curative properties of Zam-Buk—especially for Ulcers, Eczema, Ringworm, &c.,—are derived from its herbal ingredients.

9. Handy.
Zam-Buk is ready for instant use and requires no previous getting ready. The directions are simple enough for a child to follow.

10. Concentrated.
The whole of the Zam-Buk in every box is healing medicine, whereas many ordinary ointments are composed almost entirely of an inactive and useless "base" with a mere sprinkling of medicine. Zam-Buk stands alone with 100% medicinal efficiency. There is more healing potency in one tin of Zam-Buk than in 100 tins of ordinary ointment.

11. Deodorant.
Zam-Buk is found useful for neutralising the offensive odours given off sometimes by Ulcers, Abscesses, etc.

12. Penetrative.
By reason of its wonderful refinement, Zam-Buk, when smeared on or rubbed into a place, sinks right through the tissue, purifying the flesh and uprooting skin trouble.

13. Reliable.
The medicinal and healing potency of Zam-Buk never varies. Zam-Buk "keeps" a long time, and can always be relied upon. After using always cover up the balm with the wax slip in the lid.

14. Reputation.
For over twenty years Zam-Buk has been known all over the world as the Greatest Healer and Skin Cure. Its reputation, built up in Peace, has been strengthened by its eminent service to our Soldiers and Sailors in the Great War.

Zam-Buk is always ready for instant use, is unequalled for Eczema, Bad Legs, Piles, Ringworm, Ulcers, Scalp Troubles, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Scratches, etc. Every soldier needs Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is sold in handy-sized boxes by all Chemists, Stores and Canteens, or the Zam-Buk Laboratories, Leeds.

HOLBORN, LONDON, E.C.1.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

When is a Door not a Door?

The memory of man, saith the sage, is short. An excellent exemplification of this is afforded at the N.A.C.B. Officers Club. For some two months now the old entrance facing towards the Dom has been closed, but still attendants at the club forget this and make a dash for this entrance—returning muttering unprintable things under their breath.

Bonus for V.A.D's and W.A.A.C's.

An A.C.I. announces the grant of a bonus payable as from May 1st to officials and members of the V.A.D., General Service Section, the Women's Legion (Motor Drivers) and the Q.M.A.A.C., who undertake a fresh engagement to serve to April 30th 1920, or who have already undertaken to serve for a longer period. The rate of bonus payable to women other than officials will be 2/- a week. Payment ceases when the payment of the Army of Occupation bonus ceases.

Re-direction of Newspapers.

In order to relieve the Army Postal Service, and in view of the fact that out-of-date newspapers can be of little value to the recipients, newspapers reaching units for addressees who are no longer with their units will be treated as waste, and not be re-directed and returned to the Post Offices. Exception will be made in the case of newspapers the wrappers of which are marked "In case of non-delivery return to senders." Such newspapers will be returned clearly marked with the cause of non-delivery.

All the Fun of the Fair.

Roundabouts, shooting galleries, swing boats and chutes, to say nothing of a house that turns itself upside down, are comprised in the fair at Riehl. During the week "Tommy" has it largely to himself, but Saturdays and Sundays the civvies are present in great force. It is amusing to watch be-spectacled youths and grave looking men riding on some weird looking wooden animal to the accompaniment perhaps of "The War March of the Prophets." Every little side show has its mechanical organ, and the music played is frequently excellent—but the blatant electrical organ leaves a lot to be desired in its rendering of even good music.

A Race-Course Incident.

We are not out to give free advertisements but the news that a particularly popular brand of cigarette was on sale on the course on Saturday led to an incident which had its humorous side. The fact that certain of the rank and file were to be seen leaving the booth with familiar packets in their possession led to a wild rush in which all the instruction Tommy has had in the art of forming a cigarette queue went by the board. A rush was made and the individual behind the counter was in immediate danger of being overwhelmed. It came from all angles and protests only drew demands to "Dish 'em out." That canteen assistant will not easily forget that box of cigarettes.

Separation Allowance.

In view of the small number of separation allowances now dealt with by T.F. Associations, it has been decided to transfer payment to regimental paymasters with effect from the first pay day in the next half yearly allowance book period, viz.: October 6th, in the case of wives, and November 4th, in the case of dependants.

Who is Your Favourite Author?

To arrive at a conclusion as to which are the most popular books, we have decided to promote a competition and readers of all ranks are invited to submit selections. Each book selected will be considered as receiving one vote each time it figures in the lists sent in, and the competitor whose list, according to the books in it, embraces the highest aggregate of votes will receive a prize of fifty marks. Selections of ten books must be addressed to "Books" c/o The Editor "Cologne Post" by Saturday.

The Club.

The N.A.C.B. Club, or "The Club" as we are wont to call it had its accustomed appearance during the week-end. The dining and other rooms were crowded in striking contrast to their appearance in mid-week when the occupants of the bar on one particular evening could have been counted on one's fingers. Is this an outcome of the reduction in numbers? On Saturday of course, we had apart from the week-end habit, the attraction of the races. These drew officers in large numbers from the various billetting areas and after all who does not visit the Club when he is in Cologne?

Method Of Building.

Landlords, when they build, always put in at their own expense electric light, gas, heating, hot-water, bathroom and lift. At the bottom of the court-yards of each block of flats are built a few sets of smaller apartment dwellings (they are called Rückgebäude—back-buildings), which command a much lower rent, while benefiting fully from the general conveniences of the establishment. The latter are thus rendered less expensive by being accessible to more families. The working class tenements are built in the outlying suburbs and consist of tiny dwellings with low rents, but even they have as much water as is required, gas and electric light. The most modern inventions are kept for the better class houses.

Prize for Echoes.

Every day we are prepared to give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's winners are Gnr. J. Morrow, 153 Siege Bty., R.G.A. Rhine Army; Sig. W. Harvey, "A" Coy. 18th K.R.R.C. Rhine Army and Cpl. M. Verney, R.E. c/o A.D. Roads, Rhine Army.

NOTES FROM LONDON TOWN.

A SUPER BEAUTY SPOT.

Foreign and provincial visitors to the capital, who so rarely traverse the grimy Blackfriars-road, and cross Blackfriars Bridge from the Surrey side, miss one of the best things London has to offer. From no other bridge can one see such a glorious sweep of river, with its complement of beautiful grey and white architecture, slender spires and turrets, and green foliage. And when the sun really does his best it is difficult to believe that anyone ever had the audacity to call it "grimy London"; it seems more like a leaf from a wonder tale!

ENGLISH MUSIC AT LAST.

No longer is it necessary for artists to adopt unpronounceable names in order to claim the attention of the British public, and the day has passed when a musician's artistic abilities were judged by the eccentricity of his dress or the manner of "wearing his hair" rather than by the standard of his work. Similarly, it is rare nowadays to find a concert or recital, the programme of which does not contain at least one unfamiliar work. In the old days a pianist's repertoire consisted almost entirely of the works of Chopin, Liszt, and the better-known German classical composers. British musicians laboured for generations under enormous difficulties, one of the greatest being the totally unwarrantable preference which English people evinced for the foreigner in music.

BUYING IN THE STREETS.

It is amazing the people you see buying at the street markets these days. They all seem delighted to have some revenge on the profiteers. I hear of wonderful developments in public markets. Already glass and furniture stalls are to be seen in some of the side streets, the owners selling for small profits. I met a country woman offering new laid eggs out of a basket. She told me a grocer in the neighbourhood used to buy eggs from her every week for 3d. apiece and sell them for 6d. She was disposing of them for 4d., and in five minutes had sold six dozen. She is bringing along chickens and ducks next week. In the best parts of London, country vendors go with baskets of produce from house to house. They are sorry they did not think of this long ago, and so are the purchasers.

MOST MUSICAL CAPITAL.

During the last decade or so, public taste in musical matters has been improving steadily until now the volume of first-class music performed every week in London compares most favourably with that performed in any of the great Continental capitals, where music can be said to be almost as great a necessity to the existence of the populace as food and drink. For this improvement in public taste we have to thank that small band of devoted workers which includes such names as Sir Henry Wood and Sir Thomas Beecham among conductors, and a number of enthusiastic and gifted vocalists and instrumentalists who, if their names are not known to a wide public, have played no less a part in popularising the works of the great composers of past and present.

A HOLIDAY "ATTRACTION."

The hope is expressed that next year, when matters in France become more settled, the Government will take steps to facilitate visits to the battlefields by those who can show that they are anxious to visit the graves of relatives who fell during the war. There will be a big rush across the Channel for this purpose when peace conditions are restored, and there is a feeling that the traffic should be under State auspices, and should not be exploited by the tourist agencies. Regularly weekly tours to the battlefields of Belgium have already been organised as a holiday attraction, though it must be a morbid mind which finds pleasure in surveying the stricken towns of Flanders—towns which in some cases are represented now only by heaps of masonry. Some have disappeared so completely that it has been deemed necessary to set up indication posts pointing to where they once stood. Visits to the graveyards, which whiten the landscapes in some parts of Northern France, are an altogether different matter, and do not convey any unpleasant impression that the war has been waged to make a Cockney holiday.

THE BOGEY.

"My worst enemy," said the Turf Editor "is 'Constant Reader.' This remarkable species, like the poor, is always with us! I will endeavour to illustrate my point, which, perhaps, to you, is a trifle obscure."

Taking up a correspondence basket he quickly glanced over its contents and presently, with a fierce light in his eyes, drew forth and flourished a singularly uninspiring scrap of what I took to be sugar-paper.

"It is sugar-paper!" he snarled, in response to my suggestion. "Brown sugar, at that! The damn thing's sticky all over. Still," he continued, growing calmer, "it will at least serve to enlist your sympathy. This," he said, slamming the obnoxious document on the desk in front of me, "this is one of 'Constant Reader's' productions. Read it — I implore!"

Before I could comply, however, I found it necessary to carry the paper to the window; for a pencilled scrawl on blue paper is not exactly ideal.

"Dere sir," I read aloud, "I put ninepense each way on Blarney Stone in the first race at Newmarket larst Saterday and won shiling on Getaway for a plase. Any to come on Doomsday in the third race, any to come, harf on Baby Boy and the rest pluss any to come, up and down. I also had harf a doller on Horsey Combat to win ('to win' was determinedly underlined). Bradbury wun that race but your valubul paper say it was disqualyfied. So my horse reely wun. In the larst race I backed Wireless for a place but only two horses run. Now my horse came second but my bookmaker says I dont get any place money. Plese print in tomorrers paper how much winnings I have to come, Youre obejient servant, CONSTANT READER."

A peculiar noise caused me to look round at my editorial friend. He was pouring out two neat Scotches. Silently and with trembling hand he indicated one of them and we two drank to the perdition of the "valubul" paper's fervent admirer.

Presently my host returned to the subject. "Sometimes, however, this bogey makes its appearance in a rather less formidable form," he said. "I am referring to the person who periodically demands the publication of a particular result, date, price or other item, which, should he be the 'Constant Reader' he alleges he would be perfectly aware appeared in the previous day's issue. His nom-de-plume is decidedly unconvincing!

"Then, of course, we have the apparent gentleman of leisure who regards this office as a regular reference library. Scores, results, and biographies of varied character — and especially events which took place in the Dark Ages — are his mania. His questions entail as much research work as might bewilder a geologist! But, as he must invest 2d in the paper occasionally in order to see our replies I suppose we are somewhat recompensed. For obvious reasons we do not reply through the post," he added.

Acknowledging that he was responsible for certain of the "tips" in the newspaper in question, I asked if this practice did not excite the irascibility of some of his followers when a particular "tip" did not materialize. He remarked that it was an ungrateful world and that he did sometimes receive sarcastic and truculent missives to this effect.

Which brought us to the subject of professional tipsters' advertisements — the type wherein the wizard claims a percentage of the winnings — if any. "I observe," said I, "that you 'guarantee' these advertisements. But what is to prevent a man sending out individually the name of every horse in the race to his different clients? Such a 'tipster' would never be out of pocket!" The other smiled complacently. "We are able, to a certain extent, to guard against this," he assured, "by insisting on knowing the advertiser's selection beforehand. Thus, should subsequent investigation prove him to be addicted to such sharp practice —" he winked suggestively.

"And — and," I hesitated, "if the advertiser is genuine and has such confidence in his 'tips' er — why —"

"My dear Watson —"

"Why does he not forego his extraordinary pastime, and —"

"Exactly!"

"Back them himself?" we finished in duet.

H.R.P.

THE MATCH SUPERSTITION.

The superstition against lighting three cigarettes from one match, which was so general among soldiers in the fighting line, is very commonly supposed to have originated in France during the actual progress of the war. As a matter of fact it would appear to boast a much more hoary origin. Nevertheless it would be true to say that it was introduced into England very shortly before the war. For the people who brought it to us were the dancers in the Russian ballet. In Russia the superstition is very common, and is connected with the practice of lighting three candles to the dead from one taper. Theatrical people are always more superstitious than others, and this particular superstition was brought to London by the Russian dancers, travelled across the footlights to the audience, and in turn spread to the fighting forces in France. Matches are much more plentiful now, but few soldiers had the temerity to light more than two cigarettes from the same match, even when they were as scarce as golden sovereigns.

ROYAL FUSILIERS.

SMART ACHIEVEMENT ON THE ARCHANGEL FRONT.

WILSON STARTS LECTURING TOUR.

ARCHANGEL FRONT.

BRILLIANT WORK OF THE ROYAL FUSILIERS.

General Ironside reports that Russian troops, supported by two companies of the Royal Fusiliers, including many Australians, attacked the Bolshevists on the Archangel-Vologda railway on August 29th. The attack was completely successful, all our objectives being gained. All the enemy gun positions and the village of Emptsa fell into our hands. After the capture of Emptsa, the Bolshevists counter-attacked with several armoured trains and regained the village, but a further attack by the Royal Fusiliers recaptured the village, which is now in our hands.

Aircraft co-operated brilliantly in the attack, dropping bombs on the barracks and on the armoured trains. Our casualties were light, being two officers and fifty other ranks wounded.

HUGHES REACHES HOME.

Mr. Hughes, the Premier of the Australian Commonwealth, received a tremendous ovation at Melbourne on his arrival after his prolonged stay in Europe. The scenes of enthusiasm were unprecedented, especially amongst the soldiers. Mr. Hughes delivered several short speeches, the outstanding features of which were eloquent tributes to the gallantry of the Australian soldiers in the war; a desire to bury past controversies, vigorous opposition to all unconstitutional novements and stirring appeals for unity in face of the problems resulting from the war.

NAVY IN THE BALTIC.

It is reported from Königsberg that a large British naval squadron passed on Saturday in an Easterly direction and it is supposed that the passage of the squadron is connected with the coming offensive against the Bolshevists in North Russia.

SEARCH FOR A GRAVE.

The Belgian Government has ordered a thorough search to be made for the burial place of Marshal Foch's son, who was killed in the Ardennes.

A SPARE KING.

The ex-Kaiser of Austria, Carl the First (and last) has announced his intention of leaving Austria. His destination is not stated, but he is understood to have expressed a desire to live in England.

GERMAN'S HOMECOMING.

A quarrel caused by the presence of a German in the house was the subject of a case at the Wood Green Court when Ernest Cawdron and Frederick Waren, disabled soldiers. were summoned for attacking Francis Jenkins, who lives upstairs in Cawdron's house.

Jenkins stated that his uncle, who was a German and had been released from internment, was staying with him, and one night Cawdron and Warren tried to prevent him from entering the house. They also attacked him (Jenkins).

The magistrate said that the two ex-soldiers were wrong in interfering, although he could understand their feelings. Each man was fined 10s.

GASSED IN MID-AIR.

While working on the top of a chimney-stack 150ft. high at Messrs. John Brown and Co's Sheffield works a steeplejack was gassed by inhaling the fumes from the chimney.

Hundreds of people witnessed a dramatic and thrilling rescue, which was cleverly effected by the man's mate and two other men. They ascended the stack and secured the steeplejack in ropes, and then safely lowered him to the ground.

OYSTER SEASON OPENS.

The oyster season opened on Monday and although it is anticipated that supplies will be scarcely equal to the demand, the quality will be good.

Best Whitstables should be obtainable at about 3s. a dozen, but others, described as "English natives," should be on the market at 1s. 6d. Large supplies of the Dutch variety are expected, owing to the removal of the import restrictions.

NEW COAL SEAMS.

Great importance is attached in the Wirksworth district of Derbyshire, which up to now has been regarded as well outside the Derbyshire coalfield, to the discovery that coal exists in workable quantities quite close to the surface. Several small seams are now being worked.

IRISH AMERICANS.

DIVERSE OPINIONS ON THE PEACE TREATY.

The Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate devoted most of Saturday's sitting to hearing the views of Irish Americans on the Peace Treaty and its bearing on Irish independence. Messrs. Dunne and Walsh, members of the deputation which went to Paris during the Peace Conference, were the chief members of the very big deputation, which presented a petition on behalf of various Irish societies in the United States urging the rejection of the Treaty on the grounds that it ignores Irish independence.

Subsequently the Committee received another deputation of citizens of Irish birth who presented a protest against Sinn Fein activities in the United states, declaring that the campaigners for Irish independence were plain American citizens with axes to grind. The deputation defended the Treaty.

Mr. Gompers, President of the American Labour Federation, also appeared before the Committee and strongly urged immediate ratification of the treaty and the League of Nations covenant. He criticized the action of Republican senators for holding up the ratification and asserted that the welfare of Labour would be threatened by the re-submission of the Treaty to the Peace Conference.

WILSON TO STUMP THE STATES.

President Wilson leaves Washington to-day on an elaborate tour throughout the United States. His object is to explain and popularise the Peace Treaty.

It is reported that six senators, who are opposed to his opinions, will follow him everywhere and inflict their views on the community.

OCCUPATION OF FIUME.

The proportion of troops in Fiume has now been settled. The old garrison will be replaced by new Allied troops and Italy will have the same number of men as Great-Britain and France together.

FRENCH BISHOP FOR METZ.

Monseigneur Benzler, the German Bishop of Metz, left the town last Thursday afternoon, his successor, Monseigneur Pelt, accompanying him to the Prussian frontier.

MOTOR-BIKE CARRIER FATALITY.

Percy Charles Tustin, a young man of no occupation, living at Park House, Park Place-villas, Paddington, stands committed for trial from Marylebone Police Court on a charge of the manslaughter of his friend Edgar Henry Rides, who was riding on the carrier of a motor-cycle driven by Tustin when it collided with a cab. Bail was allowed in £100.

A cabman in evidence estimated the speed of the cycle at the time of the accident at forty miles an hour. The cab and the cycle were smashed, and the occupants of the cab were injured. Tustin had his left arm broken, and the cabman was (in his own words) "knocked out."

Tustin's contention is that the collision occurred in consequence of the cabman taking the wrong side without reducing speed, but that is denied.

£2,700,000 LOST WAGES.

During the twenty-seven working days on which the 150,000 Yorkshire miners were on strike they lost £2,700,000 in wages. The decrease in coal output was 3,500,000 tons. This does not take into account the further loss occasioned by the miners of West Yorkshire holding out for a longer period.

This week-end the situation in South Yorkshire is practically normal again, and yesterday the bulk of the miners drew their first full week's pay for seven weeks.

When the miners decided to resume work, half of them could not re-start straight away, owing to fall of roof and other damage, but almost the whole of them are now at the pits.

The output of coal is increasing daily. and one pit at Hickleton Main is drawing 3,000 tons a day.

Usually the pits round Barnsley are idle for the Barnsley Feast, but the majority of the men have worked throughout the holidays to make good some of their lost time.

The electrification of the Italian railways has been decided upon.

BOLSHEVISM!

TORTURE OF INOFFENSIVE CITIZENS.

From time to time the curtain is lifted and glimpses are obtained at the appalling conditions which prevail under the Bolshevists in Russia. Rapine, pillage and murder are rife and the awful pase to which unhappy Russia has fallen is illustrated by the following details of two typical murders, which are supplied by an authentic witness.

Dealing with specific instances, this correspondent says: "I proceeded to the village of Ruda, where according to the first-hand evidence of Marie Weyrwoll, a Polish school teacher named Vincenz Janas was visited in his house by soldiers on August 21st. According to Marie Weyrwoll's story he was beaten with rifle butts while in bed, then driven downstairs and told to 'Run, you Polish swine.' As he ran he was shot in the back. He fell down but was dragged up and again told to run. This time he took refuge in the house of Rintare Schwarz. Here the soldiers found him and dragged him downstairs by his feet, took him behind the house and beat him with rifle butts, smashing an eye out. They then shot him and after he was dead kicked his body. At Ruda this story was confirmed by several persons and I was taken to see Janas's body, which was still lying in the mortuary. The body was mutilated in the most terrible manner. My informants all agreed that the victim was an innocent man, whose only fault in the eyes of the soldiers was that he was a Pole.

"Emilie Koat, of Lipine, stated that she saw on August 19th a man named Albert Siska, of the same place, arrested by soldiers because he was supposed to have fired. She testified to the man's innocence. Siska's wrists were bound to the stirrups of two mounted soldiers and he was then dragged between the horses at a gallop for over a thousand yards. Afterwards she saw his body in the mortuary at Piazniki. The arms were dragged out of their sockets, the legs broken and covered with blood and the body had five bullet wounds. I drove to Lipine and asked the first group of men I saw in the street if they knew a man called Siska. 'You mean the man who was murdered by the frontier guard' they said.

"In a few minutes a crowd of a hundred persons had gathered round and from a dozen different mouths I had confirmation of the story. One man in particular, Johann Meker, said he was attending the hospital to which Siska was brought. Meker stated that as they approached Piazniki the riders of the two horses spurred their mounts apart in order to drag Siska's arms out of the sockets but one stirrup leather broke and another soldier ran after Siska and struck him on the head with a rifle butt. Meker added the detail that Siska was an older man."

FINSBURY MURDER.

FINAL POLICE COURT HEARING.

Investigation has been closed, so far as the police-court is concerned, in the Prah-road tragedy, at Finsbury Park. Both Frank Geo. Warren (known as Burke), a ship's steward, of Allison-road, Harringay, charged with murder, and Harold Horatio Morgan, an assistant steward, of Pont-y-Cymmer, Glamorgan, charged as an accessory after the fact, have been committed for trial from the North London Court.

Mrs. Lucy Nightingale, the victim, it will be remembered, was found bound and gagged in the house of Henry Bull, who was charged with being an accessory after the fact, but was discharged.

Detective-Inspector Hall read a statement made by Morgan at the Limehouse Police Station.

On Jan. 1, Morgan, according to his statement, was discharged from the Army, after serving fifteen months in the Kings' (Shropshire) Light Infantry.

At 2.30 on Saturday, July 26, he was standing outside the Blackstock public-house, when a man who told him his name was Carter (Ball) asked whether he could play the piano. He then went with him to Prah-road.

Afterwards a young woman came in, whom Carter said was his niece. A dark man, who lived at Allison-road Harringay, and whom he called "George," also came in.

When he returned later Carter and Lizzie (Mrs. Nightingale) were there. He took Lizzie to a café, and went home and stayed the night with her.

On Sunday, when he called, about 7.30, Lizzie was alone, but after an hour the dark man from Allison-road came in, and then took her to a café.

On the way back to Prah-road with Carter, himself, and the dark man, she stopped to talk to a man who was a tailor at Wood Green. He came into the house, where they had some drink. Lizzie and the man went out of the room. The dark man, he believed, was in the front room.

Finally, he himself left the house and walked about all night.

While he was being exercised in the police-station, said Police-Constable Short, Morgan said: "When I see that detective-officer again I shall tell him all about it. I did shield my mate at first. I thought he was a pal."

Both men will be tried at the Old Bailey, Burke meanwhile reserving his defence.

Trotzky has ordered that children of officers who serve in the White army are to be shot.

MAIMED EX-SOLDIERS

HIGHER RATES OF PAY THIS WEEK.

Revised rates of allowances will come into force next Saturday for disabled men receiving industrial training under the Ministry of Labour.

The new scale is as follows:—

	Per week. £.	s.	d.
Single man	2	0	0
Married man with wife but no children	2	10	0
Married man with wife and one child under sixteen	2	17	6

These figures apply to former privates, but there are also extra allowances for ex-N.C.O.s and ex-warrant officers. There is, in addition, an efficiency bonus of 5s. per week, payable on the completion of the course of training.

Persons living away from dependents will further receive 2s. 6d. per day "living away from home allowance," or 1s. or 1s. 6d. per day in the case of partial dependents. Free training is provided, and on certain conditions travelling fares and free railway tickets home twice a year will be granted.

These rates of allowances are identical. with the maximum disability pension recommended by the Select Committee on Pensions and approved by the Government. and are in substitution for the alternative scales at present in force.

Changes are also made in the out-of-work donation as from Wednesday next. Men in receipt of disability pensions who have drawn donations for twenty-six weeks will, subject to the approval of the local employment committee, be eligible for the donation for a further twenty weeks, in lieu of thirteen weeks as at present.

Men with 20 per cent. disability pensions, which do not include any allowance for children, will receive an additional allowance of 4s. when in receipt of donation at the rate of 20s. per week.

A revised scale of supplementary donation will also apply in respect of dependent children for whom pension allowances are also being drawn.

SOLDIERS' GERMAN WIVES.

The following extract, from "Union Jack," appeared in the "Sunday Express":

"Anxious inquirers are now writing from the Army of the Rhine, asking how they stand with regard to their German wives.

"It might have been supposed that the Foreign Office would have foreseen this contingency. I have, however, been unable to obtain any definite pronouncement from that Department. The reason given is that no Consulates have yet been appointed to deal with passports. The War Office view is equally nebulous. The official attitude appears to be that no one can prevent soldiers marrying German girls, but the question of bringing those wives to Britain is a matter on which the department cannot adjudicate.

"On the other hand, a student of international law tells me that the men have every right to bring their wives to this country, as by virtue of marriage the women become naturalised British subjects.

"My advice, therefore, is that the soldier, if he wishes, should 'carry on.'"

ENGINEER'S TERRIBLE DEATH.

A story of the terrible fate of an engineer named Benjamin Green, aged sixty-four, of Selston, was told at a Nottingham inquest.

While working an electric coal-cutter for the first time, Green was drawn into the machine, a cable having come into contact with his clothing. Only a match and some keys were found, sufficient for the purposes of identification.

A verdict of "Accidental Death" was returned.

LEIPSIC FAIR BEGINS.

This world famous fair, which before the war used to attract large numbers of English buyers, especially for the toy trade, opened on Monday. Its tremendous popularity can be gauged by the fact that over 75,000 persons passed through the turnstiles. Among the 315 foreign firms exhibiting are British, American and Italian concerns.

ATTEMPTED MURDER CHARGE.

William Causton, 89, described as "independent," of 24, Theodore-road, Lewisham, was charged, at Greenwich Police Court, with attempting to murder his wife, Mary Anne Causton, aged 85, by striking her on the head with a hatchet. Mrs. Causton was very severely injured. The prisoner was remanded.

The King of Italy, whose civil list is about to be reduced, has expressed a desire to be taxed as an ordinary citizen.

Bolshevists are reported to have looted the Swedish Consulate at Moscow.

Italian aviators, who flew from Rome to Warsaw, were enthusiastically received by the Polish inhabitants.

Repatriation of the German prisoners in France will begin on September 19th.

The British steamer "Zariza" has arrived at Dantzig with 1,069 Polish refugees.

LONDON-PARIS.

FIRST WEEK'S AIR SERVICE RESULTS.

Three flying expresses, instead of the normal two, were required on Saturday to deal with the loads presented for despatch by the London-Paris air services. One plane, carrying two passengers and a quantity of parcels, left London at 12.30 and reached Paris at 2.55 p.m. From Paris the ordinary scheduled machine left at 12.30 p.m. and a relay machine at 12.40 p.m. each carrying passengers and parcels, the latter including an urgent consignment of millinery from a Paris costumier to a leading West End shop. Both expresses ran through to time, one landing at Hounslow at 3.10 p.m. and the other at 3.20 p.m.

The first week's record of the services, during which flying has been maintained daily, although the weather was none too favourable, shows very good results. It is hoped that arrangements will soon be concluded between the British and French post offices which will permit the carrying of express letters by air. It is understood that the fee will be 2 6d. This will include the post office charges and express collection and delivery by motor-cycle and special messenger.

DEATH FOR SPIES.

TOLD WHERE BIG BERTHA SHELLS FELL.

A court-martial sitting in Paris has passed the following sentences in the case of the spies who were charged, among other things, with reporting to the Germans the places where the shells of Big Bertha fell during the long-range bombardment of Paris:—

Larriez and Gaaspare to death.
Murat to penal servitude for life.
The woman prisoners, Sohadeo and Desjardins, to deportation to a fortified place.
The male prisoner Desjardins to ten years' penal servitude.

It was established that these persons belonged to an espionage system with headquarters in Switzerland.

During the war a shoemaker of Geneva, named Königer, organised an espionage service for the Germans, into which French deserters were recruited and passed on to a German woman, who selected the most suitable to be trained as spies at a regular spy school at Freiburg.

Afterwards Königer fitted them out with military uniforms and false papers, and they then returned to France on behalf of Germany.

In 1918, believing themselves to be discovered, they sent the two women, Sohadeo and Desjardins, in their place. These had to find out the position of various French regiments and divisions. the strength of American reinforcements, and the places struck by the shells fired by "Big Bertha."

Just as their task was finished, the prisoners were arrested.

ARMY AS UNIVERSITY.

Education is to form an integral part of the British soldier's training in the future and the military authorities see no reason why the army in future should not come to be regarded as the people's university. The new curriculum will include higher commercial and technical subjects and the official instructions lay down that commanding officers must realise that the recruit of seventeen or eighteen years of age has to be made into, not only an efficient soldier, but also an educated man, a good citizen and a competent workman.

SNUB FOR WOMEN POLICE.

There was an unusual incident at Marlborough-street when a young woman dressed in police uniform was present in court.

An unsavoury case was being heard, and Mr. Mead, the magistrate, asked her whether she was a constable.

She replied that she was not, but was engaged in a case that was coming before the court.

"You are dressed as a constable," said Mr. Mead, "and if you are one you ought to be out of court like other constables. You are not one, and I should have thought that your own proper feeling would have taken you out of court instead of listening to the shocking things you hear here.

"It is a misrepresentation to the public when you wear the dress and badge of a constable if you are not one," he added.

NO ROOM FOR SOLDIERS' WIVES.

Military married folk are finding the house problem very acute at Aldershot, and the Command orders have notified that the married strength of the units is at present so large that only a percentage of families can be provided with Government quarters.

The units proceeding abroad must provide accommodation for their families before proceeding overseas, and not leave it to their wives to find houses after they themselves have left.

CONCLUDING GAMES.

General von der Goltz, who, as reported, should have been recalled by the German Government, is still continuing pan-Germanist propaganda in the Baltic regions.

BOUND OVER.

V.C.'s DISCHARGE PAPERS IN COURT.

An Army discharge certificate was suddenly produced for the inspection of the Westminster magistrate, when Henry Blanchard Wood, aged thirty-eight, an ex-soldier, was charged with obstructing a policeman in Buckingham Palace-road.

Two soldiers of the military police stated that while they where examining the passes of soldiers in Buckingham Palace-road late the previous night, Wood interfered, and advised the soldiers not to produce their passes. He was requested to go away, but refused, and was at length taken in custody by a Metropolitan policeman.

Wood stated that the military police interfered with him. He had served sixteen and a half years in the Guards, and knew better than to interfere with the police.

Mr. Morrison (magistrates' clerk): Have you your discharge with you?

Wood then produced the papers which bore the following certificate:—

"Lance-Sergeant Henry Blanchard Wood, honest, hard working, and trustworthy. Exemplary character. Medals: Victoria Cross, Military Medal, 1914 Star."

"An extraordinarily good record," said the magistrate. "I am sure that if you had not taken too much to drink you would not have behaved in that way. I am not going to spoil the splendid record of a man like you, and you will be bound over."

TALLEST FLAGPOLE IN EUROPE.

The mammoth flag-mast lying in Kew Gardens will soon be erected.

It is a present from British Columbia, 215ft. long, and is the tallest flagpole in Europe. It reached Kew after an adventurous voyage, four years ago, and has been lying there ever since, an object of wonderment to many visitors.

The spar, which replaces the previous flagstaff from British Columbia, is the finest example of the Douglas fir the British Columbian Forestry Department could find.

Their best men roamed the great forest slopes of the Pacific for it, and a clump of twelve giants was felled to find this particular spar.

Then its adventurous voyage commenced. For ten miles it was hauled to the salt water, and then it was towed through the waves to Vancouver.

At last, after a year's delay, it was put aboard the Merionethshire, in September, 1915, and for 100 guineas the shippers guaranteed to bring it across.

Its next adventure was a difficult tow at the back of a barge through a dozen London bridges to Kew Gardens, where it was floated on to the tow-path during a high tide, and then swung round on rollers and dragged through the gardens.

PROTECTION OF BRITISH MUSEUM.

The means by which the treasures of the British Museum were placed in safety from air raids are described in a special return issued as a White-paper.

The most important among the portable antiquities, including the frieze of the Partnenon, the best of the Greek vases and bronzes, and the chief Assyrian bas-reliefs, were transferred to a station on the newly completed postal tube railway about fifty feet below the surface of Holborn. Fifteen vanloads of literary and artistic treasures were also transferred to the National Library of Wales at Aberystwyth.

A small collection of valuable books was removed to a strong room at Malvern. Other articles were placed in strong rooms in the basement of the museum, and protected by sandbags. Much of the rare glass and china was stored in packing cases to avoid the danger of concussion.

FIRST BELGIAN AMBASSADOR.

It is officially announced that Baron Moncheur, at present Belgian Minister in London, has been appointed first Belgian Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

BEER TO BE BETTER.

Notice has been received by the Burton-on-Trent brewers that the Malt Restrictions Order, 1918, has been revoked.

There is now no restriction on the manufacture, sale, purchase, or delivery of malt or malt extracts. A few months ago the Government allowed increased brewing, but it had already cut off the facilities for malt.

AEROPLANE LOSES ITSELF.

The British aerial transport which left London on Friday for Brussels with two passengers, had a very good crossing in spite of rain and wind, but lost its way on this side of the channel on account of bad visibility. It was compelled to land near Lille, whence the passengers continued their journey by rail.

SLOUGH MOTOR DEPOT FIRE.

A petrol tank caught fire at the Slough motor transport depot on Saturday. Three motor-lorries were badly damaged, but the fire brigade was able to prevent the fire spreading further.

PESSIMISTS' ILLUSIONS.

At home just now, the difficult phase through which our country is passing after the war is bringing the pessimists very much in evidence.

And what are they saying? Many are sighing for the good old days that are passed and gone. They imagine the England of the Stuarts, for instance, as a more pleasant country than the England to which we are about to return.

It is the fashion among the pessimists to place the Golden Age of England in times when noblemen were destitute of comforts, the want of which would be intolerable to a modern footman; when farmers and shopkeepers breakfasted on loaves, the very sight of which would raise a riot in a modern workhouse; when men died faster in the purest country than they now die in the most pestilential lanes and alleys of our towns; and when men died faster in the lanes and alleys of our towns than they now die on the coast of Guiana.

Why do they constantly look backward with such tender regret? In truth they are under a deception similar to that which misleads a traveller in the Arabian desert.

Beneath the caravan all is dry and bare, but far ahead and far behind is the semblance of refreshing waters. The pilgrims hasten forward and find nothing but sand, where, an hour before, they had seen a lake. They turn their eyes and see a lake, where, an hour before, they were toiling through sand.

A similar illusion haunts the pessimists to-day and has haunted their class through every stage of the long progress from poverty and barbarism to the highest degrees of opulence and civilisation.

Since they refuse to act for themselves, let us chase this mirage backward for them. And what do we find? Simply that as we resolutely advance, it recedes before us into the regions of fabulous antiquity.

The truth of the matter is that the more carefully we examine the history of the past, the more reason we find to dissent from these who imagine that our age has been fruitful of new social evils and the more we realise that it is not the evils which are new but the intelligence which discerns, and the humanity which remedies them.

But view the present situation at home optimistically and in the light of history and what do we find? Simply the re-action which the tension and patriotic concentration of the last five years was bound to produce.

Just think of the days of the Commonwealth and Charles II. The rigid ungainly Puritan zealots, having furnished good sport to the wits of two generations, rose up in arms, conquered, ruled, and, grimly smiling, trod down under their feet the whole crowd of mockers.

The theatres were closed; the players flogged. The press was put under the guardianship of austere licensers, and under sober clothing and under visages composed to the expression of austerity lay hid, during several years the intense desire of license and of revenge.

At length that desire was gratified and found its expression in the vulgar, anti-puritan outburst of the first reign after the Restoration.

Even though we have in that example an obvious case of action and re-action in most of the essential points parallel with the situation to-day, there will be those who will raise the objection of antiquity.

To come nearer our own times, though still maintaining sufficient distance to retain the true perspective of history, take the example of England after the Napoleonic Wars.

The England of 1815—1822 was an England exhausted and discontented. Taxation was heavy, there was a debt of over eight hundred millions, manufactures were in a state of complete depression; food prices were high as a result of the successful efforts of profiteering landowners, there were riots and crime all over the country. And England tided through all that and two more great wars as well, and emerged, triumphant the greatest power on earth.

And she can do it again. The pendulum of time must swing away once more to the other extreme, when real peace and true comfort will bless our island home.

SOFTENING THE BLOW.

"D—" exclaimed Buster, petulantly.

"What's amiss now?" I asked.

"Oh, another of those beastly rejection slips from "The Post". It isn't," he continued, after a pause, "the rejection that I mind, but the curtness. 'The Editor regrets he is unable to use the enclosed (just as if it were a broom to sweep the office with) which, accordingly, he returns.' Could anything be more callous?"

"Or more to the point?" I responded, coldly.

"But why doesn't he say what's wrong with it?" persisted Buster. "I was reckoned rather a dab at Composition at school."

"Be reasonable", I countenanced. "Think the Editor's got nothing to do but write critical essays on every M.S. he rejects. The paper would never appear if he had to perform that task. Consider yourself lucky to get them back. Some Editors 'ud keep them."

"Just what I want him to do" answered Buster wilfully misunderstanding me. "Expect he would if it weren't that there are no stamps to stick to, out here" he continued, libellously.

Repenting a little, my lack of sympathy, (after all, Buster was only 19 and trying hard to pierce the barrier) I admitted that, perhaps, the Editor might soften the blow.

"Yes—that's it: a chap only wants to feel that the Editor's human and takes an interest in him. There's nothing human, though, in these wretched slips of carbon?"

I watched his gloomy countenance for a few minutes, and then got busy with pencil and paper.

"Tell you what, Buster," I said, a little later, "I've just worked out a few ideas about this Rejection matter which I'm going to send to the Editor. Care to listen to them?"

"Suppose I may as well," answered Buster listlessly.

"Righto," I answered, "Here's the human touch you've been pining for. Makes Rejection a pleasure, and publication as prosaic a fact as cold potatoes. Listen:

"Sapper Jim is a tale with a thrill;
And humorous is "The Dilemma of Bill"
But both (enclosed) to Ambrose Strong
Are just 3,000 words too long."

Dodging an inkwell thrown by the unappreciative Buster, I continued:

"Dennis O'Healey's 'Lines to a Rose'
Is a very good poem — towards the close
But it's only the last two lines that scan
So at present, it's merely an 'Also Ran'."

By this time, Buster's attitude was decidedly dangerous, but I risked one more:

"The Editor's struck 'yond all expression
With "Watchdog's" story — Matilda's Transgression,
But, alas! it's enclosed, for he greatly afraid is
To publish a story so down on the ladies."

"See the idea?" I asked.

"Mean to tell me you're going to risk your reputation (such as it is) with "The Post" with that stuff?" queried Buster.

"Certainly," I replied. "Why not?"

"The thing's utterly silly. But never mind," Buster added brightening. "You'll soon know what it feels like to be rejected. The Editor's regrets won't seem so funny then as they appear now."

"That's all you know," I retorted, "for I'm enclosing a Rejection slip so as to cover that contingency. I'll read it to you:

The Editor can see in the accompanying article
Of wisdom or wit scarce the deuce of a particle;
The only idea which gains his affection
Is this, the last sample, of a "Softened Rejection."

"Let's hope he'll use it", Buster commented maliciously.

"I wonder, will he?" I replied. It's a great temptation, and despite all you say, Editors are only human, after all."

MEMORY AND OBSERVATION.

I have recently seen advertised in various periodicals, at least half a dozen books and systems all claiming to improve the memory. In my opinion, anyone who is really sincere can attain this improvement of one's own accord and by one's own efforts.

Since no two individuals are exactly alike, it is clear that a system which would suit and interest one, might prove of little value to another. If an individual has any earnest desire to enhance the retentive powers of his memory, he ought to invent his own method and work upon it. One of my old professors, some years ago, used to demonstrate to his students, how the memory could be trained by means of practice in observation. There is, indeed, much to be said in favour of this. The better the power of observation, the better the memory becomes. Therefore, first teach yourself to observe.

Study some object of complicated parts and then make a list, a minute, an hour or a day afterwards, according to the state of your memory, of all you can remember about it. Walk slowly past a shop window and notice as many details as possible therein. Then test yourself. Repeated efforts bring progress in their train.

The brain is stimulated thereby, and grows more active. You may say: "But why should I not practice on something more useful? Of what use is it to observe things that may prove of no worth to me?" This question is rather like that of the schoolboy who detests Euclid and who does not understand how valuable the various points of reasoning are to him, and will be to him in future years. He may become a merchant—but a merchant whose reasoning powers are undeveloped is a poor merchant. In all branches of life the faculties of reasoning and of observation are essential to success, and they assist greatly in training the memory.

In addition to this, the memory itself must be exercised, and it must be done by "self." You must rely upon your "self" and not upon systems invented by others.

The more the memory is exercised, so much the more useful does it become, because anything that is subjected to exercise, must needs develop. As with our biceps and other muscles, so with the brain. And the best advice to tender to anyone who desires to remember, may be summed up in the imperative form "Try to remember!"

Things that have to be done are, in most practical cases, more important, with reference to memory, than those which have been done.

Knowing this, one should concentrate on the former. It is a curious and noteworthy fact that those things which have to be remembered are the most liable to be forgotten and that the thing which has been done is the best remembered.

GERMANS AND BRITONS.

Two articles have appeared recently in a Cologne newspaper which seems to call for some comment. We are glad to note from them that some German organs are beginning to see the wisdom of enlightening their readers as to the real facts and the truth about the war.

That some Germans appear to be in earnest in desiring the burial of the hate-policy is an encouraging and hopeful sign for the future of Germany as well as for its better relations with the rest of the world.

The first article goes on to pay tribute to the good behaviour of the troops of the Army of Occupation. This does not surprise us, for wherever he has stayed before in foreign countries, all have borne witness to the fact that the British soldier is a gentleman.

But we wish to say quite plainly what our sentiments are with regard to the rapprochement suggested by the articles in question.

An interesting pamphlet on the conduct of the war has recently appeared from the pen of Professor Foerster of Munich, President of the German Society for promoting the League of Nations. In it he points out that any attempt at rapprochement between German and French, or British, is out of the question until the German people honestly and sincerely express their abhorrence of the crimes committed in the past.

This move must come from Germany in the first place, until this takes place, and the guilty parties have been tried, there can be no attempt at reconciliation. As we once expressed it in these columns, Germany must give proof of a change of heart before she can be accepted into the comity of nations.

But, given that, together with a real desire for enlightenment as to past crimes, and willingness to yield up the culprits, coupled with a sincere desire to walk in the new paths of peace and reform — then we can only view with favour any attempts from the German side to endeavour to obliterate the past, and seek reconciliation for the future.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Reader's Varied Views.

TRANSPORTING KIT.

Sir,—For the purpose of pointing out the advantage of His Majesty's Mail in preference to other methods of transport I send the following experience.

In the middle of May of this year I sent off a parcel containing "Surplus Kit" from Paris to London through a shipping agency. The parcel was not delivered until the middle of August and the charge was 11s. 6d.

The maximum weight of a parcel allowed by ordinary post is 11 lbs. and the cost between London and Paris is 1s. 7d. My parcel was just over this weight, being 11 lbs. 2 oz. Thus for the extra 2 oz. the agency's charge was 9s. 11d.

CANTEEN AND THE MARK.

Sir,—I notice that the price of some articles sold by the N. A. C. B. has risen considerably lately, due I suppose, to the fall in value of the mark.

This does not affect officers so much, as they are not compelled to obtain money at the official rates, but it must have a considerable effect on the non-commissioned ranks, who have not equal facilities.

The majority of goods sold by the N. A. C. B. are not bought here, but are paid for in English money. The unfortunate Tommy has to buy his Marks, also with English money, but what he buys for 1/- to-day, may only be worth 10d. to-morrow, and this at an institution, which is supposed to be run for his benefit.

Surely a monthly price bill could published and adhered to; the profit on one month's trading might perhaps not be quite so gigantic, compared with those of the previous month, but things should equalise themselves eventually.

R. A. S. C. CAPTAIN.

MR. PERCY'S OFFER.

Sir,—As an old admirer of Mr. Percy, may I be permitted to ask for a production of Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" and that great burlesque "Rostand's Fantastico." If it is not adding too much to Mr. Percy's individual effort, I would also dearly like to again hear him recite Oscar Wilde's poem "The Happy Prince."

As a former member of the Manchester Playgoers Club and a regular attendant at the Manchester Gaiety Theatre, may I congratulate Mr. Percy on the great artistic merit of his productions at the Deutsches Theatre and wish him continued success in his coming plays.

ANOTHER OTHER RANK.

WHY?

Sir,—Last Sunday night I travelled by train from Bruggen to Horrem thence from Horrem to Cologne. In both portions of these trains that were reserved for military, one had to travel in darkness, whilst the civilian portions had plenty of light.

Surely we are deserving of better travelling facilities than this.

INDIGNANT.

MATINEES WANTED.

Sir,—I think I am speaking for a large number of men when I make the suggestion that more matinees might be held by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company.

This arrangement would make a great difference to those who are billetted ten or fifteen kilos away and who are debarred from seeing more than half the performance at present.

A system of matinees would not only be of financial benefit to the R.A.D.C. but it would relieve the monotony of those who are like me IN EXILE.

A BADGE WANTED.

Sir,—Recently there was a sensible letter in the "Cologne Post" appealing for fair play for correspondents.

Evidently "J.R.D." has not been impressed with this good advice judging by the last paragraph of his letter in answer to mine.

I was not writing as a civilian but simply in agreement with the views expressed in the recent article signed "Mufti."

Incidentally I am entitled to wear the general service ribbon for nearly three years service and I am still wearing the King's uniform.

G.A.

ADVERTISEMENTS MISSING.

Sir,—No attempt appears to be made to utilise the tramcars of Cologne as advertising mediums. Tramway services are run for the benefit of the users, and therefore any increase in the revenue should result in either a proportionate reduction in fares, or improvement of the service.

From the advertisers' point of view this branch of advertising is highly profitable.

If a tram-user has nothing to read, and nobody to converse with, he invariably passes his time by looking about him, sometimes to the extreme discomfort of his fellow passengers.

C.R.S.

GAMBLING KILLS SPORT.

Sir,—I notice that while the authorities have prohibited, and quite rightly so the making of a book on any race-course in Cologne, yet the use of the Totalisator is both allowed and encouraged.

This is simply betting under another form, and experience has shown that where the element of chance in sport is exploited for a pecuniary advantage, it gradually develops into a systematic and vicious form of gaming, to the deterioration of the particular sport it concerns.

If sport is to take the great part it should in the life of our country, it should be used for its original purpose, that is, as a pleasant and healthy form of recreation.

"SUNRISE."

Grey are the hills at the break of day,
Till the sun has made them gold.
The sullen seas and the skies are grey,
Lifelessly grey and cold.

A soft mysterious breeze is born
In the far and distant east,
Then hills and sky proclaim "'Tis Morn,"
In a glorious golden feast.

ENGLISH FOOTBALL.

Brief Comments on Opening Day Matches.

In the First Division of the League the outstanding feature was Chelsea's defeat of Everton at Goodison Park, before about 30,000 Liverpool spectators. Chelsea were without Ford, and Everton missed the services of Clennell, their crack winger.

The Arsenal's defeat at home before a gigantic crowd of over 50,000 spectators was a great disappointment to Metropolitan enthusiasts. The forwards on both sides lacked finish. The only goal of the game was scored by Henderson about half an hour after the start.

The Arsenal and Everton were not the only teams that went down before their own spectators, Sheffield Wednesday failing to hold their own against Middlesbrough and Bolton Wanderers against Bradford. It is worthy of note that two of the four away teams to score wins, hailed from the North-East Coast.

The outstanding feature in the Second Division was the 'Spurs brilliant victory of 5 goals to nil over Coventry City, away from home. The home team were very energetic in their methods, but in the second half of the game there was only one team in it, the home eleven being slow.

Fulham's Success.

The opening game at Craven Cottage produced a really good display of football, Fulham having every reason to be pleased with themselves for beating South Shields by 1—0. Fulham thoroughly deserved their success, and to McIntyre belongs the credit of scoring the opening goal of the season. The home side should develop into a very sound combination, being very strong in defence.

West Ham were fortunate in making their debut in the Second Division in front of their own spectators who rolled up to the tune of about 20,000. The opposition was provided by Lincoln City, who were not expected to win, but they did the next best thing by drawing.

The gate at Bristol, where the City were opposed to Bury, was not a great one; but this was not surprising when the fact is taken into consideration that the Rovers were also playing at home in the Southern League. The goal that decided the game was scored by Howarth.

Clapton Orient, although defeated at Huddersfield, were by no means disgraced. They gave the locals a fright by scoring first through Bowyer, and it was not till the last minute of the first half that Huddersfield equalised, Cock, the old Brentford centre, being responsible for the point.

Brentford's fine win.

The London Combination champions of last season opened their Southern League programme at Griffin Park in victorious fashion, defeating Brighton by two goals to one. It was quite a new team that was seen on duty for Brentford, only three of last season's players in Price, McGovern and Amos turning out.

Queen's Park Rangers accomplished a capital performance in beating Bristol Rovers, at Bristol, especially when the fact that the West of England men did not lose a game at home last season is taken into consideration. The Rangers' defence was brilliant, and to this the West Londoners owe their victory.

Gillingham made a satisfactory restart by drawing with Watford at home. Both sides showed sound defence, and the teams, if not brilliant, were hard working.

The Welsh teams did not cover themselves with glory. Merthyr going down at home to the clever Millwall team, whilst Newport County and Cardiff City were beaten away from home. The best show was made by Swansea Town, who drew at Luton.

Southend United made a none too auspicious restart by losing at home to Portsmouth.

Exeter City did well against Southampton at the Dell. As a matter of fact, they had slightly the better of the game throughout, but were rather weak in front of goal.

The game between Plymouth Argyle and Swindon Town was a rather one-sided one, the visitors, who were without Sillo, losing the services of the veteran international, Fleming. The locals turned out a pre-war side, with the exception of Jack, their centre forward.

CIVIL AVIATION.

Successful Start of International Flying.

Highly successful has been the inauguration of international civil flying, and a particularly gratifying feature to those who have at heart the supremacy of British aviation is the fact that British firms were ready, and straining at the leash, so to speak, for the moment when the official restriction should be lifted. Two of our home firms have been specially active in organising services between London and Paris. The first flight took place last week, when an Airco 4A biplane left Hounslow at 9.10 a.m., and, reaching Paris at 11.25, started back at 12.15, and arrived at Hounslow at 2.45 p.m. The actual flying time of 4h. 45min. for this double trip is a remarkable testimony to the revolutionary nature of aerial travel, and demonstrates the facilities which the aeroplane affords in traversing long journeys.

G.H.Q. RIFLE CLUB.

The third weekly Spoon Shoot took place on Saturday the 30th instant. The attendance was below the normal, owing to the attraction of the race meeting, but the scores were much higher than usual, the average being 74 out of a possible 105.

The silver spoon was awarded to R. S. M. Elston, R.E., who scored 89.

Any officer, W.O. or sergeant, stationed in Cologne, who is keen on shooting, will be welcomed as a member of the Club. Names of all who wish to attend next Saturday's shoot should be submitted to the Secretary, G.H.Q., No. 1 Sergeants Mess, not later than noon on Friday.

A bus will leave the above Mess at 1.30 prompt for the ranges at Merheim. Tea is provided on the ranges and refreshments supplied.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Wednesday, September 3rd, 1919.

Surface wind moderate, southerly and perhaps becoming south-westerly. Fair. Some cloud, especially later in the day. Moderate temperature. Good visibility.

PARTRIDGE & PHEASANT.

Bags Generally Below the Old Standard.

LOOSE KEEPERING.

Partridge shooting began on Monday, and many manors will be shot over systematically this season for the first time since 1913; the result of shootings having been neglected for so long a period must be disastrous, and only in one part of the country—West Sussex and the Hampshire border—is there strong evidence that bags will be up to the old standard. Even in Scotland and the Border country the harvest is exceptionally early, consequently close observers of game and their habits have been able to gauge the likely crop much better this year than has been the case for many seasons.

Loose keepering, or none at all, during war time accounts for the absolute disappearance of partridges from many manors: vermin have been unchecked, and very heavy tolls levied: it will take years to restock much of the ground. The breaking up of big estates, also, has caused game-rearers considerable anxiety: pheasants, of course, could not be artificially reared during the war, and scores of game farms were given up. Now, however, the chicks are being reared in large numbers, and visits paid to Buckinghamshire (a very favoured part of the industry), Oxon, Surrey, Sussex, and Hampshire during the past few weeks prove that the rearing coop is coming to its own once more, while game farmers in those counties and others report an extraordinary demand for chicks for turning into covert. Eggs were sold in especially big quantities, and with the removal of most of the restrictions regarding food, and a favourable rearing season, there is certain to be good pheasant shooting, for the wild bird, as well as the artificially reared one, has done well.

50 MILE "CYCLING" TROPHY.

W.C. Stewart's third consecutive Success.

At the Southern Counties Cycling Union championships meeting held on the Herne Hill track, W. G. Stewart, Kentish Wheelers, distinguished himself by winning the fifty mile "Cycling" trophy for the third time in succession, this win giving him absolute possession. Tandem-paced, he covered the distance in 1hr. 52min. 32 4-5 sec. The mile championship of the London Centre fell to W. A. Ormston, Poly. C.C., who took 2 min. 42 4-5sec.; while the two miles tandem championship of this Centre was won by W. A. Ormston (Poly. C.C.) and H. H. Lee (Kent W.) in 4min. 35 2-5sec. The programme also included two flat handicaps, which were won by H. J. Strickland (Portsmouth) and H. Norrey (L.A.C.).

CRICKET FRIENDLY.

1st London L.T.M.B. v. 1st London B.H.Q.

At Loope on Sunday. H.Q. batted first and were all out for 24 runs. The L.T.M Battery replied with a score of 43, rain stopping play after the first innings. For the visitors, Pte. Burrows made the highest score with 7 runs, and for the winners Pte. Bowers compiled 13 not out. For B.H.Q. Sgt. Riggley took 7 wickets for 11 runs, while for the T.M.B.'s L/Cpl. Davis took 5 for 2 and L Cpl. Gascoigne 2 for 3. The wicket keeping of Pte. Sampson for the L.T.M.B. was very sound, two men being stumped.

An interesting four-ball match was played over the Muirfield course, when George Duncan (Hanger Hill) and Mr. Edward Esmond were defeated by Commander Wilson and Ben Sayers, jun.

YORKSHIRE AND KENT.

Holmes and Sutcliffe as first wicket pair.

HOP COUNTY'S DRAWBACK.

It is claimed by many that Yorkshire are more worthy of the championship on account of games played. Whether that is so or not is problematical, but it must not be overlooked that Kent have met all the apparently strongest counties. Always rich in amateur talent, Kent have several promising young players whose form suggests that they should worthily carry on the great reputation of the county cricket in seasons to come, one of the most prominent being Lionel Paget Hedges, whose form in school cricket was nothing less than remarkable. The need of a fast bowler to replace Arthur Fielder, however, has been the county's chief drawback. Woolley did all that was expected of him with both bat and ball—which is high praise indeed—and Faiserviceproved a tower of strength to his side, while little Freeman, with his peculiar type of attack, ably demonstrated that he is capable of troubling the best of batsmen.

Yet another man who has played a prominent part in the Hop County's success is James Seymour, who, incidentally, is to take his benefit in one of the Canterbury matches next season. One of the best batsmen turned out by the famous Tonbridge nursery, Seymour has done wonderful work for his county since 1902. On his day he is a most attractive and taking batsman, and as a fielder exceptionally keen, especially in the slips, where on one occasion he took six wickets in one innings against the South Africans in 1904.

Yorkshire's New Talent.

Yorkshire's new talent has been the feature of a season that will long be remembered. Gradually but surely they have built up a side worthy of upholding the best traditions of the county. Holmes and Sutcliffe have proved themselves a first wicket pair who will rank with the best of famous Yorkshire cricketers while in bowling they have also discovered much talent, including Abram Waddington, who has made himself feared on all kinds of wickets. While giving praise to the younger members, however, the skill of their veterans must not be overlooked. It would appear that such wonders as Wilfrid Rhodes and George Hirst will never retire from the game. For twenty-one years Rhodes has been making records with both bat and ball for his county. He was the first to secure his 100 wickets this season, and has once again exceeded the thousand runs. He, George Hirst, and Denton have undoubtedly played a great part in their side's triumphant time.

RHINE ARMY RIFLE MEETING.

The Rhine Army Rifle Meeting will be held at Drove, about five miles south of Duren, from Sept. 8th to 13th, both days inclusive. There is an extensive programme of competitions (individual and team) comprising revolver, Lewis gun and light Hotchkiss and machine gun and heavy Hotchkiss events.

WHO HAS WON?

Great Fight Result Eagerly Awaited.

OLYMPIA'S "GREATEST EVER."

All roads led to Olympia last night when Mr. Cochran staged his gigantic boxing programme; never before in England have so many boxing stars figured in one bill. Until the details come through to-day there will be much speculation, as to the result of the Beckett-McGoorty fight, though the consensus of opinion probably is that the Englishman should have won by reason of his formidable advantage in weight. Betting had been slightly in favour of Beckett, but it was anticipated that there would be an alteration before the fight with Mr. Fitzgerald's (McGoorty's backer) arrival. It is the kind of fight in which anything might happen; McGoorty is an old hand and master of every ringcraft device and consequently his chances cannot be too readily discounted.

In the case of the Townley-Fulton contest the great physical advantages of the latter is a factor for consideration and it has been argued that the Englishman, fit and well though he is, could not be expected to overcome so big an obstacle. Townley, however, is a boxer of great promise of whom we shall have heard by no means the last word, even though he did find last night's task too big for him.

Coming to the smaller men, Basham was reported to be boxing as brilliantly as ever, which is saying a great deal, and suggests that Charles found the task of staying the full distance a difficult one.

ENGLISH RACING.

Saintly Maude wins again at Lewes.

Roundean Plate:—1, Saintly Maude (9—4 on); 2, Ma Petite (9—4); Light Charge (20—1).

Sussex Handicap:—1, The Square (5—2); 2, Will 'o the Wisp (5—2); 3, The Gunyah (5—2).

Ashcombe Handicap:—1, Clipstone (4—1); 2, Tagrag (13—8) and Love Note dead heat.

JOCKEY SUSPENDED.

Owing to Patlander's bad display in the Wigan Welter Handicap, W. Smyth, the jockey, has been suspended by the stewards for the remainder of the meeting. The matter has been referred to the Stewards Jockey Club.

Lewes Racecourse Drawbacks.

Always on the qui vive to study their patrons, visitors to the Silver Ring at Lewes this week will find a new number board, an innovation that will be greatly appreciated. One of the drawbacks of the Lewes racecourse is the tortuous ride from the station to the course. It invariably happens that those who have paid the extortionate fares have to get out and walk after going about half-way, owing to punctures, etc. Mr Catacart states that he hopes by the spring to have completed a new road from the station to the course.

BOOM IN ATHLETICS.

Amateur Sport never more Flourishing.

Such a plethora of meetings as have taken place during the past few weeks one can scarcely recall to mind in any previous year. Mid-week gatherings, as well as Saturday fixtures have been held in abundance, and the pessimists, who were continually asserting, during the war, that athletics were dead, must be agreeably surprised. Never was amateur sport in a more flourishing condition than at present. Thanks to the Army many unattached men have been attracted to the sport, as a glance through the returns will show, and the ruling bodies only require to work on the right lines to place the British nation once again at the top in athletic matters. That desirable state of things can hardly be expected at the Antwerp Games next July, but with work of the proper kind a different tale may be told in 1924.

A Foxhill Double.

In addition to the monetary value attached to the victories, Mr. James White and his trainer Cottrill would derive some pleasure from the triumphs of Sea Imp and Sans Atout at Haydock Park, as both were born within hail of the Newton-le-Willows track.

THE LAST MATCH.

Cologne Post Cup Final on Sunday.

LINDENTHAL THE VENUE.

The last and what promises to be the most exciting match in the "Cologne Post" Cricket Cup Competition takes place next Sunday at the Cricket Ground, Lindenthal, play commencing at 10.30 a.m. Everything is being done to get the ground in the pink of condition. Refreshments can be obtained from the N.A.C.B., on the ground.

As yet the finalists are not known, but the four teams remaining in the competition are:—

93rd Bde. R.G.A.
Lowland Div. M.T. Coy.
17th Lancers
29th Bn. M.G.C.

The semi-finals take place to-day and to-morrow at the 7th Squadron R.A.F. Ground, Mulheim, and, as given in our columns yesterday, the details are as follows:—

To-day, 3rd September
93rd Bde. R.G.A. v. Lowland Div. M.T. Coy.

To-morrow, 4th September
17th Lancers v. 29th Bn. M.G.C.

Both matches commence at 10.30 a.m. Neutral umpires will officiate. To reach the ground take the Berg.-Gladbach car from the Dom which runs within 100 yards of the pitch.

COLOGNE NORTHERN LEAGUE.

29th M.G.C. meet 1/6th West Yorks in Final.

The 29th Machine Gun Battalion and the 1/6th West York R. tied for top place in the Cologne Northern League, both having sustained one defeat; it was consequently necessary for a deciding game to be played. This took place at Blucher Park on Monday.

Both battalions regarded the day as a special holiday and two motor lorries conveyed the Machine Gunners team and its enthusiastic supporters to the Yorks ground. The glorious surroundings of Blucher Park, the ideal condition and the great crowd of spectators promised an enjoyable afternoon, and so it turned out, for a more sporting and exciting game could scarcely be.

The Machine Gunners batted first and the Yorks bowlers quickly disposed of the first five wickets, but Lieut. Astill, playing splendid cricket, helped considerably to turn the tide with his brilliant innings of 39. The best partnership of the afternoon was seen, when Major Harding (33 not out) and Lieut. Archibald (28) put on 52 for the eight wicket. The innings closed for 146.

After an interval for tea, the Yorks went to the wicket and their opening looked full of promise. After the first wicket fell, however, only Capt. Rees (27 not out) made anything like a stand against the deadly bowling of Lieut. Astill. The last wicket fell with the score at 77. Lieut. Astill, the Leicestershire county player, claimed seven wickets for 21 runs. The 29th Machine Gun Battalion team meet the 17th Lancers in the semi-final round when another great game is anticipated.

174 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

Creditable record in "Cologne Post" Competition.

During the competition for the "Cologne Post" Cup, 174 Siege Battery R.G.A. by consistent good play succeeded in topping the Euskirchen League, winning 25 matches out of 25. They were unbeaten until Saturday when they fell before the Lowland Divisional M.T. Company in the eliminating round. The final averages for the season, which included Saturday's match, prove conclusively that it is to the bowling and not to the batting that the battery owes its extraordinarily good record. Bdr. Graham and Bdr. Frost have both taken 63 wickets for about three times that number of runs, their averages being 2.95 and 2.96 respectively.

The following is the analysis:—

Batting.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

"Pedlars'" Reappearance.

The Stadt Theatre, Bonn, was crowded to its full capacity on Monday when the "Pedlars" commenced their week's show there. After an absence of a few weeks the party made their re-appearance with an entirely new show introducing several new songs and dances. The first half of the programme was particularly bright and the concluding farcical sketch entitled "The Secret" brought down the house. 'Erb (Fred Weedon) was funnier than ever, while the other characters were admirably portrayed.

Choice of plays.

Whether or not Lieut. Percy displays the happiest judgment in his selection of plays for the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, has recently been a prolific topic of conversation among the company's many friends. In consequence of the numerous arguments against the proposed performance of "Abraham Lincoln" it has now been decided that "Strife" will be played instead on the 6th October. There will be a stage crowd needed and there are five small parts still to be filled. Any member of the Rhine Army who is ambitious to act should get into touch with Mr. Percy at the Amusements Office, Cologne.

Delightful Dance at Westhoven.

There were very gay scenes at the Herrenhaus, Westhoven, last Friday evening, when a large number of officers and ladies assembled at the invitation of Lieut.-Col. J.D.P. Wheatley and Mrs. Wheatley. The good floor and the excellent music provided by the orchestra of the London Divisional Concert Party made the dancing most enjoyable; the beautiful grounds were decorated with bunting and lanterns, and many of the dancers enjoyed a stroll in the open-air during the evening. The guests included all the officers of the London D.A.C., of which unit Col. Wheatley is the commanding officer, representatives of the Navy and many arms of the junior service, together with their lady friends. Everything needful for the enjoyment of all had been thoughtfully provided, so that there is little wonder that the efforts of the host and hostess to give their guests a good time met with such signal success.

"Helen with the High Hand."

"Helen with the High Hand," which was produced at the Deutsches Theatre, Cologne, on Monday by the Rhine Army Dramatic Company, falls slightly short of the standard achieved by this talented company. For what reason it is difficult to say. Adapted from Arnold Bennett's novel by Richard Price, the comedy is well written and embraces all the ingredients of an entertaining story, including, of course, plenty of the affairs of Cupid. By way of a change, Lt. S.E. Percy has but a very small part. This is perhaps unfortunate, since an opportunity is lost for the display of this artiste's undoubted ability. Of the ladies, most work falls to the lot of Miss Frances Chisholm who, although a comparatively newcomer to the Dramatic Company, has established herself a warm favourite among devotees of the Deutsches Theatre. As Helen, she was delightful, and acted with a freshness and vigour that added considerably to her reputation.

A Difficult Part.

Lt. C. Spiegelhalter, as James Ollerenshaw, played a difficult part with conspicuous success and Major V.T.R. Ford, D.S.O., was a particularly strong Andrew Wilbraw. With her customary sweetness and daintiness, Miss Gabriel Paul submitted Lillian Swetman while Miss Shirley King took full advantage of her opportunities as Mrs. Proctor. With whatever character she is entrusted, Miss Inez Bensusan is invariably strikingly successful and it certainly can be said of her that on Monday in a double part, as Mrs. Butt and Georgina, she well maintained this reputation.

Lieut. Linford (the gardener) Lieut. D. A. Onions (the foremen), Sgt. T. J. Broke (first voice) and Pte. J. H. Hitchins (second voice) combined to make up a really good caste. It is difficult to indicate exactly the weak point in the production, but, as this is not so obviously apparent as to remove the effort from the category of thoroughly enjoyable entertainments, a visit to the Deutsche Theatre can be safely recommended. As stage manager, Sgt. T. G. Broke did his work remarkable well. The play is to be continued for the remainder of the week.

"The Green Diamonds."

The Concert Party of the 9th D.L.I., "The Green Diamonds" commenced their tour of the Southern Division on Monday night with a performance at Dabringhausen. The Concert Hall of the 29th M.G.C. was filled to its utmost extent, and the show revealed the party in the gayest of moods. The concerted items were a special feature of the programme, the brightest of these being "The Gay Seaside," in which "Dolly" (Donald Chapman) was a dainty flapper. Geoffrey Greatham, who is shortly to be demobilized, was especially good in his encore number "Oh! Damsel I love you!" his impersonation of Harry Tate in the sketch "Motoring" being also excellent. H. Allison, a new acquisition to the party, has a good baritone voice; he sang "The Great Red Dawn" and "The old fashioned house" withpleasing effect. H. Stevens displayed versatility and good comedy talent in his comic conjuring and put a wealth of feeling into his monologue "The Whitest Man I Know." Lt. Emberson's humourous turn was highly appreciated, and the sketch "Motoring" was brimful of mirth and merriment. The other artistes, C. Milburn (tenor), E. Harris (pianist) contributed their full share to the success of the evening. The stage management of N. Rutter was as good as ever, while N. Davis's lighting effects were a great asset to the show.

JACQUES.

New London Golf Club.

For some time past nearly all the Southern golf clubs have had full memberships, week-end visitors have been discouraged, and entrance fees and subscriptions have gone up 100 per cent. One or more courses close to London are urgently needed, and it is good to hear that a new metropolitan course is in the offing "down Esdon way." This will be very convenient for London golfers, and will certainly relieve the present congestion of unattached players.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Back to France.

G. Clout, who has been riding in Italy this season, has returned to France.

American Boxing.

At Philadelphia Bennie Leonard, the light-weight champion, easily defeated Irish Patsy Cline of New York, at the Phillies' ball park.

Donoghue's Fall.

Donoghue was injured last week by a fall at York and at once left to receive a London specialist's attention. Two bones in his wrist were broken.

W. Sanderson's New Abode.

Walter Sanderson, private trainer to the late Mr. Larnach for a number of years, has taken Osborne House Stables, Newmarket, and is setting up as a public trainer.

Serpentine Swimming.

In the Lake, Hyde Park, W. E. Bayly 26sec. start, won the final race of the Serpentine Swimming Club for the Earl of Lonsdale's trophies. R. F. Lawes was second and F. Dalla third.

Like Father Like Son.

It always augurs well for a stallion when he stamps his progeny with his own likeness. This Glenesky has done in the case of Gleneskaki, although the latter has not as yet assumed the heavy body of his sire.

Untroubled by War.

Bradford will have their first experience of premier division football untroubled by war and war's alarms.

Sold and Retained.

Daddy Longlegs was sold to Sir Abe Bailey for 500 guineas and Polismen retained at 250 guineas after they had won at York.

Doherty as Golfer.

It is as a lawn tennis player that H. L. Doherty will always be remembered, but he came to be so good as a golfer that it is quite likely that if he had not been champion of the courts he would have been champion of the links.

Kent Cricketer's Will.

Mr. James Hugh Edenale Whitehead, of Wilmington Hall, near Dartford, Kent, who played cricket for the Kent Second XI., and in 1912 represented Oxford against Cambridge in the hurdles, who died on March 13 from disease contracted on active service, has left £2,334 12s. 10d.

Aussies Farewell.

Prior to their departure for Australia a farewell dinner is to be given to the Australian Imperial Forces cricket team. It is to take place at the Café Monico on Monday, Sept. 15. Lord Harris will preside, supported by General Birdwood and others.

£300 to Charities.

The receipts at Preston North End's three practice games realised £300, which will be handed over to local charities.

At the Ring.

At the Ring, Charlie Woodman, of Battersea, beat Len Sexton, of Maesteg, in the eighth round of a twenty-round contest. Sexton retired.

Dominion for St. Leger.

Dominion may run in the Breeders' St. Leger at Derby next week, prior to competing in the last of the season's classics.

Cause for Pride.

Reading supporters should be proud of their team this season, seeing that every professional except one served King and country overseas during the war.

P.O.W. Jockey.

The American jockey Caral, who was a prisoner of war, has accepted an engagement to ride in France for M. Wertheimer. Before the war Caral rode in America and Austria-Hungary.

Yorkshire Record.

Yorkshire have only lost thrice this season, Lancashire having prevailed at Manchester the second week in June, Nottingham winning at Sheffield at the end of the same month, and then came the triumph of Sussex.

Billy Marchant Wins.

At the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, on Tuesday night, Billy Marchant, of Salford, beat Idris Jones, of Ammanford, on points in a twenty round comtest.

Middlesbrough's Break.

Middlesbrough is one of the clubs that closed down after the 1914-15 campaign, nor did they resume operations again until after the armistice was signed.

A big Nucleus.

Blackburn Rovers will not open with such strength as will be at their disposal later on. They have a big nucleus of pre-war players, but the missing include Latheron, the international inside-left who went under in France.

Wednesday Disappointed.

Sheffield Wednesday have been greatly disappointed so far in their efforts to induce J. Blair to sign on once more. The famous back, whose transfer cost the club a lot of money, declines to return to the Wednesday for £6 per week.

New Blood.

Manchester United will have to depend largely upon players who are new to first division football. The majority of the oldtime regulars have gone, W. Meredith being among those who have not appended their signature to the necessary forms.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Wives and the Canteens.

Officers and other ranks who wish their wives to make use of N.A.C.B. Canteens will apply to the Headquarters of their unit or formation administering the Canteen, and will be supplied with a numbered registration card, which will be signed by husband and on which will be entered the number, rank unit and formation of the husband, the name of his wife, and the number of the Canteen which is to be used. Detail purchases may be made by the wife of the individual only to whom the card is issued. Cards are not transferable under any circumstances, and will be produced on demand. A list of all persons registered at a Canteen will be issued to the N.C.O. in charge by the unit administering the Canteen. This list will shew the numbers of the registration cards and the name of the holders.

Increased travelling.

A striking commentary upon the increased circulation permitted by the authorities is to be found in the large piles of luggage to be seen at the railway station with the departure of a train. Earlier on scarcely any luggage was to be seen on the sidings, but now with commercial people and others going to and fro, the porters are called upon to handle many more packages than formerly. A curious fact is that the majority of the portmanteaus are straight from the warehouse judging by their new appearance. Is it that there has been little travel in Germany during the war, or was the manufacture of such articles interfered with? Judging from English prices for such conveniences the German must be paying dearly for this essential to his travel.

Order Everywhere.

Some time ago I started to walk along the main road from Godesberg to Bonn, writes a correspondent. Soon, however, I came across a footpath leading into the woods with a finger-post "Nach Bonn." I decided I would take this way as it promised to be more secluded and consequently pleasanter for a quiet stroll. On penetrating some distance I was quite amazed to find a network of footpaths properly kept and elaborately sign-posted leading to different places. The German evidently isn't of the same opinion as Byron who says "There is a pleasure in the pathless woods." He does not like to see Nature take her own wild course. He prefers to shape her according to his own orderly mind. Of course it may be that these paths are made with the idea of keeping pedestrians off the main traffic routes, but when I go for a quiet stroll in the country I prefer not to be confronted at every turning with sign-posts and notices telling me where to go and where not to go.

Beware.

Apropos the discussion on a means of recognising British civilians, now resident in Germany, the following rather amusing incident occurred. Two young Guards boarded a tramcar in the vicinity of Solingen. After a somewhat ostentatious entry, one found some difficulty in obtaining a seat, until a lady kindly obliged by making room. She replied in good English to the lad's profuse thanks and a conversation ensued. The other young soldier, totally unaware of his companion's conversation, proceeded to pass some caustic comments upon the travellers in general within hearing of the lady. His friend, whose savoir faire was considerably shaken, now tried every available means to broach another subject, but notwithstandig his endeavours, the conversation once more veered round to the former disagreeable topic. Matters came to a climax when personal comments were passed regarding the afore-mentioned lady and consequently the unfortunate young soldier was told that the lady could speak English! The surprised soldier left the car, although vanquished, much wiser.

Murdered English.

Horrible linguistic murders are now a common occurrence in Rhineland, but as an outstanding example of the attempts of the German to ingratiate himself with us — and, incidentally, to entice spare pfennigs from our pockets — the following, extracted from a "Fun City" fortune-telling machine in Cologne, is worth studying:—

"You are not blinded dy the charms of wealth. You are satisfied with nothing to live on, not even a tin of sully which has sen beter days, once used for buildig houses.

"You will not be exceedingly wealthy, never fear while you have twopence, halfpenny and a bunch of keys in your pocket. You will be the envy of many persons but never mind, for jealousy is only skin deep.

"Your thingamegig annonces that you ewill liyer forever, if nut in this world, then in that beautifuplace beneaath-where thereis no need for stokers.

"Yourtace is you r fortune. Without it where would yon be. Should your charming grace ever ezeed your srperfluzus hair cured at moment's notice, heavens help the sailors on a night like tis. With apologies to the original."

A Pilgrimage.

At present, many devout Roman Catholics in Rhineland are making their annual pilgrimage to Kevelaer, a market-town with 7000 inhabitants, not far off the Dutch frontier and North-East of Duisburg. It is annually visited by some 100,000 pilgrims, attracted by a small miracle-working figure of the Virgin, exhibited in the hexagonal Gnaden-Kapelle, a structure of 1654. In the town near which the writer is billeted, the people walked to Kevelaer, starting on Sunday, reaching there on Tuesday, while they will return next Saturday. A large waggon accompanied them, carrying their food and kit. Heimbach, an hour's ride from Düren, is also the Mecca of devout Roman Catholics.

Back Home.

The first repatriated German prisoners comprising a party of a thousand reached Cologne early this week from Calais and Ypres, where they had been in British camps. The train, made up of goods vans, was decorated with flowers and greens. The prisoners were accompanied by a party of British soldiers who formed their guard during the last two years and who had asked for permission to bring the Germans home. The men have nothing but praise to offer for their treatment. The Germans who had to travel beyond Cologne took leave of their guards shaking hands and shouting "Good bye."

A Popular Library.

We are glad to hear of the success attending the Y.M.C.A. Central Library, at 44 Friesenstrasse, and hear that a large number of educational and technical books have recently been added to it. Another feature of the extension of this library is the special subscription section. This includes recent publications, both fiction and non-fiction, such as Lord Jellicoe's book on the part played by the Navy in the Great War, Raemaekers Cartoon History of the War, Conrad's "Arrow of Gold," Hugh Walpole's "Jeremy," etc. Subcribers are entitled to borrow one volume at a time for a subscription of 10 marks a month. The most recent publications are reserved for the use of subscribers only. Other books are loaned out on the deposit system. A deposit of 2 or 8 marks, according to the value of the book, is recoverable on the return of the book.

A Cricket Tragedy.

The final between the 29th M.G.C. and the 1/6th West Yorks for the championship of the Northern League at Blucher Park attracted much support. It was a perfect afternoon and the proceedings were graced by the presence of several wives, who were as enthusiastic as the men. The Machine Gunners came in motor lorries from Dabringhausen and it was quite a delightful excursion for them. The West Yorks entertained the visitors to tea. This is one of the delightful features of the League matches and the "Post" has done a great service in stimulating not only the grand old game of cricket, but good fellowship. The game had at least one amusing incident. Lieut. Astill of the M.G.C. made a splendid boundary, the ball fell under the Colonel's chair and caused a havoc for a moment. Subsequently it was found that sticks belonging to the colonel and transport officer were smashed. One of these was presented to the wife of an officer as a souvenir. The usual crowd of civilians gathered on the grounds and the match was stopped at one time to chase away a small boy who was wheeling his baby brother in a hand cart.

Her winsome Way.

Anyone with any experience of Tommy's whims and ways will have learnt that he is to be led, yet will resent being forced to do a thing. An example was furnished at one of the Cologne canteens the other day. Here a queue was being kept in order by a lady member of the canteen staff. There was no pushing; all was calm and orderly and each man was prepared to take his turn. German passers-by watched with evident amazement, that one of the weaker sex could keep in order and quietness a large number of men waiting for cigarettes.

Re-echoes.

For the week ending August 30th No 104 Company Nothern Div. Train, with a ration strength of 77, subscribed £143-15-3 or 11,130 marks by way of War Savings.

THE LIGHTER SIDE.

The Consoler.

Aunt (despondently): "Well, I sha'n't be a nuisance to you very much longer."

Nephew (reassuringly): "Oh, don't talk like that, Auntie. I'm sure you will!"

He "Nailed" him.

A man who had been grossly profiteering spent some of the money on a magnificent diamond ring. Meeting one of his victims he held out the back of his hand, saying:—

"What would you do if you had a ring like this?"

"I would sell it and buy a nail brush," was the prompt reply.

Where Else?

A private was busy shaving himself in the open air beside the barracks, when his sergeant came along.

"Do you always shave outside?" asked the sergeant.

"Of course," answered the private. "Did you think I was hair lined?"

Not So Easy.

New Footman:— "In my last place I always took things fairly easy."

Butler:— "Well, it's different here. They keep everything locked up."

Inappropriate.

The "boys" were coming home, and Slosnton was determined to give them a great reception.

Everybody hung out decorations; there was a triumphal arch and everything.

The band played, the people cheered, and the repatriated soldiers roared with mirth.

"What's the matter?" asked the vicar of a khaki hero, who wept with joy.

The man pointed to the local police station, on which was displayed a banner reading: "Welcome back again."

Sure Signs.

"I want to find an honest man in London," declared the Colonial.

"Easily done," said a friend. "Go to Trafalgar Square, and you'll meet one."

"But how shall I know him?"

"Why the fountains will play when they see him, the lions will roar, and old Nelson will take off his hat."

OF MANY MATTERS.

Bridge Maxims.

Mr. A. E. Manning Foster knows all the technicalities of Auction Bridge, and players will find his recently published book on the game extremely entertaining. His "Maxims and Reflections" may be commended to players of Bridge and many other games:—

In Auction Bridge, the best player is he who makes the fewest mistakes.

The difference between the good player and the bad is that the good player knows when he has made a mistake.

The player who finds fault most generally knows least.

Those who know don't talk. Those who talk don't know.

The onlooker who sees three hands always has done the right thing.

The apologetic partner, who is always excusing himself, is almost as trying as the aggressive one.

Don't carelessly play small cards incorrectly under the delusion that it does not matter.

Don't say, "That is very kind of you," if your opponents play a card which just suits you. It is quite annoying enough to make a mistake, without having it rubbed in by the adversaries.

Don't complain about your bad luck. No one really cares.

Don't explain to the table exactly why you played your hand as you did. No doubt you played it brilliantly, but even so, to call attention to it rather detracts from its brilliance. Besides it may, and probably will, bore both your partner and your opponents.

The Unpopular wasp.

Several deaths from wasp stings have been recorded recently and every year many people die in this way.

Wasps, however, have their uses. They are the enemies of all kinds of flies and caterpillars, of which they destroy enormous numbers. They have their enemies themselves in a certain type of beetle and in man. Man's grievance against the wasp, apart from his sting, is the tribute that he levies on orchards, and particularly on fairly large private fruit gardens, especially those situated in wild parts of the country near brooks. It is probable that the loss in private fruit gardens is greater than in commercial orchards, because owners of the latter understand the importance of killing queens early in the year. In wild country wasps will come from considerable distances to attack fruit, and in such cases it may be difficult to find their nests. In some years they destroy absolutely the pear and apple crops, eating the interior of the fruit until only the skin is left. Often, also, they partly eat the fruit, remaining inside after it falls. This has been the cause of many injuries, especially among children.

Wasps sometimes attack weak stocks of bees, and beekeepers take various precautions against this, the most usual one being merely to close the door of the hive, so as to leave what is known as a one-bee space, which the bees can defend against the attacking wasps.

The age of Cannon.

The fixed tube which uses powder to blow a missile from its mouth has seen only six centuries of existence. All the evidence we have, indicates that the gun had its birth in Europe and not until after the year 1300 A.D.

So far as we know the gun had no inventor. The honour has been ascribed to several, but their title to it has not borne even casual scrutiny. It seems to have been a slow growth, perhaps, from a preceding toy of similar form. The squib of paper or wood, if made fast, would shoot a stone a little distance. Then by making the tube larger and stronger some man or woman saw the chance to convert an innocent plaything into a dangerous weapon. When the thing was done, they called it a cannon.

This took place prior to 1326; for in that year the Italian republic of Florence, as its records show, ordered several metal cannon, including balls for them, to be made at the public expense, for the defence of the State. This is the earliest reference to firearms that has yet come to light, and shows that guns had then passed the experimental stage of their growth.

In England there is undoubted evidence of the possession and use of guns in 1327, one year after the Italian guns were ordered; and in 1338, when Edward III. invaded France, he took a few cannon and their ammunition with him. We are left with the strong conviction, therefore, that the gun as a weapon sprang into use during the period between 1267 and 1326. But it was in a great battle which took place about the middle of the 14th century that the cannon, the first firearm, made its bow to the world.

A Terrible Weapon.

Some very interesting experiments and demonstrations have been carried out with the new Beardmore-Farquhar light machine gun. It is claimed that it is the lightest machine gun, that it is the cheapest to manufacture and to use, that it cannot jamb, that it has perfect breech locking, that it is well protected against the entrance of dust and mud, that it can be used without any oil, and is, therefore, not liable to go out of action through freezing at very low temperatures or high altitudes, and that the automatic mechanism is not affected by the heat of the barrel, and will continue to function, even though the barrel be kept red hot by continuous rapid firing.

Colonel Farquhar demonstrated with continuous rapid fire that the gun is capable of firing at a rate of 489 rounds per minute. An examination of the target showed that in emptying one rotary magazine he put 75 shots out of 81 on to the target. The inventor also showed how to fire single shots and how to change from single shot to automatic fire.

The machine gun which he used had already fired over 20,000 rounds, and Colonel Farquhar declared that although the gun had been thoroughly tested under all sorts of conditions, and that every effort had been made to cause it to jamb, the gun had, in fact, never yet jambed. indeed, it was impossible for it to do so.

TRADE BAN REMOVED.

GERMANY FREE TO SEND GOODS INTO ENGLAND.

INFRINGEMENT OF PEACE TREATY.

ENGLAND OPEN.

REMOVAL OF BAN ON FOREIGN TRADE.

On Tuesday the embargo on imports nto Britain was lifted with the exception of a few varieties of goods which are on the reserved list. These include dyes, chemicals, drugs, perfumes, optical and scientific glass and instruments, gas mantles, magnetos, hosiery, needles and gauges.

Meanwhile British toymakers are making strong representations to the Board of Trade for the protection of their industry which was established during the war and might be seriously injured if free imports from abroad are permitted. The outstanding feature of the present situation is that German manufacturers are flooding the country with circulars pointing out that owing to the low value of the mark they can now offer goods at dirt-cheap prices as compared with British manufacturing costs.

An official of the Free Entries Department of the Board of Trade said that nothing has yet actually been imported as the result of the removal of the embargo. There has not been enough time for business arrangements to be made, orders to be placed and cargoes to be shipped. The only difference noted is in the passing of goods of suspected origin through neutral countries. Peviously goods were detained as suspect whereas now they pass without question. No German goods are known to have come through, but dyes, others than those derived from coal tar, are on the way. One consignment from Switzerland was cleared on Monday.—[British Wireless.]

INFRINGING THE PEACE TREATY.

The Supreme Allied Council has decided to send to the German Government an energetic note pointing out the contradiction existing between article 61 of the German Constitution and the Treaty of Versailles, article 80 of which forbids Germany to mix up in Austrian affairs.

The Supreme Council demands the German Government to suppress within a fortnight the said article 61 of the new constitution, otherwise the Allies will be forced to occupy new territories on the Rhine.

The text of this note was delivered to the German delegation at Versailles on Tuesday afternoon.

FRANCE AND FIUME.

The accuracy of the recent announcement by certain Italian papers to the effect that the results of the enquiry relative to the incidents at Fiume were favourable to the Italians is formally denied by the French Government. It is declared at Paris that when the report of the inquiry is publisned it will be easy to demonstrate that it is favourable to the French. French opinion holds that the Italian Government is in no way implicated in the publication of the incorrect information and it is recalled that the Italian delegation at the Peace Conference made confidential statements which in no way coincide with information published in the Italian papers.

AN UTOPIAN RESOLUTION.

The "International Peace Council" sitting at Berne has adopted a resolution acknowledging that the responsibility for the outbreak of war in 1914 rests upon the German and Austrian Governments. It calls upon Germany and Austria to hasten the publication of all relevant documents; to prevent any distortion of historical truth in the teaching at school; to bring to the knowledge of their populations by official announcements and persistent propaganda the violations of international law and the cruelties committed by the German Army during the war, which wrought the gravest moral prejudice to the whole German people, and to secure by the energetic force of public opinion the loyal execution of the Peace Treaty, especially of the articles concerning reparation and disarmament. (Havas).

MINERS PAY FOR SCHOOL MEALS.

Satisfaction was expressed at a meeting of the Nottinghamshire Education Authority at the action of the Miners' Association, which during a strike at Worksop undertook to defray the cost of feeding the school children in the district. Meals were provided for the children for many days.

PRINCE'S NEXT TOUR.

The Prince of Wales will visit Australia in May, 1920.

His Royal Highness will spend two months in the Commonwealth.

OUR BUSY PREMIER.

HOW HE IS SPENDING HIS HOLIDAYS.

Mr. Lloyd George, the Prime Minister, will only remain for about another fortnight at the villa he has rented at Hennequeville on the Normandy Coast. He has accepted provisionally an invitation to address a Brotherhood meeting at the City Temple about the middle of September and if he is back in time he will keep this engagement.

Meantime, though nominally on holiday, the Prime Minister is devoting close personal attention to the many anxious problems of the Government, especially those which concern national retrenchment, the imperative need for increased output and the industrial and economic situation generally. He has already had conferences in Normandy with the Ministers responsible for Housing, Transport and Agriculture and is coordinating the work of all three departments with a view of furthering those practical suggestions outlined in his recent speech.

In addition to the Domestic policy, the Prime Minister is in direct telephonic communication with the Peace delegates in Paris and is kept informed of all the latest developments. On Sunday last Signor Tittoni, the Italian Foreign Minister, lunched with Mr. Lloyd George, when it is understood that the Adriatic question was fully discussed.

REPENTED IN HASTE.

Sixty-two disillusioned young French brides, says the Intransigeant, have returned from New York to France in the mail steamer St. Ola. They had married American soldiers, but found life in the United States unsuited to their temperaments.

The strenuous existence in their new surroundings deprived marriage of its charm. Their husbands, once out of uniform and back in the whirl of business, became too much absorbed to give them the amount of attention they needed. So they felt, says the Paris journal, that their only resource was divorce and return to the country in which their sex is fully appreciated by the other and is not placed second to prosaic money-making.

NEGROES ASK FOR GERMAN COLONIES.

Among American negroes there is an agitation, reflected in a demand before the Foreign Relations Committee, that under the League of Nations specific rights shall be granted. The negroes petition that the German African colonies shall be divided between Egypt, Abyssinia, and Liberia. With this proposal comes news that in Dublin (Georgia) several negro churches and lodge rooms have been burnt by whites. In one church a negro, Eli Cooper, was lynched. This is the district where, several months ago, the aged negro Berry Washington was lynched after shooting a young white man who, it was stated, had made advances to young negro women, members of his family. Judge Graham then denounced the proceedings in strong terms.

TRADE FROM GERMAN PORTS.

The British lines comprising the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, British India Steam Navigation Company, and the Well Line, will in September and onwards, have steamers loading in Hamburg, Bremen (if sufficient inducement offers), and Rotterdam, in connection with their services to India. The Peninsular and Oriental and British India Companies will serve both sides of India and the Persian Gulf, and the Well Line Colombo, Madras, and Calcutta. Antwerp is already served by these companies, and this connection will be sustained and augmented.

AN AMBITIOUS CONDUCTOR.

A conductor of a motor-omnibus on Saturday said that his ambition is to own his own vehicle.

"As soon as I can get a man to come into partnership and to drive I am going to get my own motor-omnibus," he said. "I should be my own conductor, and I am certain I could make £800 a year. Look at the money made by the chars-à-banc at the seaside! That is only a summer business, and I could get a full load of passengers in London all the year round."

"You would be the first 'pirate' motor-omnibus?" he was asked.

"I should not be a 'pirate," he replied. "Those good old days have gone. I would play the game straight and charge the usual fares. I could run on what route I wished and do long runs into the country during the week-end."

DOUBLE RAINBOW.

KING APPROVES THE NEW VICTORY MEDAL.

His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to recognize by the grant of a distinctive medal the services rendered by His Majesty's military forces in theatres of war since the 5th August, 1914.

The medal, which will be designated "The Victory Medal," will be identical in design with that issued by the other Allied and Associated Powers for service in theatres of war, and will obviate the interchange of Allied Commemorative war medals.

The medal will be in bronze, and will be attached to the riband by a ring.

The riband will be red in the centre with green and violet on each side, shaded to form the colours of two rainbows.

No clasp will be issued with the medal.

Provided the claims are approved by the competent military authorities, the medal will be granted to all officers, warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the British, Dominion, Colonial and Indian Forces, members of women formations who have been enrolled under a direct contract of service for service with His Majesty's Imperial Forces, civil medical practitioners, nursing sisters, nurses and others employed with military hospitals, who actually served on the establishment of a unit in a theatre of war and within certain defined periods.

Instructions as to the submission of claims and the disposal of the medals will be issued in due course.

HABEN SIE GUT GESCHLAFEN?

"When travelling, insist upon a double bed in a quiet room. Be sure that it is not over the kitchen, or near a motor-garage; or facing a clock that sounds the quarter-hours, or within a girl's stone's throw of a fowl-house. A double bed is better than a single, a French box-bed with a not too thick hair-mattress better than any other. The hip and shoulder find their places and are not benumbed as on a hard bed.

Tie two paper-clips to either end of a cord seven or eight feet long. Clip the top of the counterpane with one clip and a soft weight with the other. If not sleeping after fifteen minutes, pull the counterpane over your head. This induces that long even breathing natural to the approach of sleep, as may be noticed in pigs. As one dozes off, the hand holding the counterpane relaxes, and the weight pulls it down, so that one is again breathing fresh air. I have found this unfailing when all else fails.

Have a pair of blinders made from a double thickness of black silk. These just cover the eyes, with a cut for the nose, and are held in place by a broad elastic band. Hang these on the bed-post, and if the morning light comes in too early, put them on.

In the case of objectionable noises like snoring, cut two small pieces of pure waxcandle and place one in each ear. These afford almost perfect immunity, even from pianos and the song of earliest birds."

Some may think that sleep is dearly bought on such terms.

DISMISSED WITH IGNOMINY.

Seventeen men of the 3rd West Yorkshire Regiment are to be dismissed with ignominy from the Army and to receive each nine months' hard labour by sentence of a General Court-martial which was recently held at Devizes. In all 18 men were tried for various military offences, the principal charge being that of refusing to parade in fighting equipment.

The men did not deny that they disobeyed the order of Captain Chance, M.C., D.C.M., to parade in fighting order. The excuse given for refusal was that they had had the heart taken out of them by the company sergeant-major, who, it way alleged, called them "bastards"—a phrase which the President said no soldier would put up with. The sergeant-major denied using this word; he said he called them Bolshevists. He is a soldier with 23 years' service, and has the good conduct medal.

One of the men was charged with inciting 200 men to rush the guard, but there was no corroboration, and this charge was dismissed. Another man was charged with suggesting that they should use the straw palliasses in the camp for the purpose of burning down the guardroom. This was denied, and he was acquitted on this charge.

AN OILY VICARAGE.

Extraordinary happenings are reported from the rectory of Swanton Novers, in Norfolk. Ever since August 8th oil has been dripping from the ceilings and walls of the house and has also been found in the well close by. No one is in the least able to explain the cause. The mystery is intensified by the fact that sometimes it is petrol, sometimes paraffin and sometimes even methylated spirit that appears.

SALMON POACHERS BUSY.

The illegal capture of salmon, grilse, and trout in the River Tweed is strongly commented upon in the Tweed Commissioners' annual report. A very large quantity of fish has been taken from the river by illegal methods and more than 120 nets have been seized.

THE WORST OVER.

MAN'S PROPER PLACE AS MAN.

Speaking at a conference on Monday Mr. G.N. Barnes, the Labour Cabinet Minister, talked of Labour and Religion. He said the workshop was becoming a different place from what it used to be. The best time of his own life was spent in the workshop. He had worked for greater leisure and a greater share of this worlds goods for the workman and had found joy and satisfaction in working for these things. He had never believed that materialistic doctrines of rancour and illwill would put things right. The workman felt that there was something in life which mere wealth and possessions could not afford. Many regarded the labour problem as being almost exclusively a wages and stomach question. It was nothing of the kind. It was a question of man's proper place as man and not merely as a wage earner. Common sense was asserting itself over the materialistic forces that had been gathering way during the last few years. He confessed that six or eight months ago he was a little alarmed at the prospect but he thought we had now got over the worst. We had got to rally all the forces which were disposed to lift life and labour to a higher plane.

Personal Tribute to Botha.

Later in his speech Mr. Barnes paid the following eloquent tribute to the late General Botha. "I knew he was a man who could fight, if need be on the battlefield, for what he thought was right but he was essentially a man of peace, large hearted, lenient and magnanimous. A few months ago he reminded a number of us who were meeting him in Council that the day was the anniversary of the signing of Peace after the South Africa.. war and he applied the lesson to the situation in which we were then placed. His influence was for doing the right thing before using the strong arm. He was modest and simple as I have found nearly all great souls to be, and the kind of man we need to make the world a better place in which to live."

BOTHA'S INSPIRING WORDS.

Most impressive scenes were witnessed at the funeral of General Botha. His sucessor in the premiership, General Smuts, voiced an eloquent tribute to the "greatest son of South Africa." He said that only recently Botha had returned to South Africa more convinced than ever that salvation and healing would only be found in a new spirit of humanity and in forgiving and forgetting old differences and wrongs.

In the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles on June 28th when the Peace Treaty was signed, said Smuts, Botha wrote on the agenda paper the following words: "God's judgment will be applied with justice to all peoples under the sun and we shall persevere in prayer that they may be applied by mankind in charity and peace and christian spirit. To-day I think back to May 31st 1902, the date of the Treaty of Vereeniging."

SMUGGLED ROYAL JEWELS.

The trial of persons charged with smuggling into Southern Sweden jewels and other valuables, to the value of millions of marks, belonging to German royalties, began on Tuesday at Trelleborg. The accused are the Countess Anna Solms Wildenfels and Dr. von Stockhausen. They maintain that Prince Wied asked them to carry the valuables to a neutral country and they thought transport by aeroplane the safest method, and say they did not wish to commit any fraud. The police, however, declare that on being asked they denied having any jewels.

It is stated that the jewels are worth about £400,000. The prosecution refuses to accept the explanation offered and claims confiscation of the valuables.

"WIGS ON THE GREEN."

Arising out of disturbances which took place after the Nationalist demonstration on August 15th, nine Nationalists and three Unionists were summoned at Londonderry on Tuesday for disorderly conduct. Evidence was given to the effect that defendants formed part of hostile crowds in the Nationalist Section and on two occasions rushed towards the Unionist quarters waving Sinn Fein flags and shouting "up Dublin" "up rebels." The Unionists flaunted Union Jacks and crimson flags at the Nationalists. All the defendan s were bound over to keep the peace.

VALET'S HUGE LEGACY.

The will of the late Lord Michelham has been sworn at two millions pounds sterling. So far as is at present ascertained no charitable gifts are made in the will, which states that large sums were given for charitable purposes during his lifetime, but the testator relies on those benefiting under the will to apply part of their income towards the benefit of charities.

Amongst the bequests are £6000 to his valet, Frank Dyer, £2 a week for life to his coachman and £500 to servants of five years service.

It is stated at the Foreign Office that no confirmation is to hand of the report that German airships which should have been handed over to the Allies have been destroyed. Official enquiry is being made on the subject.

SEAL OF HONOUR.

LABEL FOR PATRIOTIC EMPLOYERS.

A royal proclamation will be issued this week inaugurating a great scheme for the employment of partially disabled soldiers and sailors. Every firm in the Kingdom employing from ten to twenty persons is being invited to engage at least one of the men who have suffered in the country's cause, and bigger firms are being asked to employ at least five per cent. All who patriotically adopt the scheme will be entitled to use on their stationery and advertisements a "seal of honour." Thus the whole of the customers and indeed everyone with whom such firm has dealings will know whether they are doing their bit for the disabled. Further, only those firms who possess this seal of honour will be allowed to appear on the list of Government contractors.

A PARIS WORLD'S FAIR.

A scheme for the erection of a huge building on the banks of the Seine in Paris, in which will be held a permanent exhibition designed to bring together the producers and buyers of the world, has found the support of a French financial corporation. The building, which will be constructed by the Quai de Passy, will probably cost £4,000,000 and in it will he held a continuous World's Fair. The structure will have a floor surface of nearly 2,500,000 square feet.

AIRSHIP FOR COMMERCE.

With a view to economy the Government has decided to curtail the airship programme. Work has already ceased on some of the large rigid vessels now in an advanced state of construction. It is announced that certain airships and airship stations are to be placed at the disposal of interested parties with a view to the commercial development of this type of aircraft. A conference on the subject will take place next week.

SALE OF BARBED WIRE.

The greater part of the barbed wire used in France has been re-coiled by German prisoners and Chinese, and is being sold at a satisfactory price by the Disposal Board of the Ministry of Munitions. Some idea of the immense quantity available may be gathered from the fact that the defences of one town alone included quite 600 miles of wire just before the last German offensive.

A DERRY PROSECUTION.

At Londonderry on Monday James Harking was remanded on the charge of assaulting the military on August 15th when soldiers were on duty on the walls of Derry. Accused mounted the walls and pointed a fully loaded revolver at a group of soldiers but it was dashed out of his hand. Later on he was arrested while in bed and in his room were found thirty rounds of revolver ammunition.

NO POLICE REINSTATEMENTS.

A deputation of citizens, led by Canon Villiers, waited upon the Birmingham Watch Committee yesterday to support a petition in favour of the re-instatement of 120 members of the police force who were dismissed as a consequence of their going out on strike. The Committee came to the decision that on no account could the men be reinstated and pointed out that the men had been warned against being associated with the Police Union.

BELGIAN WOMEN GAZETTED.

A supplement to the London Gazette contains a long list of Belgian subjects, many of them women, "mentioned" by Field-Marshal Earl Haig for "distinguished and gallant services and devotion to duty," while on volunteer service attached to the British Army in France.

Whole families have earned this distinction, and in some cases the honour is posthumous.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A GENERAL.

On Monday Brigadier-General A. H. Ollivant C.M.G., R.A., was found by his valet unconscious in a bedroom of his house in St. James-street. A doctor was called and found him to be suffering from apoplexy, from which he died a few hours later.

SOLDIERS FOR HARVEST WORK.

The War Office announces that the provisions of paragraph 59 of the King's Regulations under which permission may be granted for the employment of soldiers in harvest work are again in force.

Leave for a period of seven days may be granted by Commanding Officers to soldiers for the purpose of haymaking or collecting the harvest, which period may be extended by Commanding Officers at their discretion.

Dr. Dorten, the "President of the Rhineland Republic," has been forbidden by the Americans to enter their zone of occupation without special permission.

CANADA AND PEACE.

THE TASK CONFRONTING THE DOMINION.

The Viceroy of Canada, the Duke of Devonshire, opened the Dominion Parliament at Ottawa on Monday afternoon. As the session was called chiefly for the purpose of ratifying the Peace Treaty it is not expected to last more than two months.

In the speech from the throne reference was made to the visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in the following terms: "In this his first visit to the Dominion the Prince renews his happy association with comrades of the Canadian Army and at the same time undertakes the important duty of making himself acquainted at first hand with the resources and developments of the country and with the ideals and aspirations of the people. The warm and sincere welcome which everywhere greets him is an assurance that those sentiments which united this country with the Motherland and with the other Dominions were never closer or firmer."

The speech pointed out that Parliament had been summoned to consider and ratify the Peace Treaty and added that it was felt that the Treaty ought not to be ratified on behalf of Canada without the approval of Parliament. Referring to the difficult reconstruction period, the speech, said that the labours of reconstruction might be difficult but Canada must undertake them with the same united resolve and inflexible purpose as sustained its efforts during the years of conflict. "ENTERTAINMENT" AT THE ABBEY.

An entirely new form of entertainment for lovers of sacred music has been inaugurated by Mr. Sidney H. Nicholson, organist of Westminster Abbey, who proposes to establish a special choir of boys and men to give week-day renderings of choral works in the Abbey.

The choir, which will be entirely voluntary, will consist of 200 picked voices, and will be usually accompanied by a full professional orchestra. When the orchestra is not present the great organ in the Abbey will provide the music.

"I think it will be a very popular form of entertainment," said Mr. E. S. Roper, Mr. Nicholson's deputy. The desire of a great number of people for sacred music is rarely satisfied. "We hope to begin performances on week-days early in October. Preference will be given to music which is not so well known, such as 'Israel in Egypt', and Bach's 'St. Matthew Passion Music.'"

ROUND THE WORLD BY AIR.

The Northern Aerial Syndicate, of Liverpool, have brought forward an ambitious project providing for airship trips to all parts of the world.

The syndicate have in view a regular system of airships for long and short journeys at a cost estimated at only 4d. per mile. The passage from Liverpool to New York is expected to take two and a half days, and Australia may be reached in seven days.

The proposal is to land large airships from New York at Liverpool, and transfer the passengers for other places to smaller craft.

Negotiations have been completed for the lease of landing grounds at different parts, one being at Kingston-on-Thames.

TRADE UNION CONGRESS.

The Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress met at Glasgow on Tuesday to complete arrangements for next week's congress. The Committee will meet daily to consider the whole agenda in relation to those urgent matters to which time must be devoted. Special emergency resolutions will be drafted so as to give congress the opportunity of dealing with larger matters bearing on the industrial situation.

If this Committee procedure is adopted Congress will concentrate on the discussion of the report, to which a vote of censure may be moved by delegates of the miners and railwaymen, concerning accelerated production and nationali[illegible] of the three basic industries of mining, railways and transport and the policy to be adopted thereon, particularly in reference to mines.

STRIKE ON A STEAMER.

A large steamer which left Swansea on Saturday was brought back to that port only three men being left aboard. When she had got some miles out the firemen struck, and subsequently went ashore at Mumbles. The engineers followed.

The captain landed with the mate in order to send a telegram, one man only being left aboard. A Swansea harbour pilot cutter was signalled and brought the steamer safely back to port.

NO DECIMAL COINAGE.

The Royal Commission which has been inquiring into the decimal system of coinage has completed the taking of evidence, and is now considering its report. This is expected to be shortly presented to the Home Secretary. It is understood that the report arrived at by the Commissioners is non-committal, and that no legislation is likely to result.

SECURITY FIRST.

The cry for economy is one with which we have no fault to find. It is absolutely vital to the future of our country. Only we could have wished that the present appeal had less of panic in its nature. The need for drastic reform in our financial methods should have been apparent to our statesman long before this.

No sooner had the armistice occurred and Peace conditions become a matter of practical politics then serious steps were needed to bring our daily expenditure somewhere within the limits of our daily revenue. Little or nothing was done, however, and to-day Government departments are urged in almost sensational terms to cut down in all directions.

That is where danger lies. In the scurry to make a big show of economy the useful and urgently necessary will suffer with the extraneous and less important features of our public organisation. Instead of carefully calculated schemes of retrenchment in the right directions we risk the danger of hurriedly conceived reductions of expenditure. And the general welfare of the nation will suffer accordingly.

The whole trouble is that most of those in control of our affairs are not in the true sense, statesmen at all, but merely politicians. The Prime Minister's pressing call for economy was based not on the foresight that prudence should have prompted months and months back, but in response to what he could see was the clamour of public opinion and the persistent demand of the press. We expect more than this from those entrusted with the destiny of the country.

Economy we must have. That is self-evident. But unless done with great discrimination the remedy for the present ills may be worse than the disease. There is an unfortunate tendency, we fear, to forget the lessons of the war.

There seems to be a desire to go to the other extreme and ruthlessly to cut down the size and the cost of our figthing and defensive services. That these must necessarily be made smaller than in wartime is evident, but to imagine as so many do, that we can almost dispense with these, and that we are practically immune from future danger now that the great struggle has ceased is we consider the height of folly.

Our present difficulties are mainly due to the fact that owing to short-sighted unpreparedness the great fighting forces we improvised so marvellously, cost us many times more than they should. Not only in treasure but in lives we were necessarily prodigal, because of our lack of foresight.

It was indeed considered by many that had Germany not seen clearly how badly we were equipped for a struggle they might not have ventured on the Great war at all.

To sink back into the old conditions as regards our figthing services, by too drastic reductions in strength and expense might lead us in the future to another war experience such as we have passed through.

Public opinion needs arousing as to the need for preparedness and thorough efficiency. And to attain this there must be no frenzied action. The best minds—naval and military—should be called in to formulate such measures as will ensure our national safety and supremacy and at the same time see that we secure value for our outlay.

A CRICKET PROBLEM.

Private Hawkins, at the age of forty-two, had never handled a cricket bat. In his youth, sport had meant "hide and seek" — a game which he played with the School Attendance Officer whom he knew better than he knew his instructors. His brief school-life ended, he sought Fortune on the tail-board of a van, and his later years left him little leisure, in the struggle for existence, for outdoor sports.

Enlisting in 1916, he was soon sent to France on a B 2 mission in which cricket played no part. Nevertheless, when he became attached to our unit, he alone, out of some 60 other ranks, gave moral support to us by his presence at our matches. "Immoral support," perhaps, is the better phrase, for he was a thorough partisan.

More than one opposing team had complained that his gibes had done more to demoralise their fielding than any number of stolen runs. If we won, victory was invariably attributed by the discomfited enemy to Hawkins' tongue — never to our batting, bowling or fielding.

Per contra, not a few wickets were lost by us owing to our men, at his behest, risking the most impossible runs. On a balance, we probably lost as much as we gained by his presence.

When, therefore, Lloyd let us down on the occasion of a match with a certain Labour Company, we felt it would add to the harmony of things, if not to the score, if we played Hawkins.

"You see," said Binstead, our Captain, "some of these Labour chaps may kick up nasty if Hawkins starts his usual tricks, and we don't want two rather different sporting events mixed up. Got me?"

"Yes," replied Salvin, who was standing near, "and why not put him in first? He's bound to fail, and he'll see then that run-getting isn't so easy as he imagines. It may even improve him as a spectator."

Without explaining our reasons, we invited Hawkins to play, which he consented to do.

Telling him to get his pad on (we were on half-rations as regards pads) we rebuked him mildly, as we noticed he was putting it on the wrong leg. He explained:

"Thought I was batting up t'other end."

"Guess he'll never reached the other end" remarked Binstead confidently, as Hawkins journeyed to the stumps.

But Binstead was wrong. Hawkins scored three off the first ball, "driving" it just over slip's head. Similar strokes yielded equally lucky results, and whilst our best bats were returning with countenances as fallen as their wickets, Hawkins was enjoying a charmed life.

Catches which just fell short, balls which took wrong turnings at critical moments in their careers — all contributed to foster in Hawkins the illusion that he could bat.

When, at length, he was bowled, with 15 to his credit, he was convinced that for thirty years or so a batsman "had slumbered unawares."

At Square Leg, however, Hawkins soon gained some hitherto unrevealed truths on the subject of fielding — three simple and two rather difficult catches contributing to his education in this department of the game.

His attitude in the field created the impression that he had played "Egg if I Move" to an excessive degree in his youth. Happily, his misfielding did not affect the result, and we secured a victory by 10 runs.

Hawkins' behaviour nowadays, as a "looker on" shows a marked improvement when our opponents are fielding. His comments on their batting, however, remain reprehensible in the extreme.

If only we could ensure his failure at batting, and risk losing thirty runs or so by his fielding, we would gladly play him again. Hawkins out first ball and the rest of us making double figures — such is our dream. Dare we risk the reality? So disciplined, Hawkins would make an admirable supporter. But a cricketer — never!

E. J. TELLUM.

KIDDIES OF RHINELAND.

They are a never-failing source of amusement. We shall remember them in years to come and they will certainly remember us. Many are known to me personally and I have watched them at play. Like all other children they are full of mischief and fun.

In front of my billet there are beautiful grounds enclosed by high iron rails and massive entrance gates. Here almost any hour of the day you can see both boys and girls performing many acrobatic feats.

They climb those gates and railings with amazing daring, and are past masters of the art of turning somersaults on the grass over the other side.

I think they were encouraged by visits to Hagenbeck's circus, and an open-air variety show which is given by a travelling company on a piece of waste ground near by.

The other day I saw a lady chasing them out of these grounds and away from the railings- but she had to give it up as a bad job for she no sooner cleared one lot out than another lot climbed over further down. It was a most amusing sight.

Then there is a party of small boys who play pranks with a cobbler and his assistants. It is a new game to me. The cobblers work by an open window near a corner and these young rascals light a pile of brown papers and throw it through the window and then run away.

Of course, the cobbler objects to this form of gas attack and gives chase, much to the joy of the youngsters, who return to the attack with renewed vigour when the front is again quiet.

The hop scotch game on the great squares of chalk marked out on the pavement seems to be out of season now, but you see the girls playing at diabolo, a game which in Britain had its day and ceased to be many years ago, but is still the delight of the street children in Cologne.

They also make mud pies on the side of the pavement, play at School and have a "ring o' roses" game which also seems to include the famous "In and out the window" so dear to one's childhood days.

These kiddies as a rule are strong limbed, full of life with sun tanned faces. They are splendidly clothed, especially on Sundays and the girls have their hair dressed neatly with wide and most becoming bows of silk.

There are several very pretty ones who play outside our Mess, and one known by the name of Elizabeth is a perfect picture and a great favourite with our officers.

She had the treat of her life the other night when one of our officers took her, and some of her playmates, to see the torchlight tattoo.

There is the boy who creeps into our men's billet selling icecream and who, although threatened with the guard-room and chased off the premises, still creeps round, dodges the sentries in a marvellous way and does a roaring trade at a mark a time.

The boys love to copy our men and play at guard-mounting and sentries although they never practise pack-drill. You can see them at their best in the public parks, and when watching our sports and cricket matches, especially during tea time. They eagerly wait for the remnants and never fail to scramble for them.

Once we had a lot of jam left and I lined about twenty mites up, told them to open their mouths and shut their eyes and see what God would send them, to use an old phrase. I then dropped a spoonful of jam into each waiting mouth. The effort to gulp it down brought tears to their eyes but they were a happy lot of sticky young rascals and wanted more.

THE VALUE OF ENGLISH.

TO THE EDITOR, "COLOGNE POST."

Sir,— May I be permitted to comment on the un fairly strong case for English, as an international language, presented by W.J.L.?

Is English so peculiarly suited to the every-day needs of a practical race? Within three feet of my eyes at the present moment are the following, amongst other things: a pipe, match, paper, glass, light, string, ruler. If the actual conditions were unknown, could any person born to the English language state what I refer to by those words? Common though they be, they each bear a number of different interpretations.

Thousands of English words are absolutely ambiguous; and, per contra, the language has almost invariably two or more different terms for the same object. Is this a practical language?

W.J.L.'s figures prove little. Of India's 350,000,000, very certainly 330,000,000 would not be affected one iota if the official language in India were changed to Chinese. As regards Canada if one, wishes to travel the whole country French is vastly more useful than English.

Whether numerically or territorially considered, Chinese is, I believe, more widely spoken than any other language. I do not quote that as a suggestion in favour of the universal adoption of the Chinese language, but in order to provide W.J.L. with what I believe to be the only sound argument in his favour: that the English-speaking nations number amongst themselves a higher proportion of individuals who may be considered to need, and benefit by, an international language.

I am bound to admit that many of our commercial expressions have been adopted by some other nations, but mainly only for use in their dealings with us. Our insular characteristic of insisting on trading in our language rather than the other man's is responsible for that.

In what way has English forged ahead in order to justify its being used on its merits as a language, at the Peace Conference? Is it not rather in the preponderance of English-speaking interests?

W.J.L. does not seem to have had a wide experience in languages. As one with a peculiarly intimate knowledge of French, I have no hesitation in saying that one must be a very profound student, and careful speaker of the English language to arrive at the precision and clarity of expression which is second nature to the ordinary middle class Frenchman.

The illogical and insular egotism of his remarks relative to the study of any other system of intercommunication is beyond comment.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER-BOX.

Our Reader's Varied Views.

RAILWAY THIEVES.

Sir,— As I think it may be of interest to officers and others who intend to bring their wives and families to Cologne, I hope you will be able to find space in your paper for the following:—

My wife and daughter left Ostend for Cologne by the 4.45 p.m. train on the 28th ult. The luggage was registered and put in the van. On arrival at Cologne all appeared to be in order, the trunks were all found and were undamaged.

On opening them after arrival at the house, it was found that each article had been opened by the same kind of key. The contents were overhauled and all valuables, especially jewellery stolen. No clothing was taken nor inexpensive jewellery, but many articles of both intrinsic and sentimental value are lost.

The thief examined each trunk carefully and in such a way that it was not apparent that the contents had been touched.

The theft took place in all probability between Ostend and Liege and it is certain that the thief took a considerable time over his work.

I suggest that passengers should seal up their packages and examine the seals at any station where guards may be changed, as in this case it is practically certain that the guard was the thief himself or connived at the theft.

K.

THE BUMMEL.

Sir,—I am the writer of the Echo "Three men on the Bummel" in your notes. I went out and bought it the same day and find it an interesting yarn, though not up to the same standard as the same author's "Three men in a boat." His opinions on the German coincide with my own.

The writer remarks he is not quite sure what a "bummel" is. It is a German word. My dictionary gives it:—"Bummeln: — To lounge about, to loaf, to loiter." "Bummel" is the noun.

E.S.

THE FUTURE OF THE OFFICER.

Sir,—Referring to the recent letter of "Erasmus" I thoroughly agree with what he says as I happen to be one who has no definite outlook and dread the very word demobilization.

But until we are informed how many officers will be required for the "Peace-time" Army, our position is somewhat precarious.

What is in store for the ambitious officer?

QUERY.

MUSIC v. DISCIPLINE.

Sir,—I was fortunate enough to obtain a seat at the Opera on Sunday, and noticed that a majority of O. R's had, evidently reluctantly to depart a full quarter of an hour before the end, so as to return to their billets in time.

Now to a lover of music, the banging of a door, is like the dentist's drill on an exposed nerve, and the last part of the performance was quite spoilt for those that stayed.

Tommy was clearly, painfully conscious of the annoyance he was causing, and I do not think it was his fault, but whatever the reason, it is a pity it should have to happen.

It gives grounds for the belief held by Germans before the war, that as a nation we are Philistines in matters of art.

WAGNERITE.

ADVERTISEMENTS MISSING.

Sir,—It is strange that anyone should feel sorry at not seeing any advertisements in the Rhineland tramcars.

Why, I would wager that nine people out of ten are intensely grateful that their senses are not shocked by the glaring and often vulgar announcements of "Somebody's Soap" or "Someone else's Pills" that confront one in our trams at home.

Not only on the inside, but outside, our own public vehicles, they are hideous to anyone with any taste or sense of the fitness of things. Advertisements may bring revenue, but surely this is not the only consideration.

If one carries the argument of C.R.S. to the logical conclusion why not introduce advertisements everywhere—on our public buildings and monuments and round our churches.

Personally I am thankful to get a rest from such abominations wherever I can.

ANTI-AD.

OBSERVATION.

Sir—, Much has been written recently on the subject of Education and the many opportunities offered to fit ourselves to become good citizens of our Great Empire, but these could be greatly enhanced and enriched if we would develop our powers of observation.

Healthy signs are reflected in your "Echoes" columm, where one finds many interesting anecdotes on all kinds of subjects.

It is this study of detail which should be impressed on all. Let the brain be exercised more fully by the eye and when making an examination of the most casual happening try to get a lasting imprint of it on the memory, and not only observe the principle features, but round these collect as much of the detail as possible.

A little perseverance and patience to begin with will later be rewarded by such observations being made quite unconsciously.

For example:— You meet Mr. X and afterwards attempt to describe him. You know he is tall and fair but cannot remember whether he had a moustache or what was the colour of his eyes.

Such detail may appear absurd, but apply the same idea to our trades and professions. We may know the general principles of these but it is only by the study of the detail that we can get the highest efficiency and economy.

SUNDAY UP THE RIVER.

My love o'er the water bends dreaming;
It glideth and glideth away:
She sees there her own beauty gleaming
Through shadow and ripple and spray.
O tell her, thou murmuring river,
As past her your light wavelets roll,
How steadfast that image for ever
Shines pure in pure depths of my soul.

GERMAN CRACKS.

Cycling Events at Sports Meetings Near Cologne.

"Colchester Rover" sends us the following details of German cycling events which take place periodically near Cologne, which we publish for the information of our readers.

Are all your readers aware, he writes, of the excellent sport which is provided by German racing cracks at the sports meetings which are held on the track near the Zoological Gardens? I think not, otherwise we should see more khaki present to swell the large crowd of civilians who flock to see the sport.

I have little to say in favour of the amateur cycling events that I have witnessed, the crawling and other tactics of the riders until the last lap being almost painful to watch, and I have wished each time that we could have had some English riders there just to show them how to ride a race. The motor paced events, however, have to my mind been great, in fact thrilling at times. I have had the pleasure of witnessing motor-paced events at distances of 10, 20, 30, and 100 kilos and I am looking forward to seeing next Sunday's events, when I believe all the German cracks and some international riders are competing. I can safely say that any of your readers who are interested in cycling at all will be more than compensated if they pay the track a visit on that day.

AMATEUR FOOTBALL.

General Resumption of League Games on Saturday.

Amateur league football will not be generally resumed until next Saturday. A number of the clubs have had trial spins, however, a feature of the play being the plenitude of goals.

Dulwich Hamlet, the popular South London club passed its twenty first season six years ago, but it will come as a surprise to amateur sportsmen to learn that the Hamlets are this winter taking part in the F.A. Cup Competition for the first time.

On Sept. 22 Hamlet will visit Woolwich Arsenal at Highbury in the L.F.A. Challenge Cup, so the first Cup Tie of the season at Champion Hill will be against the Casuals in the London Charity Competition.

At one time it was feared that the Southern Amateur League, a popular A.F.A. competition, would be unable to restart, but happily all difficulties have now been overcome and the league will restart in the early part of next month with two very good divisions. In the first division Alleyn, Carshalton, Cambridge Town, Ealing, Ipswich Town, London County, Westminster, and Parr's Bank, Merton, and Reigate Priory will compete, and, in spite of the heavy War losses these clubs have suffered, they will all be able to place strong elevens in the field. In the second division good sides will represent Aquarius. Cuac's (Commercial Union Assurance), H.A.C., Highgate, Old Owens, Old Wilsonians, Old Parkonians, and Old Haberdashers. This league, like the Isthmian, does not register its players, and fine sporting football is played in all the games.

HARMONY AND DISCORD.

Combine to Break World's Trotting Record.

REMARKABLE TIMES.

At Parsloe's Park, Barking, on Monday afternoon Mr. Walter Winans, with his wonderful trotters, Harmony and Discord succeeded in creating two new trotting records. With Harmony he succeeded in lowering the one mile wagon record of 2 mins 52 secs., for British bred horses, which was held by his horse Discord, to 2 mins, 50 2/5 secs, and later Discord substantially reduced his own record and improved on that first established by Harmony, covering the distance in the splendid time of 2 mins 49 secs.

Finally Mr. Winans created a new world's record for driving a pair of trotters two miles, Harmony and Discord making the remarkable time of 6 mins 45 secs.

ELIMINATING ROUND.

17th Lancers v 132 King's Liverpool at Mulheim.

In the eliminating round of the C.P.C. Competition the above teams met on the 7th Squadron R.A.F. ground at Mulheim on Monday. Winning the toss 17th Lancers went in to bat and 40 runs were put up for the first wicket, but four men were out for 52. Sgt. Shenstone then arrived, and, after playing himself in, hit well until bowled by Lieut. Bailey for 42, and with further useful contributions from Lieut. Coohne (20) and Pte. Clarke 12 not out, the total reached 172. Lieut. Bailey was in capital form with the ball securing 6 wickets for 28 runs, and having hard luck in just missing his 100th wicket in C.P.C. matches. He bowled almost the whole innings keeping up his pace till the end. The ground fielding and throwing of the King's was excellent, and Lieut. Bailey brought off a very good one handed slip catch to dismiss Capt. Stany.

When the King's went in 18 was subscribed for the first wicket before Pte. Bampton put his leg in front of a straight one from Capt. Boles, and though General Potter was playing well he could get nobody to stay with him for long, C. S. M. Brown was most unfortunately hurt and was unable to resume his innings and after Gnr. Potter had played on to Capt. Boles, the remaining batsmen excepting Lieut. Bailey (11 not out) gave little trouble to Cpl. Whitfield and Capt. Boles. The latter came out with the excellent figures of 7 for 31, always keeping a good length and varying his pace cleverly. 17th Lancers thus qualified to meet 29th Batt. M.G.C. in the semi-final by a victory of 106 runs.

SEVEN-MILE COMPETITIONS.

A crowd of close on 5,000 spectators assembled along the Broadway to watch the road races arranged by the Southend Harriers in connection with the Leigh Regatta. W. P. Bruty, of Southend H., won the seven-mile walk, with a start of 16 min, in the handicap time of 47 min 57sec, and the seven-mile run fell to W. J. Clarke, of the Woodford A.C., who, with a start of 4min, covered the distance in 34min 59sec (handicap time).

TWO-DAY MATCH.

Rhine Army v. Free Foresters at Lindenthal.

COL. SPOONER'S CENTURY.

As anticipated, the two day match between the Free Foresters and the Rhine Army, which took place at Lindenthal on Sunday and Monday, provided plenty of attractive cricket. There were large attendances of interested spectators on both days. The Rhine Army batted first and compiled the fairly modest total of 116, to which the principal contributors were Capt. Dove 30, Capt. Andrews 22 and Capt. Emmerton 21. Thanks mainly to the fine stand by Capt. R. St. L. Fowler (76) and Major E. R. Morres (59) the Free Foresters reached the substantial score of 283. Major A. E. Q. Perkins also gave a delightful display for his 42. A remarkable feature of the innings was the fact that every batsman was caught, Capt. Dickinson and Lt. Veitch each accounting for two.

Reducing Arrears.

The second innings opened with the Rhine Army 167 in arrears and they set about reducing the lead in very promising style. Col. Spooner, who went first to the wicket, soon settled down and played a brilliant and faultless innings of 103, finally becoming the victim of a ball by Hartley. In his century Col. Spooner gave no chances and his placing and hard hitting were delightful to watch. The only other batsman to make a stand was Capt. Dickinson, who ran up a useful 42. The last wicket fell with the score at 209, leaving the Foresters with only 62 to get to win. This they did on the stroke of time for the loss of five wickets, Lt. Col. C. J. Blount being top scorer with 23.

The best all-round performance was that of Capt. Fowler who only took part in the first innings. In addition to scoring 76 he was remarkably successful with the ball, taking seven wickets for 27 runs.

IMPORTANT SWIMMING EVENTS.

Several important swimming events are down for decision during the present week, chief among them being the Southern Counties A.S.A. 100 yards championship at Woolwich Baths, to-day, under the auspices of the Invicta Royal Laboratory S.C.

At the same gala the Southern Counties Junior Ladies' Team Championship will be decided, the draw being as follows:—

1. Holloway United S.C., 2 Battersea Ladies S.C., 3 Hammersmith Ladies' S.C.

Each team will consist of four competitors, who will in turn swim a distance between 50 and 67 yards. Holloway United S.C. have proved successful each year since 1912, with Battersea Ladies runners-up on each occasion.

GREAT SPORTS.

"F" Battery, A.A.R.A. hold Successful Meeting at Bocklemund.

HIGH STANDARD.

"F" Battery, A.A.R.A. lived up to their reputation on Sunday, when they held one of the most successful Sports Meetings witnessed in Rhineland at their ground Bocklemund.

Despite threatening weather, everything went off splendidly. It is of note that although the Battery is well under strength owing to an epidemic of demobilization the entries for all events were exceptionally numerous and a very high standard of athletics was displayed, particularly in the high jump, putting the shot and in the sprints. One item that added much to the amusement of the afternoon was a very novel band race suggested by the N.C.O. i/c the band. The band was present by the kind permission of Lt.-Col. F.C. Longbourne, C.M.G., D.S.O., Cmdg. 11th Battn. "The Queens." Other interesting features were a V.C. race (mounted) and an exhibition of tent-pegging. And last, but not least there was no delay between events and the meeting ended absolutely on schedule time.

At the close very useful and valuable prizes were presented by Lt.-Col. C.A. Mortimore, D.S.O., R.F.A., Commander A.A. Defences, British Army of the Rhine, for the following events:—

VI CORPS CHAMPIONSHIP.

35th BDE. R.G.A. Win Tug-of-War Contest.

BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

Suggested Inter-Allied Rhineland Competitions.

We learn from Coblentz that Promoter Reis is anxious to arrange boxing matches between members of the British and the American forces; weights in the region of 10st. If permission for such matches could be secured, Promoter Reis would arrange the the matter of expense of British boxers journeying to Coblentz to participate in the events and would find American boxers who would box British personnel in Cologne.

The Americans are also wishing, we hear, to arrange football matches with British teams, about the end of this month and the beginning of October.

As there is no better way of fostering the 'esprit des Allies' than by holding sports matches we sincerely hope that this matter may be taken up by sports officers at this end. "The Cologne Post" is ever anxious to do what it can in such matters and will undertake to forward any officially sanctioned challenges sent into this office. Envelopes should be plainly endorsed "American Matches."

NURSERY PROBLEMS.

The chief claim to distinction of the Lewes meeting this week is that it inaugurates the nursery season. These nurseries constitute some puzzles, especially at the outset, but the public seem to like wrestling with the problems presented.

ZULANDA IN FORM.

There is no stopping Zulanda just now, and Mr. Wootton's mare won her third consecutive race when she defeated London Pride, Ninon, and others in the County Mid-Weight Handicap. Zulanda, like Dynamo, is by Turbine, and that sire is thus looming very large at present.

C.P.C. SEMI-FINAL.

93rd Bde R.G.A. defeat Lowland Div. M. T. Coy.

WEIGHT SCORES 100.

In excellent weather the above teams met in the semi final round for the "Cologne Post" Cricket Cup, at Mulheim, yesterday. Batting first the Lowland Div. M. T. Coy very soon found themselves discomfited by the bowling of Weight who kept an excellent length throughout, taking 5 wickets for 8 runs. The bowling of Symthe was also exceedingly good; he accounted for 5 wickets for 13 runs. No one in the Lowland Div. M. T. reached double figures. Apart from the bowling the only outstanding feature was a brilliant catch at square leg by Palliser.

After the luncheon hour Lowland Div. M. T. Coy took the field and Ellis and Palliser opened for 93rd Bde. R.G.A. Batting steadily for some time the pair managed to withstand the bowling of Biles, until Ellis was caught out by Collett. Palliser had compiled 22 when he too was caught. After playing steadily for 23 Rushton, the next batsman was bowled by a ticklish ball from Biles. Smythe followed and scored 14 being caught out by Collett. Meanwhile Weight who went in second was batting steadily against the rather difficult bowling of Biles. When Wilson relieved Smythe, Weight was within an ace of his century. Wilson was caught by Evans for 4 just after Weight, by a series of ones and twos, completed his century. The batting of Weight and the bowling of Biles were the chief features of the afternoon. The respective scores were 93rd R.G.A. 183 for 5; Lowland Div. M. T. Coy 27. Thus the 93rd Bde. R.G.A. now enter into the final against the winners of to-day's match between 17th Lancers and 29th M.G.C. Scores:—

WHAT OUGHT TO BE.

The amateur player ought to be placed in this position:—He should be able to protect himself and the club for which he plays from the poaching efforts of other clubs; his registration as an amateur should automatically lapse at the end—of each season, and he should be free to play the following season for any club he chooses; a transfer fee should not be payable in respect to any amateur transferred during the playing season unless he becomes a professional in that season. To carry through these reforms the co-operation of the F.A. and the leagues is necessary, and they would be doing great service to the game says Legislator, in the "Sunday Express," if they would give effect to these proposals.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

Merry Micks at the Leave Club.

The Merry Micks on Tuesday evening gave a most successful concert at the B.E.L.C. The very large audience was thoroughly entertained from start to finish. The concert party is indeed to be congratulated on their excellent pianist, Mr. Weeks, who accompanied throughout and also gave an extremely fine rendering of Tannhauser's March followed by some very clever imitations on the piano. Mr. Haworth contributed some tenor songs which were much appreciated and the humorous items caused much amusement especially Mr. Livingstone's songs in costume. Mr. McCracken's is an excellent concert party and his own ragtime songs and dances were very popular numbers. The chorus songs were among the most finished heard at the club.

Miss Cloud at Bonn.

In their tour of the 10th Corps Area Miss Doris Cloud's Concert Party favoured Bonn Y. M. C. A. with two visits last week, performing on Monday and Saturday to large, enthusiastic audiences. Miss Cloud possesses a magic touch where violin-playing is concerned and is to be congratulated upon the exceedingly capable company she has gathered round her. Certainly, the audiences were more than satisfied, the applause being unstinted, and the recalls numerous. The duets of Miss Dorothy Trenaman and Miss Edith Bingham Hall were in perfect balance the purity of tone, and beauty of enunciation showing fine understanding and rare co-operation. As an elocutionist, Miss Stella Hackman revealed considerable histrionic ability and power, while Mr. Moreland Hay, as humourist and discriptive pianist was quite a host in himself. In her pianoforte selections, and as accompanist, Miss Lottie Hilliard evidenced a mastery of technique and power of expression that did much to ensure the success of the entertainment. But the excellent was merged in the super-excellent in the unique demonstration of Miss Doris Cloud with her violin, for her skill, vivacity, and emotional expression were simply compelling of admiration and applause. While the leader is to be complimented on her splendid company, the company is to be congratulated upon possessing such a talented leader, and the Y. M. C. A. amusements section are fortunate in securing the services of such a fine combination of first class artistes.

JACQUES.

BECKETT WINS.

The result of the great fight at Olympia on Tuesday night was a win for Beckett in the seventeenth round presumably by a knock-out. The Englishman showed his superiority from the commencement. Beckett will now make preparations for the battle of his life with Carpentier. Details of the fight will appear in tomorrow's issue.

THE BREEDERS' St. LEGER DERBY.

At Derby yesterday the Breeders' St. Leger was won by Chuette belonging to Capt. Davy. Details:—

(1) Chuette (Capt. Davy).
(2) Mademoiselle Foch (Maj. J. Paget).
(3) Dominion (Ld. Glanelly).

TRAINER AND JOCKEY SUSPENDED.

Sequence to King Sol's Unsatisfactory Running at Hurst Park.

After Hurst Park August meeting, following a statement by Weatherbys, the stewards reported to the Stewards Jockey Club that they were dissatisfied with the running of King Sol in the Nonsuch Handicap. Subsequent to investigation the Stewards Jockey Club announced yesterday that they were satisfied that the Jockey had not persevered with his horse when he should have done and withdrew his license. They further found that the trainer, Batho, had run the horse, although he had been eased in his work and had given instructions to the jockey which accounted in great measure for the manner in which the horse was ridden and, consequently, also withdrew his licence.

The owner, Mr. Cuncliffe Owen was absolved from blame.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

Trainer's two Winners.

Cecil Young, who has just been granted a trainer's licence, is carrying on at Fiadon, and saddled two winners at Gatwick. He is the son of the late Tommy Young, and a fine cross-country rider.

Age and Youth.

Age has more than held its own with youth in county cricket and novices have performed much doughty deeds with the aplomb of veterans as to raise great hopes of our future international contests.

Seaplane Race.

Among annual events which had to be postponed during the war was the international seaplane Race for the Jacques Schneider Trophy and Prize of £1,000, the last one of its kind being held in 1914. This competition is now to be decided after a lapse of five years, on Sept. 10, at Bournemouth.

Exit the Panther.

The Panther has gradually developed a spavin, but this is the sole reason for his scratching the St. Leger. This will probably be Sir Alec Black's last season as an owner. When a man's state of health prevents him attending meetings there is not much interest in his being an owner.

Fine Horseman.

F. Davies is a fine all-round little horseman, and this winter he intends riding over hurdless for Godfrey's Epsom stable.

Dulwich Hopes.

It is hoped by Mr. G. C. Wheeler that Dulwich Hamlet will celebrate his twentieth year as hon. secretary by making a good show in the English Cup Competition.

World's Record.

The Royal Aero Club has entered the speed of Captain Gathergood's machine in the Victory Aerial Derby, which reached an average of 129.3 miles per hour, as the world's record for an aeroplane flying in a closed circuit.

Racing Improves.

The general improvement in racing last week should continue for some time, for training conditions are returned to normal, and with the start of the Nurseries fields will doubtless be larger and winners far more difficult to spot.

Imposing Array.

The list of exhibitors at the Olympia Show in November has just been issued, and an imposing array of names famous in the motor-car industry is revealed, despite the fact that the products of the Central Empires are very properly debarred from the Exhibition.

Miners and Soccer.

A great football boom is expected in the Leicestershire colliery districts which are covered by the Coalville Amateur League.

No Wailing.

The most refreshing point of the season's cricket has been the absence of the customary wail about the dulness of the batting.

Sussex Success.

The three miles Sussex champion, A. M. J. Pratt, R.F.A., won a five miles invitation scratch race at the Sizaire-Berwick A.A. sports at Park Royal by 20 yards from A. Marshall (Brighton Ry. A.C.) in 2 mins. 57 2-5secs.

Welsh Refusals.

Northern Union agents are busy in Wales, but apparently with little success. It is said that three prominent members of the Swansea Rugby Club have turned down attractive offers from a well-known N.U. club.

Ambitious Bath.

Bath City Club have now made an important step towards realising their ambition of becoming one of the leading clubs in the west of England. They have taken the well-known Bath Horse Show ground, which is beautifully situated beside the Avon.

An early Decision.

At a meeting of the committee of the Worcestershire Cricket Club it was decided to enter for the County Championship next season. Mr. F. S. Jewell will captain the side, and Mr. H. Taylor will play.

Veterans in Form.

The astonishingly fine form of cricketers whom by reason of their burden of years, we had come to fear had outlived their stage of usefulness would in itself have been sufficient to make this season a memorable one.

Not Enough Pitches.

During the past week or two it has become increasingly evident that there are not nearly enough football pitches to go round, and many a youth will during the season just upon us be forced to become a watcher instead of an active participator in the national game.

Well to Remember.

It is well to remember that at the present time old and young pigeons are heavy in moult, and that while they are shedding old feathers and growing new ones it is advisable to give the birds a liberal supply of food or they will not grow the good feathers on which their next season's success will depend.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

More Appreciation.

Our file of newspaper cuttings contains scores of notices in appreciation of the "Cologne Post." Innate modesty has prevented us publishing all these, but we take this opportunity of publishing this extract from a recent issue of the "Manchester Guardian.":—

I have just received from a correspondent at the front a number of the Cologne Post, a daily paper (in English) published by the Army of the Rhine. Though made in Germany, its four substantial sheets are British in sentiment—tempered by perfect feeling and good taste. "Wake up, England!" and "The Industrial Situation" are the titles of its more important articles, and most of the items are about doings at home. The advertisements form a sort of directory for the local supply of British needs in churches, clubs, sports, and even the art of dancing in regard to such mysteries as the teaching of "one-step, fox-trot, hesitation, and jazz." The "What to see in Rhineland" gives a sympathetic account of places of interest in the neighbourhood of Cologne. The great literary feature of the day's issue is a fine poem. "Soldiers 1914-1918," from the pen of Lieutenant W. Romaine Paterson—the "Benjamin Swift" of a wellknown pseudonym. From start to finish there is nothing to wound the most sensitive German, and everything to cheer the Briton yet awaiting the Nirvana of demobilization.

Poor Pussy.

At the Zoological Gardens in a small cage labelled 'Haus Cat' is to be found what appears to be quite an ordinary harmless cat, who in response to signs of affection purrs in the manner common to all four legged cats. All lovers of the feline species are grieved to see the animal in captivity.

"Traffic Sense."

An officer who motors a good deal on duty in Rhineland complains that though he has motored in many towns in many countries he is forced to the conclusion that nowhere can there be such a total absence of traffic sense among the pedestrian inhabitants as in Cologne. Children all over the world are the same and always will be, he says, and no motor driver can ever rely on what they will do on the road. Women and hens generally are erratic, starting to cross too late and changing their minds in the middle. But in London, Paris, Buenos Aires, New York—to mention a few places—pedestrians seem to have a sense of self-preservation ingrained in them. They keep to the foot paths, look on all sides before crossing a busy street, rarely cross in front of a tramcar, etc etc. Not so in Cologne, however.

Oblivions of cars.

Here he says we find opulent looking civilians walking up the centre of the street, or holding little conferences with their friends in the middle of a busy thoroughfare, oblivious to the fact that there is such a thing as wheeled traffic. Frequently when a crowd waits for a tram car, it does so in the road, and judging from appearances seems to labour under a sense of injustice when requested to move by the sound of a racous "Klaxon." One would have imagined that the practical and active German mind would not have suffered from this street somnolence. How is it? I would suggest that the German populace was so permeated with officialdom that it has been hand-fed and wet-nursed even in the streets, or, perhaps owing to absence of rubber tyres during the war, has become accustomed to noisy ironshod wheels and loud open exhausts, that even now the quiet gliding British motor cars are still a novelty. Is there any other explanation?

The Urfthalsperre.

This is a very interesting spot to visit, being not far from Gemünd and easily approachable. This enormous reservoir was constructed to afford waterpower and electric lighting for the manufacturing districts of Aix-la Chapelle and Düren and fills up the valley of the river Urft for a distance of 5½ miles with a width varying from 100 yards to half mile (depth 100 feet). This dam almost challenges comparison with the Nile dam at Assuan which it exceeds in height (170 feet) and width (18—180), though much inferior in length (250 yards, Nile Dam 2150 yards long, 130 feet high and 23—98 feet thick). The dam on the Urft is, however, the longest in Europe and is well worth a visit.

A Gallant Rescue.

A gallant rescue by a man of the Sherwood Foresters has just come to light. Last month a German boy was swimming in the Rhine and got into difficulties, Pte. Ganley, 53rd Battalion Sherwood Foresters, who was seventy yards away at the time, swam to his assistance, and succeeded in bringing him ashore. But for his prompt assistance, the boy would have been drowned.

Another Act of Courage.

Another act of courage was performed by Sapper F. Gogarth, R E. On August 10th a sergeant who was bathing in the river at Honrath got into difficulties, and called for help. Hogarth who was on the bank, immediately dived into the river, and without any regard to his personal safety made repeated efforts to rescue the N.C.O.

The Discovery.

Many will readily call to mind the highly coloured "art" view-postcards, which used to be on sale in many English shops. Often the subjects were rural. One remembers a gently sloping landscape rich in trees, bearing most wonderful blossom, charming meadows of astonishingly green grass, and most picturesque and quaint "black-and white" cottages, whose tenants one would imagine to be never finished with whitewash and brush. Over all, an atmosphere of perfect peace and contentment, but one could not help wondering where on earth such a valley of charm could be found. An evening ramble, say, from Opladen in the Leichlingen direction, will reveal this valley. "Everything is there, complete." The delighted rambler will see the same spick-and-span cottages, the same meadows and hillsides, while, as far as the blossom, the many orchards, filled with apple and pear trees, give an idea of the wonderful display of blossom there must have been in the late springtime. Would that this particular rambler had been there to see it. Happy revelation—the apparently impossible picture represented on the penny postcard was simply a reproduction of a coloured photograph of this very locality!

The Meaning.

A correspondent writes: — I notice a correspondent asks what is the meaning of the words cut in one of the paving stones near the Dom. Is not the meaning "Here was standing the Roman North portal"? Perhaps, however, other readers have fuller knowledge.

Strange to Them.

An English schoolboy spending his holidays in Cologne and wearing the regular British public school cap has been the object of much curiosity in the streets. The populace cannot grasp the significance of his cap and gaze openmouthed at it. The youth has been sadly embarrassed at the attention thus paid to him, and as he passes along the thoroughfares heads are turned and eyes stare at what is evidently a phenomenon in headgear to those at any rate who have never been in England.

Re-echoes.

Overheard in the Officers' Club. Major: "I'm sorry General Botha's dead." Subaltern: "Yes, Sir, it will be a loss to the Salvationists."

It is estimated that the amount of lager beer consumed in Cologne during August exceeds that of any previous month since 1914.

There is a German brand of boot polish on sale in Rhineland with directions printed on the tin in English. These wind up with the warning: "Imitators will be persecuted".

Prizes for Echoes.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's winners are Signaller Cpl. H.G. Bird 2/1 North Midland H.B., R.G.A., Rhine Army, Gunner J. Morrow 153 Siege Battery, R.G.A. Rhine Army and Sapper W. R. Fowler, R.E. Wireless Section 6th Corps, Rhine Army.

THINGS PEOPLE SAY.

War has shown that the nations of the Empire can combine to act as a single state in defence of their common institutions and ideals. This was a feature least expected by our enemies.—The Prince of Wales.

It is no use trusting to laws. The laws may be as good as possible, but you will never break profiteering; that can only be done by the powerful will of the people. — Mr. H. Callijin, Ex-Minister of War for the Netherlands.

Who are the offensively rich people who swagger about everywhere, their wives smothered in jewels, who spend money like water in every direction? Who are these people? For the most part they are the profiteers. — Viscountess Templetown.

I am not much afraid of Bolshevism in this country. We are not given to violent outbreaks, and we have a wholesome distrust of the insane idealists whom Napoleon called "idealogues." Besides, it is hope, not despondency, which makes revolutions, and we shall soon be driven to see that the outlook is not hopeful.—Dean Inge.

We are suffering from an inevitable reaction. The war proved that the people of this country were determined to make every possible effort to secure victory. Everyone, practically speaking, did everything that he could, and worked to the limit of endurance. And the coming of peace found everyone worn out.—Mr. J. H. Thomas.

The Prince has come among us for the first time, but not as a stranger. The youth of Canada who has returned from glorious service for the great cause of freedom and justice, hails him as a comrade. He comes as a Canadian in the higher sense.—Sir Robert Borden.

Although it would be idle to deny that the industrial and financial situation in Great Britain is exceedingly grave, it would not be unduly optimistic to state that matters are not so black as they are generally painted. — Sir Auckland Geddes.

Unless the Government is able to make some provision for the large numbers of men who are bound to be unemployed during the winter months, there is likely to be very serious trouble throughout the country.—Mr. J. I. Brownlie.

One of the greatest assets of the Christian religion is a sense of humour. —Dr. H. Lynn Hough.

AROUND AND ABOUT.

BRITISH MUSEUM TREASURES.

How the treasures of the British Museum were protected during the air raids is now told. When it became known that air raids were likely to take place the most important among the portable objects in the departments of antiquities, including the Frieze of the Parthenon, the best of the Greek vases and bronzes, the chief Assyrian bas-reliefs, the Rosetta Stone, and the finest objects of mediaeval art, together with practically the whole collection of coins and medals, were transferred to a station on the newly-completed postal tube railway some fifty feet below the surface of Holborn. The most precious literary and artistic treasures were transferred to the National Library of Wales at Aberystwyth, and a small selection of exceptionally valuable printed books was housed by Mr. C. Dyson Perrins in the strong room of his house near Malvern. The sculptures, which were too heavy for removal to the Tube, were protected by sandbags. Much of the glass and china which could not be removed was protected against the risk of concussion by being stored in packing cases. As soon as the armistice was signed, the restoration of the museum was taken in hand.

ENGLAND'S ORATOR PRINCE.

We have had sailor princes and soldier princes and boy princes before now in our island story. Besides being affectionately known by these titles, the Prince of Wales, though scarcely half through his Canadian tour, has acquired others, such as the People's Prince and the Democratic Prince, to say nothing of "Sir Galahad of the Royal Household" bestowed upon him by the leader of the Canadian Opposition. The latest coinage of the Dominion Press is "England's Orator Prince." The Prince had given a taste of his quality in this direction before he left home, and undoubtedly he possesses the gift of happy expression. He will have abundant opportunity of cultivating the art during his overseas tours.

SENT TO THE ARCHANGELS.

The little boy who thought his father had gone to heaven because he had gone to Skye is to be matched by an aged cottage-body with whom the writer was lodging in a remote Midland village a month or two since.

One morning she asked him if it was far to Russia. He said some of it was much further away than other parts, but why did she want to know? She said that they had sent her son—a fisherman who had joined the Navy—there, and that she would never see him again, and fell a-sobbing.

Her lodger did his best to comfort her, assuring her that people came back from Russia as from other foreign parts.

"Not from where they've sent him," she said. "I shall never see him again, not on earth." "But why?" "They've sent him," said she, "to the Archangels."

CHEER FOR THE LIMBLESS.

Judge Corley and Mr. Michael Dowling, two Americans, have been addressing many meetings at home at which they preached hope to limbless soldiers. They are qualified to deliver their message, for both suffered, and have surmounted, grave physical disabilities. Judge Corley has no hands. Yet, with the assistance of several little devices, he accomplishes a multitude of tasks, and is able to perform every needful office for himself.

Hobbies that he cultivates with assiduity include card-playing, gardening, croquet, and swimming; and he also drives a motor car. By means of one appliance he smartly opened his purse, extracted a coin, and, imitating a transaction, as readily returned the change to the receptacle. A bulky travelling case was next lifted by him on to a chair, the straps unfastened, and the contents of the valise spread out on a table. Employing the elbow only, he then proceeded to wind his watch, and went on to show how he used a fork, wrote, shaved, and fastened his collar and tie.

Mr. Dowling lacks both feet, part of the left forearm, and the fingers of his right hand. The demonstration given by him proved equally amazing. Both visitors impressed upon the maimed the advisability of cultivating the mind rather than attempting to enter into manual competition as a means of livelihood with men in possession of complete physical powers. "Perseverance" is their advice reiterated again and again to those who fear that never will the equipment supplied enable them to move about and enjoy life like their uninjured fellows.

AUSTRIA AND PEACE.

ALLIES STERN REJOINDER TO DELEGATES' PLEA OF IGNORANCE.

FIVE DAYS ALLOWED FOR ACCEPTANCE.

AUSTRIAN TREATY.

DELEGATES SEEK TO EVADE RESPONSIBILITY.

Yesterday the text was published of the covering letter which accompanies the revised text of the Austrian Treaty and a detailed reply to the Austrian counter-proposals. In the course of the letter the Supreme Council of the Allies says:

"The Allied and Associated Powers have given most careful consideration to the draft treaty of peace. The Austrian delegation objects to the draft treaty on the ground that in view of the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, Austria ought not to be treated as an enemy state at all and that in consequence she ought not to be made in any special way, inheritor of responsibilities in regard to reparation to which the Austro-Hungarian monarchy would undoubtedly be liable and which still exist.

"As the observations point to a fundamental misconception of the responsibilities of the people of Austria, the Allied and Associated Powers feel it necessary to state the principles which they consider must be applied to the settlement of the late war so far as Austria is concerned.

"The people of Austria, together with their neighbours the people of Hungary, bear in a peculiar degree the responsibility for the calamities which have befallen Europe in the last five years. The war was precipitated by an ultimatum presented to Serbia by the Government in Vienna and requiring acceptance within 48 hours of a series of demands which amounted to the destruction of the independence of a neighbouring sovereign state. The Royal Government of Serbia accepted within the prescribed time all the demands, except those which involved virtual surrender of its independence, yet the Austro-Hungarian Government immediately opened hostilities against Serbia, thereby deliberately sett to the train which led directly versal war.

"It is now evident that this ultimatum was no more than an insincere excuse for beginning the war for which the late autocratic Government in Vienna, in close association with the rulers of Germany, had long prepared and for which it considered the time had arrived. The presence of Austrian guns at the siege of Liege and Namur is further proof of the intimate association of the Government of Vienna with the Government of Berlin in its plot against public law and the liberties of Europe."

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE PEOPLE.

The letter goes on to point out the responsibility of the Austrian people for the acts of the Austrian Government and says.

"Had the people of Austria in the years preceding the war endeavoured to curb the militarist and dominating spirit by which the Government of the Hapsburg monarchy was animated: Had they made any effectual protest against the war or refused to assist and support their rulers in prosecuting it, some attention might now be paid to their plea. But the fact that in Vienna the war was acclaimed on its outbreak; that the people of Austria were ardent supporters of it from start to finish and that they did nothing to dissociate themselves from the policy of their Government until they had been defeated in the field makes it clear that according to every canon of justice they must be held to bear their full measure of responsibility for the crime which brought such misery on the world.

"There is the further fact that the Hapsburg system became in essence a system for maintaining the ascendancy of the German and Magyar peoples over the majority of the inhabitants of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. This ancient and effete autocracy with militarist traditions was maintained in existence through the vigorous support of the inhabitants of Austria and of Hungary because it gave to them a position of political and economic domination over their fellow subjects. It was this policy of racial ascendancy and oppression, to which the people of Austria gave their steady support, which was one of the deeper causes of the war.

"In the opinion, therefore, of the Allied and Associated Powers it is impossible to admit the plea of the Austrian delegation that the people of Austria do not share the responsibility of the Government which provoked the war or that they ought to escape the duty of making reparation, to the utmost of their capacity, to those whom they and the Government they sustained have so grievously wronged."

THE FINAL TERMS.

After outlining the economic concessions which the Allies are prepared to make, the reply continues: "As regards the territorial limits established for the Republic of Austria, the Allied and Associated Powers are unable to admit any modifications in their decisions already communicated. In general the Allied and Associated Powers have endeavoured to determine the boundaries of states formed out of the late Austro-Hungarian monarchy in such equitable way as to conduce to the lasting peace of Central Europe.

"Thus they have drawn for Czecho-Slovakia the historical frontiers of the crown of Bohemia. In the case of Yugo-Slavia the Powers have as far as possible followed the admitted linguistic boundary. As regards Hungary they have included within Austria, certain German speaking districts hitherto included within the Hungarian frontier.

"They believe the frontiers now arranged are those which will best guarantee the existence of all the peoples concerned, including Austrian, without exposing them to anarchy or internecine competition. The League of Nations, to which the Powers hope the Republic of Austria will be admitted at a very early date, will not only protect the rights of all signatories to the treaty, but will create means whereby such adjustments as facts or changing circumstances may prove to be necessary in the peace settlement itself can be peacefully and lawfully made. These features of the settlement proposed should not be forgotten."

"In conclusion the Allied and Associated Powers wish to make it clear that the modifications which they have now made in the draft treaty are final. The text of the treaty must be accepted or rejected in the exact terms in which it is now drafted. Consequently the Allied and Associated Powers require from the Austrian delegation within a period of five days, counting from the date of the present communication, a declaration informing them that they are prepared to sign the treaty as it now stands."

THE REVISED TERMS.

Practically all the features of the revised treaty have already been published, but some of the main features are worthy of recapitulation. The military section provides for the demobilization of the Austrian forces within three months and the abolition of compulsory military service. The army must in future only be constituted and recruited by voluntary enlistments and must not exceed 30,000, including officers and depot troops, the army being devoted exclusively to the maintenance of order within Austrian territory and control of the frontiers.

The naval clauses lay down that from the date of the coming into force of the Treaty all warships and submarines are declared to be finally surrendered to the principal Allied powers. The Danube flotilla is also surrendered. Thirty-two specified auxiliary cruisers and fleet auxiliaries will be disarmed and treated as merchant ships. All warships now under construction will be broken up. The construction or acquisition of submarines even for commercial purposes is forbidden.

The Air clauses provide that the armed forces of Austria must not include any military or naval air forces. No dirigibles may be kept, and within two months the personnel of the air force must be demobilized. During the six months following the coming into force of the Treaty the manufacture or importation of aircraft spare parts and engines is forbidden throughout Austrian territory and all aeronautical material must be delivered at Austria's expense to the principal Allied Powers.

In Part 7, which deals with penalties, Austria recognises the right of the Allies to bring before military tribunals persons accused of having committed acts in violation of the laws and customs of war, and such persons, if found guilty, will be sentenced to such punishments as are laid down by law.

By Part 8 (reparation) Austria accepts the responsibility for causing loss and damage to which the Allies and their nationals have been subjected as a consequence of the war. The Allied Governments recognise that the resources of Austria are inadequate, after taking into account the permanent diminution of resources which will result from other provisions of the Treaty, to make complete reparation. Austria, however, undertakes to make compensation for damage done, the amount being determined by an inter-Allied Commission. Austria shall pay in the course of the years 1919, 1920 and the first four months of 1921, a reasonable sum to be determined by the Commission, which shall draw up a schedule of payments prescribing the time and manner of securing and discharging by Austria within thirty years, dating from May 1st 1921, that part of the debt which shall have been assigned her.

Herr Renner, the Chief delegate, when the revised text was handed to him, made reservations regarding the period of five days allowed Austria in which to reply. He observed that he would leave for Vienna the next day, and that he would have to consult the National Assembly.

M. Dutasta replied that Austria, like Germany, could make known her acceptance by telegraph.

A number of Belgian officers will shortly take up study in the French military schools and train with the French Army.

GENERAL KILLED.

AEROPLANE CRASHES AT WESTON.

Brigadier-General Lee, formerly of the Royal Air Force, who only recently took over the charge of the Avro transportation and civil flying section, was killed at the outset of a flight at Weston-super-Mare on Tuesday evening. He took with him on a trip Mr. Roderick Smith and A. Andrews, a bandsman of the 20th London Regiment. Immediately after leaving the aerodrome the machine suddenly tilted and crashed and General Lee, who was piloting the machine, met with such injuries that death took place before assistance could reach him. The passengers escaped with minor injuries.

BULGARIAN PEACE.

AMERICA CAUSES DELAY IN SETTLEMENT.

The Supreme Allied Council yesterday continued its examination of the conditions of peace with Bulgaria. It is understood that one of the articles obliges Bulgaria to undertake to accept a future decision of the Powers regarding Thrace and the Aegean coast. It is not yet known whether the draft treaty sent to the Bulgarian delegation will define the future frontiers between Roumania and Bulgaria in the Dobrudja, and it is possible that this matter will be left for settlement through direct negotiation between Roumania and Bulgaria.

"Le Matin" states that the Supreme Allied Council has taken note of the decision of President Wilson, who has refused adhesion to the regime suggested for Thrace. The American Government appears to want to retard the solution of this question until the moment, perhaps far distant, when it will make known its point of view on the settlement of Turkey. The Supreme Council foresees inconveniences in thus deferring for long the consideration of the treaty with the Bulgarians, and it will probably content itself by reserving litigious matters, but will demand at the same time that the Bulgarians shall immediately renounce the contested territories. The essential thing is that the Bulgarians must evacuate Thrace.

MORE TREATY EVASIONS.

A telegram from Hedersleben states that a joint-stock company has been formed at Kiel for the purpose of purchasing properties in those districts of Schleswig which are to be ceded to Denmark, thus fostering the maintenance of Germanism there. The report states that the Company has already bought from the German State all the lead properties in North Schleswig. The Danish journal Danskeren remarks that this procedure is obviously in direct contradiction to Germany's obligations under the peace treaty and demands an immediate protest by the Danish Government.

ADRIATIC QUESTION.

Negotiations between the Allied Powers are now sufficiently advanced to warrant the belief that, subject to the acquiescence of America, a settlement of the Adriatic problem will shortly be arrived at. The Paris Temps understands that the American delegation in the Conference insists upon the necessity of handing back to Bulgaria part of the Roumanian Dobrudja, but in Roumanian circles it is declared that such procedure would be without precedent. They point out that the district of Vidin, for example, is peopled by 120,000 Roumanians and that Bulgaria lays no claim to it.

BUDA-PESTH ANXIOUS.

Information from Buda-Pesth says that the Roumanian Army will probably evacuate Magyar territory after carrying out requisitions. In this event it is feared that Bolshevism will break out afresh in Buda-Pesth unless the Supreme Council sends an inter-Allied force to occupy the city.

MEMORIAL TO CAPTAIN BALL.

The visit of Mr. Lloyd George to Nottingham to receive the honorary freedom of the city will take place some time in October.

During his visit he will unveil in the market place a statue in memory of Captain Albert Ball, V.C., the airman who was killed in France.

CUTTING DOWN EX'S.

Government Departments are engaged on preparing preliminary reports on the possibilities of reduction of staffs. Notice has already been given to many temporary workers. The progress of the economy campaign will shortly lead to great reductions with consequent decrease of expenditure.

GRIMSBY HOUSING SCHEME.

Grimsby Town Council, unanimously decided to purchase from Lord Yarborough 128 acres at £150 per acre for its housing scheme, which will provide for 1,000 houses The scheme entails an expenditure of between £800,000 and £1,000,000. The explanation of the scheme and its confirmation occupied a little more than five minutes.

SANKEY REPORT.

MINERS' EXECUTIVE PASS STRONG RESOLUTION.

The Miners' National Executive met in London on Wednesday to discuss the situation created by the Government's decision not to nationalize mines.

The following resolution was passed: "Being convinced that the Government's scheme is wholly impracticable for the future working of the mines, we recommend to-morrow's conference to reject the Government's scheme and record its regret that the Government has no better scheme than the creation of great industrial trusts to secure the economic well-being of industry. The only way to place industry on a satisfactory basis and for increasing production and giving the maximum advantage to the community is to at once introduce nationalization. We do not recommend the miners to take industrial action to secure the adoption of this, but we invite the Trade Union Congress to declare that the fullest and most active action be taken to secure that the Government adopts the majority report of the Sankey Commission."

BANKRUPTCY OF MILITARISM.

The debate on the Peace Treaty continues in the French Chamber. Yesterday M. Tardieu said that the Allies' right of investigation, according to the terms of the treaty, would enable France to know what was going on in Germany soon enough to enable them to prepare, in conjuction with their Allies, to meet any contemplated attack. He explained that notwithstanding the opinion of Marshal Foch, who desired the Chamber to adopt the policy of permanent occupation, the Government preferred to adopt the less drastic policy in conformity with the views of the Allies. In conclusion he declared that the treaty spelt the bankruptcy of militarism.

DENMARK LEADS THE WAY.

The Danish Minister of Defence, in his capacity as Chairman of the Committee dealing with military matters, has submitted a proposal for the immediate demolition of the greater part of the Copenhagen fortifications. Under this proposal the whole of the land fortifications and a large portion of those on the sea front would be abolished.

DISARMING GERMANY.

To-day the Inter-Allied Commission of military control leaves Paris to watch the proper carrying out of the military conditions of the Peace Treaty in Germany. The Commission, of which General Nollett is the head, comprises 60 officers, 77 soldiers, 12 interpreters and 13 motor cars. General Mastermann will attend to the Air Force and Admiral Charlton to the German navy.

SCRAPPING A NAVY.

Lord Fisher, late First Lord of the Admiralty, has pointed out that half the existing Navy is obsolete, owing to the immense development of big fast ships with huge guns. He declares that half the Navy should be scrapped now and predicts that the other half will have to be scrapped within a few years because of the development of internal combustion engines and oil fuel.

EX-KAISER'S EXCESS LUGGAGE.

A special train of fifty wagons is expected to arrive at Amsterdam from Germany next week conveying the ex-Kaiser's personal luggage and household effects to Doorn castle.

CHINA'S GIFT TO VERDUN.

The President of the Chinese Republic has forwarded to President Poincaré fifty thousand francs to be devoted to the rebuilding of the schools at Verdun.

DESTROYER TORPEDOED.

The Admiralty announces that H.M. destroyer Vittoria was fired at and sunk by torpedo in the Baltic on August 30th, the ship sinking in five minutes.

BEST FARM IN ESSEX.

A memorial service for General Botha was held yesterday at Westminster Abbey.

Martial-law has been abolished in Barcelona, where henceforth social conflicts will be restored to civilian jurisdiction.

A despatch from Laredo, Texas, states that Captain McNabb, of the United States Air Force, was seriously wounded by a band of Mexicans who fired at his aeroplane whilst he was scouting in the vicinity of San Isabel Creek, sixteen miles North-West of Laredo.

WESTWARD HO!

ATTRACTIVE SCHEME FOR EX-OFFICERS.

An unusual meeting of ex-officers will take place at the Criterion, Piccadilly, to-night, for the purpose of becoming well acquainted, as an essential to the initial success of an adventurous scheme. A certain demobilized Brigadier-General, who owns a ranch in Central America, has gathered together an adventurous band of ex-officers who long for an open, air life and are not afraid of hard work. This he proposes to give them if they pay their passages out.

The organiser of the scheme is Brigadier-General Critchley, who commanded an R.A.F. Cadet Brigade at Hastings. He is anxious that, as far as possible, those who accompany him shall be officers who assisted him to build up the high reputation for smartness which that brigade attained. The qualifications necessary to join the expedition are commissioned service, and age limits of 19 to 35. Bachelors are preferred, but married men may arrange for their wives to join them after the first year.

PREMIER IN HARNESS.

FREEDOM OF WREXHAM IN A TEAPOT.

Mr. Lloyd George is expected to return from his holiday in Normandy the week after next, when he will at once begin his economy campaign, starting in North Wales. The Premier will first visit Wrexham to receive the freedom of the Borough, but in place of the usual silver casket he will, at his own request, receive a silver tea service for Mr. Lloyd George. He will, it is expected, deliver an important speech on national economy and on the Government's policy. The second speech will be delivered at Carmarthen, where he will receive the freedom of that Borough and will address a gathering of agriculturists.

CARSON'S WARNING.

FORECASTS RETURN OF PARTY POLITICS.

In his speech at a meeting of the Ulster Unionist Council held at Belfast yesterday Sir Edward Carson said he thought there are indications that the Coalition Government would not last long. What the outcome would be he did not know, but he was confident that there would be a return to the system of party politics in the near future.

His object that day was to warn the Ulster Unionist Council that their duty was to put their own house in order and get back to the organisations as they existed before the war. The only alternative to the policy of Union was Sinn Fein, which they could not countenance, a though he saw no chance of a settlement at present.

SWEET ARE THE USES OF ADVERTISEMENT.

An Italian soprano under engagement to sing at Paris on Tuesday night had the misfortune to miss the train at Milan. She promptly hired a convenient aeroplane and arrived at Paris in good time to fulfil her engagement. The pilot made only one brief halt at Bron aerodrome, near Lyons, to obtain a supply of petrol.

(This practice of missing trains and proceeding by aeroplane is rapidly getting played out and must cease forthwith. Theatrical press agents, please note. Editor)

QUEEN MARY'S NIECE MARRIED.

In the presence of a fashionable assembly the wedding took place on Wednesday at St. Georges Chapel, Windsor, of Major Evelyn Gibbs, of the Coldstream Guards, and Lady Helena Cambridge, niece of the Queen and younger daughter of the Marquess and Marchioness of Cambridge. The ceremony was characterised by quiet simplicity. In the absence of the King and Queen, who are at Balmoral, the Royal Family was represented by Princess Christian, Princess Marie Louise, Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF EGYPTIAN PREMIER.

Information was received in London yesterday of an attempt on the life of the Egyptian Premier. Bombs were thrown at the Minister, fortunately without inflicting any injury. Earl Curzon has telegraphed official congratulations to the Premier on the failure of the dastardly attempt.

COAL FIND IN GERMANY.

It is reported from Essen that brown coal in strata 12 to 16 yards thick has been found in the communes of Steinheim and Binsebeck, in the Government district of Minden, Westphalia. The area of the minefield is about four-fifths of a square mile. Two mining companies have been established to work it.

Five thousand Americans are on their way to Germany. They are in part intended for the occupation of Sleswig and Dantzig.

HOME FROM RUSSIA.

COLONEL WARD M.P. ON BOLSHEVISM.

Colonel John Ward M.P. arrived in London yesterday, having been summoned home by the War Office for consultation. Colonel Ward, who commanded a battalion of the Middlesex regiment, has recently been holding positions in North Russia in conjunction with Koltchak's operations, but the battalion has been withdrawn and is now on its way home.

In an interview, the Colonel said that the horrors of Bolshevist rule had not been exaggerated in the English Press. In fact it is doubtful whether half the truth has been told about the atrocities committed under the direction of bands of assassins at Moscow. Asked what was the secret of the prolonged existence of the Bolshevist Government, Colonel Ward replied that it is done mainly by terrorism. Each official has a grip on those under him and this system goes on throughout the population, everyone acting under fear of denunciation to the authorities. Besides this, even the bare necessities of life are denied those who refuse to adopt Bolshevist views. The Bolshevists have practically unlimited supplies of ammunition. Just before the revolution, Russia received from Britain, America and Japan, arms and munitions for an army of sixteen million men, only a small portion of which material fell into German hands. He believed the Bolshevists had enough munitions to carry on war on the present scale for the next ten years.

QUIEN TRIAL ENDING.

The trial of the French traitor Quien, who is accused of having betrayed Nurse Cavell, is nearing its end. The witnesses for the defence have been heard and it is expected that the case will be finished by to-night. It can be said that Quien has been fortunate in his witnesses. There was a look of satisfaction on his face as he listened to their recitals in his favour. They strove to show that at Sennelager Camp he was treated exactly like other prisoners. A profound impression was made by the evidence of M. Elagey, a writer who translated Mr. Brand Whitlock's book. Flagey had never been in Belgium and had never before seen Quien. In giving his testimony he stated that his business was to make clear to the court-martial all that Mr. Brand Whitlock had seen in Belgium during the war and he did this by reading numerous passages from the book.

ON TO PETROGRAD.

Admiral Cowan, commanding the British squadron in the Bay of Finland, has arrived at Helsingfors in order to confer with General Gough, Chief of the British Military Mission in the Baltic provinces. It is stated that the conference is for the purpose of planning the projected offensive against Petrograd.

The most recent aerial reconnaissance over Petrograd has shown that the Russians have again occupied the battery of Krasnaja Gorka on the Southern side of the Bay of Finland. This battery, which was demolished some time ago, fired energetically at the aviators during their flight towards Petrograd.

THRILLING FIRE RESCUES.

The forest fires on the Cote d'Azur are increasing in extent and intensity, the flames having destroyed almost the entire district of Lavandeu. At Canadel many villas and large parks, notably the property of M. Ribot, former Premier, were completely destroyed. The Hotel du Canadel, where many Parisians were staying, was rapidly surrounded by flames and the alarmed residents fled to the beach, where they were taken aboard a tug. It is reported that the fires are attributable to malevolence.

SUSPECTED GUN RUNNING.

The unloading of the steamer Hampshire Coast under the strict surveillance of the military and police, with a small war vessel on guard, continued yesterday at Cork, but no arms or ammunition were discovered.

In addition to this steamer another vessel has been taken into Baltimore, County Cork, by naval patrols, and three other suspected vessels have been taken into other Irish ports.

THE PALATINATE TROUBLE.

The French authorities in the occupied zone state that erroneous information was published by the newspapers in the unoccupied part of Germany relating to recent events at Ludwigshafen. There was no revolt against existing power and enquiry showed that the sanguinary encounter which took place was caused by nervousness on the part of the local police. Two officials were killed. Quietude now prevails in Ludwigshafen and the Palatinate.

FIUME GARRISON.

According to a telegram from Fiume to the Corriere Della Sera the French naval base at Fiume has been abolished. The military forces have been reduced to one brigade, consisting of a squadron of Italians, a battalion of British and a battalion of French troops, under the command of General Pittaluga.

COUNTING BY TENS.

For years the adoption of the decimal system in Great Britain has been overdue. Royal Commissions as far back as Victorian days, Chambers of Commerce, educational authorities and the voice of enlightened business men generally have advocated it.

More years ago than we care to remember, the florin piece was introduced and clearly marked "one-tenth of a pound" to supersede the half-crown. For a long time past the decimal system has been taught in our schools.

The intelligence of our country has asked often when the much needed reform is to replace our present cumbrous antiquated inconvenient method.

A bold attempt was made a year or two ago to induce Parliament to sanction the change. That body, not having the courage to do so, transferred the whole matter to the usual Commission. That Commission, after months of deliberation, is, we learn, to issue its report.

But if one is to believe the current rumour, no definite decision has been arrived at. No legislation to bring us into line with practically all the rest of the world is to be recommended. We are to stand just as we are. It is lamentable, almost tragic.

Never was the moment more opportune for putting our house in order and simplifyng our archaic reckoning of money, of measurements and weights.

Ours cannot really be called a system at all. It is a tangle, and it hampers and complicates our business relations overseas, besides adding enormously to the difficulties of education.

With a simple logical system the time saved by a child at school, which he now wastes in trying to master the intricacies of pounds, shillings and pence, yards feet and inches, gallons, quarts, gills and pints, tons, hundredweights and ounces bushels and pecks, acres, rods and perches and all the rest of the confusing mixture, would be appreciable. It could be devoted to many more useful subjects.

Every soldier who has served in France, Belgium or Germany must have realised the simplicity of the decimal und matrical systems. To count in tens is the easiest of operations.

Buying in the shop, keeping canteen and mess accounts and every operation in which francs and centimes, marks and pfennigs occur, have been readily grasped by everyone. And the foreign weights and measures have just as quickly been understood.

To return to the far from easy calculations necessary at home will be unpleasant to all of us; but as the Commission can offer us no hope of an early change, we fear we must be content still to muddle on.

As a nation with a reputation for commonsense, it is a great pity that in such obvious improvements in our existing methods we should be so backward.

NEW HOMES FOR BLIGHTY.

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT IS DOING.

The Government's houses are at last getting off paper and into bricks and mortar. You remember that for many months the only signs of housing activity that were to be found in the Old Country were the newspaper reports of plans for housing received by the Local Government Board from the Town Councils and other local authorities into whose hands the provision of houses has been entrusted.

One learnt that such and such a town and such and such a village had prepared a housing scheme; that it was to cover so many acres and to contain so many houses, but look up and down the country as one would, one could not see the houses. They existed only in paper plans.

The position to-day is better. Not only have more than 40,000 acres of land been secured for the provision of houses (enough land for the erection ultimately of nearly 400,000 houses) but more than 8,000 houses are actually being built.

One may think that is not a very great proportion of the total number. It is not. But it is the beginning. The number of schemes which are reaching the building stage is increasing from day to day.

CONVERTING TO FLATS.

To wait until new houses are built is not the only step that the Government are taking to meet the serious shortage of house-room that exists. There is a campaign beginning now for the wholesale splitting up of large empty houses into flats. All the local authorities of the country have been asked by the Ministry of Health to make an examination of their districts and to schedule each empty house which they think might suitably be split up into smaller homes.

The returns are now coming in. It is still too early to speak of the country at large, but of London it may be said that quite a good number of small one-floor homes may be obtained by this method. The 2,000 houses which have already been examined (and these are only part of the total) should yield from four to five times that number of flats well suited for housing young married couples and couples with small families.

Both in the poor and in the rich parts of the City similar action is being taken. The luxurious houses of Kensington do not escape because they happen to be in an aristocratic district. In some of the outlying parts, too, tall terrace houses are being found capable of conversion to yield house-room for three or four families instead of for only one.

ARMY HUTS AS HOMES.

Steps are being taken in another direction to relieve the pressure on house-room. Strange as it may seem to the average Tommy who has "had some," a public demand has arisen for the "privilege" of using old army huts and encampments as homes. In answer to this demand the Ministry of Health has detailed one of its departments to take charge solely of the question of providing temporary accommodation of this kind.

Already the Department have made arrangements with the Surplus Stores Disposal Board to have a first call upon any army huts that may become available in order, to sell them to any local authorities wishing to use them for the purposes of housing. It is expected that in some cases whole groups of hutments which happen to lie in or near crowded towns may be used in their present position for tenancy by civilians and their families.

In other cases the huts may be shifted to any spot in which they are wanted. It is not proposed, of course, to leave them just as they are, but to fit them with conveniences such as would be suitable for a hut occupied by a family. The soldier can "rough it" a bit but it is not to be tolerated that his wife and kiddies should have to do so.

BASIL CLARKE.

THE MISCHIEF MAKER.

Mrs. Harton, of "The Nook," Winstonville, was daily expecting her husband home from the Rhine. But fourteen days had passed since his last letter heralding his approaching return, and he had not arrived.

Mrs. Harton was a little depressed, nor did the mischievous tongue of her neighbour, Mrs. Watchem, who had, at length, departed, after a score of "I really must go now's" tend to brighten her spirits.

Mrs. Watchem was one of those idle-minded women found in all small communities who love to set other folk's affairs in order. She used her knowledge of the frailties of human nature—masculine and feminine—to make matrimony the perilous adventure it is often said to be. She captured her victims whilst they were young.

Thus, to engaged couples she adopted the "Bless you my Children" formula, and continued her "blessing" when they started housekeeping, until they either quarrelled and separated, or were drawn closer together against a common enemy to whom they quickly showed the door.

The Hartons belonged to the couples who were wise enough to dispense with this buckshee "Mother-in-Law," and enjoyed the happiness which their wisdom merited.

The outbreak of war, however, left Mrs. Harton, in common with many other separated wives in the village, at the mercy of Mrs. Watchem. Her energies were devoted to a mission to which she gave the grandiloquent title of "Preserving the Sacredness of the Marriage Bond." She did no other war work whatsoever. Every casualty on the field of matrimony due to her investigations she regarded, paradoxically enough, as "strengthening the bond."

"Terrible temptations out there. Stories I've heard . . . You'd scarce credit. These Frauleins, you know. And all these men walking about. Nothing to do . . . Mostly single men, of course. But some of the others too."

Thus did she depart, conscious of duty nobly performed.

. . . .

Mrs. Harton had scarcely finished breakfast on the following morning, when once more, her unwelcome visitor of the day before, threatened her peace.

"You poor dear thing . . . I'm so sorry . . . Scarcely slept a wink for thinking of you. Ought I to tell her, I kept asking myself. But my duty. Holy Bond of Matrimony. Sake of the children . . ."

"What on earth are you talking about?" exclaimed Mrs. Harton.

For answer, the other displayed a copy of "The Cologne Post", and pointed to a paragraph encircled in blue: It ran thus:

"Private Harton, playing for Single v. Married of 57 Siege Battery, on Saturday, captured 7 wickets for 3 runs.'

"Well?" enquired Mrs. Harton.

"Well!" repeated the other lady. "Is that all you have to say. If my husband were playing for the Single against the Married, I should want an explanation quick. No wonder he's not anxious to come home. Fine games he's playing besides cricket, mark my words."

"Oh," exclaimed the other, "that reminds me, Jim did say something in his last letter about a cricket match. Wait a moment, dear, I'll go and fetch it."

Returning in a few moments she unfolded the letter, and read:

"I had rather a good day at cricket yesterday — took 7 wickets. The joke of the thing was that I ought to have played for the Married who were playing the Single men in our Battery, but as the Single men were short of a player, your hubby was a gay bachelor for a few hours. I'm telling you now, for the 'Cologne Post' reported the match, and I thought it would be as well to give you the facts in case one of those good natured moralists at home should conceive it a duty to put a poor deluded unsuspecting wife wise to her hubby's perfidy. You know there are plenty only too glad to throw a little mud at us out here. By the way, does that old Watchem cat . . .?"

Mrs. Harton broke off suddenly — to find her visitor rising.

"Must you really go, dear? So sorry. Do look us up when Jimmy returns. I'm sure he'll be glad to see you."

But the "cat" had left in order to crawl some other and less slippery tile.

E. J. TELLUM.

LUDENDORFF.

The memoirs of Ludendorff, which have recently appeared, exceed in interest others which we have lately reviewed. Both as a soldier and as a politician, Ludendorff stood head and shoulders above the contemporaries of his nation. It would be churlish on our part to deny or belittle his undoubted gifts. As a tactician he had incontestably a certain originality. Witness his adoption of the outpost zone, destined to ensure greater elasticity in defence and to enable the front line to be more lightly held.

An infantry man himself, Ludendorff rightly appreciated the importance of the light machine gun, regarding it as an essential adjunct to the rifle. His industry and capacity for hard work were amazing. Memoranda dealing with attack and defence, with fresh methods of training, were constantly issuing from his pen. He was the discoverer of Hindenburg, and whilst popular clamour hailed the latter as the victor of Tannenberg, Ludendorff was the inspiring genius.

NOT A GREAT STRATEGIST.

But if he was not without certain merits as a tactician, the First Quarter-Master General failed lamentably as a strategist. He made few mistakes, but they were colossal and went to the root of things. The advance through Belgium, and the failure to take advantage of the crushing German superiority in numbers and armament in 1914-15 were examples.

The next capital error was his underestimation of the effect of America's entrance into the struggle, and his reckoning upon a decisive result from the U-Boat campaign before that intervention could prove effective.

"There arose the possibility," he writes, "which, before the autumn of 1917, no one had been able to contemplate, of seeking to bring about a decision of the War during the year 1918 by an attack on land, which would be bound to succeed if the U-Boat campaign by that time reduced tonnage to such an extent that the transport of the American new formations in rapid succession would no longer be possible.

PLUNGING TO DISASTER.

In other words, Ludendorff was a gambler who staked his all on a contingency which, if it did not come off, was bound to lead his country to disaster.

To mistakes of strategy were added mistakes of policy. On July 12th, 1917, Ludendorff, after bringing about the overthrow of Bethmann-Hollweg, seized the reins of political power with disastrous consequences.

It requires a Napoleon to repeat the coup d'état of 1799 with success and a Napoleon, Ludendorff emphatically was not. Sometimes his political intuitions were correct; as when he bewailed the fact that Germany was allied with decaying states like the Dual Monarchy.

Whilst the pressure on the Eastern front had been relieved by the Russian revolution, the forces that had engineered it had but opened a Pandora's box whence a huge and unknown host of troubles were to issue. "I could not doubt" he writes "that the disintegration of the Russian Army and nation involved an extraordinary risk to Germany and Austria-Hungary. By sending Lenin to Russia, our Government assumed a great responsibility."

GIFTS, NOT GENIUS.

It is interesting to note that Ludendorff pays tribute to our superior mobility due to motor transport: a branch in which the German Army was notably deficient. In reviewing the causes of the final German defeat in 1918 from August and onwards, Ludendorff enumerates the shrinkage of divisions, the increasing number of prisoners and the loss of morale in the German Army as well as on the home front.

To sum up then: Ludendorff had gifts, but not genius. He was singularly representative of his nation. Laborious, methodical, painstaking, he lacked that flash of inspiration and genius which is the mark of the great commander from Caesar to Foch. Originality he had, and there were elements of greatness in him.

But the ideas that dominated him were narrow and conventional, and he produced no fertile new ideas. An honest man, a political bigot and an amazingly accomplished and industrious soldier, Ludendorff can scarcely be counted amongst the great men or captains of history.

THE MUZZLING OF DOGS.

Sir,—Is there any probability of a removal of the order which forbids a dog to enjoy its freedom, except it be both muzzled and led?

Dog-lovers would welcome the information that such a restriction has ceased. So, I am sure, would the sufferers, especially when one remembers their inevitable fate when the troops return home.

THE OFFICERS' CLUB.

Sir,— May I suggest that the old entrance to No. 1 N.A.C.B. officers' club be restored to use?

Whatever is the reason for its closure? I still think that it could be obviated by other means than by closing this particular door.

At present one is obliged to walk through two dining rooms and past the orchestra, in order to reach the bar, a jaunt which is disturbing to the diners and inconvenient to the individual who desires liquid refreshment instead of more substantial fare.

R.A.B.

RANK AND SPORT.

Sir,—As a senior officer I write to ask if it is necessary to provide special stands at the race meetings for General- and Field officers. What I feel is that at a sporting meeting preferential treatment for high rank should have no place.

A Major, a Colonel or a Brigadier is not by reason of his rank a better sportsman than an officer of junior rank and and I am sure that the vast majority of senior officers would willingly relinquish a privilege which apart from giving them an undue advantage appears to be snobbish in its conception, and has no bearing whatsoever on discipline.

RACE-GOING MAJOR.

WIVES IN COLOGNE.

Sir,—Your correspondent, "J.A.B.," will be pleased to learn that the Church Army is preparing a scheme, whereby soldiers' wives may have billetting and messing facilities in Cologne.

The details of the arrangements in connection with the proposed building are now being laid before the Military Authorities, and if accepted, will be announced shortly.

In the meantime, if "J.A.B." will call at our Headquarters Office, 79 Johannis Strasse, I shall be glad to give him the general outlines of the scheme."

R.O HOWES,
Commissioner, Church Army, Cologne.

GERMAN INSCRIPTIONS.

Sir,—Just to be one of the crush, might I translate "Hier stand das Romische Nord-Thor" for Gnr. Stipples. The traditional schoolboy might turn it into "Stand the North Roman fool here!" but it is merely: —"Here stood the Roman North Gate."

This is one of those German sentences which almost proclaim their English translation aloud: the words follow one another just as in English and each word resembles an English word of similar meaning. Such another is the inscription on a wayside Calvary.—"Sieh, O, Sünder, dein Werk." It would be interesting to know how that strikes anyone who really does not know the meaning of the words.

MARIEN-HOSPITAL.

ADVERTISEMENTS MISSING.

Sir,—I am quite in agreement with "Anti-Ad." as regards the undesirability of having adverts on tram cars. I don't think for a moment that the beauty of the London trams is at all enhanced by the crowds of adverts with which they are adorned.

But I doubt whether it is a sense of the fitness of things which deters the German from using his cars as hoardings. The reason for the absence of adverts may be looked for in the shape of the car.

The London double-decker gives plenty of blank space on the outside for the advertiser to show his art; whilst the little space on the outside of the Cologne cars is utilized to show the number and route.

Then, again, by the time he has decorated the interior with notices telling you what to do and what not to do whilst in the car, there is no room for advertisement.

AMEN.

THE FUTURE OF OFFICERS.

Sir,—A few days ago a letter appeared in your paper from an officer bemoaning the fact that he may shortly be demobilized.

He states that he has great military ambition, that he has nothing to look forward to in civil life and that he expresses that view of thousands like himself.

May I make a suggestion on behalf of myself and thousands of others in the same position. I am a married man, 36 years, with a good job to go to, but am retained entirely against my will.

If the thousands of spare officers who are undoubtedly being demobilized against their wish, have such a burning desire to serve their country in a military capacity and dread the return to civil life so much, it would be quite easy for them to rejoin as privates and reap those advantages which the recruiting posters advertise.

I take it that the speed of demobilizing men who do want to leave the army is governed by the flow of recruits, so your correspondent would still find an outlet for his military ardour and at the same time help to reinstate in civil life more quickly.

ONE OF THE RETAINED.

THE DAWNING-DAY.

I weep like mothers wept who sent their sons
To fight and die for dear old England's sake,
And keep these fair green fields inviolate.
I mourn like patriots mourn whose hearts are sad,

As they survey the fratricidal strife,
That stops the heart-beats of the newer life.
I hope like those who hope in darkest night
For the first shimmering of the dawning day,
When dreams of evil shall have passed away.
And our great nation, cleansed and purified,
Shall stand united both in work and will,
To keep its proud traditions stainless still.

DEMPSEY AND CARPENTIER.

To Fight in England for Large Purse.

A New York despatch from Illinois states that Jack Kearns, manager for Dempsey, the heavy weight champion of the world, who gained his title recently by defeating Jess Willard, has accepted an offer of Carpentier's manager for these two boxers to meet in England for a purse of 175,000 dollars.

BECKETT—THEN AND NOW.

Boxing Booth Battles to Olympia.

Joe Beckett the Southampton boxer, is a fortunate young man. Not many years ago he was travelling round England issuing challenges under the glare of naphtha lamps to all and sundry gathered round the steps of his boxing booth. A few shillings reward was all that he could expect for a night's rough-handling from sailors, soldiers, and dustmen, and perhaps jeers from a few dozen countrymen "doing" the local fair.

On Tuesday, only a few years after his booth experiences, he took the ring in the largest hall in the heart of the Empire under the glare of dozens of thousand-candle-power electric lights, and surrounded by thousands of spectators, many of whom paid five guineas and ten guineas for seats to see the Romany lad defeat Eddie McGoorty, the renowned American boxer.

Beckett, too, was not fighting for a few shillings, but for thousands of pounds. More important still, he will now be in a position to dictate his own terms to the world. It is not too much to say that his victory will mean £20,000 to Beckett.

FOOTBALL GOSSIP.

It is a growing fashion to appoint players to the position of team-manager or player manager. Amongst such appointments are Bob Hewison Newcastle United) to Leeds City: Peake (Liverpool) to Blyth Spartans: English (Sheffield United) to Darlington: Joe Smith (Hull) to West Stanley: R. Musgrove (Barnsley) to Durham City.

* * *

Aston Villa were prepared to set the fashion with regard to transfer fees. They offered £2,500 to Tottenham for A. Grimsdell, the left half-back, who gained honours in the Victory internationals. This would have been a record, but the Spurs preferred their player to the money.

* * *

Scottish League supporters — or some of them — were very angry at the imposition of a shilling gate and attempted a boycott. It was not a success for the pickets had a bad time, and, eventually paid their money to see the games.

* * *

It is said that the amount paid by Brighton and Hove to Sunderland for George Holley is the biggest they have ever paid. Seeing that the ex-Wearsider was stated to be on the Transfer List at £200, it means that Brighton must have rare luck in picking up players very cheaply.

* * *

W. Meredith has not re-signed for Manchester United. He was given every opportunity to do so, and was offered the fullest possible wage.

* * *

It is expected that Chelsea will have the services of three great amateurs — V. J. Woodward, Max Woosnam (the Cambridge Blue) and Nils Middleboe (the Dane) who for a time assisted Newcastle United.

* * *

The South Shields directors are leaving no stone unturned in order to justify their promotion to the Second League. They mean to make a bold bid for the First Division. The signing-on of players by the Shields directorate has been boldly undertaken, and some really good men — notably Bell (Notts Forest), Cresswell (who had helped the Spurs), Higginbotham (a Scottish player), and Burkinshaw (from Sheffield Wednesday) — have been secured.

* * *

Newcastle United have already been referred to as "one of the most difficult propositions in the league to tackle." They have probably the finest defence in the country.

481 SIEGE BATTERY ITEMS.

Last week most of the Battery went for an enjoyable picnic to a picturesque spot on the Rhine Ahr, in the neighbourhood of Isul, within the American occupation zone. Rain threatened several times during the day, but fortunately these threats did not materialise to any extent, and the troops were enabled to get the maximum amount of enjoyment possible out of the outing. The lorry ride through lovely and hitherto unsampled scenery was a most interesting experience, and the few hours allowed at Insul quickly sped away. The return journey was completed by about 9 p. m.

On Saturday last the 481 Siege Battery football team opened their fixture list with a match against 498 Siege Battery at Rondorf. A keen game ended in a win for 481 Battery by two goals to nil, Gnr. Meakin and Cpl. Bell being the scorers.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

A GREAT FIGHT.

Beckett Knocks out McGoorty in Seventeenth Round.

FULTON AND BASHAM WIN.

As predicted in Tuesday's "Cologne Post" the results of the great fights at Olympia on Tuesday night were wins for

Beckett
Fulton
Basham.

The Beckett—McGoorty fight was the great attraction, one of the greatest, in fact, ever staged at Olympia, and an almost unprecedented crowd, estimated at 20,000, was present to witness the carrying through of the most ambitious programme ever presented to English sportsmen. It was a cosmopolitan gathering and every class had its representatives, mufflers mingling with white shirts and silk hats. Beckett started favourite, although McGoorty was by no means without supporters. From the start the big fight was full of thrills and provided the maximum of excitement. Heavy-weight fights frequently prove disappointing by ending very abruptly, but on Tuesday evening the eager spectators were given an excellent return for their money, the struggle lasting seventeen rounds, during which an exhibition of really clever boxing was given.

The Fight.

The early rounds produced some very fast work on McGoorty's part. Beckett appeared nonplussed by his opponents exceptional turn of speed, and it almost appeared as though the American would overwhelm the Southampton man, so fast and sure did he box. But with the opening of the fourth round, Beckett appeared to get the measure of his man, and from then onwards McGoorty's chances of victory faded gradually away. Beckett very wisely changed his tactics and in the subsequent rounds it was only the American's superlative skill and cleverness which saved him from taking severe punishment. He, however, is a past-master in the art of ring-craft and he required all the gleanings of his vast experience as a boxer in order to avoid his opponent's persistent attacks.

Until the 10th round the fight continued to go indisputably in Beckett's favour, with, perhaps, the exception of one round in which McGoorty was seen to advantage scoring freely with both hands and putting up a vigorous defence when the Southampton man became too aggressive.

American Weakens.

After the half distance the pace began to tell upon the American. He began to show unmistakable signs of weakness and commenced clinching. He was badly shaken in the eleventh round by a right and left to the jaw, and in the twelth was sent to the boards for a count of nine. At this stage too, Beckett appeared somewhat exhausted by the vigour of the contest and when in the fourteenth round he received two hard lefts to the jaw he went to his corner obviously dazed. But in the brief respite between the rounds he made a splendid recovery and from that point onwards had all the best of exchanges.

The not unexpected end came in the seventeenth round when McGoorty was floored with a successive right and a left to the jaw. He rose before the call of time, but his condition was quite hopeless and with a hard blow to the chin Beckett knocked him through the ropes where he was counted out amidst scenes of tremendous enthusiasm.

For Beckett, this victory means a great deal, his prestige as a boxer has been considerably enhanced, for McGoorty is by far the most formidable opponent he has defeated. Many people for various reasons attached little importance to his victories over Bombardier Wells and Frank Goddard but they must admit that Tuesday night's performance carries him into the ranks of the first class boxers of the day. He will now eagerly look forward to the much talked of match with Carpentier, when he will make a bold bid for the championship of Europe.

The Other Fights.

The fight between Fred Fulton, the Kansas giant, and Arthur Townley, Birkenhead's heavy aspirant, proved disappointing, the Englishman being knocked out in the first round by a heavy blow on the point of the chin.

In the welter weight contest Basham the English champion, was always too clever for Francis Charles, his French opponent, and won comfortably on points.

BOXING AT PARIS.

On Wednesday night at the Wagram Hall, Paris, a boxing match between Louis de Ponthieu, the champion of Europe, and Tom Nicholson of England, took place. At the end of the 6th round de Ponthieu was declared the winner, Nicholson abandoning the fight protesting that he had been struck low.

COLOGNE POST CUP.

17th Lancers Beat 29th Bn. M.G.C. In Semi-final.

CLEVER FIELDING.

There was a good number of spectators at Mulheim when the 17th Lancers met the 29th Bn. M.G.C. in the semi-final round for the "Cologne Post" Cricket Cup.

Losing the toss, the Lancers were the first to take the field. James and Haywood, the first batsmen for the M.G.C., found the bowling of Capt. Boles and Capt. Fowler difficult to play. Five wickets fell for but few runs, including Lieut. Astill's, the Leicestershire County cricketer, who, as the result of a faulty stroke, was caught in the slips. Major Harding, however, made a good stand and batted well for 24 not out. He was the only batsman, with the exception of Cpl. Knight, to reach double figures.

The fielding of the Lancers was excellent; Capt. Boles was responsible for two good catches in the slips, while Sergt. Shenstone caught out Cpl. Knight very cleverly. Finally the M.G.C. were all out for 58. Capt. Fowler took eight wickets for 28 runs.

Resuming after lunch, Capt. Stanyforth and Capt. Fowler opened the innings for the Lancers and scored 11 and 7 respectively. Capt. Boles followed and played a good innings, compiling 44 before being caught out by Durrant. Despite an injury, Major Nicholls knocked up 24 in breezy style, while Lieut. Cooke reached 19 before becoming a victim to a ball by Astill. Serg. Shenstone contributed 13. The innings concluded with a score of 144, the Lancers winning by 86 runs. The semi-final round has now been played off, and the 17th Lancers will meet the 93rd R.G.A. in the final, which promises to be the most attractive cricket fixture yet seen in the Army of Occupation.

ALL DAY CRICKET FRIENDLY.

77 Siege Battery defeat 145 Siege Battery at Godesberg.

On Monday the 77 S. Bty. entertained 145 S. Bty. at Godesberg, a whole day's match resulting in a win for 77 S. Bty. by 2 wickets. In the first innings 145 S. Bty. scored 122 against 61 by 77 S. Bty., Capt. Robson 21 and Gunner Lemans 38 being the chief contributors for the visitors. In the 2nd innings, 145 were all out for 49, Gnr. Staples (28) being the only player to withstand the bowling. This left the home team 111 to get to win. They started very badly, losing 4 wickets for 26 runs. Then Sgt. Garmonsway and Gnr. Bull made a stand, putting on over 69 runs before being separated, Bull being caught out when he had made 25. Garmonsway was not out with 29 to his credit. The final score was 114 for 8 wickets. Garmonsway 6 for 51, Heys 7 for 54 and Harker 6 for 36, were the bowlers for 77 S. Bty. and Gnr. Lemons 7 for 71, Staples 4 for 45, List 5 for 25, and Capt. Robson 1 for 8 for 145 S. Bty. It was a fitting wind-up of a successful cricket season and credit is due to Bdr. Harrison who had all the arrangements in hand.

ALL IRELAND POLO FINAL.

Hillbrook beat Cooldrinagh in the final tie of the tournament for the All Ireland Polo Club's Challenge Cup in Phœnix Park, Dublin, by 10 goals to one. The sides were:—

Hillbrook.—Captain W. C. A. Goulding, Mr. J. Mc. Cann, Mr. W. Balding, and Mr. A. Balding (back).

Cooldrinagh.—Captain R. S. Wyndham-Quinn, Captain Bache Hay, Major F. B. Hurdall, and Captain H. O. Wiley (back).

American Tennis Championship.

In the lawn tennis singles championship of America at Forest Hills on Monday Mr. Tilden defeated Mr. Williams, 3—1, 7—5, 6—3.

LIGHT DIVISION BOXING.

Capital Championship Contests at Ohligs.

EXCELLENT TALENT.

Some capital boxing was seen at the Gymnasium, Ohligs on Tuesday afternoon, when the Light Division Championships were decided. This was quite in accordance with expectations, the eliminating competitions having revealed excellent talent. There was a large attendance of spectators and every event was followed with keen interest.

The Brigades were represented by the following battalions:—1st Light Brigade by the 13th Bn. K.R.R.C., 2nd Light Brigade by 12th Bn. Royal Irish Rigles; 3rd Light Brigade by the 2nd Bn. M.G.C. and the R.A. Group by the 5th Royal Irish Regiment.

The officials were:—

Referee:—Lt.-Col. J. Betts D.S.O.,
Judges:—Major W. Delaney, O.B.E. and Capt. G. Hibbert, O.B.E., M.C.;
Timekeeper:—Major F. R. Cobb, M.C.,
M.C.:—Capt. D. A. Owen;
M.O.:—Major C. Burton, M.C.;
Chief Whip:—Lieut. F. Good, M. C.

The semi-finals produced very good fights. The 13th K.R.R.C. forged well ahead and they had seven representatives in the finals. If Rfn. Bish—ne put up a very good fight—had succeeded in the semi-final for the light weight, the battalion would have figured in all the final events.

Finals.

In the bantam weight Rfn. Doe (13th K.R.R.C.) who is clearly a young boxer of great ability, easily accounted for Pte. Murray (5th R.I.R.) whom he knocked out.

The feather-weight final was also brimful of interest, Rfn. Frogley, (13th K.R.R.C.) proving too good for Pte. McCarthy (12th R.I.R.) Frogley won on points.

In the light-weight, R.S.M. Green (12th R.I.R.) gave in to Pte. McMahon, (5th R.I.R.) in the first round. McMahon demonstrated his prowess in the semi-final and Green had little chance of making good.

Officers' Welter.

The next event was the welter-weight (Officers) Lt. Russell (2nd Bn. M.G.C.) proved too good for Capt. Walsh M.C. 13th K.R.R.C.). The latter boxed pluckily but the winner had the advantage in height, reach and experience.

In the welter-weight (other ranks) Cpl. Marshall (5th R.I.R.), a very tricky boxer beat L/Cpl. Himsworth (13th K.R.R.C.). Marshall covered perfectly and is evidently not strange to the ring.

Lt. Cantley (12th R.I.R.) beat Capt. Watt (13th K.R.R.C.) on points in the officers' middles. There was not much margin.

Although Rfn. McCullough (12th R.I.R.) had the advantage in height, weight and reach over Rfn. Gitana (13th K.R.R.C.) in the heavy weight final, the latter put him out in the first round.

Lt.-Col. Betts, who was received with loud cheers, said the battalion should be very proud of the men who had fought so well and in such excellent spirit. They fought for the honour of the regiment to which they belonged.

Very likely some of those present would soon be in civil life again and he was sure they would look back with pleasure to the good comradeship and sportsmanship they saw in the Army and always play the game (cheers).

Praise Indeed.

Maj.-Gen. Jeffrey (G.O.C. Light Div.) said that praise from Col. Betts was a very high compliment indeed. Col. Betts was an old soldier, whose name was well known throughout the services. For many years he was Champion of Arms in the Army. He had more than a theoretical knowledge of boxing; he had been one of the first boxers in the Army; he was a swordsman and an extraordinarily good gymnast, and in addition, a very fine soldier indeed. He congratulated the 13th K.R.R.C. upon winning the Cup (loud cheers).

The points awarded were as follows:—

13th K.R.R.C.	26
5th R.I.R.	19
12th R.I.R.	13½
2nd Bn. M.G.C.	5

The 13th Bn. K.R.R.C. (Commanded by Major F.W.Parish, D.S.O. M.C.) will therefore represent the Light Div. in the Corps Tournament on the 10th.

CORBETT'S BOXING CHALLENGE.

With reference to C.Q.M.S. French's acceptance of his challenge, L/Cpl. Corbett writes as follows:—

Seeing that C.Q.M.S. French has accepted my challenge to box at 10st. 10lb. I shall be willing to oblige. I have, however, accepted the first challenger, Gunner Ginn of 267 Siege Batty. After the contest with him, I shall be very glad to meet C.Q.M.S. French on the conditions laid down.

BETTER THAN EXPECTED.

Favourable Report on Partridge Shooting.

SOUTH BELOW AVERAGE.

Much better reports than were expected of the opening day of the partridge shooting season have been received from all parts of England.

Birds are more plentiful in the Sheffield district than they have been for ten years, on account of a good hatching season and fine weather.

Birds are plentiful and healthy in Derbyshire, Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and Cheshire, as also they are in Kent, where only a few guns were out.

The uncut harvest in some quarters is interfering with the shooting. This was noticeably the case in the south of England, were sportsmen sometimes found the coveys below the average—seven or eight instead of twelve or fourteen. The cold weather in July was responsible for this wasting of the birds.

"The wasting is only in patches, and there is no reason to expect an exceptionally poor season," was the verdict of an Essex sportsman after a moderate day on Monday. "But the guns will not be out in average number for a fortnight," he added, "on account of the late harvest."

ST. LEGER STAKES BETTING.

THE DAVIS CUP.

British Prospects in Land of Golden Fleece.

By reason of their narrow victory over France at Deauville by the odd match in five, the British Isles Davis Cup lawn tennis representatives qualified to meet Australasia in the final. What of their chances? Only a little consideration is required to realise that the chances of a win for our team are very remote indeed. On Wimbledon form, or any other, the outlook for the British is the reverse of promising.

Although selections have not yet been made, the following have been suggested as being the strongest team Great Britain can produce for the event:—Parke, Kingscote, Davson and Turnbull. J. C. Parke, however, has been in ill-health for some time and for this reason he cannot be reckoned upon with any certainty. The strength of the Australasia team is well known; they have Brookes and Patterson for the singles, to say nothing of their doubles champions at Wimbledon.

FOOTER FRIENDLY.

A very enjoyable game was played at Ohligs on Monday last between 6th Field Ambulance (Light Division) and Light Divisional M.T. Coy, resulting in a win for the latter by 7 goals to 2. Considering that the "Emma Tocks" had not played together before, this was a very creditable performance. The two goals obtained by the Field Ambulance were the result of excellent work, and they also experienced "rough luck" on other occasions.

Jimmy Wilde in Grimsby.

Grimsby have a treat in store on September 8, when Jimmy Wilde will make one of his last public appearances in England prior to his American tour.

PLAY: MUSIC: SONG.

Amusement and Recreation.

"The Imps at Solingen."

In the Kaiser Saal on Tuesday evening the Light Division R. F. A. Concert Party, "The Imps," gave a two hours' show to a crowded audience. From start to finish there was not a dull moment. E Ward is the possessor of a baritone voice of great power, and his rendering of "The Last Watch" was enthusiastically encored. A. Wiseman has a pleasing tenor voice and he sang "Old fashioned Mother Mine" with great feeling. This new melody had a splendid reception and the second verse was repeated. Wiseman also participated in duets with E. Ward, "Battle Eve" and "Watchman, what of the night"? being finely given. Their voices blended well together and both songs were well received.

A Pleasing Manner.

Mr. Whibley is a light comedian who has a pleasing stage manner and who makes his songs "go." He made quite a hit with his topical song "its hard to settle down". W. Harrison sang several songs in good style, his best being the rendering of "You came to me." Jerry Meyers is a comedian with a style all his own. He caused roars of laughter with his song on "Tony the Swiss Mountainer." He also duetted with Mr. Whibley in a screaming absurdity called "Tommy and the Crusader." This was exceptionally well done, and brought down the house. Pownall is a first class comedian, and he especially scores in the role of a Hebrew, his sayings and whimsical comicalities greatly amusing the men. In the concerted item, "Cottage by the Sea" the harmony (especially of the chorus) greatly appealed to the audience. Roars of laughter accompanied the skit on "A London bus," and also the burlesque drama on the "Adventures of Murie Hohestrasse." The acting was splendid and the humour was infectious. The stage was very artistically set and "The Imps" must be congratulated on a good, clean and refined show.

481 Siege Battery Entertainment.

With thoughts of an early return to Blighty uppermost in all minds, it was not surprising that the concert given by 481 Siege Bty. R.G.A. at Rottgen, near Bonn should have been marked by good feeling. All the talent was drawn either from the Battery or the attached A.S.C. Column and it speaks volumes for the gifts of the contributors that for the four hours the concert lasted, there was not a dull moment, songs, monologues instrumental selections, concerted items, etc., following one another in rapid succession. Indeed, owing to the extent of the programme encores had to be banned in the first part, but subsequently practically every item received such vociferous evidence of approval that the artiste concerned had to re-appear. Needless to say the preliminary work involved in the concert was by no means light, and not a little of the success attained was directly due to the untiring efforts of B.S.M. Russell, who not only had the bulk of the arrangements in hand, but took an active part in the programme as well.

Rollicking Songs.

Some of the main items may be briefly mentioned. Cpl. Johnson A.S.C. revealed both feeling and technique with his violin selections, and both Sgt. Sutherland's concertina solos were received with uproarious applause.

Bdr. Kirkwood's voice was well adapted to his rollicking songs, "The Admiral's Broom" and "Glorious Devon," while Gunner Anderson rendered with much expression "Melisande" and "Friend of Mine." Signaller Worth, whose talents have often been appreciated by larger audiences was characteristically funny in "The Rest of the Day's Your Own" and "Sammy the Dashing Dragoon," his localised patter being apt to a degree. Nor was he less successful in his conjuring tricks, given with the assistance of "Archie" (Gnr. Jepson) Major S. Krimshire, the O.C., contributed "Border Ballad" in fine style, and Capt. Bingham was heard to considerable advantage in "A song for you." Capt. Mullins, the Padre, gave a spirited rendering of the Cornish song "The Floral Dance."

Unsuspected Talent.

Unsuspected, and therefore doubly welcome, talent was revealed by Signaller Milburn, who gave "Swim, Sam, Swim" in inimitable style. Two ever popular recitations, "The Green Eye of the little Yellow God" and "The Night Watchman" were given by Cpl. Hawkins with real dramatic force. Quite one of the successes of the evening was scored by Sgt. Jezard with "Where did that one go?" and Signaller Bridges gave "Tommy Lad" very effectively. The quartette party, consisting of Sgt. Eccleshall, Sigs. Fagan and Bridges, and Cpl. Fletcher received cordial plaudits for their tuneful selection "Oh who will o'er the downs" and "The Long Day Closes." A popular and amusing item was the sketch "Justice" given by members of the Sergeant's Mess in which the caste was as follows:—P.C. Robert (Sgt. Jezard), The Judge (B.S.M. Russells), Mrs. What Oh! (Sgt. Lucas) Prisoner What Oh! (Sgt. Roberts); Policeman (Sgt. Peake) Counsel, B.Q.M.S. Lister and Sgt. Shaw; Pressmen, Sgt. Adams and Sgt. Sperring. A few "raging and tearing" selections by the Jazz Band, under the spirited conductorship of the Sergeant Major, concluded, at a somewhat late hour, a concert reflecting credit on all concerned. Signaller Ormiston was the efficient accompanist.

JACQUES.

SENSATIONAL CRICKET.

Rushby's Wonderful Bowling Average Against Essex.

The cricket at the Surrey v. Essex match was sensational from the start. Essex, going on with their first innings, in which they had obtained 102 for six, actually lost their last four wickets—Dixon, Morris, Douglas, and Reeves—in about half an hour for the addition of only 6 runs—and this on a good pitch.

Rushby was the destroying agent. He bowled with plenty of life, claiming three of the four last victims, and for the whole innings he had the remarkable analysis of:—

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

A Big Buyer.
A buyer on a large scale at the Dublin sales was Mr. J. C. Galstaun, the Indian sportsman, who won the Irish Oaks a few years ago with Shining Way.

P.N.E.'s Shock.
Preston had a shock at Deepdale, and it is evident that the Deepdale side, which lost nine goals in two matches, is a long way from being first class.

Woolley not Playing.
Woolley, the Kent professional, will be unable to play against the Australians at Portsmouth this week, and his place will be taken by Robert Relf.

Le Touquet Tourney.
The international lawn tennis tournament at Le Touquet, which owing to the war, has not taken place for six years, will be resumed again this year, play to begin on Sept. 8.

A.C.U. Trial.
Among those who will compete in the A.C.U. six days' trial, which will be held in and around Llandrindod Wells in the third week of September, are the following well-known riders: E. A. Oliver, Rex Mundy, D. H. Noble, H. Reed, F. W. Applebee, A. V. Summer, Lieut. B. Alan Hill, C. R. Collier, J. Emerson, J. S. Holroyd, Hugh Gibson, Tom Peck, R. Charlesworth, and H. S. F. Morgan.

Refs. Scarce.
Football referees are so scarce in Leicestershire that there is a difficulty in obtaining sufficient men for the matches, and the County Association are appealing to candidates to come forward for examination.

Owners' Claim.
Owners claim that they provide the attraction which brings to the racecourse the huge crowds from which race executives and bookmakers secure their profits. That claim is incontestable, of course.

Donoghue Improving.
Donoghue is going on well. The fractured wrist has now been set, and he hopes to be riding sooner than seems reasonable.

Green for P.N.E.
The Preston North End directors yesterday signed on James Green, of the King's Liverpool Regiment, who can play either outside or inside left.

Capt. Elgee might not have parted with Marostica after she had won the Wick Selling Plate at Gatwick on Saturday had he not owned a fine yearling half-sister by Thrush to the winner.

Well Together.
Chelsea are a working whole. No relying on the individual. They are playing the open game with everyone's eye on the main chance. Pace and skill such as they have shown in their two opening engagements will carry them far.

As long ago as 1893 Peter Anderson, a student, won the title at Prestwick, and in 1905 the winner was Gordon Barry, who was then nineteen years of age, while in 1913, at St. Andrews, Edward Kyle, another nineteen-year-old, reached the semi-final round.

ECHOES FROM RHINELAND.

Place aux Dames.

To-day, when so many British women are sojourning in Rhineland, members of the nursing sisterhood, the various organisations connected with the Army, the Air Force, the Canteens and Institutes, as well as the steadily growing circle of wives and families of officers and men, it seems but right that they should have a corner of the "Cologne Post" specially devoted to their interests, and this we propose to give them. The new feature under the title of "Vanity Fair" is starting to-day and we shall be pleased to hear from ladies on the Rhine on any subject that appeals to them and to chronicle in this new column any woman's social event that may be taking place. Items likely to interest British women of Rhineland are welcomed, and we hope our male readers will spread the news among their womenkind that they are non being catered for in the Rhine Army's own particular paper.

Tramcar Indicators.

The employment of sign-posts at each important stopping place, to indicate the numbers and destinations of the tram cars that pass, is by no means an original German idea, according to a letter from an American soldier. Our correspondent says that such a system is in vogue in New York and in fact, practically every town in America where in there is a street car service for many years. He adds that a few years before the war, when in Cologne, he remarked upon the absence of these indication boards. In busy places where the routes are involved, they are undoubtedly a great convenience to the travelling public. That their use in England is increasing in popularity is indicated by the adoption of a similar scheme in connection with the new omnibus service in Liverpool.

The Black and White tie.

Seated in a Rhineland restaurant the other evening was a mixed party of Tommies and German civilians who tried very hard by means of gesticulations and ejaculations, each in his own language, to understand one another. One of the Germans wore a long black tie with a white narrow stripe on either side, similar to the German war-ribbon of the Iron Cross. Suddenly one of the English soldiers pulled at the German's tie and asked him as well as he could: "How large is the Iron Cross that needs a ribbon as big as that?" At first the German could not comprehend his meaning, but when he grasped it he roared with laughter.

The run on the sands.

The Rhine is not the sea, and its strand cannot be compared with the sands of our seaside-places. Still it has on its banks, half an hour from Cologne, a place, where one can combine a swim in the open river with a rest afterwards on the sandy shore. One can even enjoy mixed bathing, an advantage the Cologne inhabitants have fought for very hard. Naturally the "Strandbad" is also frequented by many British soldiers. Once in their bathing costumes our men cannot easily be distinguished from the native boys, except in one particular. The British soldier, after he has had a good swim, at once begins to run along the sand and continues this exercise for five or ten minutes. Then he puts his towel round him and lies down, making himself comfortable. At first the German frequenters of the "Strandbad" were very much astonished, and stared at the custom. But to-day you may see hardly a German boy or girl, who does not now enjoy a run, when they leave the refreshing, but often very cold, water of the Rhine.

Rhine War Savings.

In order to continue the work of the National War Savings Committee on the return to England of Major Spencer Johnson, a local Central War Savings Committee for the Rhine Army has been formed, composed as follows:—Chairman —The G.O.C.-in-C. Members.—II. Corps: Lieut. F. W. Arculus, 51st Devon Regt. IV. Corps: Lieut. R. D. Foster, R.G.A. VI. Corps: Major F. Raynor, West Yorks Regt. IX. Corps: Major A. V. Brice, D.A.D.P.S., IX. Corps. Secretary.—Lieut. C. L. Todd, 52nd Battalion Devonshire Regt. The Headquarters of the Committee will be at 42, Hohenstaufen Ring, Cologne, where Major Spencer Johnson has lately been working from. All communications should be addressed to:—The Secretary, Local Central War Savings Committee, Box 203, A.P.O., G.R., British Army of the Rhine.

Another Courageous Act.

The Commander-in-Chief wishes to express his appreciation of the following act of courage:—On August 20th, 1919, at 18.30 hours, a horse drawing a large farm implement proceeding down the hill from Duren Barracks, ran away, and the boy who was driving from the implement lost all control. The horse had got half way down the hill when Corporal W. E. Webb, 3rd (K.O.) Hussars, who was walking down the hill, ran into the road, and seized the horse's bridle as it went by. The horse was going at a gallop, but Corporal Webb held on, and, though dragged along for a considerable distance, managed to pull the horse up at the hill. By his disregard of personal safety he undoubtedly averted a serious accident to the boy and injury to the horse.

Re-echoes.

They were sitting round the table and talking of the dances and entertainments enjoyed by members of the Rhine Army. "Do you like to dance?" somebody asked the always merry and bright Mr. X., who neither smokes, drinks nor dances. "Only, when I have got cold feet," he answered.

Bathing in the Rhine and all rivers in the Occupied Territory is forbidden to all ranks, except in the various swimming baths and bathing places reserved for British Troops, and in such other places as have been selected, that are controlled and marked for this purpose.

Sculling is one of the favourite recreations of officers and men in the Rhine Army and a number are to be seen daily frequenting the rowing club and taking this exercise.

Last year September 2 was observed in Rhineland as a general holiday to celebrate the 1870 victory of Sedan. There were no rejoicings this year, though.

Quite a number of pilgrimages are to be seen just now wending their way with banners to the Cologne railway station en route for Kevelar.

A large number of German prisoners have been arriving in Cologne and big crowds welcomed them at the railway station. Among them were two who were supposed to be dead and the wife of one had married again.

Prizes for Echoes.

Every day we give three prizes of 10 marks each for "Echoes." Contributions are invited from all readers. To-day's winners are Corporal M. Nerney, R.E., C/o A.D. Roads, Rhine Army; Gunner J. Morrow, 153 Siege Battery, R.G.A., Rhine Army; and Pte. J. Hunt, B. Coy. 9th East Surrey Regt., Rhine Army.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

(XXI)

LIEUT. W. R. PATTERSON F.R.G.S

Many beginners have asked me, of late, how to take, develop and print a photograph.

As I write for these rather than for those who are already acquainted with the procedure, I take this opportunity to tabulate the necessary processes from beginning to end. Let the beginner, therefore, cut out this column, and keep it with him in his notebook, constantly referring to it until it be no longer necessary.

Make your room, cellar, garret or cupboard perfectly dark and proof from white light.

Light your red lamp.

Open your box of plates and place them, dull side upwards and the shiny or glass side downwards in their sheathes, (with roll-films and pack-films the camera may be loaded in daylight.)

Do not forget to close your sheathes and also your box of plates before you turn on your white light.

Now you are ready for an exposure.

Choose your subject.

Judge the number of metres or yards between your subject and your apparatus, by means of the attachment connected with the front of the lens, or if a portrait study, focus by means of the ground-glass screen. Continue to move the lens or the front of the camera, in and out, until the subject is sharp in detail.

Study the effect of light and judge your exposure accordingly; also arrange the aperture of your diaphragm.

Expose your plate or film, and do not omit to withdraw the slide from its sheath or adapter and to replace it after exposure.

Change your plate or film for the next photograph.

We must now prepare the darkroom for the process of development.

Prepare your baths, according to directions.

a. Developer.
b. Hypo.
c. Water (running water is preferable.)

Light the red lamp.

Take the first plate or film and plunge it, first in water and then in the developer, filing right up.

Watch for black patches; these are the high-lights, they represent light colours. A negative is so called because light colours appear black and vice versa. On paper the process is again reversed and each shade assumes its normal tint.

When you can see these black patches well defined by turning the plate or film and viewing from the back — i.e. its glass or shiny side — you may assume it is ready for the hyfo.

Wash the negative in water and then place it in the hyfo bath. It must remain here until every trace of the yellow colour of the film (or collodion) has disappeared.

Wash the negative well, changing the water frequently, for a quarter of an hour.

Of course, many may be washed at the same time.

Both baths — i.e. developer and hyfo — may be used for a dozen exposures.

Place your plates in a perpendicular position and hang your films to a horizontal string, by means of clips, to dry. This will take several hours.

Do not turn on the white light until all unexposed plates are safely packed away.

Now, when your negatives are perfectly dry, and not before, you may proceed to take a print.

Place both negative and paper, filmy sides together, in the frame. Light passing through the negative, stains the delicate surface of the prepared paper This becomes dark under those parts of the negative which seem transparent, and remains almost unaffected in the opaque spots, thus bringing out the natural tones. So we form a positive from a negative. You may examine it, from time to time, by raising one half of the back of the printing-frame, taking care not to move the paper from its fixed position on the plate or film.

Plunge the print, first in clean water, and then into the toning and fixing bath. Leave it there for five minutes more or less — again according to the necessary tone.

Wash it well in water.

Pin it up to dry or suspend it from a string.

THE LIGHTER SIDE.

Deceived.

"Poor Maud! She got cruelly deceived when she married that old man."

"Didn't he have any money?"

"Oh, yes, plenty of money; but he is ten years younger than he said he was."

His Opinion.

Fond Parent: "Did you hear my daughter sing?"

Returned Soldier: "Yes."

Fond Parent: "What did you think of her range?"

Returned Soldier: "I should say she ought to kill at three miles."

Where Water is Wanted.

At a North Country pub the wind was fairly up, when the Pussyfoot campaign was being discussed. "Who is this chap Johnson, onnyway. Aa hope it's not Jack Johnson, the boxer, that's myekin' aall this bother," said Geordie. "Wey, no, it's yen o' them cheps that's alwis tellin ye te read yor Bible aboot strong drink," said Bill. "Ye knaa cheps aall tell ye. Aa hev been readin' ma Bible, from Genisis tiv Revelations, an' Aa find ony yen man asking for water and he was in Hell.

The Difference.

They were returning from the party, Nancy and her soldier lover, and high words waxed furiously. "Call yourself a soldier," remarked she disdainfully. "Why you never smelt powder in your life!" Tommy smiled dryly. "Perhaps not; but I've tasted it," said he. "Where and when," blazed the girl. "A few hours ago when I kissed you." Then he took another taste and carried the position with splendid dash as became a soldier.

Misunderstood.

A Welshman on a visit to Scotland was being shown by his host—a Scotsman—round some of the show-places of the locality. "And this is the Forth Bridge," said the host, pointing to the famous engineering structure. "Dear me, and what became of the other three?" asked the visitor innocently.

VANITY FAIR.

A feature for the British Woman in Rhineland.

Now September's Here.

The advent of September heralds the necessity for heavier garments, for, however warm the autumn may be at midday, the mornings and evenings are cool. Our thoughts turn naturally to coats and skirts. Woman especially needs something in the way of a light costume that will keep her sufficiently warm without being too heavy and hot during the day. Light-weight serge, cloth, and gaberdine are the best for these coats and skirts.

Paris and the short skirt.

It looks as if the fate of the very short skirt is sealed. There are still many examples of this debatable garment to be seen; indeed the exaggerations are all too noticeable; but signs that longer skirts are coming is to be seen in the new models which the dressmakers are launching every week. All of them have an inch or two more of length, but not of width, and the hips remain wide. This does not mean that the short skirt has gone altogether, only the exaggerations are disappearing from all circles of society where women dress according to the latest laws of fashion.

Autumn Millinery.

Autumn millinery is now being displayed in great array. There seem to be no specially fixed rules as to shape, etc., and many and varied are the materials used. The velour hat, so becoming and comfortable, is again in the forefront. Beaver shapes, of a rather fluffy kind, are being shown a great deal, and seem to be in demand. Models in plaited ribbon and pleated silk, in gorgeous colours and contrasts, are only a few of the many different types seen.

Seen On the Stage.

Miss Gladys Cooper's personality makes her plays, and Miss Cooper's personality—her good taste be to her credit—owes much to her charming frocks. Her dresses in "Home and Beauty" prove no exception to the rule. In the first act she wears a deep pink chiffon velvet tea gown, outlined with blush rose crystals, and weighted with handsome crystal ta sels. In the second act she appears attired in a draped wrap of crêpe satin, designed in leaf gold edged with skunk. Bronze gold pointe de venise forms a deep panel collar. Her third appearance is made in a brown duvetyn gown, and a cloak with a collar that reaches well below the elbows and dips towards the waistline, and a brown velvet hat trimmed with grebe.

About Hats.

The latest toque is an attractive thing made—apparently—of a single ostrich feather of great beauty and considerable length. There is, of course, a miniature shape upon which this feather is mounted, but this is so insignificant that it seems non-existent; it is the feather that counts. And the feather is so arranged that it whirls round the invisible crown, lies against the nape of the neck, and then falls forward over the left shoulder. One of the most famous milliners in Paris has launched this toque, and it has "caught on" in an extraordinary way.

Cost or Beauty.

While leather is so dear as to make gloves and shoes almost prohibitive in price comes the craze for dresses made of soft supple kid dyed in bright colours, cut out in openwork patterns, fringed or decorated with steel beads. Their enormous cost partly accounts for the rage for these frocks at Deauville, where those women who were merely rich and not multi-millionaires had to content themselves with jumpers of kid. One London firm tried to launch this fashion some time ago for motor outfits, but, perhaps because leather was not at that time very scarce, this met with little success.

Revival of Sequins.

Judging by both the new stage fashions and the products to be seen in all the leading houses, we are to have quite an epidemic of sequin overdresses. It is perhaps, the natural result of the jumper craze, for these sparkling tunics are practically little more than an extended version of the former. There is always something a little unsatisfying, a little hard in the outline resulting from the sequined overdress, however wonderful and alluring the shimmer of its spangled surface may be. The weight of the overdress, too, tends to drag it rather more closely around the figure than is graceful, and at the moment it is at actual variance with the fuller hip silhouette now demanded.

AGNES

Ceratopogon Pulicaris!

You may not recognise his name—but you know him quite well. He's the little stinging fly which is biting everyone who tries to enjoy the evening outdoors. He will not bite you, however, if you always use. . . .

ULTIMATUM TO RUMANIA.

UNANSWERED NOTES CAUSE ALLIES TO TAKE STRONG ACTION.

RUSSIAN EVACUATION IMMINENT.

SILENT RUMANIA.

SUPREME COUNCIL SENDS AN ULTIMATUM.

No answer whatever has been received by the Supreme Council to the Notes recently addressed to the Rumanian Government. The latest Note was a protest against the proceedings of the Rumanian army in Hungary and pointed out that all the assets in Hungary belong not to Rumania but to the whole of the Allies. The Note called upon Rumania to signify at once that it is prepared to obey the orders of the Peace Conference. These matters having been consistently ignored, the Council has accordingly decided to send an envoy to Bukarest to present an ultimatum to the Rumanian Government and has fixed a time limit. Should Rumania refuse to comply with the terms of the ultimatum within the given time diplomatic relations will cease between the Allied and Associated Powers and Rumania. The envoy of the Allies and Associated Powers will bring away with him from Bukarest the diplomatic representatives of those powers represented in the Rumanian capital.

ROBBING THE ALLIES.

The text of the ultimatum will not be divulged until it has been handed to the Rumanian Government but it is understood that it will deal mainly with the question of reparations and the evacuation of Hungary by the Rumanian Army.

In regard to reparation the Allies will insist upon their point that Rumania must recognise that all goods, railway rolling stock, live stock and other material requisitioned by the Rumanian Army in Hungary must be handed over to the Allies to be distributed among the States having claims against Hungary in the proportions that will be assigned by the Peace Conference and further that Rumania must undertake to pay the Allies for such requisitioned material, foodstuff etc., as she is unable to return.

M. Gonnart, ex-Governor General of Algeria, who was sent to Athens as the Allies' High Commissioner, immediately before the abdication of King Constantin, is mentioned as the envoy to carry the ultimatum.

RUMANIA'S "EXPLANATION."

Meanwhile the Matin (Paris) has published circumstantial details to explain the attitude of Rumania. On Wednesday evening, says that journal, MM. Antonescu and Micha called on M. Pichon and informed him that M. Bratianu had just received in Bukarest a number of press cables in which Rumania was treated in an unfriendly way. This he could not understand for the very good reason that for some time past Notes sent by the Entente had not reached him. An hour later M. Antonescu returned and brought with him proof of his statement. A communication had just been received by him from the Rumanian Minister of war announcing that according to a wireless message radiated from a station near Bukarest not one of the radiograms sent from Paris during the last two weeks for the Rumanian delegation had reached their destination. It was therefore inevitable that notes addressed to M. Bratianu having been sent over by same method, should have suffered the same fate. M. Bratianu stated that he will reply as soon as he becomes aware of the Allies demands.

DENIKIN OCCUPIES KIEFF.

A War Office communiqué says, in confirmation of a Bolshevist wireless report of September 2nd, that news has been received of the occupation of Kieff by Deniken's forces, after two days heavy fighting. This town is the fourth largest in Russia and its occupation will doubtless ensure the long looked for junction between Deniken and Petlura. The Bolshevist thrust towards Kharkov has thus been definitely countered and Deniken's left appears once more to be secure.

INQUEST ON GENERAL LEE.

At the inquest on Brigadier-General Charles Lee, who was fatally injured on Monday while piloting an aeroplane at Weston-super-Mare, Captain Heslam, who witnessed the accident, said that General Lee expressed a wish to take the machine for a test after the engine had been overhauled.

Deceased took off well into the wind and at once began to climb. At a height of 150 feet the engine gave a series of loud reports and emitted clouds of blue smoke. He considered the accident was due to an error on the part of the pilot or lack of fine judgment, in handling the engine. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

General Smuts has formed a new Cabinet in South Africa. All his former colleagues have agreed to continue in office.

NORTH RUSSIA.

EVACUATION BEFORE THE ICE FORMS.

It is learned from an authoritative source that all British troops will have left Archangel before the port is closed by ice, that is, by the end of September or in the early part of October. The date of evacuation depends on the weather but at the latest the troops will be evacuated by the middle of October.

The answer to questions of critics as to why operations in North Russia are being continued, seeing that it has been decided to evacuate, is that it is our policy to do as much damage to the enemy as is possible before leaving, so as to make the withdrawal easier and prevent him from undertaking offensive operations for some time. It is desired to leave the situation as easy as possible for the Russians who are being left behind. The suggestion that there has been a change in the Government's policy and that operations would continue during the winter is emphatically denied. The War Office yesterday afternoon announced that on the Archangel front the Bolshevists made unsuccessful attacks on our positons on the river Vaga on September 1st.

NAVY REDUCTION.

ESTIMATES CUT DOWN BY HALF.

A drastic reduction of the Navy Estimates is indicated. Within a fortnight Mr. Walter Long, First Lord of the Admiralty, is to tell the Premier how far he is prepared to go with the reduction of the Fleet and the Admiralty Staff, and it then rests with the Premier or with Parliament to say if Mr. Long's plans ensure the safety of the nation.

It is probable that Mr. Long will try to bring the present expenditure of 140 millions down to something below 70 millions. This sum, it is estimated, is equivalent to a naval expenditure of 34 millions (the amount spent on the Navy in 1904), when taking into account the present purchasing power of the £ and the addition of 10 millions on the wages bill. Seventy millions is not to be taken as the limit of reduction, as it may be found possible next year to cut another ten millions off the Estimates.

In future the Navy will consist only of battleships, battle-cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers, and submarines. All other types of vessels, are to be ruthlessly "scrapped."

No new ships are to be built in the immediate future, the Admiralty yards being confined to the general upkeep of the Fleet and the reconditioning of merchant vessels for handing back to their owners.

There will, therefore, be fewer ships in the Navy than before the war; but they will all be fighting ships and, class for class, all of greater speed and gunpower and equipped in every detail in order to contend with modern war conditions.

It has now been decided to complete the construction of 36 vessels in these modern classes—it having been found a more economical procedure than breaking them up on the stocks. Altogether the building of 42 first-class ships has been stopped or cancelled.

STRIKE WEAPON.

HENDERSON ON ITS USE AND MISUSE.

Speaking at a public meeting in connection with the International Conference on Labour and Religion on Wednesday evening Mr. Arthur Henderson (who is still awaiting the verdict of Widnes) said he heard with great satisfaction that the Triple Alliance Conference had with striking unanimity decided against the policy of direct action for purely political purposes. This wise and most commendable decision would be almost universally approved by all thinking men among organised workers.

He expressly said "for purely political purposes" because he did not admit that the organised workers should entirely forego the weapon of direct action. However much he regretted that circumstances sometimes compelled the workers to resort to the weapon of the strike he was afraid that until Society is better organised and until the governing classes are prepared to abandon the use of their economic weapons and more ready to meet just claims of labour, the organised workers must retain as a weapon the right to strike. To make that admission was very different from the mistaken policy adopted by some in the labour movement who would like to use this weapon on all occasions and for every purpose. A Labour Government would fight to the last ditch against any policy of direct action on the part of any minority, whatever name it might call itself.

LONDON POLICE.

TO ORGANISE POLAND'S SYSTEM.

The new Polish Government, anxious to set upon a firm basis the administration of justice within its teritories, has paid a high compliment to the Metropolitan Police Force of London by requesting the sending out of an informal commission of experienced London police officers to advise upon the lines on which the permanent policing scheme of Poland should be based.

A number of officers have been chosen and will shortly embark for Poland under the charge of Colonel Macready, son of the Chief Commissioner of Police. If the Polish Government approves the recommendations and the matter can be amicably arranged between the two Governments this pioneer party will be followed by a larger commission and it is hoped that under its guidance may be laid the foundations of a scheme for the general control and administration of justice.

TRAMWAY DEADLOCK.

NATIONAL STRIKE APPEARS IMMINENT.

Negotiations were taking place in London throughout Thursday with the object of averting a national strike of tramway workers, but matters again reached a deadlock and there is very grave danger of a strike. Among the demands put forward was one for an advance of twelve shillings weekly on the existing war wage of thirty shillings.

The Tramway and Light Railway Association refused to accede to this application and suggested arbitration by districts. To that the delegates were unanimously opposed, claiming that such negotations have always been conducted on a national basis. The conference decided to send a deputation to the Minister of Labour to point out that under no possible circumstances would they concede the principle of arbitration by districts.

DOUBLE LOVE TRAGEDY.

What is presumed to be a double love tragedy has occurred at Ascot. While walking near the lake at Sunninghill Park yesterday one of the estate workmen saw the bodies of a youth and girl floating near the bank. Both were well dressed and there were no signs of violence on either.

Later the bodies were identified as those of Emily Mason, of South Ascot, and William Sarney, living at Winkfield, both being eighteen years old. There was no evidence of a struggle near the lake and it is thought the two must have agreed to commit suicide together.

MUNITIONS MINISTRY.

DEFENDED BY MR. KELLAWAY.

A vigorous reply to criticisms of the Ministry of Munitions was made yesterday by Mr. F. G. Kellaway, the Deputy Minister, at a luncheon given in his honour by business men associated with the Ministry. He described many of the criticisms as ill-informed, mischievous and stupid, and referring to the charge that excessive provision had been made for the supply of high explosive said that this would not be the view of Ludendorff. It was the factories which had been described as white elephants which had crushed the life of the German Army.

The administrative staff of the Ministry had been reduced from 25,144 at the date of the armistice to 13,884 in August last, and a further reduction of 4,000 would be effected by the middle of October. These reductions were not due to outside pressure or the present clamour. They had been effected as the result of measures taken by Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Inverforth. Mr. Kellaway said that eighty millions sterling had already been realised on surplus stores and 100 millions on trading account. Practically all surplus stores were handed over to the French Government at our valuation and if the Disposals Board were forced to carry out the work more rapidly they would require additions to their staff.

MINES NATIONALIZATION.

The recommendation of the Miners Executive rejecting the Government scheme for dealing with the coal industry was unanimously accepted on Thursday by a Delegate Conference of the Miners Federation of Great Britain.

Mr. Smillie hinted that it might be necessary to ballot again on the question of a national strike of miners to compel nationalization. Mr. Brace, however, approached the subject cautiously "as a moderate man," declaring that he had never said he would not accept direct action but adding that it all depended on circumstances.

£40,777,277 A WEEK.

The nation's expenditure during the week ending August 30 was £40,777,277, an average of more than £5,825,000 a day.

According to the Treasury statement in the London Gazette, the total was made up roughly as follows:—

Permanent charge of debt...	£4,200,000
Interest, etc., on war debt..	£2,600,000
Supply services	£33,8 0,000

The week's revenue totalled £17,086,340.

IMPOSTOR'S DOOM.

KILLED WHILE COMMITTING A CRIME.

An intensely dramatic story of the strange life and tragic death of a wanted man who had posed as the son of an admiral was told at a London inquest on Thursday. The inquiry concerned Edwin William Emke, who was killed by being jammed in a lift shaft at a Bloomsbury garage. The evidence showed that he had represented himself as a Lieutenant of good social position and had made arrangements to buy a car at Prince's garage, Bloomsbury. He had several trial runs in a two seater car and then said he had to go down to Bristol for some money. Later he returned to the garage during the absence of the manager and subsequently his body was found at the bottom of the lift well.

An actress, Miss Olwyn Owen, described her acquaintance with Emke, whom she knew as Lieutenant Cotswold. He had taken her out to lunch and wanted a car in order to take her and his friends about.

Deceased's father, living at Walworth, said his son was formerly in the Navy and later he obtained work in West-end clubs. He was also at one time a steward on a ship going to New York.

Detective Moore, stationed at Wallington, Surrey, said he held a warrant for Emke's arrest on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences. The man no doubt knew the warrant was out and had recently adopted the name of Cotswold.

The coroner's officer said that Emke had stayed at various hotels in the name of Eglinton and had been travelling about on a stolen motor cycle. Near the body in the lift shaft a bottle containing choloform was found.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

"AS DURING THE WAR."

CONDUCT OF GERMANS IN LITHUANIA.

According to a report circulated by Reuter's Agency the conduct of the Germans in Lithuania is said to be as bad as during the war.

It is complained that Germans are masquerading in Russian uniform, and are forming a force under Prince Lieven, in order to create a military base for the Germans. So far as is known, no reply has yet been received, but since the delivery of a Note from the Lithuanian Government to the British Mission at Riga the situation has become worse, and outrages committed by the Germans have increased in number. Within the past few days another strong Note has been delivered by Lithuania to the Allied Supreme Council. This points out that the main purpose of the Germans is to secure the harvests in the districts of Lithuania occupied by the Germans, and for this purpose they are making daily requisitions. This results in continual conflicts and severe fighting.

The Germans have seized and maltreated several officials of the Lithuanian Ministry of Agriculture and stolen their property. They afterwards succeeded in escaping. The Germans are continually removing stocks of food across the frontier, and in order to do so unobserved are preventing the establishment of Customs Houses.

Reuter's Agency learns from Lithuanian sources that troops from Prince Lieven's army, commanded by Colonel Vyrgolitch, have begun to concentrate round Shavli. The Military Mission of this army, consisting of Major-General Bogdanoff, Colonel Nicolin, and Lieutenants Golubtcheff and Petersen, has officially informed the Lithuanian Government that they have occupied the town of Kursenai, near Shavli, in accordance with orders received from Von der Goltz. The Lithuanian Government has protested to the Allied nations against the occupation, and has requested that they should exercise their influence to compel the German army immediately to evacuate the whole of Lithuania.

FLYING BOAT'S FLIPS.

2,450 SEA MILES IN 41 HOURS.

The way to new markets has possibly been opened by the F.5 Flying Boat N.4041, of No. 4 Communication Squadron R.A.F., which in its demonstration flight to the Scandinavian countries flew 2,450 sea miles in a total flying time of 40 hours 40 minutes. There was no mishap of any kind, although from its departure until its return to Felixstowe the machine spent 27 days in the water or in the air.

Exhibitions and passenger-carrying flights were carried out at Christiania, Christiansand, and Copenhagen, the Queen of Norway being taken up twice.

It is hoped, says the Air Ministry, that valuable results will accrue to the British aircraft industry in opening up what is perhaps the best market in the world for water-going aircraft. Practically the whole of Norway is navigable by seaplanes making use of the fiords, and in Denmark all the large towns are approachable by water; in Sweden a natural seaplane highway extends right across the country, formed by the two large lakes, Vättern and Vänern, the Gotha Canal, and countless small lagoons and lakelets.

The feeling in Norway, Denmark, and Sweden towards British aviation is favourable, but the Germans are doing their best to obtain a footing and have announced aeroplanes and seaplanes for sale at "cut" prices.

CANTEEN PROFITS.

GENERAL BYNG'S SCHEME OF DISTRIBUTION.

General Byng and the Committee of the United Services Fund have decided upon a method of distributing part of the seven million pounds profit which has accumulated from the Expeditionary Force Canteens, which profits are to be used for the benefit of ex-service officers and men.

The secretary of the fund states that it has been decided to allocate a quarter of a million towards the help of disabled officers and men and a similar amount will be given to widows and dependents. Another quarter of a million has been set aside for general welfare work among ex-service men in Greater London and will be used for such things as the provision of clubs. This is in the nature of an experiment and if found to operate successfully in Greater London the committee propose to make grants for similar purposes in other towns in the Kingdom. A strong subcommittee has been appointed to administer the grants.

It is proposed to work through existing organisations and measures are being taken to ensure that the money reaches the men whom it is intended to benefit. General Byng and the Committee are anxious that ex-service men shall themselves co-operate in the administration of grants for this purpose. It is made a condition of the grants that the Committee of any organisation to which money is given shall consist of at least twenty-five per cent of ex-service men other than officers.

2,000 BOMBS.

WHAT CALAIS SUFFERED DURING WAR.

In connection with the decoration of Calais with the Croix de Guerre on Sunday, it is pointed out that, even during the critical days of the German offensive in 1914 and 1918, the population of the town, normally 75,000, never fell below 60,000. This is the more remarkable when it is considered that as well as the constant menace of the capture of the town by the Germans, Calais underwent sixty bombardments by Zeppelins, aeroplanes, and warships. About 2,000 bombs and torpedoes fell in the town, more than 150 houses were destroyed, 230 persons were killed and 400 injured, and the material damage amounted to 30,000,000f. These figures, even when spread over a period of five years, give some idea of what the inhabitants had to endure.

HAIL AND FAREWELL.

FOCH'S GOOD-BYE TO PERSHING.

Marshal Foch's good-bye to General Pershing, the American Commander-in-Chief, at Brest was marked by quite unusual cordiality.

Not only did the French Commander motor over from his house in time to greet Pershing before the latter went on board the giant transport Leviathan (once the German Vaterland), but he followed him on board and made a little speech of farewell to the American general and his staff on the deck.

"We will guard piously your dead," said Foch, "and if in future new clouds darken the horizon, will those heroes not spring from their tombs to cry to the world that we have a common cause on both sides of the Atlantic—a cause of liberty?"

As the Leviathan, surrounded by her escort of French destroyers, put slowly out to sea Marshal Foch accompanied her, standing on the bridge of a gunboat, from which, while the great ship cleared the roadstead, he waved a last salute to the Allied General who had been at his side in so many anxious hours.

COLONEL'S PATHETIC FAREWELL.

A most distressing tragedy occurred at Portsmouth station on Thursday, when Colonel Sir Robert Megaw Ireland was seen to fall from the platform in front of a train. He was killed instantaneously. In his pocket was found a note addressed to his wife, which ran: "My best of wives, adieu. I cannot bear it. My brain has gone. Forgive me. Lord, have mercy on me."

Colonel Ireland, who lived at Southsea, was seventy years of age. He served in the South African war and was mentioned in despatches. Later he served in the Army Pay Department as Chief Paymaster, retiring in 1911.

TAR AND FEATHER SEQUEL.

It is stated that the tar and feather episode at Cambridge which caused such a sensation in May last is about to be reopened by the holding of a military enquiry. The principals were Lieutenant Wright, an Army Officer and Lieutenant Kinahan, R.N. whom Wright chained to a tree in a Cambridge street after he had tarred and feathered him. Kinahan has now resigned from the Navy. Wright was arrested by the military but was released on parole on condition that he did not leave Cambridge. He has frequently demanded an enquiry and it is stated that the machinery is in motion for this being done at an early date.

BOTHA'S ESCAPE.

FALSE TELEGRAM AND MISSING LINER.

The Capetown correspondent of "The Times" has revealed an interesting story of a telegram which saved General Botha for the Empire at the beginning of the war. The story is told by permission of Sir David Graaff, one of General Botha's most intimate friends and political associates.

A few days before the outbreak of war Botha, who had been visiting Rhodesia, was on his way to Beira whence he had booked a passage to Delagoa Bay en route to Pretoria. The acting minister in Pretoria had telegraphed to him on Saturday that there was no need for anxiety in regard to the European situation as it was certain England would not be embroiled. Sir David Graaff had returned to London on Friday from a sojourn at a German watering place and though the British Cabinet's final decision had not then been taken he formed the conclusion on the Sunday morning that war with Germany was inevitable. He therefore telegraphed to Botha, "British Government declares war Germany tomorrow."

Sir David Graaff's telegram was received with incredulity in Pretoria but after some hesitation it was re-transmitted to Botha. Botha afterwards said he was sorely puzzled by the two contradictory telegrams but concluded that Sir David was not likely to send so definite a statement without good reasons. Accordingly he cancelled his passage on the German steamer and returned to Pretoria via Rhodesia. The steamer sailed from Beira on August 4th and was never afterwards heard of in South Africa. But for the almost accidental and wholly unofficial telegram from Sir David Graaff, Botha would either have disappeared or if the steamer ever reached Germany would certainly have been interned.

ROWED FOR 27 HOURS.

GALLANTRY AT SEA.

The King has awarded the Silver Medal for Gallantry in Saving Life at Sea to Alfred Elsome, D.S.M., R.N.R., second hand of his Majesty's trawler Crucis, and the Bronze Medal to Joseph Anstey, Newfoundland R.N.R., leading seaman, and Harry Curman, R.N.R., deck hand, of the Crucis.

On April 19, 1918, while in convoy, the S.S. Lord Charlemont, of Belfast was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean Sea. The Crucis, which formed part of the escort, bore down and launched a boat which, under the command of Elsome, and manned by Anstey and Curman, picked up the master and four Chinese members of the Lord Charlemont's crew.

The boat was being driven by the rising wind and sea, and it became impossible to return to the trawler. It was accordingly decided to make for the Spanish coast. The master of the Lord Charlemont had been severely burnt, and Elsome attended to his injuries, taking off his own shirt and singlet in order to bandage the master's face and hands. Curman also took off his singlet and put it round one of the rescued men. The boat ultimately reached San José on the morning of April 20, two of the Chinese men having died on the passage.

Elsome and the two others were unremitting in their attentions to the rescued men, and, in addition to this, Elsome remained at the tiller, while Anstey and Curman continued rowing without a break in very rough seas for about 27 hours.

SECURITY FOR BRITISH TRADERS.

A special department composed of a small headquarters staff has been set up by the Board of Trade to deal with the Government guarantee of twenty-six million sterling to encourage trading with European countries devastated by the war.

Naturally British traders in the present uncertain conditions are loth to supply goods on a mere order. The new department will make all the necessary enquiries and satisfy itself as to the solvency of foreign merchants.

It has been suggested that consular officers and commercial attachés might assist in this new development but on the other hand the Board of Trade may think it advisable to appoint special officers of their own in the various countries affected.

MINISTERS TO NEW STATES.

The King has approved the following appointments in the Diplomatic Service:

Sir George W. Buchanan, formerly Ambassador at Petrograd, to Rome.

Sir Charles Alban Young, Minister to Guatemala and other South American Republics, to be Minister to the King of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes.

Sir Horace Rumbold, Minister at Berne, to be Minister to the Republic of Poland.

Lord Acton, Consul-General at Zürich, Minister to Finland.

Sir George Russell Clerk, Acting Counsellor of Embassy, Minister to the Czecho-Slovak Republic.
